The cost of the Millennium Experience includes the National Programme of events and activities. Also included is the London Riverside new year's eve celebrations of 31 December 1999. Negative figures shown in the table against 2001 result from rebates and savings on costs provided for in previous years' account.In addition, from 1 July 2001, when the lease of NMEC ended, English Partnerships, the Government's urban regeneration agency, has incurred £1.5 million on care and maintenance related costs, £6.4 million on decommissioning the Dome contents in preparation for a future use and about £2.2 million in relation to the current sale process, up to 31 December 2001. The cost of the previous competition to find a long-term use for the Dome, which began in March 1999 and ended at the beginning of 2001, was £6.7 million. All these costs will be met from within English Partnerships' normal budget, and recovered from eventual sale proceeds.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much has been spent on fees for advisers to the (a) Government and (b) New Millennium Experience Company for the Dome project. [22693]

Dr. Howells: The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) paid £82,000 to consultants for specific advisory work in connection with the potential sale of the Millennium Dome. In terms of supplying details of all other advice for all aspects of the project, an accurate figure could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

English Partnerships, the Government's regeneration agency, responsible for managing the Dome sale process on behalf of the Government, is expected to incur costs in the order of £2.2 million for the current sale process up to 31 December 2001. This largely relates to consultants' costs for the market testing and other matters associated with the on-going sale process. The cost of the previous competition for the sale of the Dome, which began in March 1999 and ended at the beginning of 2001, was £6.7 million. The Department for Culture, Media and Sport incurred costs of £68,495 for legal advice relating to the sale process during this period.

An estimated (still to be finalised) £17,600 is likely to be incurred by DCMS for advice received in relation to the appointment of liquidators to NMEC in December 2001.

Departmental Sickness Absence

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will commission and publish an independent report on the reasons for the level of sickness absence in her Department. [26977]

Dr. Howells: The Cabinet Office already commissions and publishes an independent annual report "Analysis of Sickness in the Civil Service". This report includes details of the causes of absenteeism. The report for the year 2000 will be published shortly.

DCMS is committed to managing sickness absence effectively and reducing sickness absence.

Ministerial Transport

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she last used the railway service in connection with her official duties; what station she left from and what was the destination; and whether it is her intention to make greater use of the railways in future. [28098]

Tessa Jowell: I last travelled by train during the course of my official duties on 12 December 2001. I travelled to Leicester from St. Pancras in order to break the ground at the Bharat Football Club in Leicester.

All travel by Ministers in this Department is made in line with the guidance set out in Chapter 7 of the Ministerial Code and the accompanying guidance document "Travel by Ministers", using the most efficient and cost effective mode of transport and bearing in mind security considerations. We will continue to do so.

Sports Clubs

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to instruct local authorities to reduce rates and rental on sports clubs occupying sites in the ownership of their local authority. [27869]

Mr. Caborn: Local authorities are responsible for rents charged to sports clubs which are located on their property, and the Government have no scope to dictate the amounts charged.

Local authorities can already grant discretionary rate relief of up to 100 per cent. to sports clubs, and the majority do so. However, sport's governing and representative bodies have asked the Government to provide greater certainty for local clubs. I therefore welcome the Charity Commission's announcement of 30 November 2001 that community amateur sports clubs may now apply for registered charitable status. Eligible clubs which successfully apply to become charities will enjoy a range of financial benefits including mandatory rate relief of 80 per cent. (which may be topped-up to 100 per cent. at the discretion of local authorities).

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to direct local authorities not to take into account improvements made to sports clubs occupying sites in the ownership of their local authority when agreeing a new lease. [27868]

Mr. Caborn: This is a matter for local authorities, which are responsible for setting the terms of leases of their property. However, the Government expect local authorities to take account of the special characteristics and needs of sports clubs when doing so.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Sustainable Development Summit

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proposals she has made for inclusion on the agenda of the World Summit on Sustainable Development; and which of these were (a) discussed and (b) recommended for inclusion on the agenda at the meeting of the UN Economic Commission for Europe Meeting in Geneva on 24 and 25 September. [13247]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 15 November 2001]: The United Kingdom has been working with European Union partners to develop a range of ideas on the agenda for the World Summit on Sustainable Development. In particular, we have pressed for the summit to address poverty eradication, and making globalisation a force for sustainable development particularly to help poorer countries. The UK has argued for specific action on access to fresh water and sanitation, sustainable energy, Africa, and strengthening UN institutions to promote sustainable development. These issues were reflected in the UNECE ministerial declaration.

Electricity Consumption

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the most cost-effective ways in which (a) industry and commerce and (b) domestic consumers can reduce electricity consumption. [17429]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 27 November 2001]: We have carried out a wide range of detailed assessments of the most cost-effective options for saving energy, including reducing electricity consumption in both the business (industry and commerce) and domestic sectors. This includes research, demonstration and case studies of energy efficient practices and technologies. The resultant information is provided to business sectors, the building industry, landlords and local authorities, as well as to individuals, via the Carbon Trust, the Energy Efficiency Best Practice programme www.energy-efficiency.gov.uk and through the Energy Saving Trust's Energy Efficiency Advice Centres www.est.org.uk.

Examples of the best practice advice and assessments provided can be found on these websites.

Waste Disposal

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will issue advice on the storage of waste refrigeration equipment before 1 January 2002. [24166]

Mr. Meacher: The Department issued guidance on the storage of waste refrigeration equipment, prior to CFC extraction, at the beginning of December 2001.

Home Energy Efficiency

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many homes have benefited from completed warm front scheme installations; how many homes are in the process of being assessed; how many people have been turned down for upgrading of their heating; what the average wait is between application and installation; what has been the cost thus far to the public purse; and what assessment he has made of the efficiency of the EAGA partnership in delivering the scheme. [24951]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 9 January 2002]: The Home Energy Efficiency Scheme (HEES), now marketed as The Warm Front Team, is administered by two scheme managers, TXU Warm Front Ltd. (responsible for the Eastern, East Midlands and Yorkshire and the Humber) and Eaga Partnership Ltd. (responsible for the rest of England).

HEES provides households with packages of heating and insulation measures tailored to their circumstances and property type. Where the householder is eligible and the property requires heating; then it is provided. The precise package is discussed and agreed between the householder and HEES surveyor.

Number of homes completed or orders placed with the contractor (June 2000 to December 2001): 274,000

Number of homes awaiting assessment: 56,000

Number of homes where insulation-only measures provided or currently being assessed: 285,000

Current average waiting time between application and installation: 71 days[1]

Total cost of the scheme (June 2000 to December 2001): £193 million

[1] Measured from date of call with respect of telephone applications, from date of receipt in case of postal applications or from date of e-mail. There is usually a period of 1–8 weeks between the date of actual installation and the receipt of the invoice from installers.

The introduction of the radically improved Home Energy Efficiency Scheme in June 2000 represented a difficult challenge for both scheme managers. The national shortage of gas heating engineers has led to severe delays in some areas in the installation and repair of central heating systems. Both scheme managers have worked hard to recruit installers and to improve the quality of service provided to householders. The Department continues to maintain a close watch on their performance.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what provision there is within the warm front schemes to allow the most vulnerable households who are in immediate danger of risking their health because of lack of heating to queue jump the waiting list for grants during the winter months; how many households were allowed to queue jump in each month since April 2000; and what plans she has to review the first-come, first-served system of Warm Front grants during the present review of the grants. [25355]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 9 January 2002]: The Government's main programme for tackling fuel poverty in the private sector in England is the Home Energy Efficiency Scheme (HEES). HEES is marketed as the Warm Front Team. Two scheme managers, Eaga Partnership Ltd. and TXU Warm Front Ltd. administer the scheme.

HEES has been developed to help tackle the problem of fuel poverty, those who spend 10 per cent. or more of their income staying warm. Fuel poverty is caused by a combination of energy inefficient housing and low incomes. Certain people are particularly vulnerable to cold-related ill health—the old, families with children, the disabled and the long term sick. HEES is targeted at these priority households and all applicants are therefore treated equally.

We have no intention of removing the current first-come approach. Any prioritising system would be complex to administer and likely to dissuade households from the scheme. Instead, we believe it is better to concentrate resources on reducing the time taken to install measures on all households.

Packaging

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will exempt re-usable wood packaging from the Producer Responsibility Obligations (Packaging Waste) Regulations 1997. [25342]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 9 January 2002]: There are no grounds within the Directive or the UK Regulations for exempting any types or items of packaging from their scope.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the cost of compliance to the Producer Responsibility Obligations (Packaging Waste) Regulations 1997 by the United Kingdom wood packaging industry in terms of the percentage of the industry's average profits in the last year. [25343]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 9 January 2002]: The recovery of wood packaging waste has only been required by the Regulations since 1 January 2000. No assessment has been made of the cost of compliance with the Regulations to the wood packaging industry.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the impact of the Producer Responsibility Obligations (Packaging Waste) Regulations 1997 on the re-use of products in the United Kingdom wood packaging industry. [25344]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 9 January 2002]: The Government have made no assessment of the impact of the regulations on the re-use of products in the UK wood packaging industry.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the number of companies evading the producer responsibility obligations (Packaging Waste) Regulations 1997; and what plans the Environment Agency has to prevent this. [25345]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 9 January 2002]: The Regulations place a monitoring duty on the Environment Agency. The agency continues to trace businesses which should be subject to the packaging regulations and they have the powers to monitor businesses which they believe should be subject to the regulations. It is impossible to estimate the number of businesses that might still be evading their producer responsibility obligations. However, comparison of the data derived from obligated businesses with estimates derived from materials organisations and making allowance for businesses outside the scope of the regulations because they do not satisfy turnover and packaging tonnage threshold limits, the amount of packaging not accounted for is probably less than 2 per cent. of the total. The Environment Agency's compliance plan for 2001–02 has provision to check on more than 2,000 businesses and the agency is on schedule to fulfil that commitment. The number of registrations under the regulations (which includes individual businesses and groups of companies) has continued to rise, from 5,451 at the end of 2000 to 5,629 now.

Agency enforcement is steadily improving. There were 38 prosecutions in 2001 (a total of 72 since the start of the agency's enforcement programme in 1998). Fines are on average higher, with fines totalling £152,350 (average £4,000) in 2001, compared to only £63,878 (average £2,060) in 2000 in 31 cases. The highest fine last year reached £25,000. As fines increase, so does their deterrent effect.

Bird Populations

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the percentage changes in British bird populations in the last three years, broken down by county. [26201]

Mr. Meacher: The Government's Quality of Life Counts indicator of wild birds uses an index of UK bird populations set at 100 for 1970. The values of the index for the last three years are presented in the table for all 105 bird species included. The index increased by 3 per cent. in 1999 and by a further 4 per cent. in 2000. Further information on these statistics is published in the DEFRA News Release No. 303/01.

The Department has also commissioned research from the British Trust for Ornithology and the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds to develop indicators of bird populations for England and Government Office regions. The indicators will show the percentage change in bird populations in the last 30 years. The results are expected to be published in the spring and a copy of the report will be placed in the Library of the House. Information on changes in bird populations for individual counties is not held centrally.

Compost Bins

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list those local authorities which provide compost bins (a) free of change and (b) on payment to households in their areas; and if she will make a statement. [27145]

Mr. Meacher: Information from the 1999–2000 Municipal Waste Management Survey shows that 17 local authorities in England distributed home composting bins to households free of charge during 1999–2000. 235 local authorities in England either charged some or all of their households for this service. The remaining 102 authorities either did not distribute compost bins during 1999–2000 or did not provide information.

Environmental Impact Assessment Regulations

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what estimates she has made of the cost to (a) public funds and (b) land managers of the Environmental Impact Assessment (Uncultivated Land and Semi-Natural Areas) (England) Regulations 2001; [27140]

(2) what consultations were undertaken, with whom, prior to the laying before Parliament of the Environmental Impact Assessment (Uncultivated Land and Semi-Natural Areas) (England) Regulations 2001. [27138]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 14 January 2002]: The cost to public funds and land managers cannot be estimated accurately without knowing in advance the number of projects subject to EIA. As part of the Regulatory Impact Assessment, it was estimated that the cost to DEFRA might be in the region of £0.1 to £0.2 million per annum. Costs to land managers will vary depending on the nature, size and potential impacts of the project and whether any changes need to be made in the light of the assessment. As an illustration it was calculated that the costs arising from 100 projects subject to an application, of which 10 led to preparation of an Environmental Statement prepared by a consultant, could be around £20,000 to £28,000.

Two formal consultations were carried out in 2001; the first in May on the options for implementation elicited 42 responses; the second in September, with detailed proposals, received 32 responses. Respondents included statutory agencies (English Nature, English Heritage, Environment Agency and Countryside Agency) and bodies representing environmental and historic interests and the farming industry.

Carcase Burial

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on her decision to apply for planning permission for the mass burial of animal carcases at Great Orton. [27137]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 14 January 2002]: The mass burial site at Great Orton is Crown property and, as such, planning permission was not required for its use. However, to fall in line with best practice DEFRA applied for a retrospective Notice of Proposed Development and Environmental Statement on 4 December 2001.

Fuel Poverty

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what the age and status are of children in a household for that household to be deemed vulnerable under the UK Fuel Poverty Strategy; and how many such households with children there are in (a) private sector housing and (b) public sector housing in England; [26425]

(2) what age a person must be for their household to be classified as vulnerable under the fuel poverty definition; and how many such households there are in (a) private sector housing and (b) public sector housing in England. [26424]

Mr. Meacher: Householders aged 60 years or more, families with children under 16 and those that are disabled or suffering from a long-term illness are all regarded as being particularly vulnerable to cold-related ill-health.

The number of fuel poor households in England in 1998 is set out in Table 4.1 of the UK Fuel Poverty Strategy. This shows that out of the 2.7 million vulnerable households in fuel poverty in England in 1998, 2 million were in private sector housing and 0.7 million in social housing.

Chart 4.2 of the strategy shows that in 1998, some 14 per cent. or half a million fuel poor households had a child under 16. It is not possible to estimate the breakdown of this between different housing tenures.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Regulatory Impact Assessments

Dr. Cable: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many regulatory impact assessments have been produced by his Department since August 2001; and if he will list those produced (a) following initial consultation with affected parties about the most appropriate methodology for assessing costs and other impacts and (b) which set out full commercial impacts, including profitability, employment, consumer prices and competitiveness, as recommended in Good Policy Making. [28397]

Mr. Leslie: Full regulatory impact assessments are placed in the House Libraries.

The Good Policy Making Guide recommends that policy makers take early soundings from affected parties. The results of these informal consultations are not required to be produced in a RIA at this stage. However, Departments are advised to include a partial RIA in formal consultations. Consultations can be accessed via www.ukonline.gov.uk/citizenspace/consultations/.

The Good Policy Making Guide does recommend that as part of the RIA's assessment of costs and benefits, any additional costs and indirect costs should be identified and quantified stating who or what bears them.

There is no specific requirement in the Good Policy Making Guide to consult on appropriate methodology, nor is there a specific requirement to set out the information at (b). The information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

PRIME MINISTER

Archbishop of Canterbury (Appointment)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister by what means bishops are asked whether they wish to be considered for appointment as Archbishop of Canterbury. [28179]

The Prime Minister: Any bishop in the Church of England, who is under the Church's age of retirement, is eligible to be considered. It is open to any bishop to indicate that he does not feel able to be called to this position.

Civil Service Pay

Mr. Wray: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to increase civil service pay. [28085]

The Prime Minister: Responsibility for pay, outside the senior civil service, is delegated to Ministers and office holders in charge of Departments. Departments are required to operate their pay systems within public sector pay policy and in accordance with a framework set out by the Cabinet Office in the Civil Service Management Code. Annual pay negotiations are a matter for the Department or agency concerned.

For information about senior civil service pay, I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Aberdeen, North (Mr. Savidge) on 10 January 2002, Official Report, column 993W.

Energy Review

Mr. Syms: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the progress of the Energy Review. [25562]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Ceredigion (Mr. Thomas) on 9 January 2002, Official Report, column 816W.

James McLintock

Mr. Weir: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what representations he has made to the Government of Pakistan on the case of James A. McLintock; [28127]

(2) whether he raised the case of James A. McLintock with the Government of Pakistan during his recent visit there. [28126]

The Prime Minister: I have not made any representations on this case.

Staff at the British High Commission in Islamabad have had access to Mr. McLintock and are in consultation with the Pakistani Authorities about his situation. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office today at column 400W.

Chief Surveillance Commissioner

Geraint Davies: To ask the Prime Minister when the annual report of the Chief Surveillance Commissioner appointed under section 91(1)(a) of the Police Act 1997 will be laid before the House; and if he will make a statement. [29077]

The Prime Minister: A copy of Sir Andrew Leggatt's report for 2000–01 is being laid before the House today in accordance with section 107(3) of the Police Act 1997 (as amended by the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000). After consultation with the Chief Surveillance Commissioner material in an annexe to a report has been excluded from that copy under section 107(4) of the Act because its publication would be prejudicial to the prevention or detection of serious crime.

For the first time the annual report covers Part II of the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000.

I am most grateful to Sir Andrew and his colleagues for the work which has gone into preparing it.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Magistrates Courts

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) how many magistrates courts have closed in (a) England and Wales and (b) Yorkshire or Yorkshire and Humber since 1972; [27368]

(2) how many magistrates courts have been closed in (a) England and Wales and (b) Yorkshire and Humberside in (i) the last 30 years, (ii) the last 20 years, (iii) the last 10 years and (iv) the last five years; [27472]

(3) how many magistrates courts have been closed in (a) England and Wales and (b) Yorkshire and Yorkshire and Humber between (i) 1979 and 1983, (ii) 1983 and 1987, (iii) 1987 and 1992, (iv) 1992 and 1997 and (v) 1997 and 2001. [27406]

Mr. Wills: The Lord Chancellor's Department assumed responsibility for the magistrates courts in 1993, and conducted the first annual survey of courthouses in September 1995. Records do not exist for earlier periods.

In England and Wales as a whole, seven magistrates courthouses closed between September 1995 and the end of 1995, 20 closed in 1996, 22 closed in 1997, 24 closed in 1998, eight closed in 1999, 13 closed in 2000, and 21 closed in 2001.

During this period, the only closure in Yorkshire and Humberside was at Keighley in April 2000. This was associated with the enlargement of Bingley courthouse in the same Petty Sessional Area.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the average distance travelled by an accused person attending trial at a magistrates court over the last 12 months. [27372]

Mr. Wills: This information is not held by the Department and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many (a) magistrates clerks and (b) people were employed in magistrates courts in each of the last 25 years. [27369]

Mr. Wills: The Lord Chancellor's Department assumed responsibility for the magistrates courts in 1993, and conducted the first annual survey of staffing in March 1994. Records do not exist centrally for earlier periods.

The information on the full-time equivalent number of justices clerks and all staff is in the table.

	Justices clerks	Total staff including Justices clerks

Marriage and Relationship Support Programme

Jim Knight: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how much has been requested in grants from the Lord Chancellor's Department's marriage and relationship support programme for 2002–03; and how many organisations have submitted applications for grants. [27200]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Lord Chancellor's Department received requests for a total of £9,370,556, from 69 different organisations.

Pension Sharing Orders

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many pension sharing orders have been made to date. [27671]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Pension sharing came into force on 1 December 2000. My Department has been monitoring orders made in the courts and is aware of 133 orders that have been made to date in England and Wales. Six orders have been made in Northern Ireland. I understand that there is no record of any orders having been made by the courts in Scotland, however pension sharing by agreement is possible in Scotland and six such agreements have been recorded.

Judges

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many judges he has admonished for falling asleep on the bench in the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [27149]

Mr. Wills: None—according to records held by the Lord Chancellor's Department's Judicial Correspondence Unit.

Departmental Fraud

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, what estimate her Department has made of the cost to its budget since 1 May 1997 of fraud; and if she will make a statement. [27307]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Lord Chanellor's Department incurred the following costs to its budget since 1 May 1997 as a result of fraud:

Financial year	£
1997–98	4,838.52
1998–99	59,079.02
1999–2000	11,847.49
2000–01	91,214.39
Total	166,979.42

Figures for the current financial year are not yet available.

Departmental Sickness Absence

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, if she will commission and publish an independent report on the reasons for the level of sickness absence in her Department. [26966]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office, on 14 January 2002, Official Report, column 37W.

The Lord Chancellor's Department is committed to managing sickness absence effectively. A great deal of work has been undertaken to raise awareness of our Service Delivery Agreement targets and of the need to manage attendance in accordance with best practice policies.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Pan-African Tsetse and Trypanosomiasis Eradication Campaign

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the Pan-African Tsetse and Trypanosomiasis Eradication Campaign. [27759]

Clare Short: DFID recognises that Trypanosomiasis is a major constraint to human health and to the livelihoods of poor livestock keepers throughout many parts of Africa. We have made considerable investments (over £37 million) to develop methods to control the disease in livestock and we support the World Health Organisation in its efforts to control sleeping sickness in humans.

The long-term goal of the Pan-African Tsetse and Trypanosomiasis Eradication (PATTEC) is to eradicate tsetse fly from the continent. It is a complex and ambitious programme that would require many billions of dollars to implement, and is founded on as yet unproven scientific and economic theory.

Our analysis—shared also by the European Commission—is that it will not be possible to eradicate tsetse flies from Africa. The aims of the campaign are laudable, but we do not believe that they are achievable.

Our strategy is to promote methods for controlling the tsetse fly and preventative and curative methods of treatment that can be readily implemented by poor people themselves. We have programmes of support with the Inter-African Bureau of Animal Resources of the African Union, and with the Food and Agriculture Organisation of the United Nations, to promote the establishment of sustainable animal health services that provide poor people with the means to control tsetse fly and the disease it carries.

Where the political will for control exists, and where there are clear social benefits, a regional approach to tsetse control may be justified. Such large scale programmes would however be best handled through multilateral channels such as the EC, and not by bilateral agencies such as DFID.

Burkina Faso

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the situation in Burkina Faso regarding the incidence of HIV cases; and what assistance has been provided by her Department in each of the last five years. [28621]

Clare Short: Burkina Faso has the second highest HIV/AIDS infection rate in west Africa, the UN estimating the adult prevalence rate as being 6.4 per cent. at the end of 1999. The Burkinabe Government are strongly committed to tackling HIV/AIDS through a comprehensive national strategy, and are working in partnership with neighbouring countries to contain the epidemic. Last month Burkina Faso hosted the 12th International Conference on AIDS and sexually transmitted diseases in Africa.

DFID does not have a substantive aid programme to Burkina Faso, and has not provided direct support for any projects linked to HIV/AIDS over the last five years. However, we fund such work indirectly through our contributions to international agencies—UNAIDS supports regional work to strengthen the response to HIV/AIDS throughout Africa, and the World bank's $500 million Multi-Country HIV/AIDS Program for the Africa Region (MAP) includes $22 million for Burkina Faso to help the Government expand access, particularly for vulnerable groups, to prevention, care and treatment.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much development aid was provided to Burkina Faso by the UK in each of the last five years. [28620]

Clare Short: DFID does not have a development programme in Burkina Faso. Small-scale funding has been available from the small grants scheme and the civil society challenge fund (and its forerunner). Details of DFID grants in aid and in kind are as follows:

1998–99	305,000
1999–2000	267,000
2000–01	234,000

In addition the UK provided debt relief of £430,000 in 1997–98.

The EC maintains a substantial development assistance programme to Burkina Faso. The calculated estimate of the proportion attributable to UK contributions over the years 1995–99 (the last year for which we have data) is as follows:

1996	4.5

Departmental Transport

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what her estimate is of the cost of (a) ministerial cars and drivers and (b) taxis for her Department in each of the last four years. [27906]

Clare Short: The estimated cost of (a) ministerial cars and drivers and (b) taxis for my Department in each of the last four financial years is:

	(a)	(b)
1997–98	257,247	71,185
1998–99	290,081	55,144
1999–2000	270,654	57,118
2000–01	212,114	78,308

Zimbabwe

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the situation relating to the distribution of food aid in Zimbabwe; and on what development assistance from the United Kingdom is being spent. [28434]

Clare Short: The prospect of food shortages in Zimbabwe has been clear for a long time. NGOs have planned ahead, including purchasing food, and have been operating supplementary feeding programmes since September 2001. DFID has committed £4 million for food and logistics support for programmes run by NGOs. We are monitoring these activities carefully and working with the NGOs and other donors to help ensure their success. We are satisfied that, at present, they are still able to work effectively.

The World Food Programme is now beginning food aid operations in Zimbabwe as a part of the UN Humanitarian Assistance and Recovery Programme. WFP will transport food within Zimbabwe, and will also work through NGOs to deliver food at the community level. DFID has pledged a further £3.5 million to WFP for food and logistics support.

Export Credits Guarantee Department

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what was the value of trade credits guaranteed by the ECGD for sales of military equipment to highly indebted poor countries in each year since 1983. [25240]

Ms Hewitt: I have been asked to reply.

The value of ECGD cover for defence business in each of these years for countries currently classified as HIPCs (Heavily Indebted Poor Countries) is as follows:

£ million

Year	Value of ECGD cover
1984–85	102.8
1987–88	20.1
1988–89	49.2
Total for all years since 1983	171.2

For years not listed the total value of ECGD cover was £0.

Not included in the table is cover provided by ECGD's short-term operation which was privatised in 1991. More generally ECGD's records of business supported prior to 1 April 1987 are no longer comprehensive.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Mr. John Stonborough

Peter Bottomley: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, when and for what purpose Mr. John Stonborough was engaged by the House of Commons Commission; what the selection process was; and when the need for advice on media relations was identified. [27263]

Mr. Kirkwood: Mr. Stonborough was engaged with effect from 20 December 2001 to provide the House of Commons Commission with advice on media relations generally, and on long-term information strategy. The commission chose him at its meeting on 18 December 2001. The need for a corporate approach to media matters was identified in the Braithwaite Review of Management and Services (HC745) published in July 1999. This led to the appointment of a communications adviser in the Office of the Clerk in 2000. Mr. Stonborough's engagement represents a further step in that direction.

TRANSPORT, LOCAL GOVERNMENT AND THE REGIONS

Abandoned Housing

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will rank local authorities in England by (a) number and (b) percentage of (i) public and (ii) private housing stock which have been abandoned. [27147]

Ms Keeble: Data on levels of abandonment are not held by my Department. Abandonment arises where a property owner simply walks away or 'abandons' a property. The owner's intentions as well as their actions are therefore relevant and it is difficult to define objectively. However, we do have data reporting low demand, which I have placed in the Libraries of the House.

Homebuy Scheme

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many people in the constituency of Buckingham have received interest free equity loans under the Homebuy scheme; and what the total amount of funding granted is. [27775]

Ms Keeble: The number of people in Aylesbury Vale that have received interest free equity loans under the Homebuy scheme is four.

2001–02: 2.

1999–2000	24,938
2000–01	24,640
2001–02	61,320
Total amount of funding granted	110,898

Note:

The Buckingham constituency is only part of Aylesbury Vale local authority area (albeit the main part) and that part of Aylesbury constituency is also covered within this area. Thus, any loans within the Aylesbury constituency may also be included in the figures.

Starter Home Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many people in the Buckingham constituency have benefited from the Starter Home initiative for key public workers; and what is (a) the average amount and (b) the total amount granted. [27778]

Ms Keeble: The Starter Home initiative allocations announced on 6 September 2001 included a scheme to help 272 key workers across Buckinghamshire. The grant that has been allocated to the scheme over the three years 2001–02 to 2003–04 is £6.988 million, averaging £25,199 grant, and £493 administration costs, per key worker. Separate allocations were made to other schemes to help 20 key workers in Aylesbury Vale and 70 in Milton Keynes.

It is proposed that a further 40 key workers are helped in Buckinghamshire under the bidding arrangements for the Starter Home initiative equity loan scheme announced on 16 January 2002, together with a further 10 in Milton Keynes.

Information on the number of key workers who have purchased homes under the Starter Home initiative scheme during this financial year will be available towards the end of April 2002.

Right to Buy

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many homes in the Buckingham constituency were bought under (a) right to buy and (b) right to acquire in each year since their inception; and what the total revenue is generated under each scheme. [27774]

Ms Keeble: The information is as follows:

	Number	Selling price (£000)
1980–81	17	n/a

1999–2000	204	6,831
2000–01	227	9,260

[1] Estimate

Notes:

1. The total selling price of properties sold under the Right to Buy scheme since April 1981 was £120.65 million. Comparable information for 1980–81 was not collected.

2. The Buckingham constituency is only part of Aylesbury Vale local authority area (albeit the main part) and that part of Aylesbury constituency is also covered within this area. Thus, any houses within the Aylesbury constituency may also be included in the figures.

Homeless Households

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many homeless households in the constituency of Buckingham have been resident in bed-and-breakfast accommodation in each year since 1997; and what percentage of them claimed social security benefits in each year. [27770]

Ms Keeble: Information reported by Aylesbury Vale district council on the number of households resident in bed-and-breakfast hotels under statutory homelessness provision at the end of March in each year since 1997 is shown in the table. This relates to households within the local authority's area, which includes part of the Aylesbury constituency. The number of these households claiming, or in receipt of, social security benefits is not collected centrally.

Estates Renewal Challenge Fund

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many projects in the Buckingham constituency have received funding from the Estates Renewal Challenge Fund; and if he will list the beneficiaries. [27779]

Ms Keeble: Buckinghamshire received no funding from the Estates Renewal Challenge Fund.

Council Houses

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many council houses have been empty in the Buckingham constituency in each year since 1997. [27773]

Ms Keeble: The number of local authority owned dwellings reported as being vacant in each year since 1997 is as follows:

Local authority owned dwellings in Aylesbury Vale district council area as on 1 April:

2000	131
1999	142

A level of vacancy is a usual feature of housing management, reflecting turnover and movement within the stock. There is likely to be some variation in the proportion of dwellings that are vacant in a local authority from one date to another during the year.

Note that the Buckingham constituency is only part of Aylesbury Vale local authority area (albeit the main part) and that part of Aylesbury constituency is also covered within this area. Thus, any houses within the Aylesbury constituency may also be included in the figures in the table.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many council houses there are in the Buckingham constituency; and how many of these are owned by the local authority. [27829]

Ms Keeble: The number of 'council' houses in the Aylesbury Vale local authority area at March 2001 is 9,621, of which 8,626 are owned by the local authority.

Note that the Buckingham constituency is only part of Aylesbury Vale local authority area (albeit the main part) and that part of Aylesbury constituency is also covered within this area. Thus, any houses within the Aylesbury constituency may also be included in the figures provided.

Traveller Sites

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many (a) local authority and (b) private traveller sites there were in the Buckingham constituency in each year since 1997. [27771]

Ms Keeble: The number of local authority traveller sites that were in Aylesbury Vale local authority area in each year since 1997 are shown in the table:

January	Number of local authority sites

Figures for the number of private sites are not collected centrally and thus are not available.

Note that the Buckingham constituency is only part of Aylesbury Vale local authority area (although the main part) and that part of Aylesbury constituency is also covered within this area. Thus, any gypsy sites within Aylesbury constituency may also be included in the figures provided.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many traveller caravans and families were on (a) authorised and (b) unauthorised sites in the Buckingham constituency in each year since 1997. [27772]

Ms Keeble: Figures for the number of caravans and families on authorised and unauthorised sites in the Aylesbury Vale local authority area for each year since 1997 are reported in the table.

Coastal Erosion

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of the effects of sand dredging on coastal erosion. [28115]

Ms Keeble [holding answer 17 January 2002]: Careful consideration is given to all of the environmental implications of marine minerals dredging proposals that are submitted to the Secretary of State. Each proposal is subject to environmental impact assessment that includes a coastal impact study prepared by HR Wallingford. The proposed dredging will be allowed only if the Secretary of State is satisfied that there will be no unacceptable coastal impacts.

A14

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when, upon the Highways Agency completing its preparatory work on the major A14 improvements, included in the preferred plan of the Cambridge to Huntingdon multi-modal study, the scheme will entered into the DTLR's targeted programme of improvements. [27737]

Mr. Spellar: I have asked the Highways Agency to carry out preparatory work on the major A14 improvements included in the preferred plan of the Cambridge to Huntingdon multi-modal study with a view to an early entry to the targeted programme of improvements. This work by the Highways Agency began this month with the aim of finishing it within six months, after which a decision will be made on entry to the TPI. Subsequently, public consultation on the route would be expected within 12 months.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions whether, in the event of approval of the final plans for the proposed major A14 improvements arising from the Cambridge to Huntingdon multi-modal study, it is the Government's intention to utilise the resources, provided for implementing decisions arising from multi-modal studies in the Government's 10-year transport plan, to effect the A14 improvements. [27738]

Mr. Spellar: I can confirm that in the event of approval of the final plans for the proposed A14 improvements, the scheme will be funded from the resources made available under the 10-Year Plan for Transport.

Landscaping Industry

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what recent research he has commissioned into the health and safety record of the landscaping industry; and if he will publish this research. [27884]

Mr. Raynsford: No recent research has been commissioned by the Health and Safety Executive into the health and safety record of the landscaping industry.

Construction Industry

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what new health and safety measures are planned for the construction industry, with particular regard to those businesses working within the land-based sector. [27883]

Mr. Raynsford: The Government have established the Strategic Forum for Construction to bring about industry consensus on future strategy and policy and has asked the chairman, Sir John Egan, to tackle the industry's health and safety performance as a key priority for action. The Health and Safety Commission has also initiated a Construction Priority Programme to focus its resources on the industry and the Health and Safety Executive is planning to publish a discussion document in the spring to ask the industry's views on a wide range of issues that affect health and safety.

The Constructors' Liaison Group, the umbrella body for the British Association of Landscape Industries, committed itself to adopting targets for certificated competence in health and safety of the work force, encouraging members to support the Construction Skills Certification Scheme and similar schemes.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when the public register holding information on genetically modified organisms will be reopened. [29351]

Dr. Whitehead: The public register holding information on the contained use of genetically modified organisms will be reopened on or around 11 February and will contain all information except for that excluded in the interests of national security.

Under the Genetically Modified Organisms (Contained Use) Regulations 2000 the Competent Authority—the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs and the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) in England, the Scottish Ministers and HSE in Scotland—is required to maintain a public register, and is firmly committed to a policy of openness and transparency. The register contains information on all notified premises and activities.

Following the activities of 11 September, HSE, on behalf of the Competent Authority, took the decision to temporarily withhold public access to the register because of the security risk.

Yesterday I signed the Genetically Modified Organisms (Contained Use) (Amendment) Regulations 2002 which will allow the Secretary of State to exclude information from the register in the interests of national security.

A meeting of the Technical Sub-Committee of the Advisory Committee on Genetic Modification and invited experts will consider the list of pathogens already compiled for schedule 5 of the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 and whether any additional genetically modified pathogens should be excluded from the register.

HSE acting on behalf of, and with the agreement of, the other members of the Competent Authority, will then review and sift the entries on the register and will reopen the register on or around 11 February. In the meantime HSE has arranged to make the information available to enquirers on a case-by-case basis.

Following the reopening of the register a system of regular review will be put in place to consider those items excluded from the register, with the aim of keeping to a minimum information which has to be excluded in the interests of national security.

Commuter Traffic

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment his Department has made of the environmental benefits of using financial incentives to encourage commuter traffic to shift from using cars to motorcycles; and if he will make a statement. [26731]

Mr. Boateng: I have been asked to reply.

The Government believe there are some environmental benefits associated with commuting by motorcycle rather than car. These are outlined in the interim report published by the Advisory Group on Motorcycling in April last year. A copy is available in the House Library.

The Government are also currently undertaking a consultation exercise asking for views on how VED for motorcycles can better reflect environmental impacts. The closing date for responses is 8 February.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Solicitor-General what assessment she has made of HM CPS inspectorate's report on inspection of the CPS in North Yorkshire; and if she will make a statement. [27682]

The Solicitor-General: The HMCPSI report on North Yorkshire was published on 4 December 2001. The Attorney-General and I have considered the report and are pleased to note the positive picture that it presents.

The report identifies clear improvements since the last inspection of North Yorkshire in 1998. Inspectors found that the area had a very good sense of corporate identity supported by good communication, with an experienced, stable and committed staff and strong leadership. Good systems are in placed for monitoring and reporting on casework performance. The quality of the lawyers' decision-making is sound and cases are progressed well with on-going reviews. Some aspects of casework still require improvement but work is in hand to bring about the necessary improvements. The report commented positively on the quality of management of the area, standards of advocacy, relationships with other criminal justice agencies and the involvement of staff in community and specialist groups across the county.

Plans have already been agreed to tackle those areas highlighted in the report where further improvements are necessary and action will be taken to ensure even better performance in the future.

Bob Spink: To ask the Solicitor-General what action she takes to prevent the use of inappropriate lesser charges by the Crown Prosecution Service. [28415]

The Solicitor-General: When considering any allegation, Crown Prosecutors are guided by statutory provisions and the Code for Crown Prosecutors. It is the duty of Crown Prosecutors to make sure that the right person is prosecuted for the right offence. In doing so, they must always act in the interests of justice and not solely for the purpose of obtaining a conviction.

The code further advises that Crown Prosecutors should select charges which reflect the seriousness of the offending, give the court adequate sentencing powers and enable the case to be presented in a clear and simple way. This means that Crown Prosecutors may not always continue with the most serious charge where there is a choice.

There are two stages in the decision to prosecute. The first stage is the evidential test. If the case does not pass the evidential test, it must not go ahead. If the case does meet the evidential test, Crown Prosecutors must decide if a prosecution is needed in the public interest.

In addition to statutory provisions and the Code for Crown Prosecutors, the Crown Prosecution Service, Crown Prosecutors are guided by charging standards, nationally agreed with the police for a range of offences, including offences of violence. The charging standards for assaults were designed to ensure consistency in the charging and prosecuting of offences involving violence.

CPS Essex has moved to a Criminal Justice Unit and Trial Unit structure. This move, together with the Narey reforms have meant that prosecutors are involved at a far earlier stage of the process and are able to provide advice.

Bob Spink: To ask the Solicitor-General how many cases, by category of offence, have been discontinued in the Essex Crown Prosecution Service in the last year for which records are available. [28420]

The Solicitor-General: The Crown Prosecution Service does not record offences discontinued or dropped by offence category. However, in the year October 2000 to September 2001, CPS Essex finalised 27,942 defendant cases, in the magistrates and Crown courts, out of which cases against 3,163 defendants were discontinued. This represents 11.3 per cent. of the total casework, against a national average for discontinue of 13.1 per cent.

Bob Spink: To ask the Solicitor-General what the target staffing level is of the Crown Prosecution Service in Essex; and what the actual level is. [28421]

The Solicitor-General: The staffing level for the Essex area of the Crown Prosecution Service on 1 April last year was 106.2 posts, comprising 37.6 prosecutor posts, and 68.6 administrative posts. The Government have made substantial extra resources available to the Crown Prosecution Service, a 23 per cent. increase in real terms, which has enabled it to recruit significant numbers of extra staff.

Currently the Essex area has 115 staff in post, comprising 42 prosecutors and 73 administrative staff. This level of staffing meets the area's current needs.

DEFENCE

Air-to-Air Missile

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the Advanced Short-Range Air-to-Air Missile to enter service; and if he will make a statement. [29350]

Mr. Ingram: The Advanced Short-Range Air-to-Air Missile (ASRAAM) will enter service with the Royal Air Force later this month. The delivery of the first batch of missiles marks the successful agreement between the Ministry of Defence and the missile manufacturer MBDA. By working constructively together, we have agreed a clear and robust route map to achieve the full operational capability required of the missile. Tornado F3 will be the first of our aircraft to be fitted with ASRAAM. The missile will also be one of Eurofighter's principal weapons. ASRAAM will provide a major advance in our short-range air-to-air combat capability.

Conflict Prevention Fund

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his policy is on disbursement of the UK Conflict Prevention Fund. [26669]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 11 January 2002]: Policy on the disbursement of the pooled budgets for conflict prevention is determined jointly by the Ministry of Defence, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Department for International Development, working together with the Cabinet Office and the Treasury.

The aim of the pooled budgets is to reduce the number of people whose lives are affected by violent conflict and the potential sources of future conflict. Strategies to achieve this are planned and reviewed through two sub-committees of the Cabinet Office Defence and Overseas Policy Committee, one for sub-Saharan Africa, the other for the rest of the world.

The strategy for sub-Saharan Africa includes, for example, assisting with building indigenous peacekeeping capacity, as well as conflict resolution and security sector reform in Sierra Leone. Strategies for the rest of the world include regional strategies in the Balkans, central and eastern Europe, South Asia and the middle east, and functional strategies like assisting UN peacekeeping reform and controlling small arms and light weapons.

The budgets also contribute to the additional costs of the UK's support to peacekeeping and peace-enforcement operations. In 2001–02 these have included commitments in Sierra Leone, Macedonia, Bosnia, Kosovo, and the Iraqi no-fly zones. Conflict prevention priorities and strategies are reviewed annually.

RAF Bases

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of flying hours were lost at (a) Lyneham and (b) Brize Norton in each of the last five years on account of (i) ice, (ii) fog and (iii) wind. [26625]

Mr. Ingram: Flying hours are not generally lost due to bad weather, as postponed flights will usually take place on a subsequent occasion. However weather conditions at RAF stations are assessed on an approximately hourly basis. Table 1 shows the percentage of occasions where weather conditions were assessed as 'red', ie the most severe conditions in terms of visibility and cloud cover. Table 2 shows the percentage of occasions when gusts of over 30 knots were registered. Not all flights are necessarily postponed in these conditions.

	RAF Brize Norton	RAF Lyneham
1997	3.96	4.71
1998	1.72	2.52
1999	1.36	2.29
2000	1.46	2.32
2001	2.34	3.01
Average	2.17	2.97

Table 2

	RAF Brize Norton	RAF Lyneham
1997	3.05	3.75
1998	2.07	3.60
1999	2.22	3.79
2000	2.27	4.02
2001	0.84	1.92
Average	2.09	3.41

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate how many aircraft movements take place on an annual basis at (a) RAF Lyneham and (b) RAF Brize Norton; and how many of them were (i) in daylight and (ii) at night. [26626]

Mr. Ingram: The number of aircraft movements undertaken at RAF Lyneham was approximately 36,000 during 2001 and at RAF Brize Norton 33,000. About 9 per cent. of these movements were undertaken at night.

Wind Turbines

Jim Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his policy is on the support of wind turbine deployers seeking planning consent in consultative statements issued by Defence Estates of district councils as part of the planning consent issue process. [27274]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence has a policy to assess each wind farm proposal on a case-by-case basis. We have an agreement with the wind energy industry that enables Defence Estates Safeguarding section to receive details of wind farms from individual companies some time prior to them applying for formal planning permission.

If the developer subsequently proceeds to seek formal planning permission from the local planning authority (LPA) and the site lies outside a formally safeguarded area then there is no statutory obligation on the authority to consult Defence Estates although most do so. In cases where the MOD does object to a proposal and the developer continues with the project then Defence Estates would seek to be formally consulted by the local authority.

As with all planning application consultations, Defence Estates Safeguarding strives to meet the response deadlines imposed by the planning process. Where we are unable to meet the deadline because the assessment is still being undertaken the LPA are advised to wait for our reply before consent is given. This action ensures that development does not occur that will either cause a safety hazard to military activity or interfere with the ability to train effectively.

Antonov Aircraft

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Antonov cargo planes are on charter to the RAF; how long those charters will last and what their total cost is; for what reason chartering Antonov is necessary; what assessment he has made of the possibility of using C-17s; and if he will make a statement about RAF transport requirements. [28182]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 17 January 2002]: Eleven Antonov aircraft sorties have been flown to date in support of UK force deployments to Afghanistan. Six further sorties have been contracted. £4 million has been spent to date.

The nature of airfields available in Afghanistan, together with the threat presented by surface-to-air missiles (SAM) had limited the RAF to the use of Hercules transport aircraft, which are fitted with a defensive aids suite. While the Hercules is a versatile and capable aircraft, the Antonov has a far greater payload, and has enabled the more rapid deployment of equipment, since the company operating the Antonovs has not restricted their use, even with the SAM threat.

A review of the threat to aircraft, and the re-opening of Kabul International airport, is likely to mean that use of the RAF's C-17 aircraft will soon be possible. However, the demanding timetable for the operation in Afghanistan is likely to mean that further Antonov charter will be required.

Berthing Capacity

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what criteria he is using in the review of berthing capacity at Her Majesty's naval bases. [27897]

Mr. Ingram: The aim of the study into berthing capacity at Her Majesty's naval bases is to define the future policy for base porting and the required waterfront infrastructure to support maritime and joint operations. The criteria that will be used for the study include the following:

(a) Any current base porting and waterfront infrastructure limitations that constrain the support of maritime and joint operations.

(b) The waterfront infrastructure capacity required to support future maritime and joint operations. Taking into account that the next generation of warships including, the future aircraft carriers, Type 45 Destroyers, amphibious ships and ASTUTE class submarines are all significantly larger than their predecessors.

(c) Apart from the larger dimensions of future vessels, a number of other considerations need to be taken into account, including increased use of naval harbours by commercial operators, the implications for personnel, the delivery of operational sea training, the need to accommodate visiting vessels from NATO and other nations, conventional weapons handling safety regulations, environmental impact and future berthing policy for Royal Fleet Auxiliary vessels. A large number of longer-term factors, including the consequences of various initiatives such as the Navy's TOPMAST project (Tomorrow's Personnel Management System), warship support modernisation, contractor logistic support and reliability centred maintenance will require further detailed consideration during the course of the work.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will decide the outcome of his Department's review of berthing capacities at Her Majesty's naval bases. [27896]

Mr. Ingram: The study into berthing capacity at Her Majesty's naval bases is due in the summer of 2002. Decisions on base porting will be informed by this study.

Pensions

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the cost to the armed forces pension scheme of providing pensions, at a rate of one half the serving members' pension, to widows and widowers of personnel who retired before 1 April 1973. [27193]

Mr. Ingram: The Armed Forces Pension Scheme (AFPS) increased the rate of widows' and widowers' pension from one third of the members pension to one half, from 31 March 1973. Individuals serving on or after this date were provided with the opportunity to make additional contributions so as to qualify former service for the half rate of widows' pension. On this basis, it would be difficult, in equity, to extend the half rate pension to widows whose husbands had left the service before that date and who had not, as a result, contributed financially towards the improvement. It has also been the long-standing policy of successive Governments that discretionary changes to improve the benefits offered by public service pension schemes should be implemented for future service only.

We do not know exactly how many people would be affected by such a change, but we estimate the cost for the Armed Forces Pension Scheme to be £25–30 million per year. The cost would be substantially higher if the improvement were extended to other public service pension schemes.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the cost to the Armed Forces Pension Scheme of entitling servicemen and women who retired before 31 March 1973 to buy-in to the scheme's improved benefits in respect of providing widows and widowers a full half pension. [27194]

Mr. Ingram: As such a change would be on a "buy-in" basis, we would expect the cost of extending the half rate pensions to pre-1973 widows and widowers to be covered by contributions. The Ministry of Defence would incur administration costs but these would be relatively small. However, such changes have been ruled out by the long-standing policy of successive Governments that scheme improvements should not be retrospective.

UN Military Staff College

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the status is of the proposed UN military staff college for the training of peace keepers; and if he will propose using the Scottish Centre for Nonviolence as its location. [26683]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 11 January 2002]: The UK's approach to providing support to UN training is through a flexible programme of training aimed at enhancing multinational co-operation and interoperability, and strengthening the integrated civil-military approach to peace support operations. This is achieved through conferences, seminars and workshops, expanding places on, or reorientating, existing courses and the development of bespoke UN courses. This is being carried out very successfully throughout locations within the UK and abroad. While a dedicated UN military staff college remains a possibility, we are not currently pursuing the establishment of one.

Eagle-Picher

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the accuracy of bombs dropped on Afghanistan with batteries produced by Eagle-Picher; and if he will make a statement. [27258]

Mr. Ingram: Eagle-Picher batteries are used in US munitions, and this is therefore a matter for them.

Search and Rescue Squadron

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will ensure that waterproof helmet-fitted radios are made available for Royal Air Force Search and Rescue Squadron winchmen. [28096]

Mr. Ingram: Subject to a satisfactory outcome of current trials, a helmet-radio assembly for RAF Search and Rescue winchmen will come into service this summer. A fully integrated and waterproof helmet-radio is scheduled to be introduced next year. This will permit full radio and intercom voice communications between the helicopter crew and the winchman.

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many winchmen serve with the Royal Air Force Search and Rescue Squadron. [28095]

Mr. Ingram: There are currently 49 Search and Rescue winchmen within the Royal Air Force.

US Trident Submarines

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions his Department has had with its counterparts in Washington concerning US plans to convert two of its fleet of Trident submarines to conventional use. [28259]

Mr. Ingram: We have not taken part in any formal discussions.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Fraud

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate her Department has made of the cost to its budget since 1 May 1997 of fraud; and if she will make a statement. [27288]

Dr. Howells: The available information is given in the table:

Film Council

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many full-length feature films the Film Council has financially supported in each year since its creation; what the total income for each of those films is; what estimate the Film Council has made of each film's total audience; and if she will make a statement. [27754]

Dr. Howells: The Film Council has directly or indirectly financially supported a total of 58 feature length films to date since its creation. Of these, 15 were directly funded from the Film Council Lottery funds which became operational in October 2000. The remainder were funded through the pre-existing Lottery film franchises or through the interim arrangements with the film production activities of its predecessor bodies—the Arts Council of England (through Lottery funding) and British Screen Ltd. (through grant in aid funding).

The total cash received by the Film Council to 31 December 2001 against the 58 titles is £2,091,739. A film is normally expected to generate income over several years and the income received to date against these titles is therefore only a small part of the expected return on investment.

The Film Council does not produce estimates of total audience for individual films. A film's earning potential spans a number of international markets or countries and a range of media platforms (including cinema, video, DVD, and television) and it is therefore unrealistic to attempt to estimate total audience.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much money the Film Council received from lottery funds in the last financial year; what amount the Film Council allocated in the last financial year; what amount the Film Council allocated and paid out in the last financial year; and if she will make a statement. [27753]

Dr. Howells: The Film Council was allocated £31.474 million in income from the National Lottery Distribution Fund during the 2000–01 financial year. The Film Council allocated £33.82 million of lottery funding to projects and paid out £20.003 million in the same year.

Lost/Stolen Property

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list those items valued at more than £50 which have been stolen or lost from her Department in each of the last four years. [27993]

Dr. Howells: Items stolen from the Department over the last four years are as follows: a laptop computer (1998), three personal computer base units and one personal computer monitor (2001). As required each incident was reported immediately on discovery as a security breach.

Refurbishment

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what her estimate is of the cost of buildings refurbishment carried out by her Department in each of the last four years. [27970]

Dr. Howells: The Department has needed to relocate some divisions during the last four years and refurbishment has been necessary in those cases in preference to higher rental costs for property offered by developers. In 1999 the Government Art Collection was rehoused at a cost of £144,000. In 2000 the cost of moving towards a single roof solution for the Department was £615,000 and improving facilities in 2000 and 2001 was at a cost of £375,000 and £648,000 respectively.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefit Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the cost in (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02 of the (i) Integrated Enquiry Service, (ii) Shared Fraud Hotline, (iii) local authority departmental information teams and (iv) overpayment recoveries in respect of housing benefit. [19009]

Malcolm Wicks: These initiatives made up the housing benefit improvement programme, the purpose of which was to contribute to improving housing benefit and council tax benefit administration. During the life of the programme, strong links were established with local authority managers and staff that will continue to develop as the recommendations from the programme are taken forward. These relationships have contributed to a greater understanding of the local authority information requirements, and the introduction of a standard set of procedures that will help deliver improvements to the recovery of housing benefit and council tax benefit overpayments.

The information on costs is in the table:

Housing benefit improvement programme expenditure

Mental Health

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what research the Government have conducted on the health impact on mental health service users of the implementation of his Department's benefits policies. [20231]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: A major goal of the Government are to help those people who are sick or disabled who can work to do so, while providing security for those who cannot work. This group includes people with mental health problems, whether they use mental health services or not. The Department for Work and Pensions consults with service users to ensure that relevant research informs new ideas and policy implementation.

The Office for National Statistics published a report on the Psychiatric Morbidity of Adults carried out on behalf of the Department of Health on 18 December. The main aim of the survey was to estimate the prevalence of psychiatric morbidity among adults aged 16 to 74 living in private households in Great Britain. The survey report also examines the use of services associated with mental disorder and considers the characteristics—including economic activity—of people with mental disorder.

A longitudinal follow up to that survey is planned for 2002 and aims to estimate the duration of mental health problems. The study will also involve some follow-up work on use of services.

Departmental Sickness Absence

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will commission and publish an independent report on the reasons for the level of sickness absence in his Department. [26999]

Mr. McCartney: We have no plans to publish an independent report on the reasons for absence in the Department.

The Cabinet Office already commissions and publishes an independent annual report covering all Government Departments; "Analysis of Sickness Absence in the Civil Service". This report includes details of the causes of absenteeism in my Department.

The report for the year 2000, will be published shortly.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Electricity

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she expects to respond to the consultation on the impact of NETA on small generators. [26601]

Mr. Wilson: The Government are analysing and considering responses to their consultation carefully. The Department of Trade and Industry will be issuing a response shortly.

Departmental Expenditure

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to her answer of 17 December 2001, Official Report, column 473W, on departmental expenditure, what estimate she has made of the savings produced by refinancing; over what period of time she expects these to be realised and under which vote; and if she will make a statement. [26080]

Ms Hewitt: The refinancing programme to date is estimated to generate £75 million of savings. The majority of the savings will be realised over the next five years, but will continue until 2018.

The relevant vote is the Export Credits Guarantee Department Request for Resources 1.

Former Miners

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations (a) she and (b) her Department has received on allowing former miners, who were sacked in the 1980s, access to their pension funds. [27606]

Mr. Wilson: None. All former British Coal miners when reaching pensionable age, whether dismissed or not, have access to the pension benefits they have accrued while in employment.

I announced on 11 December 2001, Official Report, columns 759–60W, that certain miners dismissed during the 1984–85 strike would receive an enhancement to their pension in recognition of the years of further service they lost as a result of British Coal's decision not to re-employ them.

Environmental Reports

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many (a) multinational companies with bases in Scotland and (b) Scottish companies had published environmental reports by 31 December 2001. [27272]

Mr. Wilson: While the Government are keen to encourage companies to report, it is not mandatory to do so. There is, therefore, no central register of which companies report.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total level was of Government financial support to the renewable energy sector in each year between 1980 and 1990 broken down by (a) research grants, (b) non-fossil fuel levy and (c) other sources. [27456]

Mr. Wilson: Main Government financial support for the renewable energy sector between 1980 and 1990 was in the form of research grants from the then Department of Energy's New and Renewable Energy Research and Development Programme. Programme spend was as follows:

	£ million
1980–81	11.1
1981–82	17.3
1982–83	14.1
1983–84	[illegible]
1984–85	14.1
1985–86	12.7
1986–87	11.6
1987–88	14.3
1988–89	15.3
1989–90	17.2

During these years, the Government may also have funded some other relevant research projects managed by the research councils, but to identify these projects now would be difficult and would involve disproportionate cost.

The Non Fossil Fuel Obligation and the Fossil Fuel Levy supporting it were introduced in financial year 1990–91. In 1990–91, levy support for renewable energy was £6.1 million. I am not aware of funding for renewable energy from other Government sources from 1980 to 1990.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the projects and institutions benefiting from the Lottery money announced by the Government in March 2001 for research into renewable energy projects. [25888]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 15 January 2002]: Funding from the Lottery is being directed especially towards the development of the offshore wind energy and energy crops industries. The offshore wind energy scheme is now open for applications and we are presently working up the details of the energy crops scheme. No funds have yet been awarded under either scheme.

Wind Turbines

Jim Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how much she has allocated for grant aid to farmers in siting small scale wind power generators on their land; and how much has been issued under this grant scheme to date; [27277]

(2) what steps are being taken in support of farmers in the siting of wind turbines as a vehicle for agricultural diversification. [27276]

Mr. Wilson: The Government believe that the financial incentive provided by the Renewables Obligation and exemption from the climate change levy will be sufficient to bring forward new onshore wind projects without the requirement for further financial support from Government.

The Renewables Obligation will succeed the Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation (NFFO). Between 1990 and 1998 302 wind projects were awarded NFFO contracts, of which 74 had commissioned by 30 September 2001. The Electricity from Non-Fossil Fuel Sources (Locational Flexibility) Order 2001 which was made in December will enable a number of those projects which have yet to commission to come forward and a number of these are likely to be on agricultural land.

I was pleased to launch on 28 August 2001 an innovative new service, operated by National Wind Power Ltd., to help farmers and landowners to develop small wind energy projects typically comprising one, two or three turbines. The WindWorks package has been developed to provide farmers with the financial rewards associated with ownership of a wind energy project while avoiding exposure of farmers and landowners to new financial risks at a time when great uncertainty exists in the farming industry and rural economy. More detail on WindWorks can be found at: http://www.natwindpower.co.uk/windworks/index.htm.

NETA

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures she has taken to help intermittent suppliers adversely affected by NETA. [25894]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 15 January 2002]: On 1 November 2001 I published a consultation document in response to Ofgem's reports on NETA and its impact on smaller generators, including intermittent generators. Consultation closed on 1 December and follow-up work to analyse responses and take appropriate action is now under way. On 20 December I announced the formation of a working group to look at obstacles to consolidation under NETA, and to report to DTI by 31 January 2002. Many of the issues raised and considered in the consultation document, and by the working group, apply to the demand side, including intermittent suppliers. The Government will be publishing a response to their consultation shortly.

Nuclear Waste Storage

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment has been made of the ability of the UK's intermediate and high level nuclear waste storage facilities to withstand terrorist attack. [25891]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 15 January 2002]: The UK's civil nuclear sites apply stringent security measures regulated by the Office for Civil Nuclear Security (OCNS), the security regulator. The security regulator works closely with the Health and Safety Executive, the safety regulator, which provides advice on the safety implications of events, including external hazards such as plane crashes, at nuclear installations. Security and safety precautions at nuclear sites are kept under regular review. Both regulators are reviewing all relevant precautions in the light of the terrorist attacks in the USA on 11 September 2001. It is not Government policy to disclose details of security measures taken at civil nuclear sites.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the (a) annual cost of maintaining the nuclear waste storage facilities at Sellafield and Dounreay and (b) the forecast for the annual running and maintenance costs over the next 50 years. [25896]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 15 January 2002]: I am advised by UKAEA and BNFL that the current total annual cost of maintaining radioactive waste storage facilities at Dounreay is £12 million, and at Sellafield is £50 million, while the forecast total running and maintenance cost of radioactive waste storage facilities over the next 50 years at Dounreay is £450 million and at Sellafield is £1,100 million.

All figures are at 2001–02 money values and include overheads.

Energy Charter Conference

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry who represented her Department at the Energy Charter Conference session on 17 December 2001. [27889]

Mr. Wilson: Officials of the Department of Trade and Industry represented the United Kingdom at this meeting.

BAE

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions she has had with BAE concerning the future of the plant at Broughton. [28658]

Mr. Wilson: Airbus UK owns the plant at Broughton and another site at Filton, where all the wings for Airbus aircraft are developed and manufactured. The Department remains in close touch with the company and with BAE Systems, which is a 20 per cent. shareholder in the Airbus company. UK work on Airbus programmes, including at Broughton, was covered in recent discussions between BAE Systems and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry and also in discussions which I had recently with Airbus UK and Airbus in Toulouse.

TREASURY

Public Expenditure

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of each public expenditure programme was cash-limited in each of the years from 1992–93 to 2001–02. [26273]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Information on the cash limits and total spending for each Department is available in the following documents.

Year	Spending plans		Final cash limits and DELs
1992–93	Cm 1920	Tables 3.3 and B1	Cm 2273	Tables 1 and 2

[1] Latest position

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of the gross domestic product he expects public expenditure to constitute in 2006–07. [27447]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Firm spending plans for 2006–07 will be set out in a future Spending Review. Paragraph B20 of the pre-Budget report (Cm 5318) explains the assumptions made in the Government's current fiscal projections.

Direct and Indirect Taxation

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the percentage change in upper tax income per income decile as a consequence of announced changes to direct and indirect taxation over the period 2002–03 to 2004–05. [26330]

Mr. Andrew Smith: There will be a reduction in income tax for a relatively small number of higher rate taxpayers with the increase in the children's tax credit to up to £20 a week for families in the year of a child's birth from April 2002. Apart from this, announced tax changes over the period 2002–02 to 2004–05 will have no impact on higher rate taxpayers.

Single Person's Allowance

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer by how much in real terms the average annual tax payments of a person with no allowance and reliefs other than the single person's allowance earning (a) £10,000, (b) £20,000, (c) £30,000, (d) £50,000 and (e) £100,000 has changed since 1997–98. [26214]

Dawn Primarolo: The reduction in tax at 1997–98 prices for a taxpayer claiming only the personal allowance and earning the specified levels in 1997–98 and 2000–01 are shown in the table.

Customs and Excise Forecasts

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy (a) to record the reasons for manual adjustments made by HM Customs and Excise to their modelled forecasts for alcohol receipts and (b) to make public those reasons. [26411]

Mr. Boateng: Under Exemption 2 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information, it would be inappropriate to publish internal discussion and advice leading to the published alcohol revenue forecasts.

Pre-Budget Report

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost was of the publication and distribution of the 2001 pre-Budget report. [27438]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The net cost of printing and distributing the 2001 PBR was £56,000.

Aggregates Levy

Mr. Weir: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which other countries in the European Union have introduced an aggregates levy; what discussions he has had with the finance Ministers of the European Union regarding a common aggregate levy; what the level of aggregates levy proposed in each of the countries of the European Union is; whether aggregates imported into the UK from other countries (a) in and (b) outside the European Union will be subject to the aggregate levy; what tonnage of aggregates has been imported into the United Kingdom from (i) the European Union and (ii) countries outside the European Union in each of the last five years; and whether added value aggregates products from outside the United Kingdom will be subject to the aggregate levy. [26775]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 14 January 2002]: The aggregates levy is designed to address the environmental effects of aggregate extraction in the UK and the rate was set to reflect these costs following independent research. Aggregate taxes in other EU member states are a matter for the individual states themselves. The known current position in the member states can be summarised as follows:

Denmark—0.67 euro/m^3

France—0.1 euro/tonne

Spain—no national tax but potential for regional taxation

Italy—regional taxation, typically 2 to 5 per cent. of value

Sweden—0.6 euro/tonne on sand and gravel only

Austria—regional tax of approximately 0.15 euro/tonne

Greece—2 per cent. of value

Netherlands—in the process of introducing a tax.

Aggregates imported from other countries, whether in the EU or not, will be liable to the levy. The total tonnage of imported aggregate for each of the last five years for which data are available is as follows.

Imports

	Tonnes
1994	2,166,211
1995	1,942,602
1996	642,581
1997	502,381
1998	822,087

Imported products made from aggregates are not themselves aggregates and so will not be subject to the levy.

Business Taxation

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to simplify business taxation. [27465]

Dawn Primarolo: A number of measures to simplify business taxation were contained in the Budget and pre-Budget reports, published in March 2001 and November respectively. Both these documents are available in the Library of the House.

Departmental PFI Contracts

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the proportion of PFI contracts made by his Department where an amount in excess of 90 per cent. of the capital value of the asset is recouped by the lessor out of the capital element of lease payments over the lifetime of the contract concerned; and if he will make a statement. [27697]

Mr. Andrew Smith: No such estimate has been made. The existing PFI contracts in the Departments are for the provision of a service in return for a unitary payment, the payment of which is dependent on satisfactory performance. The unitary payment is not broken down into constituent parts.

Public Sector Pay

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the impact of the public pay review bodies' recommendations will be on the public spending limits of 2001–07. [27921]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Public spending plans are settled in the spending reviews, and are not amended by reference to the recommendations of the pay review bodies. It is normal practice for Departments to accommodate pay awards within public spending limits.

VAT

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his policy is towards introducing reduced rates of VAT on organisations covered by category 14 of annexe H to the Sixth Directive. [26536]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 17 January 2002]: Not-for-profit welfare services provided by charities are already VAT exempt.

Drug Misuse

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list by Department the total amount allocated to tackling problems relating to drugs in each of the last 10 years. [27452]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: I have been asked to reply.

Information on resources is not available in the form requested.

The Government have made available substantial resources for directly tackling the problem of drug misuse. A breakdown of funding allocated for the years 1995 to 2004 is as follows.

The first United Kingdom drugs strategy, "Tackling Drugs Together", was launched in May 1995 and allocated £8.8 million over three years to Drug Action Teams, £5.9 million on schools drug education for 1995–96, and £1 million in the same year for services to young people at an early stage of drug misuse.

For the present strategy "Tackling Drugs to Build a Better Britain", the 1998 Comprehensive Spending Review settlement provided an additional £217 million of resources for three years. The Spending Review 2000 (SR 2000) and the Budget 2001 provided further resources bringing total expenditure under the drugs strategy to nearly £1 billion by 2003–04—see Table A.

Furthermore, SR 2000 also supported a range of related programmes—see Table B—and following the Budget 2001, some additional investment was made, particularly to help Communities tackle drug misuse—see Table C.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Home Energy Efficiency

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of (a) how much is invested annually into household energy efficiency and (b) how this money is spent. [25625]

Mr. Meacher: The Government estimate that during 2000 (the most recent year for which figures are available) the total investment in household energy efficiency measures was approximately £250 million (excluding double glazing). The breakdown for the major items of this expenditure is:

	£ million
Loft insulation	90
Cavity wall insulation	70
Lighting	50
Draught proofing	20
Condensing boilers[1]	10
Tank insulation	5

[1] This figure includes only the fraction of the total cost of the boiler assumed to represent the additional cost of the increased energy efficiency.

Although installing double glazing in homes does increase the energy efficiency of the building it is rare that double glazing is installed for energy efficiency reasons alone. Hence, expenditure on double glazing is excluded from the figures. However, the Government estimate that the energy efficiency component of double glazing installations totals some £500 million p.a.

Home Heating

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will install heating equipment at the house of Mrs. Anita Farrow of Ashburton, a constituent; and if she will make a statement on the reason for the delay. [24955]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 9 January 2002]: The Home Energy Efficiency Scheme (HEES), now marketed as The Warm Front Team, is administered in south-west England by the Eaga Partnership Ltd. Eaga advise that contractors are due to complete the work on Mrs. Farrow's property by the end of this month.

The delay was mainly due to the original heating contractor declining to carry out the work after having agreed to do so. It took some time to locate an alternative contractor and resolve a shortage of suitable heating equipment.

Rural Regeneration

Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what sources of (a) Government and (b) EU funding are available to (i) farmers, (ii) rural villages, (iii) rural businesses, (iv) local authorities, (v) parish councils and (vi) rural voluntary organisations to help regenerate rural economies. [27257]

Alun Michael: Many Government and European Union programmes contribute to the rural agenda.

Through the Regional Development Agencies (RDAs) and the Countryside Agency we support the market towns programme which is intended to regenerate some 120 small rural towns as well as a range of support measures to rural businesses via the rural development programme and redundant building grant scheme.

Through the Countryside Agency we support the Vital Villages programme which includes community service grants to support projects to maintain or introduce services which are local priorities; parish transport grants for small scale projects to meet local needs; parish plans grants to help 1,000 parishes draw up their own town or village plans to set out local needs and aspirations.

The Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs is responsible for the following programmes which involve funding from the Government and from the European Community:

> The England Rural Development Programme (ERDP) under which the two main priority areas for funding are schemes to conserve and enhance the rural environment and schemes to enable farming, forestry and other rural businesses and communities to adapt to changing circumstances and to create a productive and sustainable rural economy.
> Objective 1 funding in certain areas (Cornwall and the Isles of Scilly, Merseyside and South Yorkshire) to promote similar measures to the ERDP. Because these areas are defined by the Commission as being of greater need, the rates of grant are slightly higher.
> Leader+ Local Action Groups (which include farmers, rural villages, rural businesses, local authorities, parish councils and voluntary organisations) are helping to improve the quality of life and economic prosperity in their area through innovative approaches to sustainable rural development.

A more extensive list of potential sources of funding and advice for rural businesses can be found in Annex 1 of the Rural White Paper, "Our Countryside: the future, a fair deal for rural England" published in November 2000. A report on our progress on implementation of the Rural White Paper was included in "England's Rural Future", published on 12 December 2001, Official Report, column 920W.

Kyoto Protocol

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether she proposes an early ratification of the Kyoto protocol by the United Kingdom; and if she will make a statement [27837]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 16 January 2002]: For legal and presentational reasons, the UK will ratify the Kyoto protocol at the same time as the European Community and other member states. At the European Council on 31 October 2001, the EU stressed

> "the Community's and its member states' resolve to complete their ratification procedures in time for timely ratification with a view to entry into force of the Kyoto protocol by the World Summit on Sustainable Development" in 2002.

The first step in the process is for the EC to ratify the protocol through the adoption of a Council Decision that will include further clarification on the arrangements for implementing the agreement between the EC and its member states in 1998 on sharing out the EC's −8 per cent. target. A Council Decision dealing with these issues is currently under discussion and is expected to be adopted at the next Environment Council on 4 March 2002.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Student Loans Company

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the administration costs of the Student Loans Company were in 2000–01; and what she expects them to be in 2001–02. [21299]

Margaret Hodge: The Student Loans Company's provisional outturn of administration costs in 2000–01 was £47.5 million (cash). The final figure will be included in the company's 2000–01 annual report which is expected to be published in mid-December 2002. Copies of this document will be placed in the Libraries of both of the Houses of Parliament.

The planned administration expenditure for 2001–02 is £55 million.

Both of these figures are provided on a UK basis, and include funding from the private sector to cover the administration of the two sold loan portfolios.

Higher Education Funding Council

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the administration costs of the Higher Education Funding Council for England were in 2000–01; and what she expects them to be in 2001–02. [21291]

Margaret Hodge: Provision for the administrative costs of the Higher Education Funding Council for England is £14.6 million in 2001–02 and £14.9 million in 2002–03.

Further Education Funding Council

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the administration costs of the Further Education Funding Council were in 2000–01; and what she expects them to be in 2001–01. [21292]

John Healey: We do not yet have final expenditure details for the Further Education Funding Council (FEFC) in 2000–01. Latest planned funding for the FEFC for administration was £27.4 million.

The FEFC will not incur any administrative costs in 2001–02. From April 2001 the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) has taken over the majority of the functions previously carried out by the FEFC, as well as those of TECs.

Teacher Training Agency

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the administration costs of the Teacher Training Agency were in 2000–01; and what she expects them to be in 2001–02. [21297]

Mr. Timms: The administration costs of the Teacher Training Agency (TTA) in 2000–01, as published in the agency's annual financial statements, were £7.392 million. The TTA's current forecast administration costs for 2001–02 are around £7.85 million.

Qualifications and Curriculum Authority

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the administration costs of the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority were in 2000–01; and what she expects them to be in 2001–02. [21300]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Qualifications and Curriculum Authority incurred administration costs in 2000–01 of £25,600,000, and expects to spend £28 million in 2001–02.

Investors in People

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the administration costs of Investors in People were in 2000–01; and what she expects them to be in 2001–02. [21301]

John Healey: In this financial year, Investors in People UK will receive grant in aid of £1.617 million. Up to 75 per cent. of this is used for running costs—e.g. staff/premises costs; the remainder is used to fund the development of the standard. In addition to this, the company has also received additional funding of £1.6 million from the Department for marketing purposes. Last year, IiP UK generated additional income of £3.7 million from their own operations, which was used to carry out development, quality assurance, and advice and guidance.

Exam Standards

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will publish the full report of the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority into the claims of Mr. Jeffrey Robinson about exam standards. [24887]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: QCA commissioned a full report from the awarding body OCR on Mr. Robinson's allegations. Although the OCR report is a confidential technical document and it is not QCA's practice to publish documents of this type, QCA's assessment of it has been published in the QCA website.

Civil Service Code

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many complaints have been reported in her Department under paragraph 11 of the Civil Service Code since 13 May 1999; and how many of them related to special advisers. [25328]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 9 January 2002]: The procedures for making complaints under the Civil Service Code are set out in the Department's staff handbook. Civil servants are encouraged, in the first instance, to raise complaints made under paragraph 11 of the Civil Service Code with their line manager. If for any reason this is not felt to be possible, perhaps because the line manager is part of the complaint, individuals may take their complaint to a nominated official (or officials). It is not possible to provide a comprehensive figure for the number of complaints made within this Department under paragraph 11 of the code, as there is no requirement for managers to report centrally details of complaints made under the Civil Service Code which are resolved within the management line.

Early Education Places

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of three-year-olds in Trafford are in receipt of a free early education place. [25994]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 11 January 2002]: We are committed to providing all three-year-olds, whose parents want one, with a free nursery education place by September 2004. We have recently announced details of the £275 million of funding we are making available to provide free early education places for three-year-olds in 2002–03. This funding has been initially allocated according to the position of an authority on the Government's Index of Multiple Deprivation. As a result, Trafford LEA has been allocated £335,000 of this funding to provide 275 free early education places.

Estimates of the percentage of three-year-olds already provided with a place are used nationally for internal planning and monitoring. However, accurate local population figures are not available to the Department, although local authorities may choose to make their own estimates based on local data.

Speech Therapists

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many speech therapists qualified for teaching children with special educational needs are in practice in each local education authority in England. [27696]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This information is not collected centrally. Under the Standards Fund, grant support is available to local education authorities to help them enhance speech and language therapy services in conjunction with the NHS and voluntary sector. We have also supported the work of the charity I-CAN on creating a joint professional development framework for teachers and speech and language therapists, to be published shortly.

Ministerial Transport

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what her estimate is of the cost of (a) ministerial cars and drivers and (b) taxis for her Department in each of the last four years. [27903]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Nick Matheson, Chief Executive of the Government Car and Despatch Agency (GCDA) which provides ministerial cars and drivers, will be writing separately in response to part (a) of this question.

It is not possible, even at disproportionate cost, to provide an estimate of the cost of taxis used within my Department in each of the last four years.

Sixth Form Funding

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list those local education authorities in England which have indicated that they will be unable to meet the financial provisions for school sixth forms in 2002–03, as specified by the Learning and Skills Council; and if she will make a statement. [28109]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Learning and Skills Council has issued to LEAs and schools their provisional sixth form funding allocations for 2002–03. These allocations will be confirmed shortly. LEAs will be required to pass on all the money received for sixth forms to the schools.

Because the way the LSC distributes the funds differs from that formerly used by LEAs, transitional issues have arisen for some authorities. We propose to deal with these by providing extra grant resources for 2002–03 for those authorities most significantly affected, and by allowing more flexibility in the way LEAs fund schools. A letter to this effect was sent to all LEAs on 7 December 2001 and copies have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list, by local education authority in England, the amounts allocated for 2002–03 to schools with sixth forms, excluding funding for statemented special education needs, by the Learning and Skills Council according to the (a) terms of the Real Terms Guarantee, (b) Learning and Skills Council's methodology and (c) Learning and Skills Council's methodology as modified by the restriction of gains to 30 per cent. above the levels of the Real Terms Guarantee. [28110]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This is principally a matter for the Learning and Skills Council. Their provisional school sixth form allocations were published on 14 December 2001 and are publicly available on the LSC's internet website in the form requested by the hon. Member at www.lsc.gov.uk. The allocations will be confirmed shortly.

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidance she has given to local educational authorities to cater for the needs of children whose education is disrupted by ME. [28221]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: On 1 November 2001, the Department for Education and Skills jointly with the Department of Health published new statutory guidance; "Access to Education for children and young people with medical needs". This guidance sets out minimum national standards for the education of children who are unable to attend school because of medical needs, and is applicable to children with Chronic Fatigue Syndrome/Myalgic Encephalomyelitis (CFS/ME).

The Independent Working Group report on CFS/ME was published on 11 January 2002. The Government hope that publication of the report will result in improved awareness and understanding of this condition and lead to improved diagnosis, treatment and management. Advice is given in the report about the education of children and young people with CFS/ME.

Children's Rights Commissioner

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent representations she has received on the establishment of a Children's Rights Commissioner. [27431]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 17 January 2002]: My Department has received two letters making representations about a Children's Rights Commissioner in England, one of which was forwarded by the Prime Minister's office.

Specialist Schools

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what her estimate is of the total expenditure on specialist schools in (a) England and (b) Somerset for each year from 1997–98 to 2003–04 (planned); and if she will make a statement. [27043]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 17 January 2002]: Information on the actual and planned expenditure for specialist schools for (a) England and (b) Somerset for each year from 1997–98 to 2003–04 is provided if the table.

Financial Year	England (£ million)	Somerset (£)
1997–98	33.1	247.175
1998–99	40.8	462,660
1999–2000	47.4	523,972
2000–01	71.9	815,716
2001–02	94.0	885,063
2002–03	[1]108.0	[2]957,063
2003–04	[1]127.0	[2]957,063

[1] Estimates for 2002–03 and 2003–04 are baseline figures for those years based on targets of 1,000 specialist schools by 2003 and 1,500 by 2005.

[2] Estimated expenditure on specialist schools in Somerset for 2002–03 and 2003–04 is based on current pupil numbers in schools already designated.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many schools have applied for specialist school status in each quarter since May 1997; how many of these schools were granted specialist status in each of these quarters; how many cluster bids have been accepted; and if she will make a statement. [27051]

Mr. Timms: The number of specialist school applications received in each competition since May 1997 and the number of schools designated in each round are shown in the table. A small number of "associated applications" have been discussed with officials but no applications which are part of these associated applications have yet been successful.

	Competitions
	Schools applying	Number of schools designated
May 1997	40	8
October 1997	107	32
March 1998	122	51
October 1998	67	43
March 1999	52	37
June 1999	95	44
October 1999	68	37
March 2000	117	59
June 2000	115	34
October 2000	106	39
March 2001	154	79

Note:

261 applications received in the October 2001 competition are currently being assessed.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many schools will be granted specialist school status in the bidding rounds during 2002; what proportion this is of the total number of expected bids; and if she will make a statement. [27052]

Mr. Timms: It is difficult to estimate the number of bids we will receive this year but it is likely to be at least as many (both in March and October) as in the October 2001 competition, when 261 schools made applications. Our published target is to have at least 830 specialist schools by September 2002. There are 463 specialist schools at present.

Nurture Groups

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans she has to establish nurture groups in primary schools in order to give special assistance to young children with social and educational problems; and if she will make a statement. [27047]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Government recognise the benefit that nurture groups can provide for disaffected young children or those with emotional behavioural and other difficulties (EBD).

A number of LEAs and schools already use this approach for pupils with EBD. In June 2001, My Department published guidance on promoting children's mental health in early years and school settings, which includes the use of nurture groups as an effective early intervention strategy for young children in schools who have mental health difficulties. In co-operation with the Coram Foundation we will also be publishing guidance later this year on effective strategies for dealing with pupils with behavioural and other difficulties. This will include the use of nurture groups as one of a range of strategies primary schools might adopt. It is for individual schools to decide where it is appropriate for nurture groups to be used depending on the needs of the children and the school's circumstances.

Launchpad Status

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what criteria will be used in determining which schools are awarded launchpad status; and if she will make a statement. [27049]

Mr. Timms: The aim is to include a broad cross-section of primary and secondary schools from across the country, together with a small number of special schools since it is vital that lessons learned from the project have credibility and wide application. We shall be taking into account factors such as school size and location, as well as securing participant schools showing a range of pupil attainment and teacher turnover. We shall want to include schools which are already developing innovative practice and we also plan to ensure there is representation of some in challenging circumstances.

Student Poverty

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will publish information possessed by her Department which shows the proportion of students (a) on free school meals, (b) in families dependent on benefits, (c) considered to be from more deprived backgrounds as available indicators, in (i) specialist schools and (ii) non-specialist community and comprehensive schools; and if she will make a statement. [27048]

Mr. Timms: Information on the numbers and proportions of pupils eligible for a free school meal for specialist and non-specialist community and comprehensive schools is shown in the following table. Similar information on students in families dependent on benefits and considered to be from more deprived backgrounds is not available.

	England
Specialist secondary schools
Number of day pupils	769,973
Number of pupils eligible for FSM	112,865
Percentage of pupils eligible for FSM	14.7
Other maintained secondary schools
Number of day pupils	2,457,000
Number of pupils eligible for FSM	396,811

Schools' Reserves

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the level of schools' reserves; whether the present level of reserves is in excess of guidelines; and if she will make a statement. [27050]

Mr. Timms: At the end of the financial year 1999–2000, balances held by maintained schools in England amounted in total to approximately £723 million: this figure is derived from the outturn statements prepared by local education authorities under section 52 of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998, and represents surpluses net of deficits.

Prudent financial management will normally entail the retention by schools of reasonable reserves, whether on a contingency basis or by way of saving to meet large planned items of future expenditure. In view of the widely varying circumstances of individual schools, my right hon. Friend does not consider that the promulgation of specific guideline figures by the Department would be helpful. It is the responsibility of LEAs to monitor the level of balances in the schools which they maintain, and to challenge those schools whose balances appear, in all the circumstances, to be excessive. Where a school persistently retains a large balance for no clear reason, it is open to the LEA to consider whether delegation should be suspended under section 51 of the School Standards and Framework Act.

Teachers' Pay

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average starting salary is for newly qualified teachers in (a) London and (b) the rest of the UK; after how long a newly qualified teacher will receive a pay rise; and if she will make a statement on teachers' pay with special reference to rises they have had since 1997, and pay rises they will receive. [27673]

Mr. Timms: A newly qualified teacher in England and Wales with a second class honours degree or above currently starts at point two of the main scale on £17,001 pa. Others start on £16,038 pa. Schools may start teachers higher up the scale to recognise any other experience they consider relevant. Teachers working in inner London receive an extra £3,000 pa; those in outer London receive an extra £1,974 pa and those on the fringe receive an extra £765 pa. All teachers receive a pay increase in April of each year when the pay scales are revalorised. In the early part of their career, teachers will also receive an increment in September when, subject to satisfactory performance, they move up one point on the main qualified teachers' pay scale. Schools have discretion to advance excellent performers by two points in any year. Later in their career, any further pay advancement can be justified only by excellent performance or promotion.

As a result of the performance threshold system and other pay improvements, good experienced teachers in England and Wales have received an extra 25 per cent. in pay since 1997. This is 17 per cent. in real terms. We have established a new upper pay spine for teachers with a maximum of £31,128. The maximum pay for the advanced skills teacher grade we have introduced is £44,571. Our school leaders can now earn up to £78,783.

Teachers' pay in England and Wales is based on recommendations made by the independent School Teachers' Review Body (STRB). They are shortly due to publish their report detailing their recommendations for 2002–03. My right hon. Friend will consult key stakeholders before implementing any changes. Scotland and Northern Ireland are responsible for their own pay arrangements for their teachers.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Business Regulation

Dr. Cable: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many new regulations affecting business have been introduced since June 2001; and how many have been repealed. [26764]

Ms Hewitt: I have been asked to reply.

The Department has proposed 49 regulations to Parliament since June. Of these regulations, more than half were public telecommunications operator licences, amended or simplified regulations or preserved commercial electricity supply agreements.

Records relating to repealed regulations are not held centrally. The information requested could be obtained and collated only at disproportionate cost.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Parades

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the cost was of policing each parade in Kilkeel and Annalong between 1 April 2001 and 30 September 2001; and if he will make a statement. [25930]

Jane Kennedy: There were 19 parades in Kilkeel and Annalong between 1 April 2001 and 30 September 2001. The cost of policing each parade is as follows:

Parade	Date	Cost (£)
Rising Son of Valley	21 April	28,359

Armed Theft (Belfast)

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to the answer of 8 January 2002, Official Report, column 568W, to the hon. Member for Belfast, North (Mr. Dodds) on armed theft (Belfast), which Republican paramilitary groups the police believe were responsible. [26820]

Jane Kennedy: As I stated in my answer to the hon. Member for Belfast, North the police believe that those involved in the robberies had an association to republican paramilitary groups. It is not possible to attribute the robberies to any specific grouping.

Paramilitary Violence

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) shootings, (b) bombings and (c) beatings there were in each of the last six months by (i) Republican paramilitaries purported to be on ceasefire, (ii) Republican paramilitaries not on ceasefire, (iii) Loyalist paramilitaries claiming to be on ceasefire and (iv) Loyalist paramilitaries not on ceasefire. [26883]

Jane Kennedy: The following tables provide the security statistics attributed to all Republican and Loyalist groupings. It is not possible to provide attribution by specific groups, purportedly on ceasefire or otherwise.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Newspaper Advertising

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the expenditure of his (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies on newspaper advertising by title in each year since 1997. [26987]

Mr. MacShane: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Twickenham (Dr. Cable) on 19 November 2001, Official Report, column 24W.

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office, its executive non-departmental public bodies and executive agency have routinely advertised in the domestic press for recruitment purposes. Other than that, expenditure incurred was:

2000–01: £8,589—Metro (London)[2]

1999–2000: Nil

1998–99: Nil

1997–98: Nil.

[1] Promoting the "Know Before You Go" consular campaign.

[2] Publicising an FCO open day.

In addition, the British Council has advertised for such activities as teacher exchanges, language assistants and conference promotion. Accurate figures by year are not available. But from 1997 to 2001 the total expenditure was £16,400. The expenditure from April 2001 to date is £6,565. The titles used were The Times Educational Supplement (mainly) and The Guardian newspaper.

Correspondence

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he intends to reply to the letter of 12 September 2001 from the hon. Member for Rochford and Southend, East about Heathrow airport. [28010]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 17 January 2002]: Unfortunately the letter dated 12 September 2001 from the hon. Member for Rochford and Southend, East about Heathrow airport was lost. Officials have requested a further copy. A reply will be sent as soon as possible.

Christian Minorities

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what help his Department offers other Governments who are in the process of drafting new laws in the areas of (a) religious freedom and (b) cults to ensure that there is no discrimination against Christian minorities. [28314]

Peter Hain: Promotion of human rights is at the heart of our foreign policy and we regard freedom of thought, conscience and religion as very important human rights. We condemn instances where individuals are persecuted because of their faith or belief, wherever it happens and whatever the religion of the individual or group concerned.

We take every opportunity, often working with our EU partners, to urge states to pursue laws and practices which foster tolerance and mutual respect and to protect religious minorities against discrimination, intimidation and attacks. Where necessary, we remind Governments of the need to comply with their international obligations and to uphold freedom of religion.

We also support, including through financial assistance, the work of the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe and its Office of Democratic Institutions and Human Rights which, inter alia, offer technical assistance on legislation. For example, in 2001, their advisory panel of Experts on Freedom of Religion helped develop a package for Armenian schools on religious tolerance, prepared a draft law on the Status of Religious Associations in Bosnia-Herzegovina, and expanded a website to gather and identify examples of legislative best practice on Freedom of Religion.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Profession (Ethics)

39. Mr. Allen: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what recent discussions the Lord Chancellor has had with the Home Secretary arising from his recent speech about the ethics of the legal profession; and if he will make a statement. [25054]

Mr. Wills: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary and the Lord Chancellor have regular meetings on a wide range of matters. As with previous Governments it is not the practice to provide details of confidential discussions.

Lay Magistrates (Essex)

Bob Spink: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what initiatives are planned to recruit more lay magistrates in Essex. [28417]

Mr. Wills: The Lord Chancellor's Advisory Committee for Essex undertakes a range of recruitment activities each year to attract people from across the community to become magistrates. Last year initiatives included adverts in the local press, contacting local trade unions, the Regional Employers Organisation, local ethnic minority groups and the Racial Equality Council, sending them leaflets and offering to give presentations, circulating leaflets and posters to local libraries. This year it plans to continue issuing leaflets to local organisations and include an advert on free street maps, as well as placing adverts in the local press.

HEALTH

IT Systems

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the SNOMED system for recording clinical details for all patient activity in other countries. [10282]

Ms Blears: The use of the SNOMED system produced by the College of American Pathologists, and in particular SNOMED RT, has been assessed in other countries. The clinical details that it contained were weak in the area of primary care. However, because the Clinical Terms Version 3 (Read Codes) produced by the national health service were strong in the area of primary care the opportunity to have a collaborative project between the NHS and the College of American Pathologists was seized. The combined product, SNOMED CT (Clinical Terms) will contain over 400,000 clinical terms. Other countries and healthcare organisations who have SNOMED RT systems will be upgrading their systems to SNOMED CT when it has been tested and released.

Social Workers

Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many social workers were employed in (a) England and (b) Wales in each of the last 10 years. [9264]

Jacqui Smith: The whole-time equivalent number of social work staff employed by local authorities in England during the past 10 years is:

Whole-time equivalent[1]

Year (as at 30 September)	Social work staff
1991	25,538
1992	26,510
1993	28,333
1994	30,357
1995	31,925
1996	32,140
1997	32,990
1998	33,432
1999	33,912
2000	34,692

[1] Including team leaders/assistant team leaders and (from 1993) care managers.

Social work staff includes team leaders, assistant team leaders and (from 1993) care managers, as well as social workers. The Department does not collect just the number of social workers.

Information for Wales is a matter for the devolved Assembly.

Midwifery

Mr. Pollard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to increase the number of midwife-led birthing units for low risk births; and if he will make a statement. [12008]

Yvette Cooper: There are a number of different ways of providing good quality woman-centred midwifery care including care in midwife-led birthing units for low risk births. It is a matter for local health authorities and national health service trusts to decide on the pattern of service provision taking into account the needs of local people, evidence of effectiveness and available resources. The Maternity Workforce Group is looking at alternative models of care.

NHS Information Authority

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he will take to address staff turnover within the NHS Information Authority. [15397]

Ms Blears: The National Health Service Information Authority had a turnover during the last 12 months of 11.36 per cent. This is compared with a 23 per cent. increase in its staff over the same period. Therefore the overall staffing position was growth.

Over the past two years the authority has rationalised its offices from 23 to 11. This has invariably caused a need to relocate some staff from one site to another. However, very few staff with key technical skills left the authority because of this. The vast majority supported all staff through this process with appropriate actions—flexible working; home relocation arrangements; teleworking and transport services.

Significant effort has also been put into the development of a full induction process for new staff joining the authority to ensure, wherever they are located, that they gain an understanding of the purpose, nature and culture of the authority as quickly as possible.

NHS Dentists (Dorset)

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients in Dorset were registered with an NHS dentist in April (a) 1990, (b) 1995 and (c) 2000. [15786]

Ms Blears [holding answer 21 November 2001]: The number of general dental service registrations in Dorset health authority is shown in the table at 30 April for the years 1995 and 2000. There were no registrations in April 1990; registrations were introduced in October 1990.

April	Children	Adults	Total
2000	102,704	274,611	377,315

The figures for 1995 and 2000 cannot be compared. Registration rates were reduced by the shortening of the registration period for new registrations from 1996. For adults the period fell from 24 to 15 months. Children's registrations used to lapse at the end of the end of the following calendar year; they now last for 24 months.

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists in Dorset are taking new adult NHS patients; and how many were taking new adult NHS patients in April 1990. [15787]

Ms Blears [holding answer 21 November 2001]: Almost 66 general dental service dentists in Dorset are estimated to be taking on new adult patients. This is an estimate for August and is based on the number of dentists whose new registrations in August exceeded a minimum level.

Information for April 1990 about dentists taking on new patients is not available.

Teenage Pregnancy

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what policies have followed fulfilment of the Public Service Agreement target to complete and publish reports on teenage pregnancy for 16 to 18-year-olds not in education. [21260]

Yvette Cooper: There is no Public Service Agreement to complete and publish reports on teenage pregnancy for 16 to 18-year-olds not in education.

Our teenage pregnancy strategy aims to help more teenage parents into education, training or employment. 20 Sure Start Plus pilots are under way, providing personal support for pregnant teenagers and teenage parents on health, education, benefits and housing issues. Nine further pilots are testing how best to provide for child care for teenage parents, to help them access education or work. Teenage parents are also eligible for the education maintenance allowance in areas where this is being piloted, two of which (Cornwall and Stoke) are testing additional flexibilities to meet the needs of teenage parents, including a longer period of eligibility for the allowance. Every local area in England has in place a 10-year multi-agency strategy to tackle teenage pregnancy, including action to improve support for teenage parents. Between 1997 and 2001, the percentage of teenage mothers aged between 16 and 19 in education, training or employment increased from 16 per cent. to 29 per cent.

Aspergillus Fumigatus Infection

Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans there are to increase funding available for research into Aspergillus fumigatus infection; [22456]

(2) what steps are being taken to fund research into (a) the prevention of and (b) diseases contracted via Aspergillus fumigatus infection. [22455]

Yvette Cooper: The Department is not funding specific research into the prevention and treatment of Aspergillus fumigatus infections.

The main Government agency for research into the causes of, and treatments for, disease is the Medical Research Council (MRC) which receives its funding via the Department of Trade and Industry. The Department of Health funds research to support policy and the delivery of effective practice in the national health service.

The Department of Health provides support for research commissioned by charities and the research councils that takes place in the NHS. Details of on-going and recently completed research projects are available on the National Research Register (NRR) at www.doh.gov.uk/research/nrr.htm.

There are two on-going projects regarding Aspergillus infection:

Genome sequencing of Aspergillus fumigatus, supported by the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Disease

Transcriptional Regulation of Chitinase Expression in Aspergillus fumigatus and the identification of novel targets for antifungal drugs supported by the Wellcome Trust.

The NRR also details 14 completed projects related to Aspergillus fumigatus, one of which was directly supported through the Department of Health's North West Regional Research Programme on DNA fingerprinting of Aspergillus.

The Public Health Laboratory Service, which receives funding from the Department of Health, recently reviewed all reports of Aspergillus infection between 1990 and 1999. Their findings were reported in the Journal of Epidemiology and Infection 2001, Volume 126, at pages 397 to 414.

The Department has no plans to increase funding available for research into Aspergillus fumigatus infection.

The Department keeps its priorities for research under review. Priorities for departmental research for the development of the policy are determined through discussion with policy colleagues, the Departmental Research Committee and Ministers. In the NHS, priorities are identified through widespread consultation with those using, delivering and managing services. They take account of the burden of disease, potential benefits and departmental objectives, as well as the responsibilities and work of other funders.

Drugs

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will break down by (a) interventions and (b) drugs for clinical condition and tumour type, the money announced on 5 December; and how many patients will be treated in each category. [22765]

Yvette Cooper: The revenue allocations announced on 6 December represent the latest stage in the Government's programme of sustained investment and reform in the national health service set out in the NHS Plan last year. There is only limited earmarking of funds within allocations so that the NHS locally can flexibly manage all the resources available. This means it is not possible to break down the allocations by interventions or by drugs.

£76 million will be earmarked for cancer services in 2002–03 to ensure that investment gets through to the front line to be spent on the priorities identified by doctors, nurses and other frontline staff. The priorities for action in 2002–03 on cancer were set out in the Priorities and Planning Framework published on 6 December.

Solihull Hospital

Mr. John Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a further statement on the future of accident and emergency provisions at Solihull hospital. [22914]

Yvette Cooper: The service review of the accident and emergency department at Solihull hospital is continuing.

The Service Review Group will report to Solihull health authority on its recommendations, with a view to the health authority then launching a public consultation on its preferred option. The review was originally due to report back by the end September, but this has now been extended until early this year.

Food Supplements

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the implications of omission from the proposed Annexe to the Food Supplements Directive on the future availability of products currently on sale in the UK. [23375]

Yvette Cooper: The implications of omission of substances currently used in products sold on the United Kingdom market from the proposed lists depend on future developments in updating these lists. The proposed directive would establish a seven year transitional period during which member states could allow continued use of all these substances. The annexes would then be amended to include additional substances cleared by the European Union Scientific Committee on Foods.

MMR Vaccine

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had with (a) drug companies and (b) medical organisations on MMR-C; and what plans he has to introduce MMR-C into England and Wales. [24276]

Yvette Cooper: None.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of eligible children in Cheshire have been vaccinated with the MMR vaccine in (a) 2001–02, (b) 2000–01 and (c) 1999–2000; and if he will fund a public campaign to promote the use of the MMR vaccine throughout the north-west of England. [26633]

Yvette Cooper: The percentage of children in Cheshire immunised against measles, mumps and rubella by their second birthday and fifth birthday is shown in the table. An England wide MMR information campaign was launched last summer, which provided a range of new material for parents and health professionals including posters, factsheets, videos and leaflets. The materials were also launched onto the national immunisation website www.immunisation.org.uk. The aim of this campaign is to meet parents wishes for clear, factual and accurate information about MMR.

Cancer Nurses

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cancer nurse specialists there were in each year since 1997, broken down by type of cancer. [24597]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Cancer-related Illnesses

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients treated for cancer-related illnesses within the last 12 months were prescribed courses of treatment (a) approved and (b) awaiting approval by NICE. [25877]

Yvette Cooper: Over the last 12 months the National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) have published appraisals on the use of new chemotherapy drugs to treat ovarian, brain, pancreatic, lung and breast cancers as well as leukaemia. Around 19,000 patients each year should now be benefiting from chemotherapy treatments appraised by NICE.

NICE is currently appraising further treatments for advanced ovarian, breast and colorectal cancers and chronic myeloid leukaemia.

Smoking Helpline

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have called the smoking helpline since it was set up. [24302]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 8 January 2002]: A total of 325,698 people have called the national health service smoking helpline in the inclusive period 1 June 2000 to 2 December 2001.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people are employed on the smoking helpline; and at what cost. [24304]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 8 January 2001]: A total of 213 staff, including 49 specialist advisers, are trained to work on the helpline services. The precise numbers engaged at any given time depends upon predicted call volumes.

The overall budget for the specialist adviser staff in 2001–02 is £285,000. Calls dealt with by the non-specialist service are charged on a per call basis with a budget ceiling of £239,000.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much the smoking helpline cost to set up. [24301]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 8 January 2002]: Set up costs of the national health service smoking helpline amounted to £37,420.

Media Injunctions

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much his Department has spent in legal fees in each of the last five years in relation to obtaining injunctions against media organisations. [24320]

Ms Blears [holding answer 8 January 2002]: The Department has incurred no legal costs in relation to obtaining injunctions because we have not sought any injunctions against the media in the last five years.

Bed Blocking

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many of the patients awaiting discharge in inappropriately occupied beds in Worcestershire hospitals will have their future care packages funded by (a) the health authority, (b) the county social services department and (c) a combination of both; what the equivalent figures were in January 2001; and if he will make a statement. [26403]

Yvette Cooper: Funding arrangements for the number of patients awaiting discharge in inappropriately occupied beds in Worcestershire hospitals 2000–01 are as follows.

	December 2000	December 2001
Health authority funded placements	11	19
Social Services funded placements	9	11
Jointly funded placements	9	5

Note:

The data for each year come from two different sources. The 2001 figures have been taken from the weekly SITREPs, and the 2000 figures have been taken from the 2000–01 Q3 CIC return. Both sets of figures cover the last day in December. The monthly figure is a snapshot for that day, the weekly figure is a snapshot for the week ending 31 December.

We are investing an extra £900 million in intermediate care to ensure that we can free up acute hospital beds which are being occupied by older people who could be cared for at home or elsewhere, which in turn will speed up accident and emergency admissions. The NHS Plan clearly states that by 2004 we will end widespread bed blocking. To achieve this we have a target of 5,000 extra intermediate care beds and an additional 1,700 non-residential intermediate care places by 2003–04, with 220,000 more people receiving intermediate care services.

I am advised that Worcestershire county council's allocation of £713,000 from the Government's "Cash for Change" initiative will be used to fund additional residential and nursing home placements, a home care discharge scheme and one off payments to support independent sector homes cost pressures. In addition, Worcestershire health authority received an extra £382,000 in April 2001 to help them prepare for winter pressures.

Kidderminster Hospital

Dr. Richard Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will review the arrangements for the alternative storage of the deceased following the closure of the mortuary at Kidderminster hospital; and if he will make a statement on the implications for costs to families. [26222]

Yvette Cooper: I am informed that the coroner, local funeral directors and the Kidderminster and district community health council have been involved in the planning of alternative arrangements for the storage and removal of the bodies of deceased patients from Kidderminster hospital.

Where the family have already decided upon a funeral director, then arrangements will go ahead as planned. In those cases where a decision has yet to be made, then arrangements have been made with a local funeral directors company for appropriate storage of the deceased, at no cost to the family, until a decision is reached.

The trust has confirmed that it sees as a priority the need to maintain a service which treats the deceased with respect and dignity, and which is compassionate in the manner in which it relates to the members of their family.

Haemophilia

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received concerning the availability of recombinant clotting factors to haemophilia patients in England; and if he will make a statement. [26423]

Yvette Cooper: Departmental officials discussed the availability of recombinant clotting factors with the Haemophilia Society on 30 November 2001.

We are actively considering extending the provision of recombinant clotting factors to all haemophilia patients in England when supplies allow. Currently the policy is to provide recombinant clotting factors for new haemophilia patients and children under 16.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the health authorities and trusts in England which provide recombinant clotting factors to haemophiliac patients aged over 16 years. [27244]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Tuberculosis

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of human TB there have been in the United Kingdom since 1995, broken down by year and county. [26753]

Yvette Cooper: The number of reported cases of human tuberculosis in the United Kingdom from 1995 to 2000 is shown in the table.

Herceptin

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when he expects to receive the findings of NICE regarding the use of the drug Herceptin as treatment for breast cancer; and if he will make a statement; [26962]

(2) which health authorities in England and Wales have authorised the use of the drug Herceptin as treatment for breast cancer within the national health service. [26960]

Yvette Cooper: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and the National Assembly for Wales have asked the National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) to appraise Herceptin for the treatment of advanced breast cancer, and to issue guidance on its use to the NHS in England and Wales. NICE expects to issue guidance on Herceptin in spring 2002.

Data on the number of health authorities in England and Wales currently authorising the use of Herceptin is not collected. However, as with all newly licensed treatments in advance of a NICE appraisal, the Department's advice is that funding authorities should consider the clinical evidence available for a specific treatment before making any decision.

Explosion (Sandhurst)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the health of residents in Sandhurst, Gloucestershire, following the explosion at Cleansing Services Group Ltd.; and if he will make a statement. [26656]

Ms Blears [holding answer 11 January 2002]: Gloucestershire health authority has monitored the health of the residents of Sandhurst following the fire at Cleansing Services Group in October 2000.

The authority has found that the physical and/or psychological health of a significant proportion of Sandhurst residents was affected following the fire. The majority of physical symptoms experienced resolved within four weeks although a small number of people reported continuing physical symptoms seven months after the incident. The health authority has established a study to monitor the long-term effects of the incident on the community.

GP Surgeries (North Stoke)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the areas of unmet needs in respect of access to GP surgeries in North Stoke. [26932]

Yvette Cooper: There are 17 general practitioner practices in the locality, and I understand that capacity exists to accept more patients.

In addition, Stoke (Haywood) walk-in centre opened in June 2000 and has proved popular locally, seeing 21,000 patients in the first 12 months.

Private Finance Initiative (West Midlands)

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many health-related PFI proceeds are (a) under way and (b) being evaluated in the west midlands; and where they are located. [26746]

Yvette Cooper: the current private finance initiative schemes that are (a) under way and (b) being evaluated in the west midlands are as follows:

PFI schemes commissioned

Sedgley Community Centre (Dudley)

Black Country Mental Health in-patient facility (Sandwell)

Stoke-on-Trent Mental Health in-patient facility (Stoke-on-Trent)

Monyhull Learning Disability in-patient facility (South Birmingham)

PFI schemes in build

Hereford District General Hospital

Worcester District General Hospital

Northern Birmingham Mental Health in-patient facility

Dudley District General Hospital

PFI schemes in procurement

Walsgrave District General Hospital and Mental Health in-patient facility (Coventry)

City Hospital Ambulatory Care Centre (Birmingham)

Wolverhampton Managed Radiology scheme

Nationally prioritised schemes in fourth and fifth waves (preparing business cases and planning to place OJEC advertisements in 2002–03)

University Hospital Birmingham Acute Hospital and South Birmingham Mental Health in-patient facility

North Staffordshire redevelopment of Acute Hospital site and North Stoke Primary Care Centre (Stoke-on-Trent)

Walsall Women's and Children's Unit and Ambulatory Care Centre

Wolverhampton Acute Hospital site rationalisation.

Community Pharmacists

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what further plans he has to review the fees paid to community pharmacists for dispensing NHS prescriptions. [26781]

Ms Blears [holding answer 14 January 2002]: We are currently considering representations on this issue from the Pharmaceutical Services Negotiating Committee and others.

Hospital Investment (Shropshire)

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of hospital investment in the last five years in Shropshire has been allocated to the hospitals in (a) Telford, (b) Shrewsbury and (c) Oswestry. [26750]

Yvette Cooper: The total capital allocations to the three national health service trusts in Shropshire during the four-year period 1998–99 to 2001–02 are shown in the table.

	£ million	Percentage
Telford (Princess Royal Hospital NHS Trust)	10.9	37
Shrewsbury (Royal Shrewsbury Hospital NHS Trust)	11.7	40
Oswestry (Robert Jones and Agnes Hunt Orthopaedic Hospital NHS Trust)	6.6	23
Total	29.2	100

Note:

The information requested is only available for the last four financial years (1998–99 to 2001–02 inclusive).

Cancer Patients

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what percentage of patients in each cancer speciality referred by their general practitioners are referred (a) urgently and (b) non-urgently; [27233]

(2) how many patients in each cancer specialty were referred by their general practitioners, (a) urgently and (b) non-urgently, in the last year for which figures are available; [27231]

(3) what percentage of patients in each cancer speciality referred to by their general practitioners as (a) urgent and (b) non-urgent are seen within a month. [27232]

Yvette Cooper: The two-week out-patient waiting time standard was introduced for urgent cases of suspected breast cancer from April 1999 and was extended to all other urgent cases of suspected cancer during 2000. Performance data against the standard are shown in the table. Data for non-urgent referrals are not collected centrally.

Full implementation of the maximum target wait of one month from diagnosis to their first definitive treatment for breast cancer was introduced on 31 December 2001. Central monitoring began on 1 January 2002 and data will be published later in the year.

'Two week wait' performance: Percentage of patients seen within two weeks for first consultant out-patient appointment when referred urgently by their GP for suspected cancer, and the referral is received by the NHS trust within 24 hours: England

Heart Disease

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the death rate per 100,000 among people aged under 65 years due to heart disease was in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [27364]

Yvette Cooper: The European age standardised death rates per 100,000 population from ischaemic heart disease aged under 65 in the United Kingdom is shown in the table.

Children's Hospices

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding was given to each children's hospice in the last year by his Department. [27249]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Small Bowel Transplantation

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made on developing and extending the availability of small bowel transplantation. [27349]

Yvette Cooper: We recognise this is a very important national service and good progress has been made in making it available to those who might benefit from the procedure. Both adult and paediatric small bowel transplantation services have been designated by the National Specialist Commissioning Advisory Group and national centres identified since April 1997.

No transplants were performed before this date. In the case of children, 14 transplants have now been performed. In the case of adults, a number of patients have been assessed but to date transplantation has not been the preferred option for their care.

Aggregates Levy

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what provision he has made in his hospital building programme for additional costs resulting from the aggregates levy. [26511]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 14 January 2002]: Any additional costs arising from the levy may be factored into bidders proposals under both the private finance initiative and public capital procurement routes. Such bids will continue to be assessed on a case-by-case basis by individual national health service trusts on the grounds of meeting service need, affordability and value for money.

NHS Appointments

Dr. Richard Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list appointments to chairs of NHS trusts made by the NHS Appointments Commissioner for the west midlands. [27408]

Yvette Cooper: The chair appointments made by the National Health Service Appointments Commission to NHS trusts in the west midlands are as follows:

Chair appointment	NHS trust
Professor Margaret Bamford	Dudley Priority Health
Mr. Charles Goody	Coventry Healthcare
Mr. Bryan Knight	Sandwell Healthcare
Mr. Francis McCarney	George Eliot Hospital
Mr. Michael O'Riorden	Worcestershire Acute Hospitals
Dr. Bransby Thomas	South Warwickshire Combined Care
Mr. Clive Wilkinson	Birmingham Heartlands and Solihull (Teaching)
Sir Bernard Zissman	Good Hope Hospital

BCG Vaccination

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his future policy is for BCG vaccination; and if he will make a statement on the availability of the vaccine. [27593]

Yvette Cooper: Our recommendation for the use of BCG vaccine is based on the advice of an independent expert advisory committee, the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation, which is regularly reviewed.

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

BCG vaccine is readily available to all those recommended to receive it. These include:

Health service staff who may have come in contact with infectious patients or their specimens.

Veterinary or other staff who handle animal species known to be susceptible to tuberculosis.

Staff of prisons, old people's homes, refugee hostels and hostels for the homeless.

Contacts of cases known to be suffering from active pulmonary tuberculosis.

Immigrants from countries with a high prevalence of TB, their children and infants wherever born.

Those intending to stay in Asia, Africa, central or south America for more than a month.

School children between the ages of 10 and 14 years.

This policy is set out in the booklet "Immunisation against Infectious Disease 1996".

Alternative Blood Therapies

Mr. Havard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the appropriate use of blood working group will publish its report on the use of alternative blood therapies in place of transfusing blood. [27502]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 15 January 2002]: The National Blood Service "appropriate use of blood" group is currently gathering evidence on alternatives to blood, bloodless surgery and autologous blood transfusion. Proposed guidance material will be considered by the Chief Medical Officer's National Blood Transfusion Committee later this year. It is anticipated that the guidance will be promulgated through regional and local hospital blood transfusion committees.

Avon/Gloucestershire and Wiltshire Health Authority

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to make an announcement on the appointment of a chief executive for the new Avon/Gloucestershire and Wiltshire health authority; and for what reason it has not been possible to make that appointment already. [27314]

Ms Blears [holding answer 15 January 2002]: The appointment of Mr. Mark Outhwaite as chief executive was announced on 14 January. It was not possible to complete the process of making appointments to all 28 strategic health authorities before Christmas and the intervening holiday period inevitable imposed a delay. Now that the appointment has been made, work on setting up the new health authority and preparing it for its role will go ahead at the same speed as other areas.

Sodium Consumption

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the Food Standards Agency's position is on the acceptable level of daily sodium intake for the general population; on what evidence the Food Standards Agency bases its policy on dietary salt consumption; and what recent advice the Food Standards Agency has given Ministers regarding the recommended daily sodium consumption. [27693]

Yvette Cooper: The Food Standards Agency's advice on salt is that individuals should reduce their intake to 6 grammes per day (equivalent to 2.3 grammes of sodium). This is based on the recommendations made by the expert committee on Medical Aspects of Food Policy.

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what public awareness campaigns the Food Standards Agency is undertaking to reduce daily human consumption of salt; how the Food Standards Agency communicates its recommended daily intake of sodium to the public; and what media outlets the Food Standards Agency uses to highlight its policy on salt and its recommended daily intake of sodium. [27694]

Yvette Cooper: Advice to the general public on levels of salt intake is covered as an integral part of Food Standards Agency activity to provide information on a healthy balanced diet generally. This is done through a variety of routes which include FSA publications, the FSA website, and advice to the food industry on the nutritional labelling of foods.

Breast Cancer

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy that women who have suffered pre-menopausal breast cancer will be subject to automatic recall under the NHS breast cancer screening programme. [27756]

Yvette Cooper: National guidelines[1] state that women who have been treated for breast cancer should undergo mammography yearly during the first five years after surgery, and every two years afterwards, regardless of age. The national health service breast screening programme invites women aged 50 to 64 for mammography every three years, to be extended to the age of 70 by 2004. It is for a woman's clinical team to decide whether she enters the breast screening programme at age 50 or if she is monitored outside the programme.

NHS Complaints Procedure

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will alter the NHS complaints procedure so that independent review bodies can investigate a complaint relating to more than one NHS body. [26013]

Ms Blears [holding answer 15 January 2002]: We are currently in the process of reforming the national health service complaints procedure and as part of that we are considering how best a second, "independent review" element of the procedure might work.

Food Allergies

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research has been conducted into the underlying causes of food allergies to commonly available ingredients, with particular reference to (a) wheat, (b) dairy products and (c) nuts. [27852]

Yvette Cooper: The Food Standards Agency is currently spending £800,000 a year on research into food allergy. This research focuses both on the occurrence of food allergies and the mechanisms underlying the reactions with emphasis on severe allergy, in particular peanut and tree-nut allergies. The FSA currently funds 12 research projects on peanut allergy (the main cause of food allergy related deaths in the United Kingdom) and one on dairy products. The FSA does not currently fund any research into wheat allergy, although the research on mechanisms may be of relevance. Further detail on the food allergy research programme can be obtained from the FSA research programmes annual report 1999–2000 which has been placed in the Library.

NHS Trusts (Worcestershire)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the chairmanship of the South Worcestershire Primary Care Trust will be announced; and if he will make a statement. [28242]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 17 January 2002]: Proposals for the establishment of the South Worcestershire Primary Care Trust are still being considered. A decision will be announced as soon as possible.

vCJD

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have died from vCJD since August 1990; and how many were vegetarian. [28390]

Yvette Cooper: Up to 7 January 2002 there have been 104 deaths from variant Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease (VCJD) within the United Kingdom. Four out of the 104 were vegetarians during some period of their lives but none were lifelong vegetarians.

EU Health Council

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which representatives briefed his Department on devolved Scottish matters in preparation for the EU Health Council in Brussels on 15 November; and on what issues. [28682]

Yvette Cooper: Scotland's interests were represented at the November Health Council by the United Kingdom delegation led by the Minister of State for Health (Mr. Hutton), who represented all parts of the United Kingdom. There are regular communications between the Department of Health and the Scottish Executive on European Union health matters, but specific discussions are conducted on a confidential basis.

Correspondence

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will answer the letter dated 30 July 2001 from the hon. and learned Member for Harborough concerning a constituent child protection social worker suspended by Leicester city social services department. [28583]

Jacqui Smith: We have transferred the letter to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions and he will be responding shortly.

Nurses

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the starting annual salary is for newly qualified nurses in and (a) London (b) the rest of the UK; after how long a newly qualified nurse will receive a pay rise; and if he will make a statement on nurses' pay, with special reference to rises they have had since 1997, and pay rises they will receive. [27674]

Mr. Hutton: The annual starting salary for a newly qualified nurse working full-time in inner London is £19,178 (including London allowance and cost of living supplements). For staff working outside London and the south of England the annual starting salary for a newly qualified nurse working full-time is £15,445.

Newly qualified nurses normally enter the clinical grading structure on the first pay point on Grade D with annual progression through a further three points until they reach the scale maximum.

We accepted in full the recommendation of the Review Body for nursing staff, midwives and health visitors and professions allied to medicine for pay in 2002–03. From 1 April 2002 all nurses, midwives and health visitors will receive an increase of at least 3.6 per cent. Pay has increased across the board for all nurses by at least 26 per cent. in cash terms since 1997.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Immigration and Nationality Directorate

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the (a) budgeted, (b) actual and (c) projected expenditure by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate in each year from 1995 to the end of the current comprehensive spending review period; and if he will make a statement. [25744]

Angela Eagle: The following sums have been allocated to and spent by the Home Office Immigration and Nationality Directorate since 1994–95.

£ million

	Budgeted	Actual expenditure
1994–95	186	187
1995–96	207	202
1996–97	223	216
1997–98	226	207
1998–99	223	214
1999–2000	794	857
2000–01	1,199	1,251
2001–02	976	—
2002–03	990	—
2003–04	1,045	—

Figures include capital expenditure and are in cash terms until 2000–01 and resource terms thereafter.

A significant portion of the overall budget from 1999–2000 onwards relates to asylum support. Up to 1998–99, the budgets were assigned to and expenditure incurred by the Department of Social Security and the Department of Health and not by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate. The sums spent are set down in a reply given by the then Home Secretary, my right hon. Friend the Member for Blackburn (Mr. Straw) to the hon. Member for Ribble Valley (Mr. Evans) on 9 May 2000, Official Report, column 331W. The budgets for this year and for the two following years are provisional and may be amended following the conclusion of on-going discussions with Her Majesty's Treasury.

I shall write to my hon. Friend when I have additional information on the budget and projected expenditure for this year.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if the Immigration and Nationality Directorate is meeting its target for granting applications for indefinite leave to remain in the United Kingdom as a spouse; and if he will make a statement; [22146]

(2) if the Immigration and Nationality Directorate is meeting its target for granting applications for extensions to visas to study in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [22147]

Angela Eagle: We aim to decide 70 per cent. of all new general and settlement applications within three weeks but at present it is taking up to eight weeks to consider new straightforward applications. The reasons for this are (i) the exceptionally high number of new applications received this year, and especially, in recent months; and (ii) process changes that are being introduced. We are working to reduce this to three weeks or less as soon as possible. Because of the high intake, those cases which require more detailed consideration are currently taking six months or a little more to complete.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on levels of employment at the Immigration and Nationality Directorate at Croydon. [26784]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 14 January 2002]: At March 1999, an estimate of the full-time equivalent figure for the number of staff employed in the Immigration and Nationality Directorate in Croydon was 1,920. On 1 October 2001, this figure had risen to 3,940. This includes staff dealing with immigration casework as well as those who work in a support function.

European Arrest Warrant

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will announce the date on which legislation to introduce extradition under the European arrest warrant will be introduced. [26605]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: We have made our commitment to an Extradition Bill clear and measures will be brought before the House in the usual way.

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the criteria for determining the competent authorities in each of the EU member states as to who are to be their issuing and executing judicial authorities in respect of Article 6 of the Council Framework Decision relating to the European arrest warrant. [26950]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The Framework Decision on the European arrest warrant and the surrender procedures between member states stipulates at Article 1(1) that

> "the European arrest warrant shall be a court decision."

At Article 6(1) it further stipulates that:

> "The issuing judicial authority shall be the judicial authority of the issuing state which is competent to issue an arrest warrant by virtue of the law of the issuing state";

and at Article 6(2) that:

> "The executing judicial authority shall be the judicial authority of the executing state which is competent by virtue of the law of the executing state".

By this the Framework Decision makes clear that the issuing and executing authorities must be judicial authorities, but the criteria that the member states may apply to determine which of their judicial authorities shall be responsible for the issuing and execution of European arrest warrants are left to each member state to decide upon. This is consistent with Article 34.2(b) of the Treaty on European Union, under which the Framework Decision has been negotiated, which states that:

> "Framework decisions shall be binding upon the member states as to the results to be achieved but shall leave to the national authorities the choice of the form and methods".

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the offences in English law to which Article 2(2) of the Council Framework Decision relating to the European arrest warrant refers which are punishable under the law of an issuing member state by a sentence of three years and where dual criminality is not required. [26951]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The list at Article 2(2) is not intended to be an exhaustive list of all the serious criminal offences under the national law of all member states. To answer this question in full would require listing all the offences in English law which might fall under one of the generic headings of offences in Article 2(2) of the Council Framework Decision on the European arrest warrant, and which are punishable by a maximum sentence of at least three years, and cross-referring them to all the offences in the penal codes of the other member states of the European Union (EU) which fall under these headings which are punishable by this sentence. The generic headings listed at Article 2(2) relate to conduct for which there are criminal sanctions in all the member states of the EU, even if the legal definitions of the offences do not precisely match. On any warrant, the offence for which surrender is sought will be framed by the issuing judicial authority under its national law.

Examples of such offences in English law, to which there is a likely equivalent in the law of other member states are: under the heading of "illicit trafficking in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances"—drug trafficking offences involving Class A or Class B drugs; under the heading of "terrorism"—offences under the Explosive Substances Act 1883 and offences under the Terrorism Act 2000 as amended by the Anti-Terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001; under the heading of "rape"—rape and serious sexual offences; under the heading of "swindling"—offences under the Theft Acts 1968 and 1978 that carry a sentence of at least three years; and under the heading of "racism and xenophobia", offences relating to incitement to racial hatred, racially aggravated offences and racial discrimination under the Race Relations Act, where a sentence of at least three years applies.

In-sourcing

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what work previously out-sourced from Government Departments to the private sector he plans to in-source back to Departments. [26032]

Mr. Blunkett: Where provision of a service has been contracted out to a private company, any decision on future delivery will be based on value for money considerations, including performance and departmental requirements. We currently have no plans to bring back into the core Home Office any services which have been contracted out.

Credit Card Fraud

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people were found guilty of credit card fraud in each of the past 10 years; [27370]

(2) what the cost was of credit card fraud in each of the past 10 years. [27371]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Home Office Court Proceedings database is unable to distinguish offences of credit card fraud from other types of fraud as the circumstances of individual offences are not collected centrally.

The following table shows the number of persons found guilty or cautioned for all offences of 'other fraud' (as distinct from fraud by a company director or false accounting) for the years 1991 to 2000:

Persons found guilty or cautioned for 'other fraud' in England and Wales, 1991 to 2000

	Number
1991	22,775
1992	23,429
1993	21,178
1994	21,035
1995	19,807
1996	19,394
1997	19,442
1998	21,760
1999	22,191
2000	20,904

Information on the cost of credit card fraud is not collated by the Home Office. However, the Association of Payment Clearing Services has estimated the cost of reported losses due to credit card fraud over the last five years as:

	£ million
1996	97.1
1997	122.0
1998	135.0
1999	188.4
2000	292.6

Work Permits

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans his Department has to change the rules governing the issuing of work permits to Lithuanian citizens; and if he will make a statement. [27832]

Angela Eagle: There is no differential between nationalities when considering a work permit application. The decision is determined by whether the application meets the criteria of the work permit arrangements.

Ministerial Travel

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last used the railway service in connection with his official duties; what station he left from and what was the destination; and whether it is his intention to make greater use of the railways in future. [28090]

Mr. Blunkett: All arrangements for official travel are made in line with the guidance set out in Chapter 7 of the Ministerial Code, and the accompanying guidance document "Travel by Ministers", using the most efficient and cost effective mode of transport, and bearing in mind security considerations. My last official visit by train was on 11 December last year to address the Balsall Health Forum in the west midlands. For this visit I returned to London by rail from Birmingham New Street to London Euston. I intend to continue using the railway for official travel whenever this is practical.

I almost always travel to and from my constituency by rail, undertaking official duties in and around the area of Sheffield. The last official engagement on such a visit was on Friday 11 January.

Child Asylum Seekers

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the motivation of (a) child asylum seekers and (b) those who facilitate their journeys; and if he will make a statement. [28112]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 17 January 2002]: We have not assessed the motivation of child asylum seekers. All asylum applications, regardless of the applicant's age, will be considered in accordance with the criteria set out in the United Nations convention relating to the status of refugees.

There is no common motivation for those facilitating child asylum seekers. Some will act altruistically, others to improve the economic or educational prospects of family members. But there are many whose motivation is profit and the involvement of organised people smuggling gangs is becoming increasingly common.

Visas

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information is given to applicants for a new student visa about the length of time that they may be without their passport. [23635]

Angela Eagle: Information about the likely time scale for considering applications for leave to remain is quoted in the relevant application form and on the Immigration and Nationality Directorate website. The website is updated regularly. Since 1 January 2002, all new applications for leave to remain are being acknowledged. The acknowledgement letter indicates the likely time scale for the application to be considered. If, on initial consideration, the application cannot be decided for whatever reason, another letter giving a further indication of the likely time scale is sent to the applicant.

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what standards of service he sets for processing individual applications for visa renewals; [23633]

(2) for what reasons the visa office estimate that the renewal of a one year student visa will take at least five weeks. [23636]

Angela Eagle: We aim to decide 70 per cent. of all new general and settlement applications within three weeks but at present it is taking up to eight weeks to consider new straightforward applications. The reasons for this are (i) the exceptionally high number of new applications received this year, and especially, in recent months; and (ii) process changes that are being introduced. We are working to reduce this to three weeks or less as soon as possible.

Passports

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the minimum period is within which a British passport holder can obtain an emergency replacement in the event of loss or theft; and what the minimum period was prior to 14 January. [28424]

Angela Eagle: On 14 January the Passport Service introduced two new guaranteed services at its public counters. These are a same day service at £75 for a standard passport and a one week service at £60 for a standard passport. The standard two week service (non-guaranteed) remains available for postal application. The same day service is not available for first passport applications because of the time needed to complete checks on identity. Applications to replace lost or stolen passports are dealt with in the same way as first applications, because the high incidence of fraud makes it necessary to check identity and records of the previous issue. This means that the fastest service normally available for replacement of a lost or stolen passport is the guaranteed one week service.

Exceptionally, in the case of a genuine emergency involving travel for compassionate reasons or business purposes, a same day service can be provided. Prior to 14 January, services were not guaranteed and turnaround times would depend on factors such as the volume of applications being dealt with and the relative difficulty of establishing identity in the individual case. The change is intended to help customers by providing a choice of services with guarantees for those who need a fast service, while protecting the integrity of the British passport.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions in each of the last five years the Passport Office Agency has paid compensation to its customers; and what was the total sum of such compensation. [28423]

Angela Eagle: The total number of compensation payments made to customers of the United Kingdom Passport Service over the last five years is given in the table together with the amounts for each year.

	Number of payments	Total amount of compensation (£)
1997	1,557	42,303
1998	2,086	60,610
1999	5,142	344,984
2000	2,478	110,306
2001	2,193	71,955

Asylum Seekers

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to provide additional accommodation for asylum seekers in Essex; and in which towns. [28419]

Angela Eagle: It is current policy to disperse asylum seekers away from London and the south-east. In his statement on 29 October last year my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary made it clear that the policy of dispersing asylum seekers away from London and the south-east would continue. I can confirm that to date the Immigration and Nationality Directorate has not identified any areas in Essex suitable for use as cluster areas for the dispersal of asylum seekers.

DEFENCE

Victoria Cross

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about (a) the criteria and (b) the procedure for awarding the Victoria Cross. [28214]

Dr. Moonie: The Victoria Cross is awarded for most conspicuous gallantry of the highest order during active operations[1]. As such it is the highest award available for operational gallantry. Lesser degrees of operational gallantry are recognised by awards of the Conspicuous Gallantry Cross, Distinguished Service Cross, Military Cross, Distinguished Flying Cross and a Mention in Despatches. Recommendations for any of these awards are initiated by the service man's or service woman's Commanding Officer and considered by Committees at various levels in the Ministry of Defence. The Committees consist mainly of senior officers of all three services who will have had considerable operational experience. Successful recommendations are passed to the Queen for her approval. The awards are then published and recipients invited to a State Investiture where they are invested by the Queen or her representative.

The Victoria Cross along with the other awards for operational gallantry may be awarded to all ranks of the naval, military and air forces of the United Kingdom, all members of the Merchant Navy and civilians serving under the orders of any of the above forces. All these awards may be made posthumously.

Tanzania

Tony Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of benefits there are going to be to Tanzania from the deal to supply a military air traffic control system. [26045]

Dr. Moonie: Export licensing decisions are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary for Trade and Industry. The Ministry of Defence provides advice to the DTI, together with the other advisory Departments, as appropriate. Following the policy set out by previous Governments, the Government do not comment on individual export licence applications for reasons of commercial confidentiality. Details of export licensing decisions will continue to be published in the Government's annual report on strategic export controls and will be subject to retrospective scrutiny by the all-party Quadripartite Committee.

A400M/C130J

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the projected noise footprint of the A400M; and what is the noise footprint of the Hercules C130J. [26346]

Dr. Moonie: The A400M aircraft will meet all current international noise regulations, but exact noise characteristics will not be known until the aircraft's development and flight tests have been completed. The C130J aircraft meets all relevant US Federal Aviation

[1] This is expanded on in the Third Clause of the Royal Warrant for The Victoria Cross which reads: "It is ordained that the Cross shall only be awarded for most conspicuous bravery, or some daring or pre-eminent act of valour or self-sacrifice or extreme devotion to duty in the presence of the enemy".

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

Authority civil noise regulations. The Ministry of Defence does not hold noise information on the C130J in the form requested. We expect the noise characteristics of the A400M and the C130J will be similar. But their overall noise impact should be less than that of the C130K aircraft they are replacing, because significantly greater usage of ground simulators for training will reduce the overall number of flights.

A400M

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the RAF will take delivery of the A400M; and if he will make a statement. [27165]

Dr. Moonie: The in-service date of the A400M, defined as acceptance into service of the seventh aircraft, is 2010. We expect delivery of the final (25th) aircraft to be in 2014.

Vehicles

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to increase the use of British-built vehicles by the MOD Police. [27415]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 15 January 2002]: Purchases of vehicle for the Ministry of Defence Police are made on the basis of best value for money. We are pleased to procure British-built vehicles where they meet our requirements and offer best value for money. We have no plans designed to increase the proportion of British-built vehicles at the expense of these key criteria.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the benefits are of operating one Toyota and one Mitsubishi for the MOD Police; and what competition there was for this requirement. [27501]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 15 January 2002]: The Toyota and Mitsubishi are used for specialist police operation and were selected primarily on the basis of operational requirements. As such the requirement was not subject to competition.

Territorial Army (Pay Awards)

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what targets exist for settling arrears of pay for Territorial Army service men and women. [R] [28217]

Dr. Moonie: Arrears of pay claims for Territorial Army soldiers are actioned within a 10 day target of receipt of all supporting documentation.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about delays in paying Territorial Army soldiers. [R] [28216]

Dr. Moonie: I am unaware of any current delays existing with payments to Territorial Army soldiers.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Territorial Army service men and women have arrears of pay outstanding in excess of (a) two months and (b) three months. [R] [28218]

Dr. Moonie: There are currently no cases recorded centrally for arrears of pay being outstanding in excess of two and three months.

Operation Veritas

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the procedure for considering gallantry awards in Operation Veritas. [28213]

Dr. Moonie: The procedure for considering gallantry awards for Operation Veritas will be identical to that used for all other operations. Recommendations for awards, whether they be for gallantry or meritorious service, are initiated by an individual's commanding officer and passed to the Ministry of Defence where they are considered by various Committees. Successful recommendations are then submitted to the Queen for her approval prior to publication. Lists of operational awards are published biannually each spring and autumn and notified to the press. The names of certain recipients may have to be withheld in the interests of personal security.

Ministry of Defence Police

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the complement, gender and ethnic balance of the Operational Support Unit of the Ministry of Defence Police is; what the OSU's annual running costs are for the current financial year; if he plans to increase the budget for running costs for 2002–03; if he will make a statement on the base of the OSU; and what changes are planned in these arrangements. [28587]

Dr. Moonie: The complement (as at 1 January 2002) of the Operational Support Unit was 50 and the strength 45, which included six female officers and one member of an ethnic minority. The budget allocated for the OSU, for the current financial year, is £2.651 million. While there are no plans to relocate the OSU based at MDP Wethersfield, approval has been given to form a second OSU (of 50 personnel) based at a location in the north of England.

Retirement Age

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to change his Department's normal retirement age policy; and when he will make an announcement. [28586]

Dr. Moonie: In the Ministry of Defence some 60,000 civilian employees, two thirds of the work force, have the option to retire at any time between age 60 and 65. The MOD has been reviewing the case for giving the remainder, who have a normal retirement age of 60, the same option. Our review is nearing completion and we expect to be able to announce its findings in the next few weeks.

Nuclear Test Veterans

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had on changes to the Government's position on nuclear test veterans following the decision of the Pensions Appeal Tribunal in the case of Tom Duggan. [28057]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 17 January 2002]: No such discussions have taken place.

Colchester Garrison

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the new living accommodation for soldiers at

Colchester Garrison will be ready for occupation; if he plans to allow the public to view the new buildings; and if there will be an official opening ceremony. [28523]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 18 January 2002]: We expect that the first of the new single living accommodation (SLA) will be ready for occupation by mid-2005, with the remainder, along with the rest of the garrison, completed two years later. There are no plans to invite the public to view either the SLA or the working accommodation. We intend to have an opening ceremony when phase 1 of the private finance initiative is completed.

Environmental Appraisals

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what procedures his Department has to ensure environmental appraisals are undertaken prior to (a) administrative and (b) policy decisions being made. [29045]

Dr. Moonie: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence signed a policy statement dated 7 July 2000 on the Management of Safety and Environmental Protection in the Ministry of Defence. That policy statement requires that, within the United Kingdom, the MOD will carry out environmental policy appraisals of all new and revised policies and equipment acquisition programmes and environmental impact assessments of all new projects and training activities.

The policy statement, together with guidance on the conduct of environmental appraisal and environmental impact assessment, has been published recently as part of Amendment 4 to Joint Service Publication (JSP) 418, the MOD's Environmental Manual.

Copies of JSP 418 are in the Library of the House, and arrangements are in hand for copies of Amendment 4 to that publication to be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the last occasion was on which he requested an environmental appraisal before making a policy decision. [29044]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many officials from his Department have attended the environmental appraisal and integration into policy training course run by the Civil Service College. [29047]

Dr. Moonie: No officials from the Ministry of Defence attended the first environmental appraisal and integration into policy training course run by the Civil Service College in July 2001. Details of this course, and others provided by the Civil Service College to support the initiatives of sustainable development, have now been published as part of Amendment 4 to JSP 418, the MOD's Environmental Manual.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many environmental appraisals have been published by his Department since 1 January 2001; and if he will list the last four. [29043]

Dr. Moonie: None. The last environmental appraisal published by the Ministry of Defence was the Strategic Environmental Appraisal of the Strategic Defence Review. This document was published in June 2000.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans his Department has to appraise the environmental implications of its Spending Review submission to the Treasury. [29046]

Dr. Moonie: Sustainable development has been identified as an overall theme for the Spending Review. In common with all other Government Departments with a Public Service Agreement, the Ministry of Defence will be reporting on the impact of its Spending Review proposals on sustainable development. That appraisal process will take an integrated approach to the environmental, social and economic elements of sustainable development.

West Freugh Airfield

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what external consultants he (a) has engaged and (b) plans to engage to assess the commercial potential of West Freugh airfield in Wigtownshire. [28427]

Dr. Moonie: No external consultants have been engaged by the Ministry of Defence to assess the commercial potential of West Freugh airfield. QinetiQ, which conducts day-to-day operations at the airfield on behalf of MOD, has, with its contractors, studied the opportunities for diversification. This work concluded that there are few commercial opportunities for development of the airfield. MOD has no plans to engage external consultants to assess the commercial potential of the airfield.

DERA (MOD Police)

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of his Department's Police are employed at DERA establishments and facilities in the UK; and how many were employed in each year since the formation of DERA. [28431]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received on replacing MOD Police with private security at DERA establishments. [28426]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence has received the following representations concerning the withdrawal of Ministry of Defence Police officers from the QinetiQ sites at Pendine, Schoeburyness and West Freugh:

Two from the Defence Police Federation

One from a member of the public

Three in the form of MP's letters

One in the form of a parliamentary question.

Army Training Regiment Bases

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of Army Training Regiment bases in (a) England, (b) Scotland and (c) Northern Ireland. [26014]

Mr. Ingram: There are currently five Army Training Regiments (ATRs) in England and Scotland; there are none in Northern Ireland although Depot Royal Irish conducts initial training for the Royal Irish Regiment and of very small numbers for other Irish Regiments. It is planned to transfer the training functions from the Glencorse site in Scotland to the School of Infantry at Catterick in north Yorkshire. There will be changes to the way in which training is conducted at the remaining four sites—Bassingbourn in Cambridgeshire, Pirbright in Surrey, Winchester in Hampshire and Lichfield in Staffordshire. ATR Bassingbourn will concentrate on junior entry training, and the others will conduct non-infantry adult entry training. These changes will take place during the course of this year.

Whittington Barracks

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what plans he has to move the Army Training Regiment from the Whittington barracks near Lichfield; [26015]

f1(2) what plans he has to sell land occupied by the Whittington barracks near Lichfield. [26016]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence has no plans to either move the Army Training Regiment from Whittington barracks, near Lichfield, or to sell the land occupied by the barracks.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Wind Farm (Cefn Croes)

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the reasons are for the decision not to hold a public inquiry into the proposed wind farm at Cefn Croes in Ceredigion. [28132]

Ms Hewitt: As with any planning decision Ministers have to weigh up all aspects of an application, consider all representations—both for and against—and come to a decision. In the case of the Cefn Croes application it was concluded that there was sufficient information to approve the application in principle without sending it to a public inquiry.

Wind Turbines

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the criteria used by her Department for allowing the erection of wind turbines in upland areas, with particular reference to the importance she places on landscape and visual amenity. [28133]

Ms Hewitt: All relevant criteria set out in planning guidance and environmental assessment guidance are taken into account. I also have a duty under Schedule 9 of the Electricity Act 1989 to have regard to the extent to which a person who formulates a proposal has complied with his duty of having regard to the desirability of preserving natural beauty and do what he reasonably can to mitigate any effect the proposal would have on the natural beauty of the countryside. In addition the views of the local planning authority which will be familiar with the local terrain are also taken into account.

Local Post Office

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what advice she has received from the Postal Services Commission on transitional financial assistance to local post offices from 2003. [28372]

Mr. Alexander: The advice I received at the end of last year from the Postal Services Commission on transitional financial assistance to the rural network is currently under consideration.

Energy Sources

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on renewable sources of energy and on the funding which has been made available for such projects since 1997. [28018]

Mr. Wilson: In the four-year period 1997–2001, the Department of Trade and Industry provided a total of £61.1 million for the support of research and development in renewable energy. Over the same period, total indirect support for renewable energy provided through the Fossil Fuel Levy was £374.8 million.

For the three-year period 2001–04, provision for research and development in renewable energy is £80.6 million, and for the newly introduced capital grants for renewables projects, £191 million. It is estimated that indirect support to be provided through the renewables obligation, planned to come into effect on 1 April 2002, could total £687 million over its first two years of operation. Some continuing support through the Fossil Fuel Levy is also expected.

Looking ahead, introducing the new renewables obligation, exempting renewables from the Climate Change Levy and protecting existing non-fossil fuel obligation (NFFO) contracts will together create a long-term market incentive for renewables expected to be worth over £1 billion per year by 2010.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much of Britain's energy requirements are found in (a) renewable and (b) non-renewable sources of energy. [28017]

Ms Hewitt: Renewable energy sources provided 1.3 per cent. of the United Kingdom's total primary energy requirements in 2000, and 2.8 per cent. of the electricity generated in the UK.

Fireworks

Tony Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many injuries involving fireworks have been reported since 1 September 2001; and if she will make a statement. [29393]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Figures from accident and emergency departments for the 2001 firework period are not yet available. We will publish the figures as soon as possible.

European Directive on Fixed Term Work

Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on her plans to implement the European Directive on Fixed Term Work. [29578]

Alan Johnson: I am today publishing a consultation on the draft Fixed Term Employees (Prevention of less favourable treatment) Regulations 2002. The consultation period will last for 12 weeks, until 15 April, and I look forward to receiving views from as many interested parties as possible by this date. A Government response to the consultation on the fixed term directive that took place from 9 March to 31 May 2001 is also being published today. Copies of both documents have been placed in the Library. The regulations will be made under clause 45 of the Employment Bill. They will prevent fixed term employees from being less favourably treated than comparable permanent employees and transpose the EC Fixed Term Work Directive.

Small Business Service

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on how many occasions the Chief Executive of the Small Business Service has met the Prime Minister since 1997. [27634]

Ms Hewitt: He has met him six times: 16 December 1999; 30 March 2000; 11 May 2000; 27 November 2000; 17 July 2001; 6 November 2001.

He also has regular contact with No.10 via Private Office and No.10 Policy Unit.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will introduce measures to require the manufacturers of mobile phones to provide stronger deterrents to theft in their products. [27485]

Mr. Alexander: Mandating anti-theft measures in the short-term would be disproportionately expensive. In the longer term, the operators and manufacturers are working with the Home Office and the DTI to investigate ways in which mobile phone handset security might be improved.

Galileo Project

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations she has made to the European Commission concerning the Galileo project. [27483]

Ms Hewitt: I have made no representations to the Commission. The Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions leads for the UK in discussions with the European Commission on the Galileo project. My right hon. Friend the Minister for Transport attended the most recent Transport Council meeting on 7 December and I would refer my hon. Friend to his report on 12 December 2001, Official Report, column 875W.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the concerns expressed to her by the United States Government on the Galileo global positioning system. [27888]

Ms Hewitt: The UK Government are aware of the US Government's concerns over technical, trade and security aspects of the Galileo project. Galileo is a European Union (EU) project, on which the European Commission leads in negotiations with the US. The UK participates fully in these and will continue to seek an acceptable way forward.

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she intends to reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton dated 27 November 2001 with regard to Mr. J. McHugh. [27321]

Ms Hewitt: My right hon. Friend's letter of 27 November on behalf of his constituent Mr. J. McHugh has been transferred to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs for the reply, as the subject falls within her responsibilities.

Fraud

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate her Department has made of the cost to its budget since 1 May 1997 of fraud; and if she will make a statement. [27291]

Ms Hewitt: Cases of fraud and irregularity involving staff and direct contractors are reported annually to the Treasury for inclusion in the Treasury Fraud report which is laid before Parliament. From April 1997 to date the total value of losses reported as due to fraud and irregularities is £197,445. When taken as a proportion of DTI expenditure for the same period this represents a loss of less than 0.002 per cent.

No large organisation is totally free of fraud but we continue to promote an environment of zero tolerance and to act promptly in all suspected cases of impropriety.

Public Relations Consultants

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much was spent by (a) her Department and (b) bodies for which it is responsible on external public relations consultants in each of the last five years. [27386]

Ms Hewitt: Information on expenditure of this kind is not held centrally and could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Consignia

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the occasions in the last six months when (a) she, (b) her ministerial colleagues and (c) their private offices have had (i) meetings, (ii) telephone conversations and (iii) correspondence with executives of Consignia. [27718]

Ms Hewitt: Our records show that my hon. Friend the Minister for E-Commerce and Competitiveness and I have had five meetings with executives of Consignia in the last six months. In addition, supporting these meetings, there have been a number of telephone conversations and 12 items of correspondence with Consignia executives.

Export Licence Applications

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list, for each of the last five years, the number of export licence applications that have been (a) approved and (b) rejected in respect of products that have a potential military end use. [28250]

Nigel Griffiths: The number of export licence applications in respect of items controlled for strategic reasons that have been approved and rejected since 1997 are published in the Government's annual reports on Strategic Export Controls. Copies of the 1997, 1998, 1999 and 2000 annual reports are available in the Libraries of the House.

The 2001 annual report on Strategic Export Controls will be published as soon as possible.

Scientific Research Budget

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has for the Department's scientific research budget; and what impact this will have on (a) continuing research projects funded by her Department and (b) future schemes (i) earmarked for and (ii) hoping to receive departmental funding for scientific research and development. [27850]

Ms Hewitt: The Spending Review 2000 set the Science Budget provision for the years 2001–02 to 2003–04. My Department published an account of how the budget was to be allocated—principally among the research councils—over that period in November 2000 "Science Budget 2001–02 to 2003–04", Department of Trade and Industry. A copy was placed in the Libraries of the House and the document is available on my Department's website at http://www2.dti.gov.uk/ost/whatsnew/index.htm.

Like all Government Departments, my Department is at present planning its input to the next spending review which covers the period 2003–04 to 2005–06 and it is too soon to say what the level of provision for the science budget will be in those years.

Some of the funding allocated to the research councils in the last spending review was earmarked at a high level for specific areas of research: genomics, e-science and basic technology. However, decisions about funding of individual science research projects—whether in these earmarked areas or not—are, by long-established convention, matters for the research councils, not for my Department.

Distance Selling

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the regulation of distance selling. [27930]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Consumer protection laws, such as the Sale of Goods legislation, apply equally to distance selling as when shopping on the high street.

In addition, the Consumer Protection (Distance Selling) Regulations came into force on 31 October 2000 and cover all forms of distance selling, including shopping over the internet, telephone or catalogue.

The main provisions of the regulations are:

The right to receive clear information about the goods or services before deciding to purchase;

Confirmation of this information in writing;

A cooling off period of seven working days during which the consumer can cancel the contract;

Unless agreed otherwise with the supplier, the right to receive goods or services within 30 days;

Protection against payment card fraud;

Protection against cold calling.

Market Research

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what expenditure has been incurred by her (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies in each of the last four years on (i) opinion polling, (ii) focus groups and (iii) other forms of market research; and if she will list the surveys commissioned and the purpose of each. [27951]

Ms Hewitt: The Department does not centrally collect the information sought at the required level of detail, and to provide it would entail disproportionate cost. Where surveys are conducted which may be considered to contain an element relating to opinion polling; focus groups; or other forms of market research, it is not possible to identify separately the costs of that element.

Assisted Area Status

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she will commence planning for the review of assisted area status due in 2006. [28650]

Alan Johnson: The assisted areas map is constrained by European Commission rules and guidelines which, based on past experience, are likely to change before the next review. If the timetable for the next map were to repeat that which led to the current map, detailed consideration of individual areas would start during 2005.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the impact on areas of the removal of assisted area status by the implementation of the Assisted Area Order 2000. [28651]

Alan Johnson: None. Assisted area status allows, but does not require, public authorities to pay regional state aid to companies in those areas; in itself it does not affect an area.

Depleted Uranium

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what quantity of depleted uranium is in use in civil non-nuclear applications in the United Kingdom; to what uses the DU is put; what disposal facilities exist for waste DU metal and its undiluted compounds; and in what quantities and where unused DU is stored. [28501]

Nigel Griffiths: A report on depleted uranium has recently been published by the Environment Agency: "Depleted Uranium: A Study of its Uses within the UK and Disposal Issues" (Reference R&D Technical Report P3–088/TR), copies of which are available from the Environment Agency. This report provides details on the quantities, uses and storage of depleted uranium in civil non-nuclear applications in the United Kingdom, and describes, among other areas, the safeguards arrangements for the depleted uranium. Issues relating to the disposal of radioactive materials, including waste depleted uranium metal and its undiluted compounds, are a matter for the Environment Agency.

Carbon Monoxide

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps she is taking to reduce accidents caused by the inhalation of carbon monoxide from coal and oil-fired appliances. [28054]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 17 January 2002]: The DTI is continuing to work with other Government Departments and industry to increase awareness of the dangers of carbon monoxide among consumers. Specifically our activity has included a mobile exhibition units road show targeted at areas with the highest occurrence of carbon monoxide related incidents and dissemination of advice through information toolkits and leaflets. This continues to be a priority area for consumer safety.

Ceramics

Mr. Stevenson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the safeguard provisions and implementation relating to the phasing out of ceramic import quotas from China to the United Kingdom. [28775]

Nigel Griffiths: In bilateral negotiations on China's Accession to the WTO, the European Community and China agreed to phase-out existing import quotas. EU import quotas on Chinese ceramics will be eliminated on 1 January 2005. The terms of China's accession to the WTO include an additional safeguard mechanism available for 12 years to guard against damaging import surges.

Mr. Stevenson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action is being taken in the World Trade Organisation on tariffs on United Kingdom imports of pottery catering wares into the United States; and if she will make a statement. [28774]

Nigel Griffiths: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Stoke-on-Trent, North (Ms Walley) on 16 January 2002, Official Report, column 322W.

Sub-post Offices

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when a decision will be made on the future of the urban network for sub-post offices. [28680]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 18 January 2002]: Government have agreed in principle to support the compensation package negotiated between the Post Office Ltd. and the National Federation of SubPostmasters for a restructuring of the urban post office network. Detailed discussion continues on the programme and implementation will be carried forward in consultation with interested parties.

Maternity Leave

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of women who left full-time employment on maternity leave returned (a) by the end of and (b) after the end of the statutory maternity leave period to (i) full-time employment and (ii) part-time employment, in each of the last five years. [27739]

Alan Johnson [holding answer 18 January 2002]: The latest information available is from a 1996 study entitled "Maternity Rights and Benefits in Britain 1996", Department of Social Security Research Report No. 67, published by the Stationery Office.

The study included a survey of mothers who had given birth in June 1995 and collected information on their economic activity in spring 1996, some 10 to 11 months after giving birth, and thus after the point at which any statutory entitlement to maternity leave had expired.

At this point, 34 per cent. of women employed full-time before taking maternity leave had returned to employment on a full-time basis and 35 per cent. had returned to employment on a part-time basis.

It is not possible to identify the proportions returning to employment before and after their entitlements to statutory maternity leave had expired.

The Department and the Department for Work and Pensions have commissioned a repeat survey in order to evaluate the impact of the changes to maternity leave arrangements introduced in 1999 and to provide a baseline for evaluation of the changes to maternity arrangements announced in the 2001 Budget and contained in the Employment Bill.

Radioactive Waste

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what records she has of the (a) number of containers, (b) total weight and (c) geographical extent of dumping of radioactive waste which was deposited approximately 250 miles off Land's End during the 1960s and 1970s. [27191]

Mr. Meacher: I have been asked to reply.

Details of all UK radioactive waste disposals in the north-east Atlantic have been made public and are available from a number of sources, including the "Report of the Independent Review of Disposal of Radioactive Waste in the North East Atlantic" (HMSO, 1984), copies of which are available in the Library of the House. The report contains data on the location of dumpsites, weight of material dumped, levels of activity and numbers of containers. The information on weight and numbers of containers is aggregated in the report for the whole period from 1949–82 during which the UK disposed of radioactive waste at sea. We estimate that, during the 1960s and 70s, around 41,000 tonnes were dumped in the north-east Atlantic in around 75,000 containers of various sizes and types. Radioactive waste disposals were also carried out in the north-east Atlantic by a number of other countries during this period.

MINISTER FOR WOMEN

Women

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Minister for Women what recent discussions she has had with her European Union counterparts on women's issues. [25512]

Ms Hewitt: I met Commissioner Diamantopoulou on 26 November 2001. We discussed a broad range of EU and UK social affairs policy issues, including child care provision, the gender pay gap, family friendly working and the Equal Treatment draft directive.

I am also looking forward to discussing employment issues with the French Employment Minister, Elizabeth Guigou, in London today. As Minister Guigou's area of responsibility also includes women and equality issues our discussions will cover issues of particular interest to women. My hon. Friend the Minister of State, Cabinet Office will also be attending the EU Informal Meeting of Ministers for Women to be hosted by the Spanish Presidency at Santiago de Compostela on 18–19 February 2002.

TRANSPORT, LOCAL GOVERNMENT AND THE REGIONS

Traffic Calming

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what legal powers local authorities have to introduce passive traffic calming on trunk roads. [26470]

Mr. Spellar: Trunk roads are the responsibility of the Highways Agency. Local authorities have no legal powers to introduce passive traffic calming measures on trunk roads.

Rolling Stock

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make it his policy to establish a national test track for rolling stock. [26058]

Mr. Spellar: As the Chairman of the Strategic Rail Authority, Richard Bowker, announced in his Strategic Plan published on 14 January, the SRA is carrying out a study of the case for a national test track. The study will report early this year.

Lord Birt

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he last met Lord Birt to discuss transport policy. [26724]

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the terms of engagement of Lord Birt are in relation to transport matters. [26308]

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) if he will publish Lord Birt's study of Britain's transport needs; [26758]

(2) what terms of reference he has agreed with Lord Birt for his study of Britain's transport needs; [26760]

(3) on what date he first met Lord Birt to discuss the future of transport; [26763]

(4) what administrative support his Department is supplying Lord Birt for his study of Britain's transport needs; [26762]

(5) on what date he last met Lord Birt to discuss the future of transport, with specific reference to the railways; [26761]

(6) what timetable he has agreed with Lord Birt for the completion of his study of Britain's transport needs. [26759]

Mr. Byers: The role of the FSU is to provide internal long-term strategic analysis and policy thinking for the Prime Minister and other Cabinet Ministers on a range of issues, including transport. Lord Birt is one of a number of external advisers assisting the FSU in its work. It is not our policy to publish Forward Strategy Unit reports. Internal policy advice to Ministers remains confidential.

The work of the FSU is being carried forward by a small and varying staff, drawn from the PIU and Government Departments. My Department keeps in close touch with the FSU.

Road Deaths

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many deaths there were in motor accidents in each of the last five years for which figures are available in which a contributory factor was (a) consumption of alcohol, (b) consumption of non-prescription drugs and (c) tiredness of driver. [27407]

Mr. Spellar: The numbers of deaths in motor accidents where one or more drivers involved tested positive for illegal levels of alcohol are shown for the most recent five years for which estimates are available, together with the provisional estimate for 2000.

Estimates of casualties in accidents involving illegal alcohol levels: Great Britain

	Number
1995	540
1996	580
1997	550
1998	460
1999	460
2000 (provisional)	520

The estimates do not, however, show the extent to which alcohol may have been a contributory factor in the accidents. Statistics are not compiled for drugs or tiredness as a factor.

National Rail Model

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 8 January 2002, Official Report, column 583W, on departmental consultants, when Oscar Faber are due to conclude their work on the development of a national rail model. [27334]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 15 January 2002]: The original project specification issued in February 2001 set a completion date of 14 September 2001 for the initial version of the national rail model. The contract with Oscar Faber has since been extended to incorporate further development work and is likely to be extended further either with Oscar Faber or through competitive tender. The original project specification envisaged the further development phase would continue up to September 2002.

London Underground

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will publish the performance indicators for (a) the Metropolitan Line and (b) other London Underground lines for (i) each of the last 12 months and (ii) the last seven years. [27712]

Mr. Spellar: Detailed in-year operational information of this nature is a matter for London Underground.

London Underground has provided the information in the following table giving a line by line breakdown of the percentage of scheduled train kilometres operated in each full financial year since 1995–96. During the same period, the total number of train kilometres operated has increased by 11.5 per cent. from 57.2 million kms in 1995–96 to 63.8 million kms in 2000–01.

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many train breakdowns there were in each of the last seven years per underground line. [27713]

Mr. Spellar: This is an operational matter for London Underground who have provided the information in the table, showing, for each line on the underground, the number of delays of over two minutes attributed to problems with rolling stock.

Car Fuel Efficiency and Emissions

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans the Government have to improve the clarity for consumers of the new car fuel efficiency and emissions labels. [27827]

Mr. Spellar: New requirements for labelling of passenger cars were recently introduced into UK law, in the form of regulations implementing EU directive 99/94/EC. This had the effect of adding information on CO_2 emissions to the information on fuel efficiency which was already displayed on labels in the UK. A new standardised format for labels was also introduced.

The directive requires member states to monitor and report on the effectiveness of these measures and the Government will be an active participant in the subsequent review by the European Commission. In order to better inform the UK position, the Department will shortly be conducting a consultation exercise on options for banded or comparative labelling.

Refurbishment

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what his estimate is of the cost of buildings refurbishment carried out by his Department in each of the last four years. [27964]

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

Dr. Whitehead: The Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (Central) has carried out four major building refurbishments valued at more than £1 million which attracted expenditure in the last four years.

Details of the expenditure are:

Ordnance Survey

Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what representations he has received on the use of National Interest in Mapping Service Agreement funding of the Ordnance Survey. [28074]

Ms Keeble: Since the commencement of the National Interest Mapping Service Agreement (NIMSA) in April 1999 I have received two representations, from a Member of Parliament, which included references to the use of NIMSA funding to support colour imagery.

Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will provide a table showing the annual payments of National Interest in Mapping Service Agreement funding to the Ordnance Survey in (a) 1990, (b) 2000 and (c) 2001. [28075]

Ms Keeble: The National Interest Mapping Service Agreement (NIMSA) commenced in April 1999 and is based on the financial year April to March. Detailed is a table indicating the payments made since April 1999. The final figure to be paid for activities carried out during financial year 2001–02 will not be finalised until April 2002.

£ million

Financial year	Payment
1999–2000	14.6
2000–01	13.5
2001–02[1]	12.0

Note:

All figures have been rounded to the nearest £0.1 million.

Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions whether he has agreed that National Interest in Mapping Service Agreement funding for the Ordnance Survey should support aerial photography in colour. [28076]

Ms Keeble: No. National Interest Mapping Service Agreement (NIMSA) funding is directed towards the support of non-commercial database maintenance and other uneconomic national mapping activities that Ordnance Survey undertakes in the national interest.

Aerial photography is used as part of the database maintenance process and NIMSA has always contributed to its use for uneconomic data base maintenance activities.

The implications for NIMSA funding of Ordnance Survey's decision in May 2001 to change to colour photography, as part of a long term investment to improve services to customers, are currently under review.

Local Government Finance (Wiltshire)

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what discussions he has had with Wiltshire county council about an interim award for 2002–03; if he intends the teachers' pay award to be paid from the revenue support grant; if he will make an extra grant for Wiltshire to cover (a) the duties under the Education Act 1997 to provide full-time education for excluded pupils and (b) the new special educational needs duties in early years; and if he will make a statement on the local government settlement as it affects Wiltshire, with particular reference to education and social services. [27893]

Dr. Whitehead: The provisional local government finance settlement for 2002–03 continues to give priority to education and social services. Provision for spending on education overall will increase by £2.1 billion or 8.7 per cent. Personal social services will increase by £684 million or 6.5 per cent. Wiltshire benefits from this extra money. Wiltshire's provisional education standard spending assessment increase for 2002–03 is £11.58 million or 6.5 per cent. We have been consulting on our proposals and have not met individual councils during this time. We have been carefully considering all representations on the provisional settlement as we take final decisions.

Wiltshire will also benefit from the overall increase in standards fund grant of £160 million and an increase in the direct grant for schools of 2.75 per cent. The increase in the education SSA already takes account of the prospective increase in teachers' pay, the duties under the 1997 Act to provide full-time education for excluded pupils and the new special educational needs duties in early years.

Galileo Project

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Macclesfield (Mr. Winterton) on 3 December 2001, Official Report, column 53W, on the Galileo Project, and following the EU Transport Council meeting of 7 December 2001, if he will make a statement on the UK's commitment to the Galileo project. [28024]

Mr. Spellar: I refer the hon. Member to my report of the Transport Council, which includes an account of discussions on Galileo, pursuant to my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Clydesdale (Mr. Hood) on 12 December 2001, Official Report, columns 875–77W.

Following the Transport Council, the Laeken European Council reaffirmed the strategic importance of Galileo. It also invited the Transport Council to continue its work on the project with a view to deciding on funding for, and management of the development phase by next March and June respectively. The council was asked to take account of a report by PricewaterhouseCoopers (PWC) on the project, which the European Commission issued only on 22 November.

In principle the Government support Galileo, but, as my report of the Transport Council indicates, we and some other member states have outstanding concerns about cost-benefit, financial viability and management aspects of the project. Some of these issues are addressed by the PWC report. But PWC make clear that the system is likely to require more public funding than the Commission previously estimated, including ongoing support through the operational phase.

National Rail Academy

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the estimated annual running cost is of the proposed National Rail Academy. [28563]

Mr. Spellar: The concept of a National Rail Academy is still at a very early stage. The Strategic Rail Authority has commissioned the Rail Industry Training Council to consult with the industry on the establishment of such an academy and what form it might take. Until these facts are known it is premature to estimate running costs.

Trans-European Rail Network

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions in what circumstances the European Commission would have decision-making rights over an application for a derogation under Directive 96/48/EC and 2001/16/EC. [28557]

Mr. Spellar: The European Commission, normally acting on a qualified majority vote of member states, will decide on all derogations sought on the grounds that application of the technical specifications for interoperability would compromise the economic viability of an upgrading project on the trans-European rail network. This covers both infrastructure and rolling stock related projects.

Light Rail Schemes

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what light rail schemes are under development and what their estimated completion dates are. [28483]

Ms Keeble: Two light rail schemes are currently under construction: the Sunderland extension to Tyne and Wear Metro, which is due to open in March 2002, and Nottingham Express Transit, which is due to open in November 2003.

Three extensions to the Manchester Metrolink, three lines for Leeds Supertram and South Hampshire Rapid Transit have also been approved. Construction of these lines will probably begin in 2003, and is likely to take around three years.

The City Airport extension of the Docklands Light Railway (DLR) in London is awaiting approval under the Transport and Works Act 1992 (TWA). An announcement on that is likely to be made shortly. Transport for London is also considering the possibility of extending the DLR to Woolwich.

The economic appraisal for two extensions to the Midland Metro was approved in December 2000 and I understand that the promoters will be submitting a TWA application shortly. Whether or not these extensions are built will depend on the outcome of the TWA process.

Transport for London is currently consulting on proposals for four intermediate mode corridors in London: Cross river, Uxbridge road, Greenwich waterfront and east London. Transport for London's Business Plan states that a light rail or tram scheme is an option on one of these routes.

There are also proposals for light rail schemes in Bristol, Merseyside, Medway and Hull, and for further extensions to existing systems. These proposals would have to satisfy the Government's appraisal process and obtain TWA powers before construction could begin.

Canvey Island

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what opportunity there will be for the Strategic Rail Authority to provide a passenger station for Canvey Island on an extension of the Stanford le Hope-Tilbury East goods rail link when that link is upgraded. [28131]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 17 January 2002]: The SRA has no plans to provide a passenger station at Canvey Island. If there were a demand for a rail link it would be for the local authority, or other sponsoring party, to raise the matter with c2c and Railtrack in the first instance. If support were required from Government it may be available through the Rail Passenger Partnership scheme, administered by the SRA.

Benfleet Station

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what opportunity there will be to influence the plans of the Strategic Rail Authority to increase the capacity of Benfleet station. [28128]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 17 January 2002]: Through the Incremental Outputs Statement (IOS) scheme the SRA is supporting work to increase the capacity of Benfleet station from 2005–06, allowing eight trains per hour in the peak direction. The IOS programme was designed by the SRA following detailed consultation with stakeholders and the industry, including Railtrack and the Train Operating Companies.

Bus and Rail Integration

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what steps he will take to secure better integration of bus and rail services. [28129]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 17 January 2002]: Our 10-Year Plan makes a commitment to looking at transport as a whole, matching solutions to specific problems.

The Strategic Rail Authority's new Strategic Plan describes a number of examples of better integration which are being taken forward and how further progress will be made. Copies of the Strategic Plan are available in the Library of the House.

The UK transport industry has developed "Journey Solutions", aimed at promoting and improving integration between bus and train. They aim to showcase the best examples of integration across the country as models from which further schemes can be developed.

At the local level, local authorities, within their five-year local transport plans and bus strategies, have been asked to consider the important contribution that better interchange can make in improving local transport provision. Our guidance to authorities makes clear the need for authorities, in conjunction with their local partners and the transport operators, to provide improvements to both infrastructure and services which can bring about better interchange between different modes of transport.

European/British Railways

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of the railways in (a) other European countries and (b) Britain. [28739]

Mr. Spellar: Following decades of underinvestment, it is clear that the performance of Britain's railways needs to improve. The 10-Year Plan for Transport and the Strategic Rail Authority's Strategic Plan set out the strategy and resources to improve Britain's rail system and enable us to achieve our objective of benchmarking our performance against railways in other European countries.

Tenancy Deposit Scheme

Angela Watkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will extend the Tenancy Deposit Scheme nationally when the five local pilot schemes end; and which of the two piloted options will be used. [28599]

Ms Keeble: We hope shortly to reach a decision on the voluntary pilot tenancy deposit scheme and on such alternative options as there might be for safeguarding tenants' deposits from unjustified appropriation by landlords.

A14

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions whether in relation to the proposed major A14 improvements included in the Cambridge to Huntingdon multi-modal study, it is proposed that the opening of the new A14 bypass will be contemporaneous with the opening of the remainder of the works to the A14 road. [27736]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 18 January 2002]: The phasing of the proposed improvements to the A14, included in the Preferred Plan of the Cambridge to Huntingdon multi-modal study, can only be addressed when work is more advanced.

Planning Appeals

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many planning appeals have been (a) upheld and (b) dismissed in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [28748]

Ms Keeble: The information for England on the number of planning appeals allowed and not allowed in 1996–97 to 2000–01 is given in the table.

	Planning appeals decided	Planning appeals allowed	Planning appeals not allowed
1996–97	12,029	4,210	7,819
1997–98	13,051	4,685	8,366
1998–99	12,991	4,561	8,430
1999–2000	12,575	4,545	8,030
2000–01	12,939	4,525	8,414

Radioactive Material

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make it his policy that accidents involving the transportation of radioactive material are made public. [28615]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 18 January 2002]: Information on accidents and incidents involving the transport of radioactive material in the UK is published annually and placed in the House Library.

The latest report, "Radiological Consequences resulting from Accidents and Incidents involving the Transport of Radioactive Materials in the UK—2000 Review, NRPB-M1320", was published in October 2001.

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list incidents whereby trains carrying radioactive material have been involved in (a) accidents and (b) safety-related incidents in each of the last five years, indicating the (i) date and (ii) location of each incident. [28614]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 18 January 2002]: There have been no accidents or incidents with radiological safety implications involving trains carrying radioactive material in the UK during the last five years.

Information on accidents and incidents involving the transport of radioactive material by all modes in the UK, including rail, is published annually. The reports covering events in each year have been placed in the House Library.

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what regulations cover the transport of radioactive material in the UK. [28613]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 18 January 2002]: The following regulations cover the transport of radioactive material in the UK:

Road

The Radioactive Material (Road Transport) (Great Britain) Regulations 1996 (SI 1996 No. 1350).

The Radioactive Substances (Carriage by Road) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1983 (SR 1983 No. 344).

The Radioactive Substances (Carriage by Road) (Amendment) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1986 (SR 1986 No. 61).

Sea

The Merchant Shipping (Dangerous Goods and Marine Pollutants) Regulations 1997 (SI 1997 No. 2367); Merchant Shipping Notice No. M 1755(M), "The Carriage of Dangerous Goods and Marine Pollutants in Packaged Form—Amendment 30–00 to the International Maritime Dangerous Goods (IMDG) Code". The Merchant Shipping (Carriage of Packaged Irradiated Nuclear Fuel etc.) (INF Code) Regulations 2000 (SI 2000 No. 3216).

Air

The Air Navigation Order 2000 SI No. 1562. The Air Navigation (Dangerous Goods) Regulations 1994 SI No. 3187 and Amendments 1996 SI No. 3100 and 1998 SI No. 2536.

Rail

The Packaging, Labelling and Carriage of Radioactive Material by Rail Regulations (RAMRail) 1996 (SI 1996 No. 2090): Approved Requirements for the packaging, labelling and carriage of radioactive material by rail 1996 Edition. The Carriage of Dangerous Goods (Classification, Packaging and Labelling) and Use of Transportable Pressure Receptacles Regulations (CDGCPL) 1996 (SI 1996 No. 2092). The Carriage of Dangerous Goods (Amendment) Regulations 1999 (SI 1999 No. 303).

The Packaging, Labelling and Carriage of Radioactive Material by Rail Regulations (Northern Ireland) (RAMRailNI) 1998 (SR 1998 No. 132).

Ports

The Dangerous Substances in Harbour Areas Regulations 1987 (SI 1987 No. 37).

Inland Waterways

British Waterways Board Terms and Conditions: Dangerous Goods BWB 1981, and Schedule of Dangerous Goods ("The Green Book") BWB 1981 (Class 7).

Indian Government Representatives

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he had to meet Indian Government representatives in early January. [28622]

Dr. Whitehead [holding answer 18 January 2002]: No meetings were fixed. The visit was entirely private and all the costs borne by my right hon. Friend.

Rail Safety

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the (a) dates and locations and (b) materials involved in railway safety-related incidents in the last six months in the north-west of England. [28612]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 18 January 2002]: The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) advise that in the period from 1 July 2001 to 17 January 2002 there have been 174 incidents reported under the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1995 (RIDDOR) in Railtrack's north-west zone, which covers the north-west of England. However, these figures do not necessarily include all safety-related incidents or details of the materials involved in an incident. A more detailed breakdown of these figures could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Environmental Appraisals

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what procedures his Department has to ensure environmental appraisals are undertaken prior to (a) administrative and (b) policy decisions being made; [28986]

(2) how many officials from his Department have attended the environmental appraisal and integration into policy training course run by the Civil Service College; [28988]

(3) when the last occasion was on which he requested an environmental appraisal before making a policy decision; [28985]

(4) how many environmental appraisals have been published by his Department since 1 January 2001; and if he will list the last four; [28984]

(5) what plans his Department has to appraise the environmental implications of its Spending Review submission to the Treasury. [28987]

Dr. Whitehead: My right hon. Friend receives environmental advice on all policy decisions for which environmental issues are relevant.

In 1998, the former Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions published "Policy Appraisal and the Environment: Policy Guidance" which gave advice to Departments on when and how to carry out an environmental appraisal.

The guidance made clear that environmental appraisal is part of the overall policy appraisal process. Accordingly, my Department does not now generally publish free-standing environmental appraisal documents. Environmental implications of the Department's policies and programmes are, where appropriate, set out in the various consultation documents and regulatory impact assessments that form part of our overall consideration of policy.

In terms of administrative actions, our activities are governed by the Department's greening operations policy statement, published on the DTLR website in December 2001. Proposals for specific projects are assessed in respect of operational need, compliance with policy, environmental benefit, and value for money.

Since the publication of the 1998 policy guidance, my Department, with others, has been developing an integrated policy appraisal methodology which will be used to assess the likely effect of proposed policies on a range of economic, environmental and social issues My Department is using a summary version of the methodology to consider the sustainable development implications of our Spending Review submission to the Treasury. Beyond the Spending Review process, and in the light of further development of the methodology, we hope to use the methodology to ensure that full account is taken of all relevant economic, environmental and social factors before policy decisions are made.

No officials from my Department have so far attended the environmental appraisal and integration into policy training course run by the Civil Service College.

Correspondence

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he will reply to the letter of 4 September from the hon. Member for West Chelmsford with reference to Ms Dearns of Chelmsford. [28810]

Ms Keeble: I replied to the letter from the hon. Member for West Chelmsford on Tuesday 25 September 2001, in which I undertook to look into the issues raised. I sent a second, substantive, reply on Friday 18 January 2002. I have forwarded a further copy of this to the hon. Member.

Area Cost Adjustment

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how much money Coventry city council will receive from the changes to the area cost adjustment; and if he will make a statement on the shortfall announced in July 2001 due to changes in the area cost adjustment. [28885]

Dr. Whitehead: The following table compares the provisional standard spending assessment (SSA) for Coventry city council, as announced for consultation on 4 December, with what it would have been if based on the area cost adjustment (ACA) for 2001–02. This shows the effect of updating the data underpinning the area cost adjustment between 2001–02 and 2002–03. The impact of changes to the area cost adjustment is relatively small, at 0.1 per cent. of SSA.

	Amount
2002–03 provisional SSA[1]	283.272
2002–03 provisional SSA using 2001–02 ACA[1]	283.520
Absolute difference[1]	–0.248
Percentage difference	–0.1

[1] £ million

The ACA data for 2002–03 that were announced in July 2001 was provisional. The Office for National Statistics subsequently revised the New Earnings Survey (NES) data for 2000 on which these provisional figures were based, in order to include a large number of additional records that had yet to be processed earlier in the year. The final ACA figures for 2002–03 are based on the revised NES data, as it is important that we use the most robust data that are available to us at the time the settlement is made.

Road Safety

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what arrangements there are to grant aid to non-governmental bodies, other than local authorities, to promote road safety. [29275]

Mr. Jamieson: I have today announced that the Government have decided to allocate around £200,000 per annum to a road safety grant challenge fund to assist with the cost of projects promoting road safety proposed by organisations other than local authorities. Grant funding is expected to support the Government's road safety strategy and casualty reduction targets for 2010. Individual grants are expected to be for sums up to £20,000.

Speed Cameras

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many speed cameras were located in Yeovil constituency in each year from 1995 to 2002; how much fine revenue has been collected from these cameras in each year; what the net costs of operating the cameras in each year has been; and if he will make a statement. [27053]

Mr. Spellar: This information is not held centrally.

Home Sellers' Packs

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he plans to introduce home sellers' packs. [28877]

Ms Keeble: Legislation will be introduced when parliamentary time allows. In the meantime we are pressing ahead, in consultation with consumer representatives and the professional bodies, with developing the detailed contents of the sellers' pack.

Millennium Dome

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the future of the Millennium Dome. [26180]

Ms Keeble: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to my hon. Friend the Member for Eccles (Ian Stewart) on 18 December 2001, Official Report, columns 220–221W.

Railtrack

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what legal requirements are placed on the administrators of Railtrack under the Strategic Plan published by the Strategic Rail Authority on 14 January. [29122]

Mr. Byers: The administrator has been appointed by the court for the purposes set out in the Railways Administration Order made under the provisions of the Railways Act 1993. Those purposes remain unchanged by the Strategic Plan.

Train Operating Companies

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact of the European Council's Broad Guidelines of the Economic Policies of the Member States and the Community on the future structure of the rail industry, with particular reference to the number of train operating companies. [29120]

Mr. Byers: The Government's policies for the railway industry, including those on rail passenger service competition and franchising, are consistent with the recommendations in these broad guidelines.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Non-career Civil Servants

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many non-career civil servants are employed in his Department and at which grade; how many non-career civil servants have passed the ADC; and how many non-career civil servants he has appointed since 11 June 2001. [27480]

Mr. Bradshaw: The FCO recruits some members of staff on fixed term contracts, which is what we understand by the term "non-career civil servants". Staff on fixed term appointments are employed on civil service terms and conditions, but their contract of employment has a fixed end date. This category does not cover staff seconded from the private sector. 22 staff are employed on fixed term contracts: two in the senior management structure; 20 in the delegated grades.

No staff on fixed term appointments have attended an Assessment and Development Centre. Four such staff have been appointed since 11 June 2001.

Southern Rhodesia Act

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all orders made under section 3(1)(b)(i) of the Southern Rhodesia Act 1979, stating the purpose of each order and its duration. [27749]

Mr. Bradshaw: Four orders have been made under section 3 of the Southern Rhodesia Act 1979.

The Southern Rhodesia (Expiring Orders) (Consequential Provisions) Order 1979 (SI 1979 No.1445) made provision consequential on the lapse of a number of orders made under section 2 of the Southern Rhodesia Act 1965. The order contained provisions relating to the Reserve Bank of Rhodesia Orders 1965 and 1967, to proceedings against, and liabilities of, the Government of Rhodesia, to the liability of the registrar and trustees of the sinking fund of any stock issued by that Government or for which that Government were responsible and to the records relating to such stock. The order was revoked on 7 December 1979 and replaced by the Southern Rhodesia (Legal Proceedings and Public Liabilities) Order 1979 (SI 1979 No. 1601).

The Southern Rhodesia (Legal Proceedings and Public Liabilities) Order 1979 (SI 1979 No.1601) replaced the Southern Rhodesia (Expiring Orders) (Consequential Provisions) Order 1979; the subject matter being the same as the order it replaced. The order is still in force and was modified by the Zimbabwe (Independence and Membership of the Commonwealth) (Consequential Provisions) Order 1980 (SI 1980 No. 701) under powers in the Zimbabwe Act 1979.

The Southern Rhodesia Constitution (Interim Provisions) Order 1979 (SI 1979 No.1571) made temporary provision for the Government of Southern Rhodesia. The legislative and executive powers, and the prerogative of mercy, were vested in a Governor who could give directions as to the authorities by whom executive powers may be exercised. The order also made provision for the revocation or suspension of a number of earlier constitutional provisions and for the suspension of the appeals to Her Majesty in Council. The order was revoked on 20 March 1980 by the Zimbabwe Constitution (Transitional, Supplementary and Consequential Provisions) Order 1980 (SI 19870 No.395).

The Southern Rhodesia (Sanctions) (Amnesty) Order 1980 (SI 1980 No.565) makes provision for an amnesty, and for discontinuance of criminal proceedings, in respect of offences against certain measures under section 2 of the Southern Rhodesia Act 1965, the United Nations Act 1946 or the enactments specified in Part 2 of Schedule 2 of the order, by which effect is given to resolutions of the United Nations Security Council providing for the imposition of economic or other sanctions against Southern Rhodesia. The order is still in force.

Religious Persecution

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to produce an annual report on the observance of human rights worldwide, with particular reference to religious freedom; and if he will make a statement. [28606]

Peter Hain: Promotion of human rights, including freedom of thought, conscience and religion, is at the heart of our foreign policy. We condemn instances where individuals are persecuted because of their faith or belief, wherever they happen and whatever the religion of the individual or group concerned.

Human rights are inter-related and interdependent. In practice, violations of the right of freedom of religion are often accompanied by violations of other rights; for instance, of freedom of speech and association, freedom from torture and the right to a fair trial. Protecting and promoting freedom of religion is most effective when it is done in the context of the promotion and protection of other human rights.

The Government were pleased to lay before Parliament their fourth Annual Report on Human Rights on 17 September 2001. The report details what the UK has done to promote human rights abroad. It included a section on freedom of religion in the chapter dealing with democracy and diversity. The section sets out some of the action that we have taken to promote religious freedoms in, for example, Turkmenistan, Pakistan and China.

Iraq

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what goods on the Military List have recently been approved for export to Iraq. [29385]

Peter Hain: Following consultation with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Ministry of Defence, the Department of Trade and Industry recently approved a licence to export to Iraq two seal rings, which appear on the Military List, for use in a gas turbine engine at an oil pump station in Iraq. The UN Sanctions Committee approved the export to Iraq of this equipment under the Oil for Food Programme. The Oil for Food Programme allows the export to Iraq of equipment and spare parts required to improve its oil infrastructure. The revenue Iraq is able to generate from the sale of oil funds its purchases of humanitarian goods.

EU-Israel Association Agreement

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what evidence he has on whether goods from settlements in occupied territories are imported to the EU as being of Israeli origin; and what discussions he has had with EU partners on action to deal with failings on the part of the Israeli authorities to honour commitments under the EU-Israel Association agreement. [29235]

Peter Hain: The General Affairs Council last considered this question on 19 November 2001. Their conclusion, taking into account the results of responses from Israel to inquiries from EU national customs authorities, was that there remained a requirement to resolve the rules of origin issue. The EU side consequently made clear at the 20 November EU-Israel Association Council that it attached great importance to correct application of the Association agreement and would do its best to find a sustainable solution to the rules of origin issue. It noted that, if the Association Council process was not able to find a solution, the EU would have to review its position, in accordance with the provisions of the agreement. Both sides agreed to pursue discussions on this issue.

Overseas Territories Bill

John Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects the first British passports to be available to citizens of the Overseas Territories under the provisions of the Overseas Territories Bill. [28315]

Mr. Bradshaw: British passports will be made available to citizens of the Overseas Territories once two criteria have been met. First, that the Overseas Territories Bill has been passed and has received Royal Assent. Secondly, that a commencement date for the citizenship provisions of the Bill has been decided by the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs. This date will be set once satisfactory arrangements for practical implementation, such as passport issue, have been agreed and put in place.

Zambia

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Zambia regarding alleged discrepancies in the electoral process in the recent elections in that country; and if he will make a statement. [26091]

Mr. Straw: The UK has not yet made any representations to the Government of Zambia about alleged discrepancies in the electoral process during the recent elections there. We await the final report of the EU Electoral Observer Mission, which we understand will be issued shortly, and will examine its findings carefully with our EU partners.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he has taken in response to the recent report of the EU Observer Mission highlighting alleged shortcomings in the electoral process in the recent tripartite elections in Zambia; and if he will make a statement. [26092]

Mr. Straw: We are aware of reports of irregularities in the administration of the recent Zambian elections. The EU Electoral Observer Mission is working with domestic observer groups to examine these reports and will issue a joint final statement as soon as possible.

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what lessons he has drawn from the report of EU observers into the recent Zambian presidential and general elections. [28945]

Mr. Bradshaw: The final report of the EU Electoral Observer Mission on the recent Zambian elections has not yet been issued. The EU team is working with domestic observer groups, and we understand that a joint final report will be issued shortly. We shall examine its findings carefully with our EU partners.

Islamabad

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the explanatory statement for Islamabad, reference ISB/N7692, will be forwarded to the Home Office. [29239]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Joint Entry Clearance Unit are seeking information on this case from the High Commission at Islamabad and will write to my hon. Friend about this case in the next few days.

Zimbabwe

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the British High Commission in Zimbabwe last met Mr. Mugabe; and what was discussed. [28858]

Mr. Bradshaw: The British High Commissioner last met President Mugabe on 25 October, when he accompanied my noble Friend Baroness Amos on a call, as part of the visit by Commonwealth Foreign Ministers to Zimbabwe from 25–27 October. The meeting focused on implementation of the Abuja agreement.

Kenya

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what action he has taken to ensure that the EU observers will be in situ for the Kenyan elections later this year; [28944]

(2) what measures he intends to take to ensure fair and free elections in Kenya in 2002. [28964]

Mr. Bradshaw: We are working closely with our development partners, and in consultation with key Kenyan stakeholders, to establish a comprehensive monitoring effort for the elections.

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a formal complaint to the High Commission for Kenya over the plans to deforest part of the Mau area in Kenya. [28957]

Mr. Bradshaw: The British High Commissioner and representatives from the Department for International Development have consistently raised with the Minister of Environment and Natural Resources and other members of the Kenyan Government UK concerns over plans to excise forest reserve.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Ring-fenced Funds

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what funds allocated by (a) her Department and (b) its executive agencies are ring-fenced for specific purposes; and if she will list the allocations of funds involved. [22955]

Estelle Morris [holding answer 18 December 2001]: Most of the Department's funding is not ring-fenced for any particular programme. The exceptions to this are initiatives running with support from specifically targeted funds. Details of initiatives running in 2001–02 with funding which cannot be diverted into any other programme without Treasury permission are listed:

Initiative	£ million
Student Loans	818
New Deal for Schools	293
Capital Modernisation Fund	232
Of which:
UK Online Centres	141
City Learning Centres	44
Computers for Teachers	5
School Laboratories	30
University for Industry	2
The Cybrarian	2.5
Specialist Schools	7
Child care	162
Sure Start	184
Children's Fund	100
Invest to Save Budget	2

The Department provides grant funding for local education authorities (LEAs) for targeted initiatives, such as literacy and numeracy strategies, the National Grid for Learning, and capital support for schools, through the Standards Fund.

The Department provides funding for non-departmental government bodies. In a number of cases there is a large amount of discretion for these bodies in how they deploy funds. Such organisations include the Higher Education Funding Council for England, the Learning and Skills Council and the Teacher Training Agency.

Most support for schools and local education authorities (LEAs) flows through the Education Standard Spending Assessment and Revenue Support Grant. This funding is not ring-fenced.

Newspaper Advertising

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what has been the expenditure of her (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies on newspaper advertising by title for each year since 1997. [26990]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: For details of the advertising spend of the Department from 1996–97 I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Bath (Mr. Foster) on 26 February 2001, Official Report, columns 379–80W. Department press expenditure during 2000–01 amounted to £7,323,331.

Each advertising campaign may use national and regional media. In addition to regional newspapers, advertising space may also be taken in a large number of local newspapers.

A breakdown on advertising by title could only be supplied at disproportionate cost.

Information on advertising expenditure by agencies and non-departmental public bodies is not held centrally.

School Internet Access

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many schools in the north-east are equipped with internet access. [28067]

John Healey: Statistics published by the Department for Education and Skills in October 2001 show that 97 per cent. of schools in England were connected to the internet in April of that year; significant progress from a position where only 28 per cent. were connected in 1998. Our target is that every school should have access to the internet in 2002.

The Department does not maintain information about internet access in schools on a regional or local basis.

Education SSA (Swindon)

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much of Swindon's standard spending assessment per pupil was allocated on the basis of pupil numbers alone for the years (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01, (c) 2001–02 and (d) 2002–03. [28356]

Mr. Timms: The information requested is in the following table.

Swindon

	SSA per pupil allocated on pupil numbers only[1]	Total education SSA per pupil[1]
1999–2000	1,871	2,513
2000–01	1,958	2,624
2001–02	2,024	2,681
2002–03	2,134	2,811

[1] For pupils aged four to 19

Data for 2002–03 are provisional.

Teacher Recruitment Agencies

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what information she has collated on the costs of commission paid by schools to recruitment agencies. [28529]

Mr. Timms: This information is not collected centrally.

Sixth-form Education (Worcestershire)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she will announce the amount of the additional payment she will make to the Worcestershire local education authority to compensate for the amount transferred to the Learning and Skills Council for sixth-form education in Worcestershire; and if she will make a statement. [28596]

Mr. Timms: The transfer of sixth-form funding to the LSC from April 2002 will be cost neutral at LEA level—the adjustments to individual SSAs to take account of the transfer will match the payments that LEAs get back from the LSC.

But we propose to pay a special grant to a minority of LEAs where the changes being made to the funding methodology would not fully eliminate the impact of the funding changes in 2002–03.

I expect details of the special grant to be released after consultation on the Local Government Finance Settlement has been completed at the end of the month.

Learning and Skills Councils

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidance was given to local Learning and Skills Councils on the cost and location of their office accommodation. [28854]

Margaret Hodge: Decisions on the location of local LSC offices were taken by Ministers in February 2000, before the LSC became operational. Factors taken into consideration included the need to get best value for public money by using, where appropriate, premises then occupied by Training and Enterprise Councils, regard was also had to ensuring locations that would facilitate effective operation of the LSC. Since it became operational the LSC has been responsible for its local office locations and costs.

Standards Funds

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the Standards Funds received by schools in Hampshire in (i) 2000–01 and (ii) 2001–02. [28864]

Mr. Timms: The following table shows allocations for the Standards Fund for Hampshire local education authority in 2000–01 and 2001–02. The figures include both Government and local authority contributions. The amount actually paid to schools depends on local expenditure decisions by schools and the local authority.

Grants (Hampshire)

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the (a) category and (b) amount of each grant outside the revenue support grant which her Department provided to Hampshire county council in (i) 2000–01 and (ii) 2001–02. [28865]

Mr. Timms: The following table shows the Department's allocated grants to Hampshire local education authority in 2000–01 and 2001–02.

	2000–01	2001–02
Standards Fund	18,843,776	26,224,965

Capital Grant	29,386,000	27,272,000

[1] In 2001–02 Hampshire has received funding for the summer and autumn terms 2001 which amounts to £300,823. For the spring term 2002 it has been allocated up to £3,476,088 to fund early education places for 3-year-olds. This is as a result of a funding re-allocation exercise at the end of the autumn term 2001.

[2] 2001–02 figures may be subject to change.

[3] Funding made directly to the Education Action Zone in Hampshire (Leigh Park). Up to £550,000 grant is available to the zone in 2001–02, conditional on the zone receiving £250,000 in eligible private sector sponsorship.

Note:

Amounts are in cash terms.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the direct grants for schools in Hampshire in (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02. [28866]

Mr. Timms: A table listing the School Standards Grant payable in respect of each Hampshire school in 2000–01 and 2001–02 has been placed in the Library.

School Statistics

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils there were aged 15 years broken down by ethnic group; what were the average percentage GCSE/GNVQ results of (a) over 5A* to C, (b) over 5A* to G and (c) no passes; what was the average number of (i) authorised and (ii) unauthorised absences for each English parliamentary constituency in the academic year 2000–01; and if she will make a statement. [28958]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The overall number of pupils in maintained secondary schools broken down by ethnic group is given in the following table; there are no figures for individual ages.

Maintained secondary schools: number of pupils by ethnic group England—January 2000

	Number
White	2,780,167
Black—Caribbean	44,561
Black—African	37,466
Black—Other	25,397
Indian	83,177
Pakistani	76,131
Bangladeshi	29,876
Chinese	12,318
Any other minority group	79,259
Unclassified	63,475
Total	3,231,827

The primary source of information on GCSE attainment by ethnic group is the Youth Cohort Study (YCS). The YCS is run in alternate years and estimates from the latest survey are provided in the following table.

GCSE/GNVQ achievements by ethnic group England and Wales—1998–99

			Percentage
	5+ Grades A-C*	5+ Grades A-G*	No passes reported
White	50	91	4
Black	39	86	5
Indian	60	95	[1]—
Pakistani	29	91	4
Bangladeshi	29	88	5
Other Asian	72	93	4
Other minority group	43	89	9
Not stated	26	66	23
Total	49	91	5

[1] Not available (too small sample size)

Note:

Estimates exclude pupils in special schools

Neither of the breakdowns is available for parliamentary constituencies.

The data collected on authorised and unauthorised absences do not include ethnic group.

Autonomous Schools

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many schools she expects to have earned autonomy by the end of the current Parliament. [28959]

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

Mr. Timms: We intend to consult widely on the criteria for earned autonomy before regulations are laid. We envisage that these criteria will enable around 10 per cent. of schools, including those succeeding in challenging circumstances, to qualify. At this stage, we are not in a position to say how many schools will qualify by the end of the current Parliament.

Under-performing Schools

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what percentage of schools are (a) deemed to have serious weaknesses, (b) under special measures and (c) deemed to be under-achieving by Ofsted inspectors. [28960]

Mr. Timms: This is a matter for HM Chief Inspector of Schools and I have therefore asked Mike Tomlinson to write to the hon. Member and to place a copy of his letter in the Library.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) if she will list for each local education authority the level of protected funding given by the LEA over that given by her Department as transitional funding to former grant maintained schools in each of the years 1998–99 to 2001–02; [28961]

(2) if she will list for each year from 1998–99, the transitional funding made available by her Department to former grant maintained schools in England. [28962]

Mr. Timms: The Department has not itself provided transitional funding for former grant-maintained schools. Such funding was provided in 1998–99 by the Funding Agency for Schools as part of the schools' annual maintenance grants, and has been provided in subsequent years by local education authorities in accordance with regulations made under section 47 of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998, with the assistance (in 2000–01 and 2001–02) of a special grant from the Department.

WALES

Standard Spending Assessment (Monmouth)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much SSA per head Monmouth receives; and what the equivalent average figure is for English local government areas. [28008]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Distribution of the revenue support grant in Wales is a matter for the National Assembly.

ELECTORAL COMMISSION COMMITTEE

Democratic Process

35. Kevin Brennan: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission what assessment the Committee has made of the Electoral Commission's plans to encourage greater participation in the democratic process. [26157]

Mr. Beith: The committee has approved the commission's five-year plan for 2001–06, which provides for research and advertising campaigns directed at the promotion of voter awareness. It was laid before Parliament on 8 January 2002 and copies are available in the Vote Office. I understand that the commission intends to set out its strategy for promoting voter awareness in more detail in its next five-year plan, covering the period 2002–07, which is due to be considered by the Speaker's Committee next month and published later in the spring.

Euro

40. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission what the anticipated cost would be of conducting a referendum on entry into the euro. [26163]

Mr. Beith: The Electoral Commission has not to date provided the Speaker's Committee with any estimate for the cost of running a national referendum.

The commission's five-year plan for the period 2001–06 makes clear that the commission will need to seek additional resources in the event of a referendum being called, but does not attempt to identify the scale of those costs.

However, I understand from the Chairman that the commission, as part of its normal work, has recently begun to develop its contingency plans for any national or regional referendum, and will be looking at the issue of costs as part of this work.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Compensation Agency

Mr. Cawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the future plans of the Compensation Agency are; and when they will be published. [29363]

Dr. John Reid: The Compensation Agency will publish today its corporate plan for 2001–04 and business plan for 2001–02. I have set the agency the following 11 key performance targets for 2001–02:

(i) To process criminal injuries claims for an average unit cost of £290.

(ii) To process criminal damage and Terrorism Act 2000 claims for an average unit cost of £140.

(iii) To maintain the average time taken to reach decisions on criminal injuries claims at 45 weeks for claims received from 1 April 2000.

(iv) To maintain the average time taken to reach decisions on criminal damage claims at 19 weeks for claims received from 1 April 2001.

(v) To maintain the average time taken to reach decisions on Terrorism Act 2000 claims at 35 days for claims received from 1 April 2001.

(vi) To reduce by 85 per cent. the number of criminal injuries claims in hand at 31 March 2000 on which no decision had been reached.

(vii) To reduce by 85 per cent. the number of criminal damage claims in hand at 31 March 2001 on which no decision had been reached.

(viii) To reduce by 95 per cent. the number of Terrorism Act 2000 claims in hand at 31 March 2001 on which no decision had been reached.

(ix) To manage the agency's work load in 2001–02 within a running costs budget (to cover salaries and administrative expenditure) to financial limits agreed with the Department (including in-year adjustments).

(x) To achieve an improvement in the level of satisfaction with the agency's service as evidenced by a further survey, to be conducted by December 2001, of a representative sample of applicants and their legal advisers.

(xi) To assess claims in accordance with the requirements of the legislation and ensure that the standards of assessment are fair and objective.

PRIME MINISTER

Railtrack

Chris Grayling: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer of 19 December 2001, Official Report, column 289, if he will publish the documentation to support his reference to the uncovering by the Railtrack administrator of more financial difficulties at the company. [26409]

The Prime Minister: No. These are matters for Railtrack plc and its administrator. The administrator will lodge a Statement of Proposals with the Registrar of Companies and others, including creditors of Railtrack plc, at a time to be agreed by the court. The statement will therefore be widely available. It will contain the administrator's proposals and strategy for transferring the business to another company or companies and the carrying on of the relevant activities before making the transfer. And as my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions told the Transport, Local Government and the Regions Committee on 16 January this will include a statement of affairs from the Directors of Railtrack, that will > "disclose the level of debt that Railtrack had to serve"

and people will then

> "understand why the High Court judge . . . took the decision which he did".

Interception of Communications

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Lewes, of 19 December 2001, Official Report, column 367W, whether his policy in respect of telephone tapping of hon. Members extends to (a) other methods of interception of communications and (b) bugging. [27518]

The Prime Minister: The policy extends to all forms of warranted interception of communications.

As to bugging, the position remains as I informed the House on 4 December 1997, Official Report, column 321, the policy applies in relation to the use of electronic surveillance by any of the three security and intelligence agencies as well as to telephone interception.

Ministerial Transport

Bob Russell: To ask the Prime Minister when he last used the railway service in connection with his official duties; what station he left from and what was the destination; and whether it is his intention to make greater use of the railways in future. [28094]

The Prime Minister: I last travelled by train on 6 December 2001 from Paddington to Reading. I travel making the most efficient and cost-effective arrangements, and will continue to use the railway service regularly when appropriate. My travel arrangements are in accordance with the arrangements for official travel set out in chapter 7 of the Ministerial Code, and the accompanying guidance document, Travel by Ministers.

Special Advisers

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Prime Minister which special advisers have the authority to give directions to civil servants. [28355]

The Prime Minister: Alastair Campbell and Jonathan Powell.

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister what the average time is that the Head of his Department has recommended since May 1997 between a special adviser leaving his Department and taking up outside employment; and if he will make a statement. [28908]

The Prime Minister: All special advisers are covered by the Business Appointment rules which are set out in full in the Civil Service Management Code. Each case is considered on its own individual merit, and an average of the outcomes would therefore be meaningless and potentially misleading. Individual applications submitted to the independent Advisory Committee on Business Appointments for advice are reported on in the committee's annual report.

Russia

Chris Grayling: To ask the Prime Minister what matters in respect of United Kingdom assistance to Russia in its weapons dismantlement and nuclear materials management programmes were discussed in his meeting with President Putin in December 2001. [28538]

The Prime Minister: At our joint press conference, President Putin and I announced the signature of an agreement to provide £12 million to help destroy Russia's stock of chemical weapons.

I also said we hope this year to be in a position to complete agreement on assistance for the clean-up of nuclear submarines.

Staff (Terms of Employment)

Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister what the (a) date and period of appointment, (b) qualification and (c) status of the contract is of each person appointed to (i) the Forward Strategy Unit and (ii) the Performance and Innovation Unit. [28500]

The Prime Minister: Details of the terms of employment of individual members of staff are confidential.

SCOTLAND

Environmental Appraisals

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) when the last occasion was on which she requested an environmental appraisal before making a policy decision; [29039]

(2) how many environmental appraisals have been published by her Department since 1 January 2001; and if she will list the last four; [29038]

(3) what procedures her Department has to ensure environmental appraisals are undertaken prior to (a) administrative and (b) policy decisions being made; [29040]

(4) what plans her Department has to appraise the environmental implications of its Spending Review submission to the Treasury. [29041]

Mr. Foulkes: The Scotland Office is a small Government Department with limited programme expenditure and procurement capacity. It has therefore not been necessary for it to carry out any environmental appraisals since its establishment in July 1999. The Scotland Office's management board take environmental considerations into account as part of its normal decision-taking process, including its Spending Review submission to the Treasury.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many officials from her Department have attended the environmental appraisal and integration into policy training course run by the Civil Service College. [29042]

Mr. Foulkes: None.

Attendance Allowance

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what plans she has to make representations to the Department for Work and Pensions to reconsider its decision to withdraw attendance allowance to those recipients who will be entitled to receive free personal care in Scotland; [28954]

(2) if the Scottish Executive received the support of the Scotland Office in its recent dialogue with the Department for Work and Pensions and other Whitehall Departments on the subject of the payment of attendance allowance to those recipients who will be entitled to receive free personal care in Scotland; [28955]

(3) pursuant to her answer of 15 January 2002, Official Report, column 141, on the Barnett formula, what views of Whitehall were made clear to the Scottish Health Minister by her Office during the consideration by the care development review of the subject of the payment of attendance allowance to those recipients who will be entitled to receive free personal care in Scotland; [28956]

(4) what plans she has to make representations to the Department for Work and Pensions to secure the continued allocation to Scotland of the attendance allowance money withdrawn from recipients who will be entitled to receive free personal care; [28953]

(5) pursuant to her answer of 15 January 2002, Official Report, column 141, on the Barnett formula, which other Whitehall Departments were involved in the dialogue with the Scottish Executive and the Department for Work and Pensions on the subject of the payment of attendance allowance to those recipients who will be entitled to receive free personal care in Scotland. [28952]

Mr. Foulkes: The Scottish Executive, the Department for Work and Pensions, the Treasury and the Scotland Office had a number of discussions on this matter. These discussions were amicable. Throughout, it was recognised that decisions on care services are devolved and those on benefits are reserved. The Government have made it clear that they are not prepared to transfer resources in this area to the Scottish Executive. The Deputy Minister for Health and Community Care, Mr. Malcolm Chisholm, said on 15 January that the discussions were concluded and the matter would not be taken any further.

ADVOCATE-GENERAL

Human Reproductive Cloning Act

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Advocate-General, pursuant to her answer of 15 January 2002, Official Report, column 169W, under what powers the Human Reproductive Cloning Act 2001 was extended to Scotland. [28798]

The Advocate-General: The Human Reproductive Cloning Act 2001 is an Act of the United Kingdom Parliament. This Parliament can legislate on any subject for the whole of the United Kingdom. A United Kingdom Act applies to Scotland unless stated otherwise. As this Act is not expressly restricted in its extent it applies to Scotland. The subject matter of the Act is in any case reserved to the United Kingdom Parliament by section J3 of schedule 5 to the Scotland Act 1998.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Church of England Children's Society

36. Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, what representations the Church Commissioners have made to the Church of England Children's Society in respect of its decision to cease its activities in Wales. [26158]

Mr. Bell: The Church Commissioners' primary legal responsibility is to manage their assets for the financial support of the Church of England's serving and retired ministry. It would not fall to the Commissioners to make any such representations.

Clergy Pensions

37. Bob Spink: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, how much was paid by the Church Commissioners for clergy pensions in the last financial year; and what the estimate is for the current financial year. [26159]

Mr. Bell: In the year ended 31 December 2000, the Commissioners paid £90.6 million for clergy pensions and a further £11.3 million in transitional relief to offset dioceses' costs under the new pensions scheme. The Commissioners also paid pension contributions for bishops and cathedral clergy totalling £1.0 million.

According to the latest estimate for the year ending 31 December 2001 the Commissioners expect to pay £94.1 million for past service clergy pensions and contribute £7.2 million to dioceses in transitional relief. Pension contributions for bishops and cathedral clergy are estimated to be £1.1 million.

Clergy Safety

38. Mr. Hoyle: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, what financial provision is made for improving the personal safety of the clergy on working duty. [26160]

Mr. Bell: Financial provision for improving the personal security of the clergy is largely the responsibility of the dioceses. The Church Commissioners offer guidance on security aspects of parsonage house design.

The Archbishops' Council is currently making inquiries of dioceses about the measures they have in place. Early replies show that local police forces have provided training for clergy on how to recognise and deal with potentially difficult circumstances and that diocesan surveyors are giving renewed attention to the security of parsonage houses.

Clergy Pay

39. Mr. Drew: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, if he will make a statement on clergy pay and pensions. [26162]

Mr. Bell: The National Stipend Benchmark for clergy of incumbent status with effect from 1 April 2002 is £17,420, an increase of 3 per cent. on the previous year. The full service pension from 1 April 2002 will be £10,693.

Consultations are currently taking place with dioceses about stipend levels and pensions arrangements. Proposals for change will be discussed by the General Synod in November. Further details can be found in the Central Stipends Authority's forthcoming report for 2001, a copy of which will be placed in the Library.

Churches (VAT)

Ms Walley: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, what is the estimated take-up of VAT concessions by churches with listed building status; and what guidance has been issued to assist eligible churches to claim. [27373]

Mr. Bell: This scheme is a Government initiative and responsibility rests with the Department for Culture, Media and Sport. I understand that the scheme contractor, reporting to the Department, has issued well over 1,000 application forms since the scheme was launched in December last year. The Department has publicised the scheme which includes information available on the internet. The Church of England has issued publicity to parishes and dioceses about the scheme, including contact details for the scheme contractor.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Fraud

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the President of the Council what estimate his Department has made of the cost to its budget since 1 May 1997 of fraud; and if he will make a statement. [27304]

Mr. Robin Cook: No fraud has been recorded in the Privy Council Office during this period.

Public Relations Consultants

Mr. Bercow: To ask the President of the Council how much was spent by (a) his Department and (b) bodies for which it is responsible on external public relations consultants in each of the last four years. [27393]

Mr. Robin Cook: None. My Department is not responsible for any other bodies.

Departmental Sickness Absence

Mr. Bercow: To ask the President of the Council if he will commission and publish an independent report on the reasons for the level of sickness absence in his Department. [26967]

Mr. Robin Cook: I have no plans to do so.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Register of Members' Interests

Lady Hermon: To ask the President of the Council if he will support an amendment to the rules governing the Register of Members' Interests to oblige all Members to make entries within three months of being elected. [25255]

Mr. Robin Cook: This is a matter for the House. We would consider carefully any views Members put forward.

Equitable Life

Mr. Letwin: To ask the President of the Council if the pension scheme for hon. Members will benefit from special arrangements vis-à-vis transferring out of Equitable Life. [28851]

Mr. Robin Cook: Equitable Life is one of the providers appointed to provide an Additional Voluntary Contribution (AVC) facility for members of the Parliamentary Contributory Pension Fund (PCPF). This appointment is made and overseen by the Trustees of the PCPF. I understand that the Trustees have sought clarification from Equitable Life of the terms that will apply if members wish to transfer their funds out of the with-profits fund. The Trustees expect shortly to advise members of the terms offered, so that they can decide whether or not to transfer their funds.

Office Costs Allowance

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the President of the Council how many staff paid from the office costs allowance have full time contracts and claim (a) below £15,000, (b) between £15,000 and £20,000, (c) between £20,000 and £25,000, (d) between £25,000 and £30,000 and (e) above £30,000 a year at the latest date for which figures are available; if he will break down these figures to indicate whether the person holds (i) a secretarial personal assistant post and (ii) a research post; and how many people in each pay band are spouses or of the Member's immediate family. [24379]

Mr. Robin Cook: The information requested on pay levels and job titles, and whether staff are part-time or full-time is not at present readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The Fees Office do not record whether Members' employees are spouses or family members.

Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards

Peter Bottomley (Worthing, West): To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, which recent letters to the Commission from the Commissioner for Standards have not been published to hon. Members. [25062]

Mr. Kirkwood [pursuant to his reply, 15 January 2002, c. 152–53]: Following a request from the Committee on Standards and Privileges, the Commission has decided to release recent correspondence between Mr. Speaker and the Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards. I will place copies in the Library.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Ministerial Properties

Mr. Collins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the properties used by Ministers for (a) residential and (b) business purposes that are owned by Government organisations. [28280]

The Deputy Prime Minister and First Secretary of State: The official residential properties used by Ministers are as follows:

The flats above Nos. 10 and 11 Downing street;

The flat in 1 Carlton Gardens;

Flats 1, 2 and 3 in Admiralty house;

Government House in Pimlico.

Accommodation in Hillsborough Castle is available for the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland and other Northern Ireland Ministers while on duty in Northern Ireland.

The Lord Chancellor has an official residence in the House of Lords which is provided in his capacity as Speaker of the House of Lords. The running costs are met by the House of Lords authorities and do not fall to the Government.

In addition, Chequers, Dorneywood, Chevening, none of which is owned by the Government, are also available to the Prime Minister, me, as Deputy Prime Minister and First Secretary of State, the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the Foreign Secretary at no cost to the public purse.

Properties used by Ministers for departmental purposes are set out in the List of Ministerial Responsibilities. A copy of the List is in the Library of the House and is available on-line on the Cabinet Office website.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Environmental Appraisals

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when the last occasion was on which she requested an environmental appraisal before making a policy decision. [29014]

Clare Short: As answers to parliamentary questions 29013 and 29015 make clear, environmental appraisal is built in as part of the normal project or programme management cycle. Therefore environmental issues would routinely have been fully discussed before policy decisions are made.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans her Department has to appraise the environmental implications of its Spending Review submission to the Treasury. [29016]

Clare Short: Our approach to the Spending Review and our Public Service Agreement is driven by our commitment to the millennium development goals. One of these goals is to ensure environmental sustainability. We therefore seek to integrate environmental considerations into all aspects of our policy and expenditure.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many officials from her Department have attended the environmental appraisal and integration into policy training course run by the Civil Service College. [29017]

Clare Short: No one from the Department for International Development has attended the environmental appraisal and integration into policy training course run by the Civil Service College.

Over the past three years DFID has delivered its own environmental awareness training which has been delivered in both the UK and overseas offices to over 250 staff.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what procedures her Department has to ensure environmental appraisals are undertaken prior to (a) administrative and (b) policy decisions being made. [29015]

Clare Short: It is a mandatory requirement that all policies, programmes and projects are subject to environmental screening at the concept note stage. Screening aims to ensure that environmental issues are taken into consideration at the earliest opportunity and to initiate, where appropriate, more comprehensive environmental appraisal and, if necessary, a full environmental impact assessment.

In 1999, DFID produced an environmental guide. It emphasises that environmental appraisal is concerned just as much with identifying environmental opportunities for improving development outcomes as it is with identifying environmental risks. It also stresses that environmental appraisal is applicable at policy and programme levels as well as at the project level. The guide complements the more detailed 1996 Manual of Environmental Appraisal.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many environmental appraisals have been published by her Department since 1 January 2001; and if she will list the last four. [29013]

Clare Short: DFID's regular environmental appraisal procedures are described in response to PQ 2127. It is mandatory within DFID that policies, programmes and projects are subject to environmental screening at the concept stage, with further environmental appraisal to identify risks and opportunities being conducted as required. This work then becomes an integral part of the project documentation, which although not formally published, can be made available to the public on a case by case basis.

In situations where the environmental screening reveals the need for a formal environmental impact assessment (EIA), the assessment will be undertaken by consultants for the national government of the partner country, with funding and, if necessary, additional international technical assistance from DFID. Publication of the EIA is the responsibility of the partner Government, in accordance with their legislation.

Examples of formal EIAs since January 2001 include:

Ngamiland veterinary fences, Government of Botswana, March 2001.

Impacts of Tsetse Fly Control in Okavango, May 2001.

Strategic Environmental Assessment for the "Rehabilitation of Feeder Roads in 9 Districts", Ghana Department of Feeder Roads, July 2001.

Terms of Reference for full EIA of Gerald's Park Airstrip, Government of Montserrat, January 2002.

DFID development spending has increasingly focused upon resource transfers to sectoral and general budgets. There has therefore been a corresponding decrease in infrastructure work requiring a formal EIA.

In addition, as part of DFID's commitment to green housekeeping, environmental appraisals were undertaken for the relocation of the DFID London HQ; the consolidation of four DFID offices into one in Delhi, India; and environmental audit was voluntarily undertaken of the DFID Caribbean office; and the DFID Uganda office is to commence an audit in February 2002.

Foreign Aid

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much foreign aid was given by the UK Government to (a) Israel and (b) the Palestinians in the last three years. [27433]

Clare Short: The information is as follows:

(a) Israel is a prosperous country that does not need or require our development assistance.

(b) The people of the West Bank and Gaza and Palestinian refugees are suffering considerable poverty, and are in need of development assistance. We have disbursed through our bilateral programme to the West Bank and Gaza Strip £5.2 million, £8 million, and £9 million in the last three financial years. We have also contributed £3.4 million, £13 million, and £18.7 million to the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestinian Refugees during the same period. In addition we contribute 5 per cent. of the World bank's resources (about £13 million since 1994), and 17 per cent. of the European Commission's development budget (about £30 million in 2001) to the Palestinians.

Theft and Fraud

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what her estimate is of the cost of theft and fraud to (a) her Department, (b) its agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies in each of the last four years. [27978]

Clare Short: The estimated cost to DFID's budget of theft and fraud in the period 1 April 1997 to 31 March 2001 is some £250,000 of which £175,000 can be attributed to contractor fraud. Of the remaining sum, £22,000 relates to the theft of assets which, in line with Treasury guidance, has been classified as involving departmental staff either directly or through collusion. Details of suspected or proven fraud are provided to the Treasury on an annual basis. The annual report that the Treasury prepares on fraud is deposited in the Libraries of both Houses.

Kenya

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what investigations the World bank has undertaken to ensure that senior members of the Government of Kenya and their family members have not laundered money through (a) the City of London and (b) Switzerland. [29119]

Clare Short: It is not within the remit of the World bank to undertake such investigations.

Zimbabwe

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what proportion of the money committed for development assistance in Zimbabwe has already been spent. [28416]

Clare Short: DFID plans to provide up to £18 million in development assistance for the 2001–02 financial year. This figure has been fully committed. Over £10 million has already been spent.

Lost/Stolen Property

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list those items valued at more than £50 which have been stolen or lost from her Department in each of the last four years. [28005]

Clare Short: Since 1 April 1997 the following items have been stolen or lost from DFID:

14 laptop computers with a total value of £15,732. The value of each piece of equipment ranges from £730 to £1,642. Computer chips (£1,100), computer equipment (£8,500), one video camera (value unknown), one calculator (£108), one notebook computer (£1,880) and two mobile telephones (£250).

Sudan

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on her recent visit to the Sudan; and what recent discussions she has had with the Sudanese authorities on the implementation of a strategy for peace in that country. [27342]

Clare Short: I visited Sudan from 6–11 January and discussed the possibility of taking forward the peace process with the full range of Sudanese political leaders, north and south. I concluded that the time was right for a major international effort to help the parties resolve Africa's most costly and longest running civil conflict. All whom I met expressed their strong commitment to progress on peace, agreed that there was a window of opportunity and expressed their willingness to engage in negotiations. But all doubted they would succeed, given the legacy of mistrust, without outside help, which they thought should include major UK input. I confirmed that we stood ready to play our part. I also emphasised the potential economic benefits for all, and UK readiness to engage in development if stability can be achieved.

Ministerial Transport

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when she last used the railway service in connection with her official duties; what station she left from and what was the destination; and whether it is her intention to make greater use of the railways in future. [28101]

Clare Short: I last used the railway service on official duty when I took the Eurostar leaving Waterloo International for a meeting of the Development Ministers of Europe in Brussels on 8 December.

The majority of my work outside London is overseas. However I make use of the railway service if it is the quickest way to a destination.

International Aid

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make education a higher priority within the international aid budget. [27864]

Clare Short: Education is a precondition of development and poverty reduction and is given high priority within our development assistance programme. The Government are strongly committed to achieving the millennium development goals of universal primary education (UPE) in all countries by the year 2015 and gender equity in primary and secondary schooling by 2005. DFID's education strategy paper, "The Challenge of Universal Primary Education", sets out our overall approach and three-fold strategy for achieving these goals. Our recent paper "Children out of School" identifies the different circumstances of children who are not in school and proposes an eight-point plan of international action for accelerating progress towards the 2015 target.

European Commission Payments

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions she has had with the European Commission on delays in payments of money owed by the commission to charities and NGOs. [28879]

Clare Short: Delays in payments by the European Commission to NGOs have been discussed on many occasions by member states, including the UK, and the commission. We and others have urged the commission to take the steps needed to improve the handling of such payments since the delays are often excessive and cause real hardship to the organisations and individuals concerned. The commission has improved the management systems used to process those payments and we understand that the delays have been reduced but remain of concern. This is also the case with many payments for implementation of EC programmes in developing countries, where we are also promoting reform. We stay in close touch with UK NGOs about this issue and will continue to monitor the position with them.

Education Charges

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action she will take to secure the abolition of education charges in developing countries. [27865]

Clare Short: The Government are committed to the principle that primary education should be made free. No child should be denied access to a basic education because the costs, direct or indirect, cannot be met by the household. School fees are an example of a direct cost, but there may be indirect charges for books, uniforms and exams which can make education unaffordable to many.

The equitable financing of education is a key issue for achieving universal primary education by 2015. Governments of developing countries need to demonstrate the political commitment to abolish education charges. The abolition of primary tuition fees in Malawi and Uganda, brought about by strong political leadership, resulted in enrolment increases of up to 3 million in Uganda and 1.9 million in Malawi. The impact was greatest on the enrolment of girls. Education budgets for proving effective primary education for all should be developed within national poverty reduction strategies and factor in the costs of introducing free primary education.

In our dialogue with partner Governments, civil society and the international community on poverty reduction and education sector programmes, we will continue to argue for the reduction of the financial barriers that exclude large numbers of the poorest children.

CDC

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) when she expects CDC, formerly the Commonwealth Development Corporation, to meet its target of 50 per cent. of its investment in Africa and poorer countries in Asia; [27701]

(2) which Minister is responsible for the CDC, formerly the Commonwealth Development Corporation; [27700]

(3) whether CDC, formerly the Commonwealth Development Corporation, submits an annual corporate plan for ministerial approval. [27702]

Clare Short: I am the Minister responsible for CDC. CDC have an investment policy set by Government, which provides the framework within which the board formulates its business plans. The Government do not require these plans to be submitted for approval by Ministers. CDC met the investment policy target for sub-Saharan Africa and South Asia in 2001, when 52 per cent. of the aggregate cost of its investments were for the benefit of these countries.

Market Research

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what expenditure has been incurred by her (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies in each of the last four years on (i) opinion polling, (ii) focus groups and (iii) other forms of market research; and if she will list the surveys commissioned and the purpose of each. [27946]

Clare Short: Expenditure in relation to surveys of public attitudes is as follows:

1997–98	43
1999–2000	45
2000–01	58
2001–02	35

Surveys commissioned

Public Attitudes on Development, conducted by the Office for National Statistics, surveys conducted in July 1999, 2000 and 2001 and results published in November 1999, 2000, November 2001 respectively.

Attitudes of School Children to International Development, conducted by MORI Schools Omnibus Research, published in July 2000 and 2001.

In addition we conducted a readership survey in 2000 of "Developments Magazine" in order to test the impact and reach of the magazine.

We are committed to regular monitoring of public and young people's attitudes to development in order to inform and monitor the impact of the public education work of the Department. All the aforementioned reports are accessible through the Department's internet site and copies have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

None of our current non-department public bodies have incurred expenditure in relation to opinion bodies and/or focus groups.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Crime Statistics (Wales)

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many recorded crimes for (a) violence against the person, (b) sexual offences, (c) robbery, (d) burglary in a dwelling, (e) theft of a motor vehicle and (f) theft from a vehicle per 1,000 population there were in (i) Wales and (ii) the Cynon Valley in the last 12 months. [26870]

Mr. Denham: The latest available information covers the 12 months to March 2001 and is given in the table. Separate figures are not available centrally for the Cynon Valley area, which comes within the Rhondda Cynon Taff police Basic Command Unit (BCU). The BCU figures are taken from the Home Office Statistical Bulletin no. 12/01 "Recorded Crime England and Wales, 12 Months to March 2001", which gives details of all BCU and Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnership areas in England and Wales.

Recorded crimes per 1,000 population for Wales and the Rhondda Cynon Taff basic command unit, April 2000 to March 2001:

	Wales	Rhonnda Cynon Taff BCU
Violence against the person	13.0	8.3
Sexual offences	0.6	0.3
Robbery	0.3	0.2
Burglary in a dwelling	4.1	5.2
Theft of a motor vehicle	6.1	7.4
Theft from a vehicle	8.8	6.5

Fraud

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate his Department has made of the cost to its budget since 1 May 1997 of fraud; and if he will make a statement. [27302]

Mr. Blunkett: The estimated costs of losses to the Home Office from reported fraud is summarised in the table.

Accounting periods	Estimated fraud
1997–98	13
1998–99	84
1999–2000	140
2000–01	90
Total	327

Anti-terrorism Legislation

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the part police forces will play in the implementation of the new anti-terrorism legislation. [16882]

Mr. Blunkett [holding answer 22 November 2001]: The police will be at the forefront of the legislation's implementation and additional police powers included in the new legislation will enhance their capability to enforce the law effectively. I am in close contact with the police over on-going action to counter terrorism, using both the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 and existing legislation.

Remuneration

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the number of individuals in his (a) Department, (b) related agencies and (c) related non-departmental public bodies whose annual remuneration including benefits in kind exceeded (i) £100,000 and (ii) £200,000 in each of the last four years. [26314]

Mr. Blunkett: The annual remuneration costs including benefits in kind cover basic salary, bonuses and any additional allowances payable including recruitment and retention and any allowance's payable as a result of relocation costs.

(a) The number of individuals within the Home Office receiving remuneration costs exceeding (i) £100,000 and (ii) £200,000, was:

	(i) £100,000	(ii) £200,000
1 April 2001	7	0
1 April 2000	3	0
1 April 1999	2	0
1 April 1998	1	0

(b) The number of individual within the related agencies of the Home Office receiving remuneration costs exceeding (i) £100,000 and (ii) £200,000 was:

	(i) £100,000	(ii) £200,000
1 April 2001	4	0
1 April 2000	2	0
1 April 1999	2	0
1 April 1998	1	0

(c) The information requested relating to remuneration levels in related non-departmental public bodies is available in the annual Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies".

Drugs

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many heroin addicts are on the methadone programme in (a) Scotland, (b) England, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland; what the financial cost is of the programme in each country; and how many deaths have occurred while addicts are on a methadone programme in each country in each of the last three years. [23878]

Ms Blears: I have been asked to reply.

Since the Home Office addicts index closed in 1997, the regional drug misuse databases (RDMDs) have been the main source of information on persons presenting to drug treatment services with a drug problem. During the six month period ending 30 September 2000, around 21,200 people were reported to the RDMDs in England as presenting for treatment, with heroin recorded as their main drug of misuse. Around 6,200 of these people were reported as being prescribed methadone for treatment at the time they presented; other heroin users may subsequently have been prescribed methadone.

In terms of financial costs, in 2001 the net ingredient cost (the basic cost of the drug, excluding dispensing cost, fees or prescription charges income) of methadone for use in substance dependence is £6.87 per preparation.

The number of deaths in England and Wales where methadone was mentioned on death certificates in 1999 were 298.

Information relating to Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland is a matter for the devolved Assemblies.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Access Land

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects to begin consultation on proposals for regulations on the dedication of access land under section 16 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000. [29577]

Alun Michael: I have today published a consultation paper which sets out the Government's proposals for regulations on the dedication of access land under section 16 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000. The regulations, which we expect to lay before Parliament later this year, will enable the owner of any land, or a lessee with a long lease, to irrevocably dedicate that land for public access. The Forestry Commission has already announced its intention in principle to dedicate the national forestry estate under section 16.

I am also writing today to Green Minister colleagues about the considerable scope for dedication of land held by Government Departments and sponsored non-departmental public bodies, where dedication is compatible with the purpose for which the land is held. We will work with other Departments to explore the opportunities for dedication through the Framework for Sustainable Development on the Government Estate.

Copies of the consultation paper are being sent to organisations representing local authorities, recreational users and land managers, and others with an interest; the consultation paper is also being published on the DEFRA website. A copy of the consultation paper has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament.

Foot and Mouth

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has received from the (a) Youth Hostels Association and (b) the British Trust for Conservation Volunteers about financial losses caused by the foot and mouth crisis; what proposals she has to compensate these organisations; and if she will make a statement. [26230]

Alun Michael: I have corresponded with the Youth Hostels Association and met their Chairman and Chief Executive, as has my hon. Friend the Minister for Tourism, Film and Broadcasting I have also received around 200 letters from hon. Members on behalf of constituents concerned about the impact on the YHA's income of foot and mouth disease and the measures taken to control it. The YHA estimate that they lost £5 million 2001 out of an annual income of £30 million.

I have also met representatives from the British Trust for Conservation Volunteers and discussed the impact of foot and mouth disease on their activities. I understand that the losses they suffered are in the region of £250,000 out of an annual income in the order of £23 million.

I am well aware of the impact that foot and mouth disease had on a range of charities, especially those involved in promoting countryside access. The measures we put in place to help affected businesses were mainly focused on small businesses, and were not well adapted to helping national organisations such as the YHA or BTCV. During later stages we modified the guidelines for the Business recovery fund to clarify that charities' individual business units may be treated as separate business entities and may receive assistance in their own right if their applications meet the fund's other criteria. Charities may also benefit from rate relief granted by local authorities (for which we raised the rate of central subsidy from 75 per cent. to 95 or 98 per cent. in rural areas) and from the deferral of tax payments due. We have also put a lot of effort into encouraging local authorities into reopening footpaths as soon as possible to attract visitors back to the countryside, and put extra resources into tourism promotion via the British Tourist Authority and English Tourism Council.

I accept that the help available is modest compared with the losses that organisations such as the YHA have suffered. It is not possible to provide compensation to charities for loss of income, any more than to farming or non-farming businesses affected by the disease and by the measures to control it. As explained in "England's Rural Future" published on 13 December, we are looking urgently and sympathetically at further measures to help charities—especially those involved in promoting countryside access—to recover from the impact of foot and mouth disease.

Rural Development Plan

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what role national park authorities in England will have in delivery of the rural development plan; and what additional resources will be made available by her Department for the authorities concerned. [26897]

Alun Michael: National park authorities make a significant contribution to the operation of the National Rural Development Programme (ERDP), not least through participation in the national and regional consultation groups which advise on the strategic direction of the programme. National park authorities are also encouraged to work with DEFRA's Rural Development Service to ensure that effective delivery of the ERDP contributes to the aims and objectives of national parks. The national park authorities also play a positive role in encouraging uptake of the agri-environment schemes which now form part of the ERDP. In particular they can use their detailed knowledge of the parks to ensure that the Countryside Stewardship Scheme is utilised positively and appropriately within the individual parks.

Birds of Prey

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to increase the number of British birds of prey. [26061]

Mr. Meacher: All wild bird populations (including birds of prey) are included in the wild bird population indicator, which is one of the 15 headline indicators of sustainable development. These indicators are a "quality of life barometer" measuring everyday concerns like health, jobs and air quality.

Populations of birds of prey have increased as a result of better protection from persecution and restrictions on the use of persistent pesticides.

There are three projects aimed at increasing the population of a bird of prey species:

1. The Red Kite Reintroduction Programme
2. The Hen Harrier Recovery Project
3. The 'Wash Harriers' Recovery Project.

Although these projects are focused primarily on individual species, their overall objectives are far wider. The work involves tackling problems that affect a range of different birds of prey, and in so doing, contributing to recovery in their populations or at least to maintaining populations.

English Nature are also involved with the Osprey reintroduction project that has been undertaken at Rutland Water in central England.

Environmental Appraisals

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many published environmental appraisals have been notified to the Sustainable Development Unit since February 2001; and by which Departments. [27536]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 16 January 2002]: The Third Annual Report on Greening Government, published in November 2001, included a list of published environmental appraisals up to 31 March 2001. This can be found in Part 1 of the report at www.sustainable-development.gov.uk. We have been notified of the following published environmental appraisals in the period since:

	Number
Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs	2
Export Credit Guarantee Department	1
Inland Revenue	1

The table may not, however, give the complete picture of the extent of environmental appraisal undertaken by Departments as it only covers published free-standing environmental appraisals.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what action she has taken, pursuant to the recommendation of the Environmental Audit Committee to ensure that departmental environmental appraisals assess the impact of competing options. [27543]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 16 January 2002]: This recommendation was included in the EAC's assessment of the First Annual Report of the Green Ministers Committee. In our Second Annual Report, all Departments made commitments to: maintain a record of the outcome of each screening they undertake; publish all free-standing environmental appraisals of policies unless there are overriding reasons for not doing so; and to produce their own guidance or training on screening of options by March 2001. The onus is on individual Departments to ensure they are operating these procedures properly, in particular getting their approach to the initial screening of policies for environmental impacts right.

The Third Annual Report on Greening Government, published in November 2001, reported that Departments, where applicable, had systems in place to maintain a record of environmental screenings and had produced guidance or training on the screening of options. Detailed information on the systems in place in each Department can be found in Part 2 of the report at www.sustainable-development.gov.uk.

Air Pollution

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress has been made in Buckinghamshire towards meeting the National Air Quality Strategy targets. [27788]

Mr. Meacher: National and local air quality modelling suggests that the objectives prescribed in the Air Quality Strategy will all be met across all of Buckinghamshire with the following two main exceptions:

1. There is a risk that the nitrogen dioxide annual objective may not be met alongside parts of the M40 motorway. Wycombe district council has declared an air quality management area between junctions 3 and 5 of the M40, and is carrying out further modelling and monitoring in this area which is due to be completed by 31 July 2002.
2. There is a risk that the national ozone objective may not be met across parts of Buckinghamshire. The Air Quality Strategy sets out the actions that are being taken at national and international level to tackle this issue, since, because of its transboundary nature with major contributions from outside the UK, ozone is a pollutant over which local authorities have little control.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many air pollution (a) passive diffusion tubes and (b) automatic monitoring sites were based in Buckinghamshire in each year since 1977. [27789]

Mr. Meacher: There are passive nitrogen dioxide diffusion tubes sites in the UK network in Aylesbury and Milton Keynes. Both towns have four sites each, which have been running since 1993. DEFRA has not funded any automatic monitoring sites based in Buckinghamshire at any time since 1977.

In addition to these, each of the three local authorities in Buckinghamshire operates its own network of air quality monitors. Details of these are not held centrally.

	Eaga Partnership	TXU Warm Front	Total
HEES budget 2001–02[1] (£ million)	139	54	193
Percentage of budget already spent	65	67	—
Percentage likely to be spent by year end	100	100	—

[1] The budget for 2001–02 includes the moneys not used in the previous financial year

The scheme managers have sufficient resources to meet demand in this financial year. The major difficulty that they continue to face is the national shortage of gas heating engineers. Both scheme managers continue to recruit installers and thereby improve the quality of service provided to householders.

Landfill Tax Credit Scheme

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the EU funding that would be lost if the landfill tax credit scheme were to be redefined as public instead of private money. [15946]

Mr. Meacher: None. However, I understand that two studies are currently looking into this issue. One from Glasgow Caledonian University commissioned by ENTRUST, the LTCS regulator, and an Environmental Bodies Council (ebco) survey.

We have recently announced that we will be consulting later this year on possible changes to the existing scheme. We expect the issue of EU funding will be raised during this consultation.

Home Energy Efficiency

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what was the total budget for the warm front schemes in the (a) Eaga area and (b) eastern area during 2001–02; and (i) how much and (ii) what percentage of these budgets (1) has already been spent and (2) is projected to be spent by the end of the year given present trends; and what measures Eaga and eastern are expected to take to bring budgets back into line if they are depleted before the end of the year. [25354]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 9 January 2002]: The home energy efficiency scheme (HEES), now marketed as the warm front team, is administered by two scheme managers, TXU Warm Front Ltd. (responsible for the eastern, east midlands and Yorkshire and the Humber) and Eaga Partnership Ltd. (responsible for the rest of England). The table provides the information requested.

David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how the Government are helping to promote more energy efficient homes; and how many people in the Midlothian constituency have benefited from this. [27182]

Mr. Meacher: The Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs is responsible for energy efficiency in England. In Scotland, and therefore for Midlothian this is a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

The Government are committed to energy efficiency for its significant environmental, business and social benefits and have announced a range of policies to promote energy efficiency and reduce emissions in the domestic sector, including:

A new Energy Efficiency Commitment (EEC) for 2002–05 will place an obligation on gas and electricity suppliers to make energy efficiency improvements, through measures provided to domestic consumers.

The Energy Saving Trust promotes the sustainable and efficient use of energy in the domestic sector. The trust is also active in encouraging local authorities to develop and improve domestic energy efficiency.

New Building Regulations to come into effect from April 2002 will include improved standards of energy efficiency for new houses and those undergoing refurbishment.

The new home energy efficiency scheme (HEES) is designed to tackle fuel poverty among those most vulnerable to cold-related ill health. Access to the scheme is through receipt of a qualifying income or disability related benefit. By 2004, HEES is expected to have assisted some 800,000 householders.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many houses in (a) the UK and (b) Wales lack (i) insulation and (ii) draught-proofing; and what measures the Government are taking to lower this figure. [25626]

Mr. Meacher: As fuel poverty is a devolved matter, it is the responsibility of the respective Parliament and Assemblies to comment on the situation in their countries.

The information is set out in respect of England:

Insulation of households in England 1999

Households	Number
With no insulation[1]	2,600,000
Without full insulation[2]	18,100,000
With no draught-proofing[3]	4,400,000
Without full draught-proofing[4]	7,290,000
Total	20,800,000

[1] No insulation is taken to mean the following: no loft insulation (where there is a loft); no cavity insulation (if there is a cavity wall); no double glazing.

[2] Full insulation is taken to mean the following: at least four inches of loft insulation (where there is a loft); cavity walls insulated (where there are cavity walls); at least 80 per cent. of windows double glazed.

[3] Double glazing is taken to include draught proofing.

[4] Full draught-proofing is taken to mean 80 per cent. or more of rooms draught-proofed.

The Government's main programme for private sector households in England is the home energy efficiency scheme (HEES), marketed as the warm front team, which is designed to tackle fuel poverty among those most vulnerable to cold related ill health—older householders, families with children and the disabled or those with long term illness. The scheme provides grants for a package of insulation and heating improvements. Separate programmes are in place to bring social sector housing up to a decent standard.

The Government have recently set a target of 62 fuel-standardised terawatt hours for improvements in energy efficiency to be achieved by electricity and gas suppliers under the Energy Efficiency Commitment for 2002 to 2005 (EEC). Suppliers' EEC programmes are expected to include significant numbers of insulation measures.

The Government also provide funding to the Energy Saving Trust to run a wide ranging programme of work to promote energy efficiency in homes. This includes promotion of cavity wall insulation and draught-proofing via advertising, advice centres and a database of available grants.

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what is the average installation cost of an Eaga central heating system in the (a) north-west and (b) UK. [22898]

Mr. Meacher: The two scheme managers, Eaga and TXU Warm Front Ltd., are responsible for recruiting heating contractors through an open tender in accordance with the UK Public Procurement Regulations. At present they are in the process of re-tendering contracts for the next two years. Therefore it is not possible to publish the current average installation prices without seriously distorting this tender process.

However the average cost of providing a central heating system together with appropriate insulation is some £2,000.

As fuel poverty is a devolved matter, it is the responsibility of the respective Parliament and Assemblies to comment on the situation in Scotland and Wales.

Take-back Schemes

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the number of domestic appliance retailers who will cease take-back schemes because of a lack of recycling and processing facilities for domestic appliances containing CFCs and HCFCs. [27611]

Mr. Meacher: It is estimated that virtually all retailers have ceased their take-back schemes for fridges and freezers. However, this is not due to a lack of a disposal route. Fridges and freezers collected from householders may be re-used, disposed of via high temperature incineration in the UK, exported for recycling in other member states, or stored pending recycling in the UK.

Refrigerators

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what storage facilities she has identified for the storage of fridges and deep freezers containing CFCs prior to their reprocessing. [27608]

Mr. Meacher: The location of storage facilities is a matter for the waste management industry and local authorities. A number of companies and local authorities have identified suitable storage facilities and I understand that sufficient capacity is available for all fridges and freezers that would be disposed of in a typical year.

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what advice she has given to local authorities regarding the increased cost of collecting domestic appliances containing CFCs from 1 January; and when she plans to announce additional resources to be made available to local authorities under the New Burdens Procedures; [27609]

(2) what estimate she has made of additional costs to local authorities of collecting white goods from 1 January. [27610]

Mr. Meacher: In December we announced a payment of £6 million funding for local authorities to cover their costs until March 2002. We are continuing to assess the impacts of the regulation and will determine what further action is required beyond that. As part of this process, my officials are in contact with local authorities and their representatives to gather additional information about costs.

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimates she has made of the cost to local authorities per refrigerator of the collection, storage and processing of CFC-containing refrigerators. [27607]

Mr. Meacher: Collection costs will vary between local authorities and waste collection authorities may levy a charge to cover the costs of collection. I understand that the current charges levied by waste management companies for storage and processing of fridges are in the range of £22 to £35, but that these are likely to fall once more plants are operational. We expect new plants to come on-line in the spring.

Many local authorities will choose to store fridges until prices are lower. The cost of storage will depend on whether local authorities have suitable land available, and the period for which fridges are stored.

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if it was her policy to ensure that liquid processing facilities existed for the processing of CFC-containing refrigerators and refrigerators when EC Regulation 2037/2000 came into force on the 1 January. [27612]

Mr. Meacher: The UK only received clarification of the requirements of the regulation with regards to ozone depleting substances in insulation foam in June 2001. As soon as this was received, officials worked, with stakeholders, on a package of measures, including funding for local authorities, technical standards for removal of ODS from fridges and standards for storage pending treatment. This package enabled companies to make the necessary investment decisions. Given the extremely tight time scale, it was always unlikely that processing plant would come on-line for 1 January. However, I understand that the first new plant is likely to be operational in spring 2002.

Waste Refrigeration Equipment (Scotland)

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has had with Scottish Ministers regarding managing waste refrigeration equipment in Scotland. [26715]

Mr. Meacher: None. However, my officials have been working closely on this issue with colleagues in the Devolved Administrations.

GM Crops

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her policy is on a five-year moratorium on genetically engineered crops. [20356]

Mr. Meacher: European Union Directive 90/220 lays down strict controls on the release of genetically modified (GM) organisms. It requires proposed releases to be considered on a case-by-case basis, with a detailed assessment of the potential risks to human health and the environment. The Government agree with this approach. At the same time, we have a voluntary agreement with the industry that GM crops will not be grown here commercially at least until the results of the Farm Scale Evaluations have been assessed.

Sewerage Services

Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how many residential properties in (a) the UK and (b) Sheffield, Hillsborough were newly connected to mains sewerage in the last 12 months for which figures are available; and how many residential properties in the constituency of Sheffield, Hillsborough remain unconnected; [23922]

(2) how many residential properties in the UK were not connected to mains sewerage in (a) 1980, (b) 1990 and (c) 2000. [23921]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 18 December 2001]: The information requested is not available. We do not hold any figures about the type or number of properties connected or not connected to mains sewers. Water UK publish data annually about the UK water industry. They estimate that 6 per cent. of the population in the UK are not connected to mains sewerage. They do not have data for 1980 or 1990.

Water Sports

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what action she intends to take on the research report, "Water-based Sport and Recreation: The Facts" commissioned by her Department; and if she will make a statement. [27855]

Alun Michael: Officials will be meeting the other sponsors of the research (British Waterways, the Countryside Agency, the Countryside Council for Wales, the Environment Agency and Sport England) shortly, along with other interested Government Departments to consider what action we need to take in the light of the reports findings.

Village Halls

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has in relation to the funding of village halls. [28874]

Alun Michael: Village halls are funded in a variety of ways, most of the sources of finance being very local in nature. DEFRA has inherited a small funding stream for aid to village halls, while currently there are no plans to alter the way in which the Department assists the funding of village halls through the Countryside Agency.

We are supporting local communities and parish and town councils in a variety of ways which complement the work of village halls. Currently, the Village Halls Loan Fund is administered by Action with Communities in Rural England (ACRE) on behalf of the Countryside Agency and can provide loans towards capital improvements such as maintenance, extensions or rebuilding costs. The total loan fund value is £700,000 and £244,000 has been loaned out to date this year.

In addition, the Countryside Agency can offer help through the Community Service Grants Scheme delivered through the Vital Villages Programme. It can help fund an alteration/extension of a village hall or other community building where it provides a new or extended service to the community.

Other sources of public funding for village halls include local authorities, regional development agencies, the community fund and the sports council.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measurements are made of the radiation above background level around intermediate and high level nuclear waste storage facilities at Sellafield and Dounreay. [25895]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 15 January 2002]: Measurements of all major types of radiation in the environment around the Sellafield site are undertaken routinely by BNFL, the Environment Agency and the Foods Standards Agency[1]. The data are published annually in respective environmental monitoring reports. The measurements cover the marine and terrestrial environments and reflect both present and past operations on site. It is not possible to identify separately monitoring data relating specifically to waste storage facilities from those relating to other operations on site. Assessed doses to those most likely to be exposed to radiation (the critical group) are based on these measurements. These estimated doses reflect total risk from the site, and are within national and international dose limits for members of the public.

Radiation measurements taken within the Sellafield and Dounreay sites, around the waste storage facilities (and other facilities), are carried out by BNFL and UKAES respectively. The results of these measurements are available to Inspectors of the Health and Safety Executive. Both of these operators have a duty to ensure that the radiation doses arising from, among other things, their waste storage facilities are below statutory limits and are kept as low as reasonably practicable.

Responsibility for environmental protection policy in Scotland (Dounreay) is a matter for the Scottish Executive and the Scottish Environment Protection Agency.

Planning Reform White Paper

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what consultations she has had with the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions in respect of the implications of the Planning Reform White Paper for her Department's White Paper on radioactive waste management. [25166]

Mr. Meacher: The Department has had several contacts with the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions on this issue. That Department's 12 December paper "Planning: delivering a fundamental change" proposes reforms to the planning system, and its consultation paper of 17 December sets out new parliamentary procedures for processing major infrastructure projects. Radioactive waste facilities are among the projects to which these procedures could apply.

Our 12 September consultation paper "Managing radioactive waste safely" asks the public for comments, by 12 March 2002, on a proposed programme for reaching decisions on managing solid radioactive waste over thousands of years. Each Department consulted the other before publishing its paper. The Department's paper is not a White Paper as such and does not itself propose any infrastructure projects, but such proposals may one day result from our decision-making process. Our Departments will therefore continue to discuss planning and radioactive waste policy issues.

Waste Management Scheme

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which schemes give financial assistance to local authorities in England and Wales to encourage waste management and recycling of waste; and which schemes give financial assistance to local authorities in the county of Essex for this purpose. [26846]

Mr. Meacher: The Spending Review 2000 announced the framework for the Government's support to local authorities for the next three years up to 2003–04. This included an annual increase in the revenue support to local authorities for Environmental Protection and Cultural Services (EPCS), which includes waste management services. By 2003–04 this support will have risen by £1.1 billion over the 2000–01 provision. Consistent with the general local authority financial framework, it is for Essex county council to decide the proportion of their budget that should be directed to waste management work.

In addition to general support to local authority revenue expenditure, the spending review provided £140 million of Government grant for waste management work and £220 million for Private Finance Initiatives (PFI) resources, for waste projects. We are currently in consultation on how the £140 million fund should be distributed. At this stage it is not possible to identify what funding Essex county council might receive from this source.

The next tranche of lottery funding from the New Opportunities Fund (NOF) will include a £159 million fund for transforming communities, of which £49.5 million will be directed towards community sector reuse, recycling and composting schemes across the UK. This will benefit local authorities seeking to work in partnership with local community groups.

Copies of the consultation on the distribution of £140 million fund are available from the House Libraries and from the DEFRA website: www.defra.gov.uk/environment/consult/wastefund/index.htm.

Domestic Refuse (Recycling)

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what guidance she provides to local authorities on the operation of schemes to recycle domestic refuse. [27212]

Mr. Meacher: All local authorities in England and Wales have been set statutory performance standards, under the best value regime, for recycling and composting household waste. It is up to individual authorities to decide how best to meet these standards, according to local circumstances. However, guidance was issued in March 2001, by the then DETR, on the development of joint Municipal Waste Management Strategies (MWMS) for waste collection and waste disposal authorities to encourage all authorities to set out integrated plans for meeting their recycling/composting targets. This guidance contains some case studies of local authority waste management schemes.

In July 2000 guidance was issued to local authorities on applying the best value framework to all waste management services "Waste Strategy Guidance—Best Value and Waste Management".

The Department also encourages the pooling of local authority experience and the promotion of best practice schemes, through the Beacon Council scheme, local Public Service Agreements and Best Value Networks.

The Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP) is currently preparing a pilot training scheme, to begin in March this year, for local authority recycling officers, and for waste managers within the private and community sector. This scheme will aim to provide information on best practice from the UK and from around the world, information on the costs of recycling schemes, and advice on tools and techniques. Those involved will also be encouraged to identify and address areas where existing schemes could be improved, for example by looking at other recyclable materials or by targeting in other sectors of the community.

WRAP hopes to make this training scheme available across the UK from September this year and intends to provide further training and development for chief officers and elected members in local authorities to raise their awareness of recycling issues. Collection operators, who come into direct contact with the public, will also be given further training so that they are better able to deal with public inquiries.

WRAP also intends to invite tenders for assessing best practice guidance.

Fox Population

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what impact the foot and mouth hunt restrictions have had on the fox population in the United Kingdom. [28362]

Alun Michael: There is no information which could provide the basis for an answer to this question.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Tourism

4. Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to promote tourism at industrial heritage sites with world heritage status. [26167]

Dr. Howells: I am delighted that Derwent Valley Mills, Saltaire and New Lanark, three outstanding examples of UK industrial heritage, and Dorset and East Devon coast were awarded World Heritage status last month.

Many of the UK's World Heritage Sites are world renowned and feature prominently in BTA's overseas' campaigns. My Department takes an active role in establishing comprehensive Management Plans for UK World Heritage sites which include sustainable tourism policies.

20. Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will increase financial support for tourism in England. [26187]

Dr. Howells: Support for English tourism is set to increase from £10 million in 2001–02 to £12 million in 2002–03 and to £12.5 million in 2003–04. In addition, £3.8 million has also been made available to the English Tourism Council this financial year in response to the foot and mouth outbreak.

Gambling

13. Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what measures she is taking to reduce gambling. [26177]

Mr. Caborn: As I stated earlier today to the hon. Member for Bognor Regis and Littlehampton (Mr. Gibb), we published the report of the independent Gambling Review Body in July last year. We are now considering all the comments which we have received on it since then, and we will announce our conclusions as soon as possible.

Foot and Mouth

15. Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the effect of the foot and mouth crisis on tourism. [26181]

Dr. Howells: The estimated loss to the tourism industry as a result of foot and mouth disease is between £2.9 billion and £3.6 billion in the months from March to October 2001.

Meridian Television

16. Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations she has received with respect to Meridian Television's proposal to shut its Newbury studio. [26183]

Dr. Howells: I have received a letter from one hon. Member. I have also noted the early-day Motion of 21 November.

Regional Theatres

17. Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the future of regional theatres. [26184]

Tessa Jowell: Funding for theatre remains a matter for the Arts Council of England and the Regional Arts Boards. In March last year, the Arts Council announced a significant increase in funding for theatre in 2002–03 and 2003–04, including a 51 per cent. increase for subsidised theatre throughout the west midlands by the end of the period.

29. Mr. Lepper: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to increase support to regional theatres and arts venues in Brighton. [26196]

Tessa Jowell: This is a matter for the Arts Council of England in collaboration with South East Arts as the regional arts board for Brighton. The Arts Council's theatre review published last year allocated flexible funding of £150,000 to Brighton Production Development with the aim of developing the new city as a hub of theatre activity, benefiting audiences and theatre practitioners throughout the region. Komedia, based in Brighton, will also see its funding increased by £95,000 over the next two years.

International Film School

18. Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to visit the International Film School at University College of Wales, Newport. [26185]

Dr. Howells: I met the Director of the School in October, but I have no current plans to visit the school.

School Sports

19. Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what consideration has been given to extending the school sports co-ordinators scheme beyond its target of 2003–04; and if she will make a statement. [26186]

Mr. Caborn: We are considering extending the school sports co-ordinators scheme beyond the current target of 2003–04 as a means of helping to deliver the Government's commitment to entitlement to a minimum of two hours high quality PE and school sport per week for all children. We shall be discussing this in more detail with DfES Ministers.

Licensing Laws

21. Mr. David: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to bring forward licensing reform legislation. [26188]

23. Siobhain McDonagh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to bring forward licensing reform legislation. [26190]

Dr. Howells: We plan to present legislation to implement the proposals set out in the White Paper "Time for Reform" as soon as parliamentary time permits. In addition, we are taking forward a series of regulatory reform proposals, including the one which allowed pubs and clubs to open continuously for up to 36 hours at new year's eve. The Police Superintendents Association of England and Wales has said that the resulting phasing of closing times was welcomed by the police service.

Cultural Commission

22. Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on what basis she selected the members of the Cultural Commission for the east of England. [26189]

Tessa Jowell: The Chair of the East of England Regional Cultural Consortium, known as Living East, was appointed by me following consultation within the region and advice from an independent appointments panel.

Consortium members are either nominated by the relevant cultural bodies or by local government, or appointed by the Chair in consultation with others in the region. Ministers are not involved with the appointment of any Consortium members other than the Chairs.

Women (Sport)

24. Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what encouragement she has given to women's participation in sport. [26191]

Mr. Caborn: The Government are determined to ensure that there is equality of opportunity for all in every area including sport. Our policy of 'Sport for All' is aimed at encouraging everyone, including women into sport. Sport England provides over £6 million of Exchequer funding to sports governing bodies and all are required to ensure that they have proposals for the development of women as part of the condition of funding. Sport England also fund the Womens Sports Foundation (WSF) which is the only organisation in the UK that is solely committed to improving and promoting opportunities for women and girls in sport at every level. More women than ever are finding that regular physical exercise can lead to improvements in health, self-confidence and well-being. Women's team sports such as football and rugby are among the fastest-growing sports in the country.

Libraries

25. Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what proposals she has to increase Library use among low income and socially excluded groups. [26192]

Tessa Jowell: Policy guidance on the contribution that libraries can make to tackling social inclusion was issued in January last year in the document "Libraries, Museums, Galleries and Archives For All".

Over the past two years, my Department has supported 49 library schemes which contribute to tackling social inclusion under the DCMS/Wolfson Public Libraries Challenge Fund.

We are working with Resource (the Council for Museums, Libraries and Archives) to ensure that library services are made as widely available as possible to all sections of society.

Through lottery funding, all public libraries will offer public internet access by December 2002.

Dorset and East Devon Coast

26. Linda Gilroy: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what meetings she has had with the English Tourist Council regarding the granting of world heritage status to the Dorset and east Devon coast. [26193]

Dr. Howells: I am delighted that the Dorset and East Devon coast was awarded World Heritage status last month.

I have not met with the English Tourism Council to discuss this matter. The ETC offers leadership and guidance to the tourism industry and reported recently on the heritage sector in Action for Attractions. My Department takes an active role in establishing comprehensive Management Plans for UK World Heritage sites which include sustainable tourism policies.

Football (Crowd Control)

27. Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to meet representatives of the Football Association to discuss crowd control. [26194]

Tessa Jowell: The Government look to the football authorities to act quickly to prevent any recurrence of recent crowd disorder at matches. The Football Association and the FA of Wales are conducting detailed inquiries into events at the cup ties played at Cardiff and Aston Villa on 6 January. I expect that these inquiries will consider the extent to which local police forces made use of the extensive public order powers available to them under the Football Offences Act 1991 and other legislation. I have made it clear that the Government stand ready to assist with these inquiries, and my right hon. Friend the Minister for Sport would be happy to facilitate meetings between the football authorities and Ministers, if these are considered necessary.

Euro

28. Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she has met the English Tourist Council to discuss the acceptance of euro notes and coins. [26195]

Dr. Howells: I have not met with the English Tourism Council to discuss this matter.

The British Tourist Authority has recently issued revised guidance for the tourism industry on the euro which includes a checklist of action points and advice on authenticating banknotes. Further guidance will be issued if it is needed.

Derwent Valley Mills

30. Mr. Laxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether she has met the English Tourist Council to discuss the granting of world heritage status to Derwent Valley mills. [26197]

Tessa Jowell: I am delighted that Derwent Valley Mills was awarded World Heritage status last month.

I have not met with the English Tourism Council to discuss this matter. The ETC offers leadership and guidance to the tourism industry and reported recently on the heritage sector in Action for Attractions. My Department takes an active role in establishing comprehensive Management Plans for UK World Heritage sites which include sustainable tourism policies.

National Museums

31. Mr. Hopkins: To ask [illegible] Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many people visited national museums in December. [26198]

Tessa Jowell: Overall some 200,000 more people visited in December 2001 than in December 2000 taking the total to 1.8 million. Visitors to those that went free on or just prior to 1 December doubled. This clearly demonstrates the success of our policy to abolish admission charges.

Golden Jubilee

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to celebrate the Golden anniversary of the Queen's accession on 6 February 2002. [24963]

Tessa Jowell: Although the actual anniversary of Her Majesty the Queen's accession to the throne is 6 February, the Prime Minister announced on 23 November 2000, Official Report, column 294W, that the Queen had approved his recommendation that the anniversary should be celebrated during the summer of this year, the focal point of which will be the celebrations during the 'Jubilee Weekend' of 1 to 4 June.

Newspaper Advertising

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what has been the expenditure of her (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies on newspaper advertising by title in each year since 1997. [26989]

Dr. Howells: The Department's total expenditure on newspaper advertising over the years in question is shown in the table. The Department uses newspaper advertising mainly to attract candidates for the many public appointments for which the Department is responsible but it also includes the cost of external recruitment exercises for the Department itself. Expenditure by title is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

[2] To date

The Department has 66 non-departmental public bodies and does not keep central records of their newspaper advertising. The cost of tracing and listing each public body's advertising and promotional campaigns could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Public Relations Consultants

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much was spent by (a) her Department and (b) bodies for which it is responsible on external public relations consultants in each of the last four years. [27398]

Dr. Howells: The Department has only let one contract with external public relations consultants during the period in question. In order to preserve commercial confidentiality I am unable to provide details of the cost. Information relating to the bodies for which my Department is responsible is not held centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Heritage Lottery Fund

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what expert advice the Heritage Lottery Fund seeks when making policy changes. [27752]

Dr. Howells: The Heritage Lottery Fund's standard practice is to consult with a range of organisations and individuals, including statutory agencies and practitioners, in advance of policy developments. For example, in reaching a new policy statement on skills and training for the heritage sector, to be published later this month, the Heritage Lottery Fund commissioned a MORI survey, and discussed findings with heritage organisations and employers to inform policy making. The fund's new strategic plan is being considered against the background of extensive consultation undertaken during summer 2001. The consultation process was UK wide, and included heritage practitioners and representatives of non-heritage organisations, members of the public and community leaders. The Heritage Lottery Fund received some 315 responses to its consultation document, and took the views of nearly 600 people who attended workshops, seminars and focus groups into account. The Heritage Lottery Fund follows the Cabinet Office's Code of Practice on written consultation.

Ministerial Transport

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what her estimate is of the cost of (a) ministerial cars and drivers and (b) taxis for her Department in each of the last four years. [27913]

Dr. Howells: The question concerning ministerial cars will be dealt with centrally, by the Cabinet Office. The information requested concerning all types of taxis used by the Department is shown in the table.

National Lottery

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much unclaimed money is held in the National Lottery Distribution Fund which is not committed to projects. [28066]

Mr. Caborn: At the end of September 2001 (the latest figures available), approximately £264 million of the total amount available for distribution was uncommitted to projects.

Horse Racing Industry

Ian Lucas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will introduce a betting levy for the financial year 2002–03 to help support the horse racing industry. [28309]

Mr. Caborn: The Betting, Gaming and Lotteries Act 1963, as amended, provides that if the Horserace Betting Levy Board does not approve, by 31 October each year, a scheme for the following financial year under which bookmakers pay a levy on betting on horse racing, the Secretary of State has a duty to determine a scheme. Such a duty has now arisen, and consideration is being given to a scheme in accordance with the requirements of the Act. An announcement will be made as soon as practicable.

Digital Television

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what percentage of United Kingdom homes have digital television services; when she expects (a) 50 per cent., (b) 70 per cent. and (c) 90 per cent. of homes to have digital television services; what recent discussions she has had with the retail sector about the promotion of digital television; and if she will make a statement. [28381]

Dr. Howells: I understand that over one third of UK homes are now accessing digital television services. I am not in a position to predict when digital television take up will reach specific levels. A Digital Television Action Plan was issued on 20 December 2001, following consultation on a Draft Plan with stakeholders from all sectors of the broadcasting industry, including the retail sector, and with representatives of consumers. The Action Plan sets out a series of actions to be taken by Government and industry, in partnership, to achieve the aim for the UK to have the most dynamic and competitive market for digital TV in the G7, as measured by take up, choice and cost, and to meet the criteria announced in September 1999 which must be met before analogue terrestrial transmissions could be switched off.

UK Sports Institute (Regional Centres)

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what progress she has made in the development of facilities at the regional centres of excellence for the UK Sports Institute. [28605]

Mr. Caborn: The Government remain committed to the development of the United Kingdom Sports Institute (UKSI) and good progress is being made in its establishment. Centres in Scotland and Wales are now operational; the English Institute is developing apace and it is hoped that work on the Northern Ireland Institute will begin soon.

Encouraging progress is being made with the development of the English Institute of Sport (EIS) facilities. To date 17 facilities are now open, with a further 10 on-site and under construction, over £100 million of lottery investment is now secured by funding agreements and large sites in Bath and Sheffield are secured and going on-site in early 2002. The majority of EIS facilities should be fully operational by the end of 2002.

Supporters Direct

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much she is making available to Supporters Direct in 2001–02; how much she will be giving in 2002–03; how many supporters trusts have been established by Supporters Direct; and what plans she has to fund Supporters Direct after 2003. [28604]

Mr. Caborn: Supporters Direct has assisted in the formation of 43 supporters trusts to date, which puts it well ahead of the targets included in its original Business Plan. Under its three-year funding agreement, Supporters Direct received £250,000 from the Reduction in Pool Betting Duty for 2000–01, and will receive the same amount in 2001–02 and 2002–03. My Department and Supporters Direct are currently discussing the funding arrangements which will follow the end of the current agreement.

Environmental Appraisals

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what procedures her Department has to ensure environmental appraisals are undertaken prior to (a) administrative and (b) policy decisions being made. [29055]

Dr. Howells: Environmental considerations are fully established as part of administrative decisions about the procurement of any goods for my Department, and are set out in the Department's procurement manual. My Department has also established an on-going Environmental Management System with the assistance of environmental consultants WSP, who scrutinised the environmental impact of the Department's procurement practices, use of energy and disposal of waste. The policy makers checklist, which includes reference to environmental and sustainable development considerations, is held on the Department's intranet to inform policy decisions.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many officials from her Department have attended the Environmental Appraisal and Integration into Policy training course run by the Civil Service College. [29057]

Dr. Howells: None of my officials have attended the Environmental Appraisal and Integration into Policy training course run by the Civil Service College.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans her Department has to appraise the environmental implications of its Spending Review submission to the Treasury. [29056]

Dr. Howells: Officials in my Department are aware that they have to produce a sustainable development report due at the end of February, as part of SR 2002.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when the last occasion was on which she requested an environmental appraisal before making a policy decision. [29054]

Dr. Howells: Policy makers in my Department are aware of the policy makers checklist which includes the recommendation to consider any environmental implications; however my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Arts has not had occasion to request a formal environmental appraisal since her appointment.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many environmental appraisals have been published by her Department since 1 January 2001; and if she will list the last four. [29053]

Dr. Howells: No environmental appraisals have been published by my Department since 1 January 2001.

Forth Rail Bridge

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to her oral answer of 3 December 2001, Official Report, column 6, what discussions she has had with the British Tourist Authority on the impact on tourism of maintenance problems concerning the Forth Rail Bridge. [26557]

Dr. Howells: I have not had discussions on this as transport is a devolved matter for the Scottish Executive.

Channel 5

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if it is her policy that Channel 5 should be available to all terrestrial analogue television users in the United Kingdom. [28861]

Dr. Howells: It was clear at its inception that the fifth channel could not be available in all parts of the United Kingdom because of spectrum constraints. I do not expect analogue terrestrial Channel 5 services to be extended to all analogue terrestrial television users because our priority is to use available spectrum for developing digital terrestrial television.

Regional Museums

Joyce Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she plans to meet the Council for Museums and Libraries to discuss the funding of regional museums, with specific reference to those in north-east England. [26182]

Tessa Jowell: My right hon. Friend the Minister for the Arts will shortly be meeting Lord Evans of Temple Guiting, the Chairman of Resource: The Council for Museums, Archives and Libraries, to discuss the report by the Regional Museum Task Force "Renaissance in the Regions: a new vision for England's museums" which was published last October.

The report makes recommendations for a new framework for museums and galleries in England's regions, including the north-east.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if the reformed Child Support Agency has a section dedicated to counter fraud work; and what the budget is of that section for the first year of operation. [22892]

Malcolm Wicks: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to my right hon. Friend.

Letter from Mike Isaac to Mr. Frank Field, dated 10 January 2002:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in replying to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency promised a substantive reply.

Mr. Smith is unavailable and therefore I am writing to you on his behalf.

You asked if the reformed Child Support Agency has a section dedicated to counter fraud work; and what the budget is of that section for the first year of operation.

We have set up sections dedicated to counter fraud as part of the implementation of changes to child support legislation. These units investigate cases where individuals appear to have deliberately provided incorrect or misleading information. They also consider cases where information might properly be referred for investigation elsewhere.

The budget for this section in its first year was £3.5 million.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the extent of benefit fraud through the use of bank accounts set up by members or supporters of Shariah and Al Muhajaroon. [26772]

Malcolm Wicks: We are implementing our strategy to tackle fraud and error by tightening up the system and making sure that, from the first claim, the right benefits are going to the right people. Due to the nature of fraud, it is not possible to give an estimate of the level of fraud committed by particular groups or their supporters.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much has been spent in total on the Targeting Fraud website. [27760]

Malcolm Wicks: It is not possible to provide a specific cost for the Targeting Fraud website, as it was built and is maintained on the departmental web server from existing resources.

Shareholders

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of the adult population owned one or more shares in (a) the latest year for which figures are available and (b) each year since 1997. [25292]

Malcolm Wicks: The information available is in the table:

Percentage of adult population owning one or more stocks/shares, unit trusts, PEPs, ISAs

1997–98	22	27

1. The estimates are based on sample counts that have been adjusted for non-response using multi-purpose grossing factors that control for tenure, Council Tax Band and a number of demographic variables. Estimates are subject to sampling error and to variability in non-response.
2. Questions on assets are a sensitive part of the FRS questionnaire and have relatively low level of response, and hence higher levels of imputation, compared to other parts of the survey. Responses are imputed in around one in 10 cases. Evidence also suggests some under reporting of capital by respondents.
3. The final column of the table shows the percentage of adults reporting one or more of the categories: stocks and shares, unit trusts, PEPs and ISAs.
4. The results are for financial years.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will provide a breakdown of share ownership by occupational status for the most recent date available. [26140]

Child Support Agency

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the final maintenance assessment accuracy figure is for the Child Support Agency in each year since 1997. [24211]

Malcolm Wicks: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mike Isaac to Mr. David Willetts, dated 10 January 2002:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in replying to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency promised a substantive reply.

Mr. Smith is unavailable and therefore I am writing to you on his behalf.

You asked what the final maintenance assessment accuracy figure is for the Child Support Agency in each year since 1997.

The information requested is in the attached table.

Until this year our target measured the accuracy of our assessments to the nearest penny and required us to revisit the whole of the current assessment, including those elements which may have been in place for some considerable time. The measure therefore reflected historical mistakes rather than our current performance.

The target for this year focuses on improving the accuracy of the last action we have taken on a case. On that basis our achievement last year was 78.5%. We have continued to focus on accuracy and so far this year we have further improved that figure to 82.8%.

I hope this is helpful.

Cold Weather Payments

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many cold weather payments have been triggered this winter as a result of low temperatures, broken down by (a) weather station and (b) nation and region of the United Kingdom. [25948]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 11 January 2002]: Cold weather payments are a key part of our strategy to tackle fuel poverty. They provide extra help towards heating costs for the poorest and most vulnerable members of our society in periods of exceptionally cold weather. They are paid to pensioners receiving the minimum income guarantee, and to people receiving income support or income-based jobseeker's allowance who have children under the age of five or who have a premium for disability or long term sickness.

The payments are made automatically and are triggered when the average temperature is recorded as, or forecast to be, 0 degrees Centigrade or below over seven consecutive days at the weather station linked to the customer's postcode. So far this year we estimate that payments to the value of almost £16.8 million have been triggered. Available information on the breakdown of the payments is in the tables.

Benefits Agency (Freecall Service)

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how the determination is made as to whether a benefit applicant faces significant difficulties such that a freecall number is provided by the Benefits Agency. [28799]

Malcolm Wicks: In deciding whether a freecall service ought to be provided, a variety of factors are considered, e.g. the anticipated length of calls, location of the customer and their likely financial circumstances. Guidance to staff within the Department tells them to make a return telephone call to a customer in the UK on request.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many freecall numbers have been provided by the Benefits Agency to such benefit applicants since 1997 (a) in Scotland and (b) in the rest of the United Kingdom. [28800]

Malcolm Wicks: Since 1997 the Benefits Agency has provided two freecall numbers for benefit applications. Both services are available to all UK customers. The first was provided for the benefits inquiry line and the second for minimum income guarantee claims.

ME

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what effect the NHS recognition of ME as a medical condition will have on the operation of the physical capability assessment; and if he will make a statement. [28801]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: We recognise chronic fatigue syndromes, including ME, as potentially debilitating illnesses and the Department's Chief Medical Adviser constantly evaluates the latest developments in the understanding of these conditions. The personal capability assessment which is used in determining entitlement to incapacity benefit is a functional assessment which looks at the extent to which a person's ability to carry out certain everyday activities is affected by their medical condition. In general, it is the effect of the condition that is important, not the specific diagnosis.

The application of the assessment to people who have a medical condition that fluctuates or varies in its severity (such as ME) is already covered in the training and guidance given to Medical Services doctors who provide advice for Decision Makers. The doctors are trained to base their advice on the level of function that the person is capable of most of the time taking into account such factors as pain, fatigue and variability of symptoms.

Attendance Allowance

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how much of the attendance allowance money withdrawn from recipients in Scotland will be spent in Scotland; [28802]

(2) when his Department notified the Scottish Executive that the payment of attendance allowance to those recipients who will qualify for free personal care would be withdrawn; [28803]

(3) whether attendance allowance payments contribute to the funding of free nursing care in England; [28804]

(4) how the attendance allowance money withdrawn from recipients in Scotland will be allocated by his Department. [28805]

Mr. Darling: To avoid duplicate provision from public funds, the Great Britain-wide social security benefit rules have always precluded payment of attendance allowance to people in residential care homes and nursing homes who receive help with the cost of their place in the home from a local authority or a health authority. Benefit spending is determined by the number of claimants who satisfy the qualifying conditions that apply to a particular benefit. A reduction in forecast benefit expenditure will increase the funds available for public expenditure as a whole, and issues regarding their allocation will be dealt with in the usual way. The funding arrangements for free nursing care have always been entirely separate from those for attendance allowance.

Universal Bank

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he plans for the services of the Universal bank to be in operation by April 2003. [28937]

Malcolm Wicks: While there are still issues to be resolved, substantial progress is being made towards delivery of the project as planned.

Benefits Agency (ACT)

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what advice will be available to benefit claimants who do not have a bank account when the move to ACT takes place. [28938]

Malcolm Wicks: If claimants do not have a bank account, staff will discuss options with them to help them make the best choice for their circumstances.

Benefit Payments (ACT)

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of benefit recipients have received their benefits by automated credit transfer in each year since ACT was introduced. [24240]

Malcolm Wicks: Comprehensive statistics on customers paid by Automated Credit Transfer (ACT) date back to 1993. The table reflects the average take up across all benefits apart from job seekers allowance (JSA) as take-up data are not currently available.

Year	Percentage of benefit recipients receiving their benefit by ACT
1993	18.5
1994	23.5
1995	24.0
1996[1]	28.0
1997	30.5
1998[2]	33.0
1999	36.0
2000[3]	38.0
2001 (August)	40.0

[1] Includes IIDB from June 1996

[3] Includes guardians allowance from June 2000

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his estimate is of the costs that the Government will incur in servicing Post Office card accounts for (a) 3 million, (b) 4 million, (c) 5 million and (d) 6 million benefit claimants. [28940]

Malcolm Wicks: This will depend on the outcome of contractual negotiations between the Government and the Post Office, which will remain commercially in confidence between the parties.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what research his Department has carried out into the numbers of benefit claimants who already have a bank account; and if he has estimated how many of these claimants will choose to transfer to a Post Office card account when they start to be paid by ACT. [28941]

Malcolm Wicks: Around 85 per cent. of benefit claimants have an account into which they can be paid directly. In general, we expect that they will choose to use these accounts when moving to payment by ACT.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on what information the Government based its assumption that around 3 million benefit and tax credit recipients will open a Post Office card account and what provision is being made available should this figure rise following the introduction of the Universal Bank. [28942]

Malcolm Wicks: Our assumption was derived from the number of benefit and tax credit recipients without bank accounts, recognising that some of these customers will open basic accounts with a high street bank. The commercial arrangements between the Government and the Post Office will provide for the possibility that the actual number of Post Office card accounts may be higher or lower than our 3 million operational assumption.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent discussions he has had with the Post Office about the provision of the Post Office card account; what the outcome of these discussions was; and if he will make a statement. [28943]

Malcolm Wicks: Officials, together with officials from the Inland Revenue and the Northern Ireland Social Security Agency, have had extensive discussions with the Post Office. These are still continuing.

Environmental Appraisals

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many environmental appraisals have been published by his Department since 1 January 2001; and if he will list the last four; [29018]

(2) when the last occasion was on which he requested an environmental appraisal before making a policy decision; [29019]

(3) what procedures his Department has to ensure environmental appraisals are undertaken prior to (a) administrative and (b) policy decisions being made; [29020]

(4) what plans his Department has to appraise the environmental implications of its Spending Review submission to the Treasury; [29021]

(5) how many officials from his Department have attended the environmental appraisal and integration into policy training course run by the Civil Service College. [29022]

Maria Eagle: With the creation of the Department for Work and Pensions arrangements have been put in place to ensure that the new Department continues to meet the Government's sustainable development objectives.

We have actively embraced the social, economic and environmental elements of sustainable development, and are taking these aspects forward together within an integrated strategy. The Department has a Grade 2 Senior Accountable Official for sustainable development (SD) and has established an SD steering group to take ownership of, and drive forward, sustainability across the Department. The steering group includes senior "SD Champions" from each area of the Department's business.

A corporate SD team has been established also to own the Department's SD policy, and to establish targets and monitor progress. Representatives from the six main business areas of the Department and the SD team all attended a specifically tailored SD training course on environmental appraisal run by the Civil Service College in November 2001.

A mechanism has been put in place to ensure that all major initiatives are assessed for SD impacts and benefits through the Department's projects approvals process. A further proposal is under development which will provide appraisals of new and revised policies. DWP internal auditors will include these appraisals within its audit programme.

We are preparing a Sustainable Development report to accompany our Spending Review submission to Treasury, and are working with our client groups and Business Management Division to ensure that the Department's bid accords with the objectives within the UK strategy for SD.

We have published a free-standing SD annual report which has been placed in the Library.

Jobseeker's Allowance

John Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people claimed jobseeker's allowance in the Hornchurch constituency in (a) September 1997, (b) September 1999 and (c) September 2001. [27221]

Ruth Kelly: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from John Kidgell to John Cryer, dated 21 January 2002:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your parliamentary question regarding the number of people claiming job seeker's allowance (JSA) in the Hornchurch constituency in September 1997, September 1999 and September 2001. I am replying in his absence. (27221)

The claimant count consists of all people claiming JSA or NI credits at Employment Service local offices. They must declare that they are out of work, capable of, available for and actively seeking work during the week in which their claim is made

The information is given in the table below.

Child Asylum Seekers

David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the Government are doing to safeguard the welfare of unaccompanied asylum seeking children when they are given leave to remain in the UK; how the Government are helping social care agencies protect and aid those children deemed most at risk; and how many children are at risk in the Midlothian constituency. Jacqui Smith: I have been asked to reply.

Unaccompanied asylum seeking children are assessed by local authorities in accordance with their duties under the Children Act 1989, and are provided with help and support on the basis of that needs assessment. The position is unchanged when they receive leave to remain in the United Kingdom. While the young people are under 18 the local authority is able to claim grant funding from the Home Office to meet the costs of support. The Quality Protects programme, designed to improve services to children in local authority care, applies to local authorities' services for these young people as for other children in need.

Matters relating to Scotland are for the devolved Administration.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Environmental Appraisals

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what procedures the Lord Chancellor's Department has to ensure environmental appraisals are undertaken prior to (a) administrative and (b) policy decisions being made. [29060]

Ms Rosie Winterton: No formal environmental appraisal process is in place for administrative decision making, but reference is made to the Department's Environmental Strategy, which addresses the environmental impact of the Department's operations. This specifically targets construction of new courts and office buildings, the maintenance of our diverse estate, energy efficiency and water management, procurement of goods and services; training and education of staff; waste management; and the impact of travel to and from our buildings.

Policy decisions are subject to environmental screening, and policy makers use the Cabinet Office's Policy Makers Checklist.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the last occasion was on which the Lord Chancellor requested an environmental appraisal before making a policy decision. [29059]

Ms Rosie Winterton: To date there have been no policy decisions that have required the Lord Chancellor to request an environmental appraisal.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many officials from the Lord Chancellor's Department have attended the Environmental Appraisal and Integration into Policy training course run by the Civil Service College. [29062]

Ms Rosie Winterton: As yet no officials from my Department have attended the Environmental Appraisal and Integration into Policy training course.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, how many environmental appraisals have been published by the Lord Chancellor's Department since 1 January 2001; and if she will list the last four. [29058]

Ms Rosie Winterton: There have been no environmental appraisals published by my Department since 1 January 2001. No environmental impacts were identified in any of the policies or programmes considered since that date.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, what plans the Lord Chancellor's Department has to appraise the environmental implications of its Spending Review submission to the Treasury. [29061]

Ms Rosie Winterton: My Department's spending review team is collaborating with our Energy and Environment Branch on the environmental implications of the spending review, and the production of a free-standing sustainable development report. They will be using the guidance provided by HM Treasury on the conduct of the review, including advice on sustainable development.

Immigration Appellate Authority

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, how many adjudicators in the Immigration Appellate Authority have (a) been dismissed and (b) resigned in each of the last five years. [29243]

Ms Rosie Winterton: No Immigration adjudicators have been dismissed during the last five years. The Lord Chancellor's Department does not have definitive records of resignations during the last five years but estimates that 26 Immigration adjudicators have resigned during that period.

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the minimum qualification to serve as an adjudicator for the Immigration Appellate Authority. [29240]

Ms Rosie Winterton: All appointments are made under Schedule 3 to the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999. All appointees must hold a seven year qualification within the meaning of section 71 of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990, which is a right of audience in any class of proceedings in any part of the Supreme Court or in all proceedings in the county court or magistrates courts, or they should be an advocate or solicitor in Scotland of at least seven years' standing, a member of the Bar of Northern Ireland or a solicitor of the Supreme Court of Northern Ireland of at seven years' standing or have such legal or other experience as appears to the Lord Chancellor to make him or her suited for appointment.

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what training is given to adjudicators in the Immigration Appellate Authority. [29241]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Qualification for appointment for adjudicators is laid out in Paragraph 2, Schedule 3 to the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999. For adjudicators new to the jurisdiction there is a structured four-day induction programme of training. This includes judicial practice, immigration and asylum law, discussion groups and practical exercises. Inductees are mentored and sit in with an experienced adjudicator for at least three hearing days.

For existing adjudicators there is a regular series of training events. All adjudicators receive a minimum of three days training per annum. Such training covers new developments as well as providing opportunities to refresh existing knowledge and skills.

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what written guidance is given to adjudicators in the Immigration Appellate Authority on the conduct and management of appeal hearings. [29242]

Ms Rosie Winterton: All adjudicators receive an extensive Bench Book covering all aspects of relevant law and practice. They are also provided with equal treatment guidance, standard legal texts and extensive guidance on determination writing. IAA Legal and Research support further provides regular updates on issues and developments in the immigration and asylum field.

Lost/Stolen Property

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will list those items valued at more than £50 which have been stolen or lost from her Department in each of the last four years. [27995]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The figures are as in the table:

Theft and Fraud

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what her estimate is of the cost of theft and fraud to (a) her Department, (b) its agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies in each of the last four years. [27983]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is not possible to distinguish the figures between the Department and its agencies. Available figures for the cost of theft and fraud for each of the last financial years are:

	Department and agencies (£)	NDPBs (£ million)
1997–98	21,721.52	1.08
1998–99	79,923.02	0.8
1999–2000	21,558.40	3.2
2000–01	159,817.87	4.1

Figures for the current financial years are not yet available.

Newspaper Advertising

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what has been the expenditure of the Lord Chancellors (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies on newspaper advertising by title for each year since 1997. [26981]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Newspaper advertising is used for a very wide range of public information and recruiting purposes across the national, regional and local press of England and Wales. While some recruitment has been handled centrally since August 2001, the bulk is delegated to Communications, People and Learning Centres on behalf of group managers and records of expenditure on advertising are only available from individual court and group managers' offices. A breakdown of advertising per year by title since 1997 could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Crown Court Proceedings

Simon Hughes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what the annual costs of Crown court proceedings where the defendant has elected trial by jury were in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [28429]

Mr. Wills: This information is not available in the format requested. However, the most recent estimate of the average cost of contested Crown court proceedings is £21,250 per case, falling to £3,550 in proceedings where a guilty plea is entered. 15,500 defendants elected to be tried by a jury in the year to September 2001, and it is known that many who so elect later enter a guilty plea.

Unified Criminal Court

Simon Hughes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) what assessment he has made of the net change in the number of magistrates which would be needed to implement the creation of a new district division of a unified criminal court and associated changes as proposed in Lord Justice Auld's report "Review of the Criminal Courts"; and if he will make a statement; [28525]

(2) what assessment he has made of the net cost of establishing a new district division of a unified criminal court and associated changes as proposed in Lord Justice Auld's report "Review of the Criminal Courts"; if he will give a breakdown of available figures; and if he will make a statement. [28524]

Mr. Wills: The Government have taken no decisions on Sir Robin Auld's Review report. The period of comment closes on 31 January. The Government will then be considering the recommendations in detail, including assessments of costs, benefits, and associated factors such as the numbers of magistrates needed to implement them. The Government will announce their conclusions by way of a White Paper in the spring.

Census Website

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what quality checks were built into the contract between the Public Record Office and QinetiQ. [26803]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The contract between the Public Record Office and QinetiQ Ltd. makes comprehensive provision for quality checks, which are covered by commercial confidentiality. These checks have been carried out, and will continue to be carried out, at the appropriate times.

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what the final tender price of the contract won by QinetiQ from the Public Record Office to design, build and maintain the website for the 1901 Census was. [26801]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The final tender price of the contract is commercially sensitive information, which it would be inappropriate to put into the public domain.

Ministerial Transport

Bob Russell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the Lord Chancellor last used the railway service in connection with this official duties; what station he left from and to what destination; and whether it is his intention to make greater use of the railways in future. [28103]

Mr. Wills: The Lord Chancellor last used the railway service in connection with his official duties on 11 January—the date of his most recent official visit. The journey was between Gatwick Airport and London Victoria. The Lord Chancellor will continue to use the railway for official travel as appropriate. All arrangements for official travel are made in line with the guidance set out in Chapter 7 of the "Ministerial Code", and the accompanying guidance document "Travel by Ministers", using the most efficient and cost effective mode of transport, and bearing in mind security considerations.

TREASURY

Overseas Dividends

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many taxpayers receive income from overseas dividends; and what was the gross sum received before tax in the last year for which figures are available. [26114]

Dawn Primarolo: It is not possible to provide a reliable estimate.

Income Tax

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of gross income is paid in income tax, national insurance contributions and VAT by (a) a married man with a non-earning wife and two children and (b) a married man with an earning wife and two children at (i) half, (ii) one and a half, (iii) two, (iv) three, (v) five, (vi) 10 and (vii) 50 times national average earnings in 2001–02; and what were the comparative figures for 1997–98. [26208]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The available information is given in the table. Estimating the impact of indirect taxes on these very specific family types is meaningless because spending patterns vary considerably between households of the same type and income.

Notes:

1. Income tax payments are calculated on the basis that the households receive no tax reliefs other than the standard allowances and only have income from employment. All earners are assumed to pay Class 1 national insurance contributions at the contracted-in rate.

2. Earnings are taken to be the median gross weekly earnings of all full-time employees on adult rates with pay unaffected by absence.

3. In line with the convention in the Tax Benefit Reference Manual, child benefit is treated as negative income tax.

4. For the two-earner family it is assumed that earnings are split 60/40 per cent.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many and what proportion of people of pensionable age are liable for income tax; what the total tax yield from people of pensionable age is; what the average income is of people of pensionable age before and after tax; and what the average percentage of income paid in tax by people of pensionable age is. [26279]

Dawn Primarolo: In 2001–02, 4.3 million (four in 10) people of pensionable age are liable to income tax. Pensionable age taxpayers have a total tax liability of £8.5 billion in 2001–02. The mean before tax income for pensioner taxpayers in 2001–02 is £15,800 pa and the mean after tax income is £23,850 pa. Tax as a percentage of total income for pensionable age taxpayers is 12.6 per cent.

These estimates are based on the Survey of Personal Incomes and are consistent with the November 2001 pre-Budget report. Non-taxable income such as ISA income is excluded from the analysis as individual details are not known.

Inheritance Tax

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many individuals in each of the last four years have been granted exemption from inheritance tax in relation to chattels declared to be open to inspection by the public. [26108]

Dawn Primarolo: Exemption is not generally granted to individuals, but to executors of a deceased person's estate and/or to the trustees of trusts in which the deceased person was involved. On that basis, exemption was granted to chattels in their own right in 59, 74, 39 and 21 cases in the years 1997–98 to 2000–01 respectively. Exemption was also granted in three, six, two and no cases respectively for chattels which are historically associated with a heritage building. Exemption claims often cover more than one chattel or collection of chattels.

Incomes

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many tax units in 2001–02 will be on (a) twice, (b) five times and (c) 10 times average earnings or more; [26207]

(2) how many and what proportion of taxpayers earn less than (a) three-quarters and (b) two-thirds of median male earnings in the most recent year for which figures are available. [26266]

Dawn Primarolo: Available estimates for the numbers of individual taxpayers in 2000–01 and proportions in the income ranges specified are given.

Employee taxpayers in 2000–01 with earnings in the range	Number	Proportion of all employee taxpayers
Over twice average earnings (million)	1.04	—
Over five times average earnings (thousand)	150	—
Over 10 times average earnings (thousand)	14	—
Less than three-quarters of median male earnings (million)	10.2	48
Less than two-thirds of median male earnings (million)	11.7	55

Average earnings and male median earnings are based on the New Earnings Survey first release.

Estimates are based on the Survey of Personal Incomes and consistent with the November 2001 pre-Budget report.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the net change in the annual income of a married couple with one earner and two school age children living in rented accommodation for which they pay average council house rent and average rates of a 1 per cent. cut in the basic rate of tax before and after taking account of any change in entitlement to housing benefit and WFTC, assuming that the earner is on (a) half and (b) one and a half times average earnings. [26215]

Dawn Primarolo: A married couple with one earner on half median earnings (£9,800 per annum) and two school age children would benefit by £34 a year from a 1 per cent. cut in the basic rate of income tax before taking account of working families tax credit and by £15 a year after taking account of working families tax credit. On one and a half times median earnings (£29,400 per annum) this family would not be eligible for working families tax credit and would benefit by £230 a year from a 1 per cent. cut in the basic rate of income tax. A single earner family with two school age children and paying average council house rents would not be eligible for housing benefit on either half median earnings or one and a half times median earnings.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the (a) average and (b) median income is of (i) married couples and (ii) single people, whether liable to income tax or not, in 2001–02; and what percentage of (A) married couples and (B) single people fall below the average for their group. [26285]

Malcolm Wicks: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is not available.

Works of Art (Access)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what actions his Department has taken in each of the last four years to make the public aware of their rights of access to homes containing works of art granted exemption from inheritance tax. [26338]

Dawn Primarolo: The Revenue website dedicated to information about tax-exempt works of art remains the primary vehicle for informing the public, as it has been since its launch in 1996. The site was redesigned in 2000 to make it more user-friendly and to give fuller information about public access to heritage assets. The number of hits on the site has increased from less than 1,000 per month at the beginning of 1998 to around 15,000 per month currently.

Owners of tax-exempt heritage assets, particularly historic houses and their contents, increasingly maintain their own websites or have some other presence on the internet: we now offer such owners the facility of a link from the Revenue website.

The Revenue website can be accessed direct at www.cto.eds.co.uk or through the Revenue's main website at www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk.

Tax Allowances

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate the savings in a full year at 2001–02 rates of restricting all allowances and reliefs to the standard rate of tax broken down by category of allowance and relief; [26209]

(2) what extra revenue would result from allowing all tax allowances at the standard rate of tax only. [26235]

Dawn Primarolo: The full year yield in 2001–02 from restricting the personal allowances (including the blind person's allowance) to 22 per cent. is estimated at £2.6 billion.

I regret that estimates for the effect of restricting all allowances and reliefs to the standard rate of tax broken down by category of allowance and relief could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Capital Gains Tax

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many (a) basic rate and (b) higher rate taxpayers paid capital gains tax in 2000–01; [26211]

(2) what the projected increase or reduction in capital gains tax liability is of the (a) top 1 per cent., (b) top 5 per cent., (c) top 10 per cent., (d) bottom 25 per cent. and (e) bottom 10 per cent. in 2001–02; and what the total number was of tax units estimated to be liable. [26258]

Dawn Primarolo: The latest available information on the distribution of the income and gains of capital gains taxpayers is in table 14.3 and projections of taxpayer numbers are in table 1.4 of the online edition of "Inland Revenue Statistics" which can be accessed on the Inland Revenue website www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats.

Tax Receipts

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of the total revenue from income tax was paid by the top five per cent. of taxpayers in each of the last four years. [26281]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to "Inland Revenue Statistics" table 2.4, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. The latest version can be accessed on the Inland Revenue website www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats/income_tax/it_t04_1.htm.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the capital gains tax receipts and the corporation tax receipts were for each of the Inland Revenue districts in (a) Greater London, (b) Scotland, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland in current and in constant prices for each of the last four years. [26225]

Dawn Primarolo: Total receipts of capital gains tax and of corporation tax in each of the last four years are given on the Inland Revenue website at: http://www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats/tax_t02_1.htm.

Receipts information in the detail requested is not available.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many people paid inheritance tax in each of the last 10 years; and how much tax was paid in each year; [26340]

(2) what the total annual revenue yield was from stamp duty on property purchases in each of the last 10 years; [26336]

(3) what the total payments were of capital gains tax; and how many people made them in each of the last five years. [26262]

Dawn Primarolo: The requested information on receipts of tax and number of taxpayers is available in tables 1.2 and 1.4 of the online edition of Inland Revenue Statistics—http://www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats. Further breakdowns of stamp duty yield are given in table 15.1, with earlier years in the equivalent table of the paper publication, Inland Revenue Statistics 1997.

Higher Rate Taxpayers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many higher rate taxpayers there were in 2000–01; and what their average income was. [26263]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the "Inland Revenue Statistics" table 2.1, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. The latest version can be accessed on the Inland Revenue website http://www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats/income_tax/it_t01_1.htm.

The average income of higher rate taxpayers in 2000–01 is around £69,000.

Share Gains

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the capital gains tax and corporation tax yields from gains in quoted shares and gains in unquoted shares (a) in 2000–01 and (b) expected in 2001–02. [26224]

Dawn Primarolo: Information on the asset distribution of gains of capital gains tax payers and of non-life companies for 1998–99, the latest year for which figures are available, is in tables 14.4 and 14.7 respectively on the online edition of "Inland Revenue Statistics" which can be accessed on the Inland Revenue website www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats.

It is not possible to measure directly the tax yield due to separate asset classes as some reliefs (including annual exempt amount) are given against aggregate gains.

Age Allowance

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people (a) eligible for and (b) in receipt of age allowances (i) are on high marginal tax rates, (ii) are on basic rate tax and (iii) pay no income tax. [26280]

Dawn Primarolo: People should get their age allowance if they tell the Inland Revenue of their date of birth. The number getting age related allowances, in 2001–02, for each of the categories requested is given in the table:

Million

	Number
Top rate (40 per cent.) taxpayers	0
Basic rate (22 per cent.) taxpayers	2.2
Non taxpayers	2.3

These estimates are based on the survey of personal incomes and are consistent with the November 2001 pre-Budget report.

Revenue Losses (Farm Incomes)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the revenue lost to the Inland Revenue as a result of the reduction in farm incomes in the last four years. [27928]

Dawn Primarolo: PAYE tax by sector and income from self-employment by sector are available in tables 2.10 and 3.9 of Inland Revenue Statistics. The latest version can be accessed on the Inland Revenue website: http://www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats/income_tax/it_t10_1.htm and http://www:inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats/income_distribution/pi_t09_1. htm.

Child Poverty (London)

Harry Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will put in place measures to enhance the impact of the working families tax credit on reducing child poverty in London; and if he will make a statement. [28262]

Dawn Primarolo: The working families tax credit, combined with other tax and benefit reforms since 1997, means that there are now 1.2 million fewer children in relative poverty than there would otherwise have been.

In August 2001, 95,000 families with children were receiving the working families tax credit in London, compared with 58,900 London families who received its predecessor family credit in August 1999. This represents a 61 per cent. increase in London which is greater than the increase across the United Kingdom as a whole over the same period.

The Government keep under constant review the effectiveness of the working families tax credit across all areas of the United Kingdom. They continue to put in place measures to encourage those who are eligible to take up the tax credits to which they are entitled.

Regulations

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the regulations which entail a cost to public funds and estimate the cost in each case. [28030]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The cost to 'public funds' (exchequer costs) is considered at the policy development stage of any new regulatory proposal, and a Regulatory Impact Assessment is completed unless there are no or negligible costs.

Where Ministers choose a regulatory option, they must be satisfied that the benefits justify the costs.

Married Couples Allowance

David Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many pensioner couples in 2000–01 in north-west Leicestershire did not receive the married couples allowance available until 5 April 2000 because neither was 65 before 6 April 2000; [28704]

(2) how many pensioner couples in 2000–01 did not receive the married couples allowance available until 5 April 2000 because neither was 65 before 6 April 2000. [28703]

Dawn Primarolo: There were some 100,000 couples where at least one partner was aged 65 in 2000–01 not receiving the married couples allowance because neither was 65 before 5 April 2000. This estimate is based on the Survey of Personal Incomes and is consistent with the November 2001 pre-Budget report.

I regret that because of small sample sizes, it is not possible to provide a reliable estimate for the numbers in North-West Leicestershire.

Child Tax Credit

Mr. Reed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number of families in receipt of (a) the child tax credit and (b) the child care tax credit in the Loughborough constituency. [28517]

Dawn Primarolo: Information about the children's tax credit is not available by constituency. However, the number of families who are eligible for CTC in the east midlands is estimated to be 400,000.

Analyses of the numbers of recipients of child care support within working families tax credits and disabled person's tax credits by parliamentary constituency were published in "Working Families' and Disabled Person's Tax Credit Statistics: Geographical Analyses August 2001" on 8 January 2002 by the Inland Revenue.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what end of year reconciliation information about incomes will have to be supplied by recipients of the proposed child tax credit; which group of recipients will have to supply such information; by what mechanism this information will be collected; and if he will make a statement. [28841]

Dawn Primarolo: Clause 17 of the Tax Credits Bill requires that a person who has received a tax credit award to be given the opportunity, after the end of the year, to provide details of their income and circumstances so that the Inland Revenue is able to finalise their award on the correct basis.

The Inland Revenue will issue a notice to those people. The notice will set out the circumstances and income on which the award is based. It will then be for claimants to respond, making clear any respects in which the information held needs to be updated.

Railtrack

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what implications Railtrack's successor's (a) spending and (b) borrowing requirements will have for the PSBR. [28825]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Railtrack's successor is expected to be in the private sector. Its spending and borrowing will have no impact on public sector net borrowing.

Government subsidies and investment grants paid to the rail industry add to public sector net borrowing. This will be the same when Railtrack's successor is established.

Scottish Transport Group Pension Fund

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the distribution of moneys to the members of the Scottish Transport Group pension fund; when he expects these payments to be made; and what rate of tax will be applied to such payments. [28973]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Scottish Executive are taking forward matters regarding the distribution of moneys to members of the Scottish Transport Group pension fund, following its announcement in November 2001 on the pension fund surplus. The tax payable on payments to pensioners will depend on the nature of the payment and the personal tax circumstances of the individual.

International Aid

Tony Baldry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how the Government proposes to fulfil the commitment at the 2000 G8 Summit in Okinawa that no countries seriously committed to education for all will be thwarted in their achievements of this goal by lack of resources; what information he has collated on the actions of the other G8 countries to meet this commitment; and if he will make a statement. [27862]

Clare Short: I have been asked to reply.

The international response to the resource commitment made at the World Education Forum in Dakar (and endorsed by the G8 at Okinawa) has been slow and has lacked effective co-ordination. At the Education for All High-Level Group meeting in Paris in October, I called for international action to be stepped up in a coherent, well-organised and supportive way.

Achieving universal primary education (UPE) can happen only through reform and action at the country level. More attention needs to be given to determining whether a country is "seriously committed" to education for all. Key indicators of commitment are the development of sound national education policies, closely linked to the country's poverty reduction strategies; the rapid abolition of user fees and other direct cost barriers to education; the resources allocated to education, and specifically to primary education; and concrete evidence of efforts to promote gender equality. Being serious about UPE means clear commitments in all of these areas.

Where countries are making these commitments, the international community must deliver the additional resources they require. We believe that delivering this Dakar resource commitment is best analysed and acted upon at the country level. It should be incorporated into all country level negotiations on poverty reduction strategies. It will also require a step-change in the level of international financing to support and sustain UPE, particularly in sub-Saharan Africa. Development agencies and the multilateral development banks, including the World bank, must increase the resources committed to helping reforming Governments deliver UPE. We also need much greater co-ordination between development agencies, working together in support of a country's own development strategy.

DFID's "Children out of school" paper sets out these proposals and urges much greater international energy and co-operation in taking them forward. It also calls for the response of the developed world to the Dakar resource commitment to be monitored and reported at the World bank annual meeting, and in the report on progress towards the millennium development goals provided by the multilateral developments banks for the G8.

The Government give high priority to the UPE goal and DFID has committed over £600 million to support the development of good quality, sustainable primary education systems in developing countries since 1997. We will do more. Canada shares our strong commitment to UPE and now chairs the G8 Education Task Force, where DFID represents the UK. Information submitted to the task force indicates clearly that the priority given to primary education within other G8 members' development programmes varies significantly. We would like the task force's report to this year's summit in Canada to indicate how the G8 can deliver effectively on its Okinawa commitment, and complement other international action to accelerate progress toward the UPE goal.

Seaside Amusement Arcades

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the economic impact on seaside amusement arcades of recommendation 43 of the Budd report. [28849]

Mr. Boateng: The Government have made no such assessment.

Hourly Wages

Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average hourly wage in each travel to work area is at the latest date for which figures are available. [28505]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from John Kidgell to Mr. Llew Smith, dated 21 January 2002:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the average hourly earnings by travel to work area. I am replying in his absence. (28505)

The New Earnings Survey (NES) provides earnings data for full-time employees on adult rates of pay. The most recent estimates for average hourly earnings for all travel to work areas in Great Britain are for April 2000. I have deposited a table showing these in the House of Commons Library.

Breast Cancer Survival Rates

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the survival rates were for victims of breast cancer in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) South Tyneside in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [28065]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from John Kidgell to Mr. Stephen Hepburn, dated 21 January 2002:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent question on the survival rates for breast cancer in (a) the UK and (b) South Tyneside. I am replying in his absence. (28065).

Figures are not available for the United Kingdom as a whole or for local authority areas. The latest available five-year relative survival rate from breast cancer for women in Gateshead and South Tyneside Health Authority is 75%, the same as in England as a whole. These figures relate to women diagnosed in 1992–94 and followed up to 31 December 1999.

Theft and Fraud

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the cost of theft and fraud to (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies in each of the last four years. [27971]

Ruth Kelly: The information provided was compiled from information supplied to the Treasury for inclusion in the Government fraud reports for the years 1997–98, 1998–99, 1999–2000 and 2000–01. These figures do not include some external thefts and fraud but we cannot guarantee that this is the complete picture as there is no requirement for Departments to report details of all external thefts and frauds to us. Departmental returns include details of cases relating to their agencies but our records are not detailed enough to allow us to provide separate figures for departments and agencies. Data relating to NDPB are not collected for inclusion in the fraud report.

Cost of theft and fraud—HM Treasury

1997–98	15,385
1998–99	20,867
1999–2000	21,630

Lost/Stolen Property

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list those items valued at more than £50 which have been stolen or lost from his Department in each of the last four years. [27999]

Ruth Kelly: The information is as follows:

	Item(s)	Cost (approximately)
1998	1 Laptop PC	2,500
1999	1 Desktop PC	2,000
	1 Laptop PC	2,000
	1 Laptop PC	3,000
2000	1 LCD Projector	2,000
	2 Disk Drives	300
	1 Laptop PC	2,000
2001	1 Laptop PC	2,000
	1 Personal Data Assistant (PDA)	250
	1 Laptop PC	2,000

Bank and Building Society Interest

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much tax is paid annually by basic rate taxpayers on bank and building society interest. [26254]

Ruth Kelly: The amounts are included in "Inland Revenue Statistics" table 2.6, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. The latest version can be accessed on the Inland Revenue website http://www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stat/income_tax/it_t06_1.htm.

Advertising Campaigns

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list advertising campaigns undertaken by his Department and associated non-departmental public bodies since May 1997; what the cost of each campaign was; and if he will make a statement. [27603]

Ruth Kelly: With regards to advertising campaigns by HM Treasury, I refer the hon. Member to my reply given to the hon. Member for Isle of Wight (Mr. Turner) on 15 January 2002, Official Report, column 432W, and the reply given to the former hon. Member for Guildford, Mr. St. Aubyn, on 18 May 2000, Official Report, column 258W, by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary.

National Lottery

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total receipts from Lottery duty are since the inception of the Lottery. [27931]

Mr. Boateng: Receipts from Lottery duty since its introduction in December 1994 are shown in the table.

Lottery duty

December 1994 to March 1995	103,905
1995–96	611,912
1996–97	557,777
1997–98	674,517
1998–99	627,606
1999–2000	609,173
2000–01	596,386
2001–02 (to November 2001)	387,309

Aggregates Levy (Scotland)

Sir Robert Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of the aggregates levy in Scotland. [27890]

Mr. Boateng: A Regulatory Impact Assessment for the aggregates levy was published at the time of Budget 2000. It is available from the Customs and Excise website.

Fraud

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list each of the central Government bodies which have reported fraud cases in each of the last four years, indicating for each body (a) the number of cases, (b) the number of staff involved in each case and (c) the total value of frauds. [27929]

Ruth Kelly: The information in the table was compiled from data supplied to HM Treasury by Departments for the annual fraud report in 1997–98, 1998–99, 1999–2000 and 2000–01 and is an analysis of internal frauds only (ie frauds committed by departmental employees).

The list of Departments is not complete. The absence of a Department from the list indicates that a 'nil' return was received from that Department in each of the four years. The data relate to frauds and thefts committed by employees of Departments only.

The values of frauds supplied by Departments are often only estimated values as a number of cases reported each year are at an early stage of investigation when values might not be known.

Euro

Mr. Reed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to allow United Kingdom businesses to make dual currency VAT returns to Customs and Excise where they trade in sterling and euros. [28395]

Ruth Kelly: No. The euro is treated for VAT return purposes as any other foreign currency.

Mr. Reed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the total cost to United Kingdom businesses of additional administrative costs following the introduction of euro notes and coins. [28396]

Ruth Kelly: It is not possible to estimate the administrative costs to United Kingdom businesses of the introduction of the euro in the euro area. This would depend on the approach taken by individual organisations.

"Promoting Sport in the Community"

Mr. Reed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many copies of his consultation document, "Promoting Sport in the Community", were printed; and how many responses he has received to the consultation. [28603]

Mr. Boateng: 5,000 copies of the "Promoting Sport in the Community" consultation document were printed and it is also available on the Treasury public internet site. A number of responses to the consultation have been received and consultation continues.

Public Sector Money

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for what reasons (a) the £162 million payment due on 1 October 2001 to Renewco was classified as public sector money and (b) the £1.2 billion loan to Railtrack administration was not classified as public sector money. [28826]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Office for National Statistics (ONS) determined that Renewco's activities would be classified to the public sector. The decision was based on the application of internationally agreed definitions for national accounts. This means borrowing by Renewco would be public sector borrowing and add to public sector net debt. The borrowed funds are therefore "public sector money". Payments by Government to Renewco would be transfers of public sector money within the public sector and so would have no impact on the consolidation public sector statistics.

Loans to Railtrack's administrator count as lending by the public sector to the private sector. That lending has to be funded from public sector sources such as taxes or government borrowing, and so is "public sector money". The lending is expected to be repaid before the end of March 2002 and so would have no impact on the fiscal balances and expenditure measures for the financial year as a whole.

Gift Aid

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give the reasons underlying his statement in the pre-Budget report that the generosity of Gift Aid has been increased; and if he will make a statement. [28921]

Ruth Kelly: In his pre-Budget report statement the Chancellor stated that Gift Aid was being more widely used. This is a result of reforms he introduced from April 2000 to improve incentives for giving to charity. A larger number of donors can now use Gift Aid following the abolition of the £250 million minimum limit on Gift Aid donations. This has brought into the scheme the large number of smaller donations, which were previously excluded.

Child Benefit

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 12 December 2001, Official Report, column 891W, on child benefit, what the yield would be for 2002–03 of taxing child benefit payments to (a) recipients paying tax at the higher rate and (b) higher rate tax payers in a couple where one partner receives child benefit, with child benefit rates at £26.25 per week for the first child and £17.60 per week for subsequent children. [27317]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 15 January 2002]: If child benefit were increased to £26.25 per week for the first child and £17.60 per week for subsequent children and made taxable for higher rate taxpayers, it is estimated that it would yield about £0.1 billion of income tax. If it were taxable at the higher rate for any family with a higher rate taxpayer (regardless of who received the benefit) it would yield around £1.0 billion of income tax.

Climate Change Levy

Mr. Bacon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent assessment he has made of the results of the impact of the introduction of the climate change levy on the priority given to energy efficiency by United Kingdom energy managers; and if he will make a statement. [28013]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 18 January 2002]: The climate change levy is designed to promote greater energy efficiency. Part of the levy revenue is being recycled to provide enhanced advice on energy efficiency to business and to provide support for energy efficiency investments. As the levy package has only been operational since April 2001, it is too early for an assessment to be made of its impact.

Census

Mr. Curry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what he estimates to be the minimum threshold in respect of persons and households compatible with the requirements of confidentiality about individuals which will permit effective data to be made available through the 2001 Census; [28863]

(2) how many parishes in (a) North Yorkshire and (b) England will fall below the minimum threshold of 100 persons/40 households for the purposes of the 2001 Census carried out by the Office for National Statistics. [28862]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from John Kidgell to Mr. David Curry, dated 21 January 2002:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent questions asking:

(i) what he estimates to be the minimum threshold in respect of persons and households compatible with the requirements of confidentiality about individuals which will permit effective data to be made available through the 2001 Census (28863); and

(ii) how many parishes in (a) North Yorkshire and (b) England will fall below the minimum threshold of 100 persons/40 households for the purposes of the 2001 Census (28862).

I am replying in his absence.

As part of the disclosure control measures being adopted to protect the confidentiality of personal information provided in the 2001 Census, we have recently announced that standard statistical output, other than simple headcounts, will not be released for small areas below a population threshold of 100 resident persons and 40 resident households.

The design of output areas recognises the need to identify parishes separately in the 2001 Census, but the number of parishes that fall below this threshold will not be known until the processing of data is completed later this year. Using information from the 1991 Census, we would estimate that some 215 parishes in North Yorkshire and 1230 in England would fall below the 2001 Census threshold.

Scottish Bus Group Pension Fund

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has had discussions with Scottish Ministers concerning the Scottish Bus Group pension fund holders. [28797]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Treasury Ministers have held discussions on the matter with Scottish Ministers.

The Scottish Executive are taking forward matters regarding the Scottish Bus Group pension fund, following its announcement in November 2001 on the pension fund surplus.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he has discussed with the Scotland Office the Scottish Bus Group pension fund holders. [28796]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Treasury Ministers have held discussions on the matter with Scotland Office Ministers.

The Scottish Executive are taking forward matters regarding the Scottish Bus Group pension fund, following its announcement in November 2001 on the pension fund surplus.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has received representations from members of the Scottish Parliament about the Scottish Bus Group pension fund holders. [28795]

Mr. Andrew Smith: My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations on this matter.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has received representations from the Scottish Bus Group pension fund holders. [28794]

Mr. Andrew Smith: My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations on this matter.

HEALTH

Social Services Departments

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 8 November 2001, Official Report, column 351W, on social services departments, if he will set out the amount of unallocated funds within the departmental expenditure limit (a) at the start of the financial year, (b) now and (c) the forecast outturn. [14959]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 15 November 2001]: The information requested is given in the table.

2001–02 departmental unallocated provision

£000

	Plan	Forecast outturn[1]
NHS[2]	350,000	0
Personal social services	82,750	2,750
Total	432,750	2,750

[1] This is the forecast outturn that will be reported to Parliament shortly in the spring supplementary estimates.

[2] This is the total departmental unallocated provision for the national health service of which £90 million is for revenue expenditure and £260 million for capital expenditure. The planned departmental unallocated provision for PSS was for revenue expenditure only.

BCG Vaccine

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the availability of the BCG vaccine against tuberculosis in schools in Arundel and South Downs. [18322]

Ms Blears: Our policy is that all school children should be BCG immunised between ages 10 to 14 if they have not previously been immunised. Initially, in West Sussex, this vaccine was offered to those students who were due to leave school in summer 2001. Where there has been sufficient vaccine and resources year 10 pupils were also offered testing and immunisation. Any current year 10 and 11 pupils who have not yet been offered vaccine will be offered testing and immunisation during this academic year.

Standards Reports

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the reasons for the delay in publishing the standards reports relating to (a) cleanliness and (b) decontamination announced on 14 November 2000. [19957]

Ms Blears: There has been no delay in publishing the standards reports relating to hospital cleanliness. So far as decontamination is concerned, we took the view that improving the standard of decontamination in the national health service was more important than reporting on it. We therefore asked the assessors to help with drawing up action plans and check on their implementation. We have published the results of the preliminary and comprehensive surveys of decontamination today. Copies will be placed in the Library.

Community Equipment Services

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what systems are in place to ensure that social services and NHS trusts have agreed budgets for community equipment services by April 2002. [R] [21794]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 10 December 2001]: Statutory guidance issued to health and local authorities in March 2001 explained the requirement to make adequate financial provision for modernising local community equipment services. Several systems of financial and performance monitoring encourage commissioners and providers to identify and agree budgets for community equipment services for the coming financial year. These include spring and autumn monitoring exercises with senior managers of social services. Budgetary commitments agreed in local business plans by social services and national health service trusts feed into local modernisation reviews and planning for the integration of local services.

Home Helps, Buckingham

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many home helps are working in the constituency of Buckingham. [23719]

Ms Blears: Data on the number of home helps are not available by parliamentary constituency. As at 30 September 2000 there were 52 full-time and 661 part-time home helps employed by Buckinghamshire county council. This is equivalent to approximately 410 whole-time staff.

NHS Dentists

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the adult population in (a) Devon and (b) Torbay was registered with NHS dentists in (i) 1997–98, (ii) 1998–99, (iii) 1999–2000 and (iv) 2000–01. [22802]

Ms Blears: The percentage of adults registered with a general dental service (GDS) dentist per head of population is shown in the table for South and West Devon health authority and North and East Devon health authority for 30 September in each of the years 1997–98 to 2000–01.

The registration rates for September 1997 are not comparable with the later figures. The September 1997 rates reflect a 24-month registration period; the later figures reflect a 15 month registration period.

Devon is covered by the South and West Devon HA and North and East Devon HA. Information is not available by constituency area for the percentage of adult registrations per population.

General dental services: percentage of the adult registrations[1] per population[2], 1997–98 to 2000–01

September each year	South and West Devon HA	North and East Devon HA
1997–98[3]	[3]51	[3]50
1998–99	43	43
1999–2000	41	45
2000–01	42	48

[1] Based on the number of adult registrations at September for each financial year.

[2] ONS mid-year adult population estimates used to calculate percentage of adult patients registered.

[3] Registration rates reflect a 24-month registration period rather than 15 months which is the basis of the later figures.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the correlation between inadequate coverage of NHS dentistry in a given area and a higher than average incidence of oral cancer. [25389]

Ms Blears: With an incidence of oral cancer of some 2,500 new cases per year it is not possible to make significant comparisons with provision of national health service dentistry by area especially as confounding factors like use of tobacco and alcohol would need to be eliminated. Nevertheless, we recognise that dentists have a unique opportunity both to warn patients of the risks from smoking and to identify pre-cancerous signs of oral cancer. We are committed to improving access to NHS dentistry.

Mixed Sex Wards

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many mixed sex hospital wards are in use in the United Kingdom. [14732]

Ms Blears: Guidance on maintaining privacy and dignity was first issued to the service in 1997 and since then the national health service has been working towards a clear target to eliminate mixed sex accommodation in 95 per cent. of national health service trusts by December 2002.

It is not possible to provide information at the level of the individual ward. The majority of hospital wards are usually subdivided into bays which are designated as male or female. Depending on the case mix and local need, the exact proportion of male to female bays will vary.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the Government's progress on their plan to abolish mixed sex wards by 2002. [26717]

Ms Blears: We have set a target of December 2002 for the provision of single sex accommodation in 95 per cent. of trusts.

On-going monitoring of the progress of the project continues and indicates that progress towards the targets is being maintained and work is continuing to ensure that this remains so.

Water Fluoridation

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the Government's policy on the fluoridation of water. [23968]

Ms Blears: Our current policy is to encourage health authorities with high levels of dental decay among their populations to consider the option of fluoridation as part of their overall oral health promotion strategy. Before asking their water suppliers to introduce fluoridation of the water supply, health authorities are required to undertake wide-ranging consultation with their local population to establish support for fluoridation.

The Medical Research Council has been commissioned to provide scientific advice regarding the health effects of water fluoridation and to suggest priorities for any further research which may be required. We will be reviewing our policy in the light of their report which is expected next year.

Health Expenditure, Isle of Wight

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the expenditure was on non-national health service nursing, midwifery and health visiting staff in the Isle of Wight health authority in the financial years (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99, (c) 1999–2000 and (d) 2000–01. [23660]

Ms Blears: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Multiple Sclerosis Drugs

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of NICE's provision appraisal determination estimate for implementing a positive guidance on beta interferon and glatiramer acetate; [8710]

(2) what assessment he has made of NICE's Provisional Appraisal Determination estimate for implementing positive guidance on beta interferon and glatiramer acetate. [9416]

Ms Blears: We are currently holding discussions with the manufacturers to consider a range of options under which drugs for multiple sclerosis might be made available under the national health service. One option is a 'risk-sharing' scheme which will evaluate their clinical and cost effectiveness, and until these discussions are concluded we cannot provide the information requested.

Breast Cancer

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients in the Buckinghamshire health authority area referred urgently with suspected breast cancer waited for more than two weeks for an out-patient appointment for each reporting period since March 1999. [24849]

Ms Blears: The information requested is shown in the table.

Quarterly Central Return QCW, Code QA8

NHS Census

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many responses to the NHS census he received from people living in the Buckingham constituency. [24860]

Ms Blears: There has been no national health service census. The acute trust patient survey is currently scheduled to take place between January and March 2002. The survey will be part of a programme that the Government are putting in place throughout England. Hospital trusts will carry out a specially designed patient survey programme to seek views on the patient experience.

Improving the experience of the individual patient is central to the NHS Plan. By finding out more, in this systematic manner, we will increase our knowledge of what patients need and expect from the NHS and how well the service responds to their needs and expectations.

Pharmacies

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many community pharmacies in the Buckingham constituency (a) closed and (b) opened in each year since 1997. [24855]

Ms Blears: The information requested is shown in the table.

Number of community pharmacies in the Buckinghamshire health authority area that opened and/or closed 1997–98 to 2000–01

Year	Opened	Closed

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the latest percentage reduction of fees for community pharmacists for dispensing NHS prescriptions. [24708]

Ms Blears [holding answer 8 January 2002]: The fees paid to community pharmacy contractors vary according to the item prescribed. The large majority of prescriptions attract a basic dispensing fee. From July 1999 to October 2001 that fee was 97.5p per prescription dispensed. In November 2001 it was changed to 87.4p. This represents a reduction of approximately 10.4 per cent.

The basic dispensing fee is one of a number of fees and allowances by which the global sum for community pharmacies is distributed between pharmacy contractors. The global sum is the amount to be paid to contractors overall in the year in question. The global sum for 2001–02 for England and Wales is £806.6 million, an increase of 3.7 per cent. over 2000–01.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the future of pharmacy within the national health service. [25534]

Ms Blears: Our programme for the future of pharmacy in the national health service in England was set out in "Pharmacy in the Future—Implementing the NHS Plan" published in September 2000, a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was allocated to pharmacists for the dispensing of prescriptions; how many prescriptions were dispensed; and what was the unit cost allowed for each prescription in each year from 1992 to 2001. [25536]

Ms Blears: Each year, a figure (known as the global sum) is set for the remuneration to be paid to pharmacies overall in England and Wales for the national health service pharmaceutical services they provide.

The total remuneration to be paid in any given year is distributed through a system of fees and allowances, some of which relate directly to the number (and type) of prescriptions dispensed, some of which do not.

For the years 1991–92 to 2000–01 (the latest year for which complete information is available), the table shows the global sum, the number of prescription items dispensed and the global sum expressed as an amount per prescription item.

Year	Global sum (£ million)	Prescription items dispensed (million)	Global sum expressed as an amount per prescription item dispensed (£)
1991–92	601.4	412.8	1.46
1992–93	631.1	429.4	1.47
1993–94	640.6	447.3	1.43
1994–95	655.3	462.2	1.42
1995–96	671.7	474.7	1.41
1996–97	692.7	487.9	1.42
1997–98	709.3	505.8	1.40
1998–99	730.6	518.3	1.41
1999–2000	755.1	535.7	1.41
2000–01	777.8	531.8	1.38

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to replace the global sum approach to the payment of pharmacists for dispensing NHS prescriptions. [25537]

Ms Blears: We have no current plans to replace the present global sum system.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients in the Buckinghamshire health authority area waited more than (a) three months, (b) six months, (c) nine months, (d) 12 months, (e) 15 months, (f) 18 months and (g) 24 months for (i) heart operations, (ii) cancer treatment and (iii) hip replacements in each year since 1997. [24850]

Ms Blears: The information requested is in the table.

[1] The time spent waiting for admission is calculated for HES purposes as being the period elapsed from the initial decision to admit until the date that the patient is actually admitted. This takes no account of any periods when the patient may have been unavailable for admission, or may have been suspended from the waiting list for medical reasons. It is for this reason that this analysis apparently shows patients waiting over 15 months. The waiting time figures published by the Department of Health take these situations into account.

Hospital Episode Statistics (HES)

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list NHS trusts by length of average waiting time (a) to see an orthopaedic specialist and (b) for a non-emergency orthopaedic operation. [25449]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

The in-patient average waiting time is calculated as the median time waited so far for patients who were on the trauma and orthopaedics in-patient waiting list at end September 2001, that is it looks at patients who are still waiting for treatment.

For out-patients, the total number of patients still waiting for a first out-patient appointment is not collected. As a result, the average is calculated using data for patients who have already been seen for their first out-patient appointment. Hence the average is calculated as the median waiting time of patients seen during Quarter 2 2001–02 for a first out-patient appointment in trauma and orthopaedics specialty following general practitioner referral.

The in-patient and out-patient averages are approximations only, particularly for trusts who see very few patients. It is difficult to accurately calculate the average.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list average accident and emergency waiting times by NHS trust for (a) triage and (b) definitive treatment in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [25450]

Ms Blears: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the NHS trusts in England where more than 10 per cent. of patients are suspended from the waiting list for an in-patient operation. [25491]

Mr. Hutton: Trusts with a suspension rate of more than 10 per cent. are shown in the table.

Care Homes

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which national minimum standards care homes will have to be fully compliant with from 1 April 2002. [24183]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 19 December 2001]: National minimum standards that will not apply to care homes from 1 April 2002 are those relating to training and environmental requirements. Specifically, existing care homes will have until 2005 to comply with the standards requiring a minimum of 50 per cent. of care staff to be qualified at NVQ level 2 or equivalent. Existing care homes will have until 2007 to comply with the standards relating to room size, shared facilities and places in single rooms.

However, non-compliance with national minimum standards will not lead to the National Care Standards Commission automatically pursuing enforcement action or deregistration. Instead it will seek to agree actions to be taken by homes to ensure compliance with standards within a reasonable time frame—unless vulnerable service users are at serious risk as a result of non-compliance. The national minimum standards are intended to be a means of assisting care homes to improve the quality of their services as well as a vehicle to protect vulnerable people.

Not all of the standards relate to all care homes as some are aimed at specialist provision only.

Western General Hospital, Swindon

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many new beds are to be purchased for the new Western General Hospital in Swindon; how many new beds have been purchased; where they are presently stored; how they will be transported to the new hospital; what their total cost was; how their dimensions compare with the dimensions of the doors and lifts through which they must pass; and if he will make a statement. [24264]

Ms Blears: The information requested is not available centrally.

Citizens Council

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which organisation will be used to prepare and organise meetings of the Citizens Council. [24615]

Mr. Hutton: I understand that the National Institute for Clinical Excellence has not yet appointed an organisation to prepare and organise meetings of the Citizens Council.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if there will be a time limit imposed between ceasing to work in specified capacities and joining the Citizens Council. [24607]

Mr. Hutton: The National Institute for Clinical Excellence is considering this matter.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which categories of desired members of the Citizens Council will be targeted by outreach selection from the electoral register. [24610]

Mr. Hutton: It is important that the Citizens Council reflects the range of different views of society within England and Wales. Outreach selection will be used to complement the results of open advertisement. The categories of members which need to be enhanced through outreach selection will become apparent once the first stage—open advertisement—is complete.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if an independent body will be responsible for evaluating the meetings of the Citizens Council. [24614]

Mr. Hutton: I understand that the National Institute for Clinical Excellence intends to recruit an independent body to evaluate the meetings of the Citizens Council.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many subjects Citizens Councils are expected to cover each year. [24611]

Mr. Hutton: The National Institute for Clinical Excellence has not yet made a decision on this point.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if members of the Citizens Council will be paid travel and accommodation expenses to attend its meetings. [24613]

Mr. Hutton: Yes.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what briefing will be given to members of the Citizens Council which will advise NICE. [24579]

Mr. Hutton: The nature of the briefing will be a matter for the National Institute for Clinical Excellence.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how long people will remain in the pool of potential members of the Citizens Council; and if the requirements for membership of this pool differ from that for full members of the council. [24609]

Mr. Hutton: I understand that the pool of potential members will exist solely in order for members to be selected. Once the selection has taken place, the pool will cease to exist.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the estimated annual cost to public funds will be of the new Citizens Council to advise NICE. [24612]

Mr. Hutton: The National Institute for Clinical Excellence is currently considering the detailed arrangements for the Citizens Council and these will be published in the institute's business plan.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what will be the ratio of membership between England and Wales of the members of the Citizens Council which will advise NICE; and what recruitment mechanism will be used to select members. [24580]

Mr. Hutton: The appointment of members to the Citizens Council is a matter for the National Institute for Clinical Excellence. We are confident that the National Institute for Clinical Excellence will ensure that the constitution of the council will contain representatives from all walks of life from England and Wales. We therefore do not consider it necessary to be prescriptive about the number of members from each country.

A and E (IT)

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultations have taken place with (a) the Royal College of Nursing and (b) other representatives of nurses over the new IT provision in A and E. [24585]

Ms Blears: The Royal College of Nursing, the chair of the Royal College of Nursing Accident and Emergency Nurses Group and a representative of the Royal College of Nursing Faculty of Emergency Nursing are part of the consultation process for the new clinical assessment system—the information technology system that is currently being introduced to accident and emergency departments.

Efficiency Task Force

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what have been the annual financial savings generated by the work of the NHS Efficiency Task Force since its inception. [24443]

Mr. Hutton: The national health service Efficiency Task Force was an advisory group that made a very helpful contribution in taking forward the Government's programme to improve efficiency. It is not possible to ascribe specific financial savings to the work of the task force.

Public Relations

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the projects on which his Department collaborates with Headline Communications, indicating how much money has been paid to Headline Communications in the past year. [24577]

Ms Blears: Headline Communications have provided the Department with design services for a variety of projects including:

Health and Social Care Awards
Association of Healthcare Communicators Conference
NHS Direct
NHS Magazine
NHS Syndication Service
NHS Plan News.

Moneys paid to Headline Communications from 1 December 2000 to 30 November 2001 amounted to £24,161.48 inclusive of VAT.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the projects on which his Department collaborates with Atlas PR, indicating how much money has been paid by his Department to Atlas PR in the past year. [24616]

Ms Blears: Atlas PR have provided the Department with a variety of communications services on the following projects:

NHS Magazine
NHS.uk
Walk in Centres
Patient and Public Information website
Association of Healthcare Communicators Conference
NHS Quality Programme
NHS Plan
NHS syndication service
DH and NHS Corporate Exhibitions and Events
NHS Plan News
NHS Direct
Health and Social Care Awards.

Moneys paid to Atlas Public Relations from 1 December 2000 to 30 November 2001 amounted to £807,148.60 inclusive of VAT.

Mental Health

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met his independent reference group on mental health. [24449]

Jacqui Smith: The last meeting of this group took place on 11 February 1998. My right. hon Friend the Secretary of State for Health has never met with this reference group, however my right hon. Friend the Member for Brent, South (Mr. Boateng), when Under-Secretary of State for Health, met with the group at their last meeting on the 11 February 1998. The independent reference group discontinued its work in 1998

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met the Secretary of State for Education in order to discuss the training for state schools in the skills and knowledge to ensure children have access to early assessment and support in relation to mental health. [24687]

Jacqui Smith: [holding answer 8 January 2002]: My right hon. Friend has not met with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Skills to discuss this topic. We recognise the importance of promoting children's mental health and emotional well-being and the importance of working together to promote this.

We have an on-going commitment to the improvement of child mental health and it will be an important part of the Children's National Service Framework. We shall be working closely with the Department for Education and Skills when developing the mental health module of the framework. This is a major development and will safeguard the quality of child mental health services.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the Government expects to publish its strategy for women's mental health. [28288]

Jacqui Smith: [holding answer 18 January 2002]: The Department will publish the women's mental health consultation document in the spring and, after a period of consultation, will publish the strategy implementation document in the autumn.

Nursing and Residential Care Homes

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nursing and residential care homes in each health authority have closed in each year since 1997. [24619]

Jacqui Smith: The total number of residential and nursing care establishment closures in 1999 and 2000, together with number of new registrations, are shown in the table. Regular statistical collections on nursing and residential care home closures were first introduced for the year ending 31 March 1999. Reliable information is not available for each health authority.

Clinical Indicators

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which of the clinical indicators announced on 9 July 1997 were adopted as performance measures. [24571]

Mr. Hutton: The Department published a consultation paper to the national health service in July 1997 which proposed a set of 15 clinical indicators. Following consultation six indicators were published in "Quality and performance in the NHS: Clinical Indicators" in June 1999 and in "Quality and performance in the NHS: NHS Performance Indicators" in July 2000.

The six indicators published were:

Deaths in hospital following surgery
Deaths in hospital following a fractured hip
Deaths in hospital following a heart attack
Readmission to hospital following discharge
Returning home following treatment for a stroke
Returning home following treatment for a fractured hip.

NICE-Approved Therapies

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what new funding will be made available to health authorities to ensure the funding of all NICE-approved therapies. [24588]

Ms Blears: We have recently announced an average 7.2 per cent. real terms increase in funding of the national health service.

We expect health authorities and primary care trusts to fund treatments recommended by the National Institute for Clinical Excellence from their general allocations.

Diabetes

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what financial support will be made available to GPs who seek to implement the delivery strategy prelude to the National Service Framework for Diabetes. [24589]

Jacqui Smith: The Diabetes National Service Framework Standards, published on 14 December 2001, include an analysis of the implications for planning and organising services. Those who are planning and investing in local diabetes services on an on-going basis will be able to take account of this in their plans for next year and beyond. Health improvement programmes and primary care implementation plans produced by health authorities, primary care groups and primary care trusts must include strategies for implementing National Service Frameworks.

The delivery strategy for the Diabetes National Service Framework will follow this summer, for implementation from April 2003. We shall set milestones in the delivery strategy based upon the resources that will be available to support implementation.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to introduce the National Standards Framework for diabetes. [26020]

Jacqui Smith: We published the Diabetes National Service Framework Standards on 14 December 2001. The delivery strategy will follow this summer, for implementation from April 2003.

National Institute for Clinical Excellence

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps are being taken to provide extra funding for new treatments approved by NICE mid-way though the financial year and to ensure that the funding of other treatments and services awaiting approval is not adversely affected; [25874]

(2) what steps are being taken by the National Institute for Clinical Excellence to ensure that patients whose treatment has not been (a) examined and (b) approved by NICE will not assume a lower priority than patients on approved treatments; [25876]

(3) what steps are being taken by the National Institute for Clinical Excellence to ensure that the provision of unapproved services is not affected by funding the cost of approved treatments. [25875]

Mr. Hutton: Standing guidance in Health Service Circular 1999/176 advise national health service bodies to use their existing arrangements to determine local policies for treatments not referred to the National Institute for Clinical Excellence or pending guidance from NICE, using publicly available evidence to inform their decisions.

The statutory obligation on health authorities and primary care trusts to provide appropriate funding for treatments recommended by NICE was introduced as part of our strategy to ensure consistency of access to treatments for patients.

Funding is provided in baseline allocations to meet these commitments. NHS bodies are expected to take into account in-year pressures in developing their expenditure plans.

Health Care Provision (Value Comparisons)

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to establish a body to compare the value of (a) extra district nurses and (b) counsellors with the cost-effectiveness of drugs and treatments. [25873]

Mr. Hutton: We have no plans to establish such a body.

Tuberculosis

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of tuberculosis have been reported in the Portsmouth and South East Hampshire health authority in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [24946]

Ms Blears: Information on statutory notifications of tuberculosis (excluding chemoprophylaxis) are available from the Public Health Laboratory Service. Further local information can be obtained from the Chairman of Portsmouth and South East Hampshire health authority.

The Department collects information on tuberculosis as part of the Hospital Episodes Statistic (HES) system, which contains details of patients admitted to and treated in NHS hospitals in England.

Portsmouth and South East Hampshire health authority: admission for tuberculosis (ICD10 code A15-A19)

	Number
1996–97	10
1997–98	11
1998–99	16
1999–2000	28
2000–01	27

Admissions are defined as the first period of patient care under one consultant within one health care provider. Admissions do not represent the number of patients, as a person may have more than one admission within the year.

Stroke Clinics

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions have taken place with concerned parties regarding funding of stroke clinics in the UK. [24894]

Jacqui Smith: The funding of stroke clinics is a matter for local discussion as set out in the recently published priorities and planning framework 2002–03. One of the priorities is to continue to implement on agreed time scales the National Service Framework for Older People.

The NSF for Older People sets a milestone of April 2002 for every general hospital which cares for people with stroke to have plans to introduce a specialised stroke service as described in the stroke service model from 2004. The development for these plans will incorporate local service configuration, integration and any relevant aspects of local funding requirements/priorities.

Orthopaedic Consultants

Martin Linton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many orthopaedic consultants were working in NHS hospitals in Merton, Sutton and Wandsworth health authority in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [25848]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is provided in the table.

CT/MRI Scanners

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) CT and (b) MRI scanners are in working use per head of population in each health authority area in England and Wales. [24664]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 8 January 2002]: There are currently approximately 5.7 CT scanners and 3.7 MRI scanners per million head of population in England. By the time that central programmes are complete in 2004 these figures will have risen to approximately 7.1 and 5.2 per million respectively.

To provide these figures for every health authority in England would require disproportionate effort. However a breakdown by region has been provided in the tables.

Information regarding CT and MRI provision in Wales is a matter for the National Assembly for Wales.

Surgical Instruments

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department has made of the extent of re-use of single-use surgical instruments in hospital trusts; what action has been taken against hospital trusts found to be re-using surgical instruments designated for single use only; and which items of surgical equipment in general hospital surgical theatres are normally designated for single use only. [24667]

Jacqui Smith: Designation of medical devices as single use is a matter for the device manufacturer. The Department has advised national health service trusts on a number of occasions that they should not re-use single use devices. Any trust found doing so during the recent comprehensive survey was advised to cease and such cessation was made part of the action plan.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of hospital trusts in England and Wales have an infection control policy in place regarding surgical instrument sterilisation. [24675]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 8 January 2002]: The Department does not routinely collect information about the details of national health service trusts' infection control policies. There is, however, a controls assurance standard dealing with infection control. This requires NHS trusts to ensure that written policies, procedures and guidance for the prevention and control of infection are implemented and reflect relevant legislation and published professional guidance, including that on decontamination and the reprocessing of re-usable medical devices.

Air Ambulances

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many air ambulances there are; and what plans he has to increase this number; [24683]

(2) what his Department is doing to encourage increased corporate sponsorship of air ambulances. [24684]

Ms Blears [holding answer 8 January 2002]: In England, there are 12 air ambulance services provided by 12 independent air ambulance charities. These charities are responsible for the number of aircraft provided.

Fund raising for air ambulances is organised by independent local charities. On all primary missions, air ambulances are called out directly to emergencies by the local ambulance service. Partnerships between the national health service and a whole range of charitable organisations can bring additional benefits to patients in particular circumstances.

GP Retirements

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioners are due to retire in (a) Pendle and (b) the East Lancashire health authority in each year up to 2005; and what steps he is taking to ensure that there are sufficient numbers of younger general practitioners so that no practice closes. [24979]

Mr. Hutton: Figures are not available centrally in the requested format. However, during 2002–03, 14 general practitioners in the East Lancashire health authority area are expected to retire. A further eight GPs are due to retire during 2003–04.

18 GPs currently within the Pendle Primary Care Group are aged over 55.

East Lancashire health authority are pursuing a number of initiatives both in the long and short term to help address the problems in recruiting and retaining GPs.

Note:

These figures have been extracted from a study by Lancashire university in 1998 relating to work force planning for general medical and other primary care staff.

Asthma

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will prepare a national service framework for asthma. [24981]

Jacqui Smith: There are currently no plans to establish a national service framework for asthma.

Belarus

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to complete an inter-country adoption agreement with Belarus. [25153]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 9 January 2002]: An inter-country adoption agreement is currently being drawn up between the United Kingdom and Belarus. The wording of the agreement is being finalised. Once this has been done, it will be signed by both countries in due course.

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what discussions he has had with the Royal College of General Practitioners about recognising ME as a clinical condition by GPs; [25393]

(2) what research his Department has commissioned into the diagnosis and treatment of ME; [25394]

(3) if he will issue guidance to health authorities to ensure that ME is recognised as a clinical condition by GPs and that patients are referred to appropriate specialists. [25395]

Jacqui Smith: We have not had specific discussions with the Royal College of General Practitioners about this issue. However the Chronic Fatigue Syndrome/ME independent Working Group's report which was published on 11 January has been placed on the Chief Medical Officer's website so that it can be accessed by all interested parties including general practitioners. The report and the summary for clinicians should result in improved awareness and understanding of this condition.

ME is mainly managed in primary care. The range of symptoms and other conditions associated with it should be investigated and treated by the most appropriate primary, community or secondary care service. Some patients are seen by neurologists, rheumatologists and psychiatrists.

The Department has commissioned research into the diagnosis and treatment of ME/CFS and details are available on the National Research Register which can be accessed via the Department's research and development website—www.doh.gov.uk/research. The Department has asked the Medical Research Council to develop a broad strategy for advancing biomedical and health services research on chronic fatigue syndrome.

Operating Theatres

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to monitor health and safety standards in operating theatres. [25358]

Ms Blears: The statutory responsibility for managing health and safety, including operating theatres, lies with the chief executive of a national health service trust.

The Department has introduced controls assurance standards as part of performance management arrangements. There are 21 controls assurance standards including a health and safety standard, medical devices standard, infection control standard and a decontamination of medical devices standard.

The controls assurance health and safety management standard requires that individual departments have health and safety policies, which address their own specific health and safety concerns.

NHS trusts are required to undertake risk assessment and the implementation of action plans against criteria defined in the controls assurance standards. NHS trusts must include a controls assurance statement in their annual report.

NHS Staff Budget

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total staffing budget of the NHS was in financial year 2000–01 (a) as an actual figure and (b) as a percentage of the total NHS Budget; and what the equivalent estimates are for (a) and (b) in the NHS Budget for 2001–02. [26595]

Mr. Hutton: Finalised figures for 2000–01 are not yet available. Provisional figures show that the hospital and community health service paybill in 2000–01 is £20.4 billion. This is 46 per cent. of the estimated net national health service expenditure in 2000–01 (£44.6 billion).

Our estimate of the HCHS paybill in 2001–02 is £22.7 billion. This is 46 per cent. of the planned expenditure for the NHS in 2001–02 (£48.8 billion).

Revenue Support Grant

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the category and amount of each item of funding outside the revenue support grant which his Department made available to (a) Westminster and (b) Kensington and Chelsea in (i) 2000–01 and (ii) 2001–02. [26246]

Strategic Health Authorities

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the anticipated costs are of early retirement associated with the establishment of strategic health authorities. [26612]

Mr. Hutton: The current re-organisation of the national health service involves a significant movement of staff. However, all staff are guaranteed employment until 2003. With this in mind, it is too early to indicate levels (and therefore costs) of early retirement resulting from the forthcoming structural changes.

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the anticipated annual saving to the NHS budget is of replacing existing health authorities with the proposed strategic health authorities. [26598]

Mr. Hutton: Strategic health authorities will not be replacing the existing 95 health authorities. Existing health authorities will be disestablished at the end of March and the vast majority of their functions transferred to primary care trusts. Strategic health authorities will have a new role: one of strategic development and performance management. However, the reductions in bureaucracy made as a result of the whole reform programme will lead over time to annual savings of £100 million.

NHS Directors (Early Retirement)

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many executive directors of NHS trusts and health authorities were allowed to retire early in financial year 2000–01; and what cost this represented to the NHS Budget. [26596]

Mr. Hutton: The national health service does not hold details of the number of executive directors who were allowed to retire early in 2000–01, or the cost to the NHS Budget. However, the total compensation for loss of office paid in respect of all NHS directors in trusts, primary care trusts and health authorities, both executive and non-executive, was £3,652,000 for 2000–01.

Surgical Staff

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what new recruitment initiatives he plans to rectify the shortfall in surgeons in England; what assessment he has made of the feasibility of widening access to training programmes; what expenditure has been allocated to rectify the shortfall; by what date he expects the shortfall to be redressed; and if he will make a statement; [26098]

(2) if he will make a statement on the shortfall in surgical staff in England. [26097]

Mr. Hutton: The NHS Plan work force numbers targets, updated in the Government's manifesto, provide the staff needed to deliver the NHS Plan up until 2005. International recruitment of medical staff including surgical staff is being taken forward to help deliver these targets.

Increases in national health service staffing are funded from the general allocation to the NHS and for staff in training from the multi professional education and training budget. Spending plans beyond 2002–03 are currently being finalised as part of SR2002.

Our current supply projections expect an increase of around 1,320 trained specialists to be available to take up surgical consultant posts by 2009–10. This reflects increases in the numbers of doctors in higher specialist training in surgery as a result of the NHS Plan. Projections to 2009–10 suggest an increasing gap between supply and demand may emerge without further action. We continually review future work force needs as part of our national work force planning processes and take action accordingly to address any shortfalls. This action includes increasing numbers in training but also modernising roles and developing new ways of working for doctors alongside other staff.

Paramedics/Hospital Staff (Assaults)

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many assaults there have been on paramedics and hospital staff in each year since 1997 in (a) the UK, (b) the north-east and (c) South Tyneside. [26040]

Mr. Hutton: Information on the levels of violent incidents by individual staff group is not collected centrally, but may be held at a local level by national health service employers. Data on violent incidents involving all staff in the NHS were not collected centrally for 1997–98.

The Department conducted a survey of NHS trusts in England in 1998–99. The survey found that, on average, seven violent incidents were recorded each month per 1,000 staff. This is equivalent to approximately 65,000 violent incidents against NHS trust staff each year. Details of the survey can be found in Health Service Circular 1999/229: "Managing Violence, Accidents and Sickness Absence in the NHS", a copy of which is in the Library. Figures for recorded violent incidents in 2000–01 are currently being analysed by the Department.

The number of reported violent incidents for South Tyneside Health Care NHS Trust and for the North-East Ambulance Service NHS Trust is shown in the table.

South Tyneside health care NHS trust

Calendar Year	Violent incidents
1997	27
1998	114
1999	326
2000	558
2001	401

North-east ambulance service NHS trust

Financial Year	Violent incidents
1 April 1997 to 31 March 1998	39
1 April 1998 to 31 March 1999	66
1 April 1999 to 31 March 2000	142
1 April 2000 to 31 March 2001	201
1 April 2001 to 31 December 2001[1]	188

[1] To date

The increase in reported violent incidents by staff is as a result of both on-going local and national campaigns to tackle violence against staff working in the NHS. The reduction in reported violence in 2001 is however a more meaningful comparison, indicating an actual reduction in violent incidents over that 12 month period.

Bed Blocking

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many delayed discharges there were in North Yorkshire in the last month for which figures are available. [26455]

Jacqui Smith: During the four week period ending 30 December 2001 North Yorkshire health authority reported an average of 78 delayed discharges a week.

Sunderland Health Authority

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the real terms increase in budget allocated to Sunderland health authority has been for each year from 1997 inclusive; and what the projected increase is in each of the next three years. [26122]

Jacqui Smith: The real terms increase in budget allocated to Sunderland health authority for each year from 1997 inclusive is shown in the table. From 1 April 2002 the Sunderland health authority will be absorbed into the Northumberland and Tyne and Wear health authority.

Sunderland HA real terms revenue increase

1997–98	2,950	2.10
1998–99	3,251	2.31
1999–2000	8,225	4.37
2000–01	9,198	4.58
2001–02	13,957	6.39

Correspondence

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to reply to the hon. Member of Colchester's letters to him of 2 October and 30 November 2001 on behalf of Mr. and Mrs. Brookes and their son Peter. [25962]

Ms Blears: A reply was sent to the hon. Member on 9 January.

Medical Intervention Costs

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessments his Department has carried out in the last two years into the relative costs of medical interventions in the UK public and private health systems; if he will publish the results; if he will summarise the key conclusions; and if he will make a statement. [26911]

Mr. Hutton: The Department has recently conducted a survey of health authorities, primary care trusts and acute trusts on the levels of activity being commissioned in the private sector and the accompanying costs. The survey returns from the national health service are being validated and analysed. We expect to be able to share key findings shortly.

The Department does not collect information about the cost of medical interventions in private hospitals for non-NHS patients.

Care Home Beds (Wiltshire)

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the change in the number of care home beds in (a) west Wiltshire district and (b) Salisbury district since 1997. [26734]

Jacqui Smith: Information for West Wiltshire and Salisbury districts is not collected separately. The table shows the number of places in residential care homes and registered beds in nursing homes, private hospitals and clinics in the Wiltshire area in 1997 and 2001.

Residential places[1] and registered nursing beds in the Wiltshire[2] area in 1997 and 2001, as at 31 March

	1997	2001
Places in residential care homes	4,513	3,991
Registered nursing beds in nursing homes[3,4]	2,234	2,057
Total care beds	6,757	6,048

[1] Excludes places in children's homes.

[2] Information is presented for the area represented by the county of Wiltshire prior to local government re-organisation on 1 April 1997. Figures for 2001 relate to the unitary authority of Swindon and the reduced shire county area of Wiltshire. For both years, information on nursing beds relates to Wiltshire health authority (which equates to the former county of Wiltshire prior to local government re-organisation).

[3] Registered beds in general and mental nursing homes, hospitals and clinics.

[4] Information for registered nursing beds 1997 relates to the period 1 October 1996 to 31 March 1997.

Hospital Beds (Buckinghamshire)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many of the patients awaiting discharge in inappropriately occupied beds in Wycombe and Amersham hospitals will have their future care practice funded by (a) the health authority, (b) the county social services department and (c) a combination of both; and what the equivalent figures were in January (i) 2001, (ii) 1999, (iii) 1998 and (iv) 1997. [27120]

Jacqui Smith: Information is not collected centrally in the format requested.

Quarterly information for Buckinghamshire health authority, for patients aged 75 and over is available in the Library.

Hospital Car Parking Fees

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent guidance his Department has given NHS trusts with regard to car parking fees at hospitals. [26858]

Mr. Hutton: Guidance on car parking charges was issued to national health service hospitals in March 1996. It is a matter for individual hospitals to decide whether or not to charge for car parking and the cost of such charges in the light of local circumstances. Where charges are introduced, patients who are eligible to claim reimbursement of travelling expenses under the Hospital Travel Costs Scheme may have the charges reimbursed.

Autism

Joyce Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the incidence of children with autism was in each district health authority in England in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [26884]

Jacqui Smith: The figures requested are not available. The Medical Research Council's recently completed review of the Epidemiology and Causes of Autism notes that differences in definitions used in the past make comparisons problematic. The review states that there is fairly good agreement in recent studies that autism spectrum disorders affect about 60 per 10,000 children under eight and more narrowly defined autism between 10 and 30 per 10,000.

We are investigating ways of improving our data on autism. The Children in Need census issued in September/October 2001 is collecting data on the numbers of autistic children known to social services departments in England, who will be an important group within the overall total.

In June 2001 the Department for Education and Skills carried out a pilot exercise on data collection on a broad range of types of Special Educational Needs involving 200 schools and is now considering introducing a requirement for schools and local education authorities to provide this information from 2003 or 2004. This is likely to include data on pupils with autism.

Funding Resources/Initiatives

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list all (a) funding resources and (b) initiatives sponsored by his Department for (i) the private sector, (ii) the voluntary sector and (iii) local authorities. [26849]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Learning Difficulties

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will discuss with MENCAP access to services by persons with learning difficulties. [27847]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 17 January 2002]: Our strategy for improving services for people with learning disabilities, their families and carers is set out in the white paper "Valuing People: A New Strategy for Learning Disability for the 21st Century" published in March last year. MENCAP contributed to the development of the White Paper and is involved with the implementation of some of its proposals. The chief executive of MENCAP is a member of the Learning Disability Task Force, set up to oversee the implementation of "Valuing People".

Ministers and departmental officials have met representatives of MENCAP on several occasions since "Valuing People" was published; I hope to meet them on 5 March.

Children's Rights Director

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will consult on establishing a children's rights director; and if he will make a statement. [27432]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 17 January 2002]: Draft Children's Rights Director Regulations were issued on 17 January for public consultation. It is envisaged that these regulations will establish the parameters of the children's rights director's initial role and functions. The consultation period will last for 12 weeks, to give enough time for interested parties to read and comment on the proposed draft regulations. Responses should be returned to the Department by 11 April 2002.

The children's rights director will be a senior officer of the National Care Standards Commission, an independent, non-governmental public body established under the Care Standards Act 2000 to regulate social and health care services previously regulated by local councils and health authorities. The post-holder, Roger Morgan, will have a national overview of the rights of children receiving services regulated by the NCSC.

Delayed Discharges

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will set out the numbers of people awaiting delayed discharge (a) by region, (b) by health authority and (c) by trust in (i) numbers and (ii) percentage terms for (A) Q2 2001–02 and (B) the most recent figures available; what the reasons for delayed discharge were; and how many people were waiting (1) 0 to eight (2) eight to 14, (3) 14 to 21, (4) 21 to 28, (5) 28 to 35, (6) 35 to 42, (7) 42 to 49 and (8) 49 to 56 days. [28815]

Jacqui Smith: Information from Quarter 2 of 2001–02 on the numbers and percentage of delayed discharges at regional and health authority level, together with the reasons for delay and the numbers of people waiting one to eight days, eight to 14 days, 14 to 28 days and over 28 days has been placed in the Library. The other information requested is not available centrally. The data for the third quarter of 2001–02 will be available in mid-February.

Mortality Rates

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he has taken to monitor the mortality rate for those re-admitted over 75 years of age (a) in re-admission and (b) within 30 days of re-admission; and if he will make a statement. [28814]

Jacqui Smith: Information is collected on mortality in hospital and within 30 days of discharge, but not separately following re-admission to hospital.

Psychogeriatricians

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many psychogeriatricians (a) there were in England by region in the last five years and (b) he estimates there will be in post in the next five years. [28880]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is in the table.

Latest projections suggest that by 2006 there will be an additional 143 trained specialists available to work within the specialty.

Hospital Practitioners

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how long investigations into allegations of professional misconduct for hospital practitioners and the final judgment have taken for the last five years; and what the status is of the person under investigation while the complaint is being processed. [28319]

Mr. Hutton: The General Medical Council does not collect data showing the time taken to conclude case[illegible] Each case varies in complexity and length.

Unless an order has been made by the Interim Orders Committee, a doctor under investigation is free to practise pending conclusion of the case. However, after the screening decision to proceed with an investigation, the GMC notifies the doctor's employer who may take steps in relation to the doctor's continued employment.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what powers the General Medical Council has to discipline hospital practitioners who are found to have been guilty of (a) serious professional misconduct and (b) other less serious misconduct charges. [28317]

Mr. Hutton: When the General Medical Council's Professional Conduct Committee has found a doctor guilty of serious professional misconduct, it can issue a reprimand to the doctor, impose conditions on a doctor's practice for up to three years, suspend the doctor's registration for up to 12 months, which may be renewed, or erase the doctor's name from the register. At present the Professional Conduct Committee has no other powers. The GMC has made proposals for dealing with less serious charges and the Government will be considering how these might be implemented.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many complaints about the conduct of hospital practitioners have been received in each year from 1997. [28318]

Mr. Hutton: National data collection on complaints includes data on the number of complaints made by profession, and separately on the subject of complaint.

The table shows the total number of complaints, complaints against medical staff, and what percentage of the total the latter represents. The complaints against medical staff cover a range of issues and not only questions of conduct.

Hospital and community health services

	2000–01	1999–2000	1998–99	1997–98
Total number of complaints	95,994	86,536	86,013	88,757
Complaints against medical staff	43,930	38,261	37,382	36,883
Percentage of total	45.7	44.2	43.4	41.5

The number of complaints received by the GMC about doctor's conduct are as follows:

Year	Number
2000	4,343
1999	3,001
1998	3,066
1997	2,687

The figures for 2001 are not yet published but the indications are that the 2001 figure is similar to the 2000 figure.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures have been introduced since 1997 (a) to speed up the complaints process against hospital practitioners and (b) to increase the powers of the General Medical Council. [28320]

Mr. Hutton: In August 2000 the Medical Practitioners Act 1978 was amended to widen the General Medical Council's powers to act swiftly and effectively when a doctor's fitness to practise is first called into question. It introduced a minimum five-year period before a doctor who has been struck off the register may apply for restoration. It also enabled the GMC to co-opt non-members of the Council to any of its committees chiefly to help tackle the backlog of cases.

The GMC have committed themselves to new service standards including that by May 2002, except in exceptional circumstances, cases are to be heard by the Professional Conduct Committee within a year of referral by the Preliminary Proceedings Committee.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what regulations are in use to discipline hospital medical practitioners. [28316]

Mr. Hutton: The Department issued (Disciplinary Procedures for Hospital and Community Medical and Dental Staff) Health Circular(90)9 in 1990, a copy of which is in the Library. This sets out the procedures for handling disciplinary issues for medical and dental staff on nationally negotiated terms and conditions of service. These arrangements are now under review to make sure they meet the needs of the modern national health service.

Registrars

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of registrars in the NHS went into full-time general practice in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [28870]

Mr. Hutton: The information is not available in the form requested.

Analysis of recent information on new entrants suggests that around two thirds of general practice registrars take up a permanent appointment in general practice within five years of qualifying.

Private Sector Nursing Homes

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his policy is in relation to the level of fees paid by the public sector to private sector nursing homes for care of the elderly; and if he will make a statement. [28869]

Jacqui Smith: In our recently published agreement with the statutory and the independent social care, health care and housing sectors—"Building Capacity and Partnership in Care"—we make clear that contract fees should not be set mechanistically but should take into account the legitimate current and future costs faced by providers as well as the planned outcomes for people using services.

Trust Merger

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to announce his decision on the proposed merger of the Princess Royal Hospital Trust and the Royal Sussex County Hospital Trust. [28859]

Ms Blears: The announcement of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's decision on the proposed merger of the Princess Royal Hospital (Mid-Sussex National Health Service Trust) and the Royal Sussex County Hospital (Brighton Healthcare NHS Trust) was made at 11.00 on 18 January.

Social Services (Older People)

Paddy Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will set out the criteria by which the money made available in 2002–04 to improve services for older people and speed discharge from hospital was allocated. [27136]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 15 January 2002]: All councils received additional funding through the Building Care Capacity Grant. The 55 councils of the highest rates, and the most severe problems, of delayed discharge received extra funding. The extra funding to these councils reflected the rate of delayed discharge in that council's area in summer 2001. These councils will, therefore, be subject to tighter conditions and closer monitoring.

The same criteria were used to distribute the £190 million available for councils through this grant in 2002–03.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Royal Portrait

Harry Cohen: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, if the portrait of Her Majesty the Queen by Lucian Freud will be procured for the House for display in Portcullis House; and if he will make a statement. [28674]

Mr. Kirkwood: I understand that this striking portrait was presented by the artist to Her Majesty the Queen as a gift. It has been accepted into the Royal Collection and will be on public display when the new Queen's Gallery at Buckingham Palace is opened on 22 May.

The House owns a portrait of Her Majesty the Queen by Henry Mee which is hanging in 1 Parliament street. Arrangements are already in hand to display it in Portcullis House.

Portcullis House

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, what has been the cost to date since the opening of Portcullis House of (a) maintenance, (b) remedial action to rectify faults and (c) action to introduce improvements requested by hon. Members; if he will produce a detailed list in respect of (b) and (c) above, with itemised costs; and if he will make a statement. [25377]

Mr. Bell [holding answer 9 January 2002]: I have been asked to reply.

I regret that the information is not available in the form requested, but the following is readily available.

The first Members moved into the building in September 2000 and it was fully occupied at the beginning of January before the official opening in February 2001.

Maintenance costs in the current financial year, including VAT, total £650,000 to the end of December, which is in budget.

It has been necessary to enhance the capacity of the fan in the extract system from the cooking ranges, to replace three broken panels in the courtyard roof and to alter the interface with the window blinds. There is continuing work on the borehole to prevent silt entering the cooling system; to the lifts that run between the kitchens; and to the water feature. In each instance questions of liability for the costs are the subject of discussions with the contractor and/or the designer.

The majority of the changes requested by hon. Members and their staff have been for furniture additional to or different from the standard range available for the building. In the main these have been met from the furniture bought as part of the project but a further £3,800 has been spent. In some cases there have also been consequent minor changes to the power sockets. The only other change has been the conversion of cupboards to book/display cases in a limited number of rooms where none was provided and the removal of intrusive lightshelves from the fifth floor corner offices. The cost is some £20,000.

Stolen Equipment

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the President of the Council what equipment has been stolen from his Department since 1 May 1997; and what the approximate value of each item was. [26831]

Mr. Robin Cook: None.

Members' Travel

John Mann: To ask the President of the Council what percentage of hon. Members' domestic official travel expenditure in the last 12 months was by (a) car, (b) train and (c) air. [29386]

Mr. Robin Cook: For the year ended 31 March 2001 the following percentages apply to Members' domestic official travel funded from the Members' Vote[1]:

	Percentage
Car	56.6
Rail	22.9
Air	18.5
Miscellaneous	2

[1] House of Commons Department of Finance and Administration.

Members' Tax Status

John Mann: To ask the President of the Council what discussions have taken place with the Tax Office over the last five years over the tax status of hon. Members. [29301]

Mr. Robin Cook: Over the last five years the Department of Finance and Administration have met the Inland Revenue on a number of occasions to discuss a wide range of issues relating to the tax status of hon. Members, and will continue to do so.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Sudan

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she raised the bombing of civilians in southern Sudan with Government representatives on her recent visit; and if she will make a statement. [28710]

Hilary Benn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State raised the issue of the bombing of civilians during her meeting with the Government of Sudan's Minister of Defence. The Secretary of State made it clear that the UK expects parties to the conflict to live up to their obligations not to attack civilians, whether from the ground or from the air.

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement about the prospects for funding health and education in Sudan following her recent visit. [28711]

Hilary Benn: We are willing to consider funding any well designed programmes which are likely to deliver tangible benefits to ordinary Sudanese people. We shall continue to give priority to those programmes that address the most urgent needs.

We are convinced that real sustained improvements in these sectors will only be possible when there is a settlement to the civil war. We are committed to doing what we can to bring this about.

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the prospects for progress in promoting peace and good governance in Sudan; if she will make a statement on international efforts to resolve the conflict in that country; and what proposals she has for work to stimulate peace and reconciliation and the strengthening of civil society in Sudan. [28712]

Hilary Benn: There is an opportunity to achieve a political settlement to the war in Sudan. During my recent visit all sides emphasised that they recognised the urgent need for peace, that it was their responsibility to engage in serious negotiation, and that there was a window of opportunity.

The Inter-Governmental Authority on Development (IGAD) is the mechanism by which the international community is assisting in the peace process. We, and others, are actively seeking new ways to invigorate this process.

Somalia

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she has responded to the World Food Programme appeal for assistance to Somalia; and if she will make a statement about the level of funding of that appeal. [28713]

Hilary Benn: We have not responded to the World Food Programme (WFP) element of the United Nations 2002 Consolidated Appeal for Somalia; we have, however, funded emergency health and nutrition programmes in the worst affected areas, and this complements the WFP's efforts.

The WFP part of the UN Appeal is the continuation of a three year project "Food aid for relief and recovery in Somalia", which began in July 1999. To date the UN report that just under 60 per cent. of the project's estimated requirements have been met.

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the impact of 11 September on poverty in Somalia following the disruption of overseas remittance income. [28714]

Hilary Benn: There has been some adverse impact on poverty as a consequence of the curtailment of the activities of Al Barakat—a Somali remittance company linked to terrorist groups. Other companies, offering similar services across Somalia, have not been affected. Indeed, there is evidence that they have expanded their client base, offsetting some of the effect of the Al Barakat closure.

Regulatory Impact Assessments

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many regulatory impact assessments have been produced by her Department since August 2001; and if she will list those produced (a) following initial consultation with affected parties about the most appropriate methodology for assessing costs and other impacts and (b) which set out full commercial impacts, including profitability, employment, consumer prices and competitiveness, as recommended in "Good Policy Making". [28409]

Clare Short: DFID does not itself undertake 'regulatory impact assessments': these are the responsibility of our partner Governments and authorities. DFID does provide technical assistance to help Governments strengthen their capacity to undertake reviews of the regulatory environment and to regulate better. Many of the precepts underlying "Good Policy Making: A Guide to Regulatory Impact Assessment" are relevant to developing countries and we endorse them.

Afghanistan

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on Britain's planned financial contribution to the reconstruction of Afghanistan (a) in this financial year and (b) over the next five financial years. [28601]

Hilary Benn: We have set aside £20 million in this financial year to support the Interim Administration and the United Nations-led transitional recovery and rehabilitation process, while continuing to respond to humanitarian needs. This includes a contribution of £2 million already provided to the UN Afghan Interim Authority Fund to provide salaries of key public servants, equipment and supplies. As well as financial assistance, we are providing technical personnel and logistical, material and other practical support.

At the international conference on the reconstruction of Afghanistan held in Tokyo from 21–22 January 2002, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced a significant contribution to be used for the long-term rehabilitation of Afghanistan. The UK has committed £200 million over the next five financial years for both reconstruction and humanitarian activities. The majority of this pledge will be channelled through UN agencies and non-governmental organisations.

This pledge is in addition to the significant sums that the UK has contributed to the World bank, European Union and Asian Development bank, which will also direct further funds into Afghanistan in the coming years. The UK share of the European Union pledge alone will be 20 per cent.

Afghan Refugees

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on Government plans to aid Afghan refugees in Quetta in south-west Pakistan. [28509]

Hilary Benn: Pakistan has been shouldering the burden of some two million refugees from Afghanistan for many years; this is in addition to over 100,000 refugees who have moved into Pakistan from Afghanistan since September 2001. We will continue to do all we can to ensure that all refugees are properly cared for and to give neighbouring countries support to cope with the burden of refugees, for whom they have generously provided for so long.

DFID has provided £3 million to UNHCR's operations, in response to the current crisis, to support its operations for refugees in the region, including in Quetta city and Balochistan province. This has included technical personnel, material and financial support. At the request of UNHCR, we have provided three relief flights to Iran and Pakistan transporting tents, shelter material and communications equipment. We have also provided a specialist site planner to UNHCR in Pakistan to assist with the setting up of new refugee camp sites. In addition we have provided £6 million to NGOs, much of which has been directed towards Afghans in neighbouring countries, including Pakistan, and £11 million to support communities in Pakistan most affected by the influx of refugees.

As the situation stabilises inside Afghanistan, we hope that Afghan refuges will be able to return home voluntarily and, indeed, many have returned already.

Ethiopia

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action her Department is taking to help street children living in Ethiopia. [28602]

Hilary Benn: We are currently supporting a project through the non-governmental organisation GOAL. The project aims to rehabilitate 700 street children back into the community and to raise awareness of the needs of street children through education and advocacy. The project started in April 2001 and is due to last for three years, with a contribution of £187,553 from DFID.

Public Relations Consultants

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much was spent by (a) her Department and (b) bodies for which it is responsible on external public relations consultants in each of the last four years. [27390]

Hilary Benn: DFID provided £120,000 in 1998 for work by a public relations consultancy to raise awareness of malaria as part of the Roll Back Malaria initiative led by the World Health Organisation. The Commonwealth Development Corporation (CDC) spent £80,000 on external communications consultancy in 1998 and 1999, preparing for its transformation to a public limited company. Both DFID and CDC have separately used communications consultants for specific development activities in particular countries but the figures are not held centrally and it would require disproportionate cost to obtain them.

Stolen Equipment

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what equipment has been stolen from her Department since 1 May 1997; and what the approximate value of each item was. [26824]

Clare Short: Since 1 April 1997 the following equipment has been stolen from DFID in the UK and overseas:

14 laptop computers with a total value of £15,732. The value of each piece of equipment ranges from £730 to £1,642:

Computer chips: £1,100;

One video camera: value unknown;

One calculator: £108;

One notebook computer: £1,880; and

Two mobile telephones: £250.

SCOTLAND

Stolen Equipment

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what equipment has been stolen from her Department since 1 May 1997; and what the approximate value of each item was. [26825]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999. Since this date one laptop computer has been stolen, with an approximate value of £2,200 at the time of purchase.

Ministerial Staff (Overseas Visits)

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many staff paid out of public funds will be accompanying her on her forthcoming visit to Hong Kong, Guangzhou and Malaysia; and from which departmental budget they are paid. [29513]

Mr. Foulkes: Two members of the Scotland Office staff are accompanying the Secretary of State on this visit.

Scotland Office Staff

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many of the staff in Dover house on loan to the Scotland Office from the Scottish Executive are of civil service grade. [29515]

Mr. Foulkes: All of the staff on loan from the Scottish Executive are civil servants.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many civil servants there are in her Department apart from (a) staff on loan to the Scotland Office from the Scottish Executive, (b) the member of staff on secondment from the House of Lords and (c) three temporary staff. [29514]

Mr. Foulkes: Apart from the categories of staff mentioned, the Department has two special advisers.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will list the job descriptions of each of the staff members in Dover house (a) on loan to the Scotland Office from the Scottish Executive and (b) that are other staff, indicating which staff members are paid from the Scotland Office budget and which from the Scottish Executive budget. [29523]

Mr. Foulkes: All of the Scotland Office staff in Dover house work in support of Ministers in carrying out the functions of the Department, and their costs are met from the Scotland Office budget.

TREASURY

National Asset Register

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list central Government acquisitions to the National Asset Register in each of the last four years, specifying the value of each acquisition. [28715]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The National Asset Register provides details of all significant acquisitions of central Government assets by Department for each of the financial years 1997–98 to 1999–2000.

Infrastructure Projects (Mid-Sussex)

Mr. Soames: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will undertake an audit into the level of public spending on infrastructure projects in Mid-Sussex. [28857]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 21 January 2002]: No. Public spending on infrastructure projects is divided between local, regional and national bodies. It is not possible to identify without disproportionate cost what proportion of central Government infrastructure funding is spent in [illegible] particular local authority area or parliamentary constituency. However, the Treasury seeks to ensure value for money in all public spending and works with other Government Departments to ensure that a rigorous evaluation framework is in place to assess the costs and benefits of particular projects. While the Treasury delegates authority to Departments to spend regular budgets, it nevertheless scrutinises particularly large, novel or contentious proposals individually to ensure they offer good value.

Incomes

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people have no income declared for tax purposes, other than unearned income; and in 2001–02 how many people are paying tax at (a) 40 per cent. and (b) the basic rate who derive (i) 100 per cent., (ii) 90 to 100 per cent., (iii) 75 to 100 per cent., and (iv) 50 to 100 per cent., of their income from unearned income. [26206]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested is in the table.

Thousand

	2001–02
Investment income as a percentage of total income	Number of higher rate[1] taxpayers	Number of basic rate[2] taxpayers	Number of 'savers' rate[3] taxpayers
100 per cent.	10	30	60
90 to less than 100 per cent.	20	10	20
75 to less than 90 per cent.	50	30	50
50 to less than 75 per cent.	80	210	80

[2] Taxpayers with a marginal rate at the basic rate from an extra £1 of earnings.

[3] Taxpayers with a marginal rate at the 20 per cent. lower rate for savings income or the 10 per cent. ordinary dividend rate from an extra £1 of earnings. Before 1999–2000 these people would have been classified as lower rate taxpayers.

Note:

There are around 130,000 taxpayers with no taxable income other than investment income.

The estimates are based on the Survey of Personal Incomes and are consistent with the November 2001 pre-Budget report.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total income before and after tax was at constant prices in each of the last four years for the top (a) one per cent., (b) five per cent., and (c) 10 per cent. and (d) each 10 per cent., thereafter down to the bottom 10 per cent., including both working and non-working households, in figures and as a percentage of income before and after tax accruing to each group. [26312]

Dawn Primarolo: It would be possible to provide an answer only at disproportionate cost.

Income Tax

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer have many (a) working and (b) non-working people do not pay income tax in the United Kingdom. [26145]

Dawn Primarolo: Inland Revenue estimate that out of the 27.8 million taxpayers in 2000–01 in the United Kingdom (UK), 23.4 million had employment or self-employment income. These estimates are based on the Survey of Personal Incomes and are consistent with the November 2001 pre-Budget report.

The ONS population estimate for the UK in 2000 is 59.8 million.

The ONS estimate for the number of people in employment in the UK based on the September–November 2000 Labour Force Survey is 28.0 million.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of the people of (a) England, (b) Scotland, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland paid income tax at (i) the basic rate and (ii) the higher rate in each of the last four years. [27437]

Dawn Primarolo: The proportions requested are in the table.

	Basic rate taxpayers[1] as a percentage of the country population	Higher rate taxpayers as a percentage of the country population
2000–01[2]
Wales	33	3
Scotland	36	3
Northern Ireland	31	2
England	36	5

	Basic rate taxpayers[1] as a percentage of the country population	Higher rate taxpayers as a percentage of the country population
1999–2000
Wales	33	2
Scotland	36	3
Northern Ireland	31	2
England	36	4
1998–99
Wales	24	2

[1] Taxpayers with a marginal rate at 20 per cent. lower rate for savings or 10 per cent. ordinary dividend rate from £1 of extra earnings are excluded from this column as they are in the "savers" category.

[2] Provisional

Estimates are based on the Survey of Personal Incomes and the 2000–01 is consistent with the November 2001 pre-Budget report.

Income Tax Bands

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tax units in the latest year available are married couples falling within each £1,000 income band up to an income of £30,000 and thereafter in £10,000 income bands up to £100,000; and how many wives and husbands fall within each band, giving the average incomes of wives and husbands within each band separately and the same figures in aggregate for those tax units on incomes in excess of £10,000. [26204]

Dawn Primarolo: It would be possible to provide an answer only at disproportionate cost.

Fraud

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the average amount of money recovered annually by (a) a Department for Work and Pensions senior fraud inspector and (b) a senior investigation officer in the Inland Revenue. [26238]

Dawn Primarolo: There is no position of 'senior fraud inspector' in the Department for Work and Pensions. Nor is it possible to separate the total amount of overpaid benefit recovered into overpayments due to fraud and those due to other reasons. It is therefore not possible to say what is the average amount of money recovered annually by a Department for Work and Pensions senior fraud inspector.

The term 'senior investigation officer' does not refer to any specific group of Inland Revenue staff. However, the Inland Revenue annual report, available in the House of Commons Library, details the additional liability identified as a result of work to tackle non-compliance undertaken by specialist offices such as the Large Business Office and the Special Compliance Office.

Working Mothers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the effect on Treasury revenues in 2001–02 of introducing an allowance against income rate of (a) £2000 and (b) £4000 for (i) all working mothers and (ii) all working mothers with at least one child under five years, giving both full and first year costs for each. [26144]

Dawn Primarolo: The cost to the Exchequer of introducing the personal allowances for these groups is shown in the table:

Cost of increased personal allowances for working mothers

Increase in personal allowance	Working mother type	Full year costs (£ million)	First year costs (£ million)
(a) £2,000 pa	(i) All	1,200	1,050
(a) £2,000 pa	(ii) With child under five	400	350
(b) £4,000 pa	(i) All	2,200	1,900
(b) £4,000 pa	(ii) With child under five	700	600

Note:

The estimates are calculated in 2001–02 prices, using data from the 1999–2000 Family Resources Survey held in the standard IGoTM tax benefit model. The first year costs have been estimated on a national accounts basis.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list those public investment projects within his Department's responsibility which have attracted private capital in each of the last four years. [26109]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The information is given in the table:

Inland Revenue Rewards

Mr. Gray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what have been, in each of the three years to 31 March 2001, Inland Revenue's estimates for sums to be expended in rewarding individuals under section 32 of the Inland Revenue Regulation Act 1890; what the sum voted for this category of expenditure was; what Inland Revenue's actual expenditure was; and how much of this expenditure related to rewards to ordinary members of the public. [26844]

Dawn Primarolo: The total amounts paid in rewarding individuals under section 32 of Inland Revenue Regulation Act 1890 for each of the three years ended 31 March 1999, 2000 and 2001 respectively were £15,000, £17,965 and £5,075. All of these amounts were paid to members of the public.

Because of the relatively small sums involved, the Inland Revenue does not vote a sum nor earmark particular funds for this category of expenditure.

Excess Votes

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many excess votes there were in each of the last four years, indicating the amount and the department responsible in each case. [27919]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Details of excess votes are presented to Parliament in February of the financial year following the excess in a House of Commons paper entitled "Statement of Excesses" (SoE). For 2000–01 the SoE will be presented towards the end of February. For the previous three financial years the relevant HC papers are numbered as follows—1997–98 HC239, 1998–99 HC276 and 1999–2000 HC323.

Public Works Loans

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much money is on loan to local authorities by the Public Works Loan Board; which local authorities are borrowing; and what the sum involved is in each case. [27933]

Ruth Kelly: As at 31 March 2001, outstanding PWLB debt amounted to £47,169,517,807 divided between 350 of the 443 principal authorities in England, Scotland and Wales. This information was published in the PWLB's annual report for 2000–01. The PWLB operates a banking relationship with its local authority clients and does not disclose individual levels of borrowing.

Fuel Levy

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the fuel levy of 20 pence per litre for biodiesel will come into effect. [28927]

Mr. Boateng: We are planning to introduce a new reduced rate of excise duty for biodiesel used as a road fuel, to be set at 20 pence per litre below the rate for ultra-low sulphur diesel, in Budget 2002.

Toddler Tax Credit

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what (a) research has been conducted into and (b) conclusions drawn about the implementation of the Childcare Commission's recommendation to fund a toddler tax credit. [28763]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government continue to keep under review the levels of support provided to families with children. Budget 2001 announced a number of measures to support families with young children, including improved maternity provision and a higher rate of children's tax credit of up to £20 a week in the first year of a child's life. Budget 2001 also announced increases of around one third in the child care cost limits in the child care tax credit component of the working families tax credit and disabled person's tax credit.

As the next stage of tax and benefit reform a new child tax credit, which will draw together all income related strands of support for families with children, will be introduced in 2003. The rates and thresholds for the new child tax credit will be set in Budget 2002.

Euro

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of British high street transactions have taken place in euros since 1 January. [28926]

Ruth Kelly: We understand from the British Retail Consortium that thus far such transactions have been less than 1 per cent. in volume and value terms.

Stolen Equipment

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what equipment has been stolen from his Department since 1 May 1997; and what the approximate value of each item was. [26837]

Ruth Kelly: The following items were recorded as stolen:

Year	Item(s)	Value[1] (£)
1997 (May)	2 Desktop PCs	4,300
	1 Laptop PC	2,500
	1 Desktop PC	1,900
	1 Laptop PC	3,000
1998	1 Laptop PC	2,500
1999	1 Desktop PC	2,000
	Computer memory	25
	1 Laptop PC	2,000
	1 Laptop PC	3,000
2000	1 LCD Projector	2,000
	2 Disk Drives	300
	1 Laptop PC	2,000
2001	1 Laptop PC	2,000
	1 Personal Data Assistant (PDA)	250
	1 Laptop PC	2,000
2002	None recorded to date

[1] Approximate

Married Couple's Tax Allowance

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) men aged (i) under 65 and (ii) 65 and over and (b) women aged (1) under 60 and (2) 60 and over have been in receipt of married couple's tax allowance since 31 March 1999. [27544]

Dawn Primarolo: The numbers of taxpayers who received the married couple's allowance in 1999–2000 are given in the table.

Million

	Number in receipt of the married couple's allowance
Men under 65	7.8
Men 65 and over	1.8
Women under 60	0.2
Women 60 and over	0.1

The estimates are based on the Survey of Personal Incomes.

Civil Registration

Mrs. Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether there has been progress with the proposal to reform civil registration in England and Wales. [29887]

Ruth Kelly: A White Paper "Civil Registration: Vital Change", setting out the Government's proposals for modernising civil registration within England and Wales, is being published today. Copies are available in the Libraries of the House.

Parliamentary Questions

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many answers to parliamentary questions have not been answered by his Department under exemption 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information in each year since 1994. [29424]

Ruth Kelly: Records are not kept of the number of occasions on which Treasury Ministers have not been able to answer parliamentary questions wholly or in part on grounds of commercial confidentiality. This information could be extracted from the thousands of answers given in a typical year only at disproportionate cost.

Correspondence

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will reply to the letters from the hon. Member for Truro and St. Austell dated 6 August 2001 and 1 November 2001, addressed to the Economic Secretary, regarding data protection. [28295]

Ruth Kelly: I hope to be in a position to write to the hon. Member very shortly.

Saving and Assets for All

Ms Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will make a statement in respect of the outcome of the consultation on Saving and Assets For All. [29366]

Ruth Kelly: Results of the consultation on proposals for the Child Trust Fund and Saving Gateway, launched in April 2001, were published with the pre-Budget report in November 2001, in "Delivering Saving and Assets". This document also contained more detailed proposals for further consultation.

This second round of consultation, which will close on 28 February 2002, will inform the development of the proposals by the Government over the coming months, including as part of Spending Review 2002.

Child Poverty

John Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the action his Department has taken to reduce child poverty. [29277]

Dawn Primarolo: This Government are committed to abolishing child poverty within a generation and halving it by 2010. As part of this commitment, a strategy document entitled "Tackling child poverty: giving every child the best possible start in life" was published in December 2001. This document will inform the Budget and Spending Review 2002.

As a result of personal tax and benefit changes announced in the last Parliament, there are now 1.2 million fewer children in poverty than there would otherwise have been. In real terms:

Families with children are, on average, £1,000 a year better off.

Families with children in the poorest fifth of the population are on average £1,700 a year better off.

A family with two young children on half average earnings (£12,700) are £3,000 a year better off.

Specific measures announced over the last Parliament include:

Increases in child benefit and the introduction of the children's tax credit. This means around 5 million families get up to £25.50 for the first child compared to £12.35 in 1997.

The introduction of the working families tax credit which benefits nearly 1.3 million families who are receiving, on average, £35 a week more than its predecessor, family credit.

A higher rate of children's tax credit from April 2002 which will be worth an extra £10 a week in the year of a child's birth—a total of up to £1,040 in that year.

Increases in the children's allowances in income support and other income related benefits which mean that rates for children under 11 rose by 80 per cent. in real terms.

As part of the next stage of tax and benefit reform, a new tax credit for families with children—the child tax credit—will be introduced from 2003 building on the foundation of universal child benefit. It will bring together the strands of support for children in children's tax credit, working families tax credit, disabled person's tax credit and income support/jobseeker's allowance, and will be a seamless and transparent system of support for children paid to the main carer whether in or out of work. Decisions on rates and thresholds will be set out in Budget 2002.

WALES

Stolen Equipment

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what equipment has been stolen from his Department since 1 May 1997; and what the approximate value of each item was. [26827]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The following items have been reported as lost or stolen:

Description	Value (£)	Year
Camera	200.00	1997–98
Laptop	107.00	1997–98

Note:

Figures relate to Welsh Office, Cadw, and Office of Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools in Wales/Estyn up to 30 June 1999, and to Wales Office thereafter.

TRANSPORT, LOCAL GOVERNMENT AND THE REGIONS

Port Dues

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions whether all ports in the UK charge port dues for ships coming into the port for repairs; which European ports around the North sea waive port dues for ships without cargo commitments coming in to port for repairs; and what assessment he has made of whether port dues place the port of Tyne at a competitive disadvantage to European ports which waive port dues for ships coming in for repair. [26043]

Mr. Spellar: All ships have the right to enter ports in the UK subject only to the payment of ship, passenger and goods dues. Statutory harbour authorities, including the port of Tyne, have the right to set such dues at whatever level they consider appropriate and may waive any of them at their own discretion. Harbour undertakings are paid for by their users—if dues are waived in any case, the cost is borne by others. Users have a right of objection to the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if they consider the dues to be unreasonable.

Airline Disinfection

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how a determination is made as to which flights arriving in the United Kingdom require pesticide disinfection. [25215]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 10 January 2002]: The port health authorities decide the routes into the United Kingdom on which disinfection of aircraft is required. They make their decisions in the light of the advice from the World Health Organisation on the risks to public health arising in different countries, either long-term or as the result of an outbreak of disease.

Road Deaths

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many road fatalities there were in each of the last five available years on (a) motorways, (b) dual carriageways and (c) single carriageways. [27378]

Mr. Spellar: The figures requested are as shown:

Road fatalities in Great Britain

London Underground (Overtime)

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will publish the total overtime payments in each of (a) the last seven years and (b) the last 12 months for each underground line. [27714]

Mr. Spellar: This is an operational matter for London Underground Ltd., who have provided the following information. The information is not available in the precise form requested.

London Underground Ltd. was reorganised in September 1999, in preparation for the introduction of modernisation plans. Under 'shadow running' arrangements, information is collected from each infrastructure company and the operations company, rather than on the 'line by line' basis that reflected London Underground's previous structure. The table therefore records operational staff and engineering staff overtime costs by line until 18 September 1999, and subsequently overtime costs for staff in each of London Underground's reorganised components. Overall totals cover the same groups of staff and so are comparable.

British Merchant Marine

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what recent representations he has received from the RMT on the competitiveness of the British merchant marine and related employment issues; and if he will make a statement. [27637]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 15 January 2002]: The RMTs Acting General Secretary, Mr. Vernon Hince, wrote to my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Plymouth, Devonport (Mr. Jamieson), recently to urge the extension of work permit requirements to one-port voyages. This is under consideration by the Home Office.

Mr. Hince also wrote to my hon. Friend last November about proposed dismissals of UK seafaring ratings by the P&O Group, a matter which was additionally raised at the 4 December meeting of our Shipping Task Force.

We are deeply disappointed by the actions of P&O. These job losses are particularly regrettable at a time when we are seeing a revival in UK merchant shipping after a long decline, a revival to which the shipping unions have made an immense contribution.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what proportion of total local authority expenditure was met in each of the last four years by (a) central Government funds, (b) business rate payers and (c) council tax payers. [27936]

Dr. Whitehead: English local authorities have reported the following funding of revenue expenditure.

	Revenue Expenditure[1]	Government Grant[2]		Non-Domestic Rates[3]		Council tax[4]
	£ billion	£ billion	Percentage	£ billion	Percentage	£ billion	Percentage
1998–99	50.189	25.291	50	12.531	25	12.332	24
1999–2000	53.651	26.421	49	13.619	25	13.278	25
2001–02[5]	61.270	30.341	50	15.144	25	15.245	25

[2] Includes Revenue Support Grant, specific and special grants within AEF, SSA Reduction Grant, Police Grant, Central Support Protection Grant (1999–2000 onwards) and General GLA Grant (2000–01 onwards).

[3] Distribute amount from non-domestic rate pool. This is not exactly equal to the payments from business in any year, but adjustments are made to the distributable amount in future years to ensure that, over time, all rates received are redistributed to receiving authorities. Includes City Offset.

[4] Gross of council tax benefit and council tax transitional reduction scheme.

[5] Budgets.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will investigate the settlement for local government with particular reference to the different sums that were allocated to smaller district authorities. [28261]

Dr. Whitehead: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has already looked into the local government settlement for district councils. In his answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Ealing, Acton and Shepherd's Bush (Mr. Soley) on 18 December 2001, Official Report, columns 136–37, he explained that he would introduce an alternative baseline for 2001–02 which, in effect, adjusts only for the transfers of service for which shire districts are responsible and that, in order to guarantee a minimum 2.3 per cent. increase for shire districts, he would ensure that all shire districts received a minimum grant increase of whichever increase is greater—2.3 per cent. on the original baseline, or 2.3 per cent. on this alternative baseline.

Further details will be provided as part of the Government's final settlement proposals, which the House will have a chance to debate on 30 January.

Strategic Rail Authority

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions for what reason the SRA plan makes no reference to automatic train protection in its list of priorities. [28543]

Mr. Spellar: Automatic train protection (ATP) is not mentioned in the SRA's Plan because it is being superseded by a combination of Train Protection Warning System (TPWS) and European Railway Traffic Management System (ERTMS). TPWS is designed to reduce the risks from Signals Passed at Danger by slower-running trains, and is being installed at about 11,000 signals with legislation requiring completion by the end of 2003. The Uff-Cullen inquiry recommended that such a system as ERTMS should be installed throughout the high-speed network by 2010. The omission of ATP from the plan does not involve any compromise of safety standards.

Rail Network

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what estimate he has made of the time scale required to establish special purpose vehicles for infrastructure investment in the railways. [28544]

Mr. Spellar: Section 4 of the SRA Strategic Plan discusses the issues involved in developing and implementing special purpose vehicles. As the plan notes, this will be progressed simultaneously with the process of bringing Railtrack out of administration.

Railtrack

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what progress the Railtrack administrator has made on the development of an asset register. [28540]

Mr. Spellar: This is a matter for the administrator

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what bonus scheme the Railtrack administrator has implemented to replace employee share schemes. [28530]

Mr. Spellar: This a contractual matter between Railtrack plc, its employees and the administrator.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Epsom and Ewell (Chris Grayling), of 14 January 2002, Official Report, column 11W, on Railtrack, what information his officials have sent to the Railtrack administration about the future funding of the railway industry. [29181]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 21 January 2002]: The administrators have been referred to the Government's 10-year plan for transport and to the regulatory settlement for control period 2, as supplemented by the agreement between Railtrack and the Department in April 2001.

Public Subsidies (Railways)

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the average public subsidy per rail passenger journey has been in each of the past 10 years. [28570]

Mr. Spellar: The information is not held in the form requested.

Lorry Movements

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many lorry movements occur in the United Kingdom each year. [28559]

Mr. Spellar: Lorries made an estimated 292 million movements in the United Kingdom during 2000, the latest year for which figures are available. The figures relate to the number of journey legs, between stops to pick up or unload goods, including unladen legs, but with each journey of a collection and delivery type round counted as a single movement.

Railways

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the (a) time taken on the renewal of the Chiltern and South West Trains franchise process and (b) the Strategic Rail Authority estimate for the establishment of a final agreement for the Wales and Border franchise. [28560]

Mr. Spellar: The Strategic Rail Authority is continuing to negotiate final agreements for the Chiltern and South West Trains franchises. A further announcement will be made shortly. The authority hopes to announce a preferred bidder for the Wales and Borders franchise by autumn 2002, and to have a new franchise in place by spring 2003.

Passenger Capacity Limits

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the train operating companies which are required to carry out passenger counts on commuters to meet the passengers in excess of capacity limits set by the SRA. [28661]

Mr. Spellar: The Passengers In Excess of Capacity (PIXC) mechanism is used in relation to overcrowding on all commuter services into London and on some commuter routes into Edinburgh. The train operating companies it applies to are c2c, Chiltern, Connex South Eastern, First Great Eastern, Silverlink, South Central, South West trains, Thames Trains, Thameslink, West Anglia Great Northern and Scotrail.

Central Line

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to extend the Central line to Uxbridge. [28479]

Mr. Spellar: None. It is already served by the Piccadilly and Metropolitan Lines.

Council Tax

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many properties there were in each council tax band in each year since 1997, broken down by London borough. [28534]

Dr. Whitehead: Tables, showing how many properties there were on the valuation list for each London borough, in each year since October 1997, have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Speed Limits

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many 20 mph zones are in place in England; and how many he estimates will be in place by the end of the 2002–03 financial year. [28394]

Mr. Spellar: This information is not held centrally.

London Underground

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will publish the age of the oldest and newest rolling stock on each London Underground line; and if he will make a statement. [28311]

Mr. Spellar: For information about Jubilee and Northern Line rolling stock, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Plymouth, Devonport (Mr. Jamieson) to the hon. Member for Epsom and Ewell (Chris Grayling) on 19 December 2001, Official Report, columns 497–98W.

This is an operational matter for London Underground who have provided the information in the table, showing, for the remaining lines, the year in which the oldest and newest rolling stock came into service.

London Underground—years in which oldest and newest rolling stock entered service, by line

Line	Oldest stock year entered service	Newest stock year entered service
Barkerloo	1973	1975
Central and Waterloo and City	1993	1994
Circle and Hammersmith and City	1969	1977
District	1978	1982
Metropolitan and East London Line	1961	1965
Piccadilly	1975	1978
Victoria	1967	1970

Commuter Travel

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) how many extra commuters a day he estimates will travel to London from each county in the south-east of England as a result of the meeting of his house building targets; [28731]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of extra (a) rail passenger journeys per day into each London terminus and (b) road journeys on each motorway into London as a result of meeting his house building targets. [28730]

Ms Keeble: Statistics on travel patterns are available from a variety of both local and national sources, including the National Labour Force Survey and the National Travel Survey. However, the relationship between the house building targets set out in Regional Planning Guidance for the South East (RPG9) and the volume of commuter travel into London is a complex one. It would therefore not be sensible to estimate how many extra commuters will travel to London from counties in the south-east as a result of those targets being met.

Green Belt

Angela Watkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if the amount of green belt in a local authority area will continue to affect the level of settlement it receives after the 2003 review. [28391]

Dr. Whitehead: Under the current formula the amount of green belt has no direct effect on the level of grant an authority receives through the Local Government Finance Settlement. In partnership with the Local Government Association and other local authority organisations we are reviewing the local government finance grant distribution formula. Until this review is concluded it is not possible to say which factors will have an impact on the level of future settlements.

Disability Vehicle Stickers

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what action the Government are taking to reduce fraudulent use of the blue badge scheme. [29107]

Ms Keeble: There is a wide variety of powers available to local authorities, who are responsible for administering the blue badge scheme, for tackling fraudulent use. At present:

> it is an offence under Section 117 of The Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 for the badge itself to be misused by a non-disabled person, the maximum fine on conviction being £1,000.
> local authorities have powers to withdraw a badge if the holder constantly misuses it or allows it to be misused by others.
> it is also an offence under Section 47 of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 to park a vehicle which is not displaying a badge in a designated disabled person's parking bay.

The issues of abuse and misuse of badges are a major part of a review of the scheme that we are currently undertaking.

In the meantime, it is open to anybody to bring instances of fraudulent use to the attention of the police, traffic wardens or the appropriate local authority and we will continue to work with these bodies and stakeholder groups to minimise the potential for abuse and misuse.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Westbury (Dr. Murrison) of 8 January 2002, Official Report, column 595W, on disability vehicle stickers, which organisations have been consulted by the Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee as part of its review of the blue badge scheme. [29174]

Ms Keeble: The blue badge review discussion paper has been sent to major stakeholders, including disability organisations, local authorities and enforcement bodies in England and the devolved Administrations, whose authorities are collaborating with my Department. A list of those who received the paper has been placed in the House. The paper is also available on request from the Department's Mobility and Inclusion Unit and on our website.

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked the Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee (DPTAC) to consider responses to the consultation and to report back to him with their recommendations.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Westbury (Dr. Murrison) of 8 January 2002, Official Report, column 595W, on disability vehicle stickers, when he expects the Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee to complete its review of the blue badge scheme. [29177]

Ms Keeble: The Secretary of State has asked the Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee (DPTAC) to consider the responses to a discussion paper issued by my Department and to report back with their recommendations by the end of April 2002.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Westbury (Dr. Murrison) of 8 January 2002, Official Report, column 595W, on disability vehicle stickers, whether the Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee is considering a reduction in the minimum period of issue of blue badges as part of its review of the blue badge scheme. [29175]

Ms Keeble: The main purpose of the review is to seek views on the future shape of the scheme by considering a range of issues which were identified in discussions with those most closely affected by it, including the minimum period of issue for blue badges. The Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee (DPTAC) have been asked to consider responses to the consultation and to report back to the Secretary of State with their recommendations having considered all the responses received.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Westbury (Dr. Murrison) of 8 January 2002, Official Report, column 595W, on disability vehicle stickers, what representations the Government have received from (a) hon. and right hon. Members, (b) disability charities, (c) other charities and (d) others calling for an extension of the blue badge scheme to cover those individuals with temporary disabilities. [29176]

Ms Keeble: The discussion paper was issued on 14 December 2001 and the consultation period is due to end on 15 March 2002. The few responses which have been received so early in the consultation are currently being analysed. We will, however, keep the House informed as the review progresses.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Westbury (Dr. Murrison) of 8 January 2002, Official Report, column 595W, on disability vehicle stickers, what criteria are set down for local authorities to determine the eligibility of people applying for a disability vehicle sticker through the blue badge scheme. [29482]

Ms Keeble: The criteria which local authorities use for assessing eligibility for a disabled person's badge are set down in The Disabled Persons (Badges for Motor Vehicles) (England) Regulations 2000 [SI 2000/682].

These contain a prescribed description of disabled person to whom a local authority may issue a disabled persons' badge and are a person who is more than 2-years-old who falls within one or more of the following categories:

receives the higher rate of the mobility component of the disability living allowance in accordance with section 73 of the Social Security and Benefits Act 1982;

uses a motor vehicle supplied by the Department of Social Security or the Scottish Executive or is in receipt of a grant pursuant to section 5(2)(a) of the National Health Services Act 1977 or section 46 of the National Health Service (Scotland) Act 1978;

is registered blind under section 29(4)(g) of the National Assistance Act 1948 or, in Scotland, is a blind person within the meaning of section 64(1) of that Act;

receives a mobility supplement under article 26A of the Naval, Military and Air Forces etc. (Disablement and Death) Service Pensions Order 1983 including such a supplement by virtue of any scheme or order under article 25A of the Personal Injuries (Civilians) Scheme 1983; drives a motor vehicle regularly, has a severe disability in both upper limbs and is unable to turn by hand the steering wheel of a motor vehicle even if that wheel is fitted with a turning knob; or has a permanent and substantial disability which causes inability to walk or very considerable difficulty in walking.

Patient Transport Services

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what action the Government are taking to assist people suffering from balance difficulties, arising from cancer illness, to (a) travel to and from and (b) park at hospital clinics. [29106]

Ms Keeble: This is a matter for the Scottish Executive, but I understand from them that, essentially, the Scottish Ambulance Service Non-Emergency Service transports people to and from hospitals, clinics and day centres, and bases its provision on the medical need of the patient. In some of the more remote areas of Scotland, patient transport services are provided by community run schemes. The ambulance service's aim is to provide a seamless journey for patients with mobility problems and those who experience significant discomfort because of the nature of their medical condition, or the type of treatment they receive at hospital. To ensure that it continues to understand and meet the needs of its patients, it is currently reviewing and developing the way in which it provides and delivers non-emergency services to make them even more flexible and patient friendly.

Disabled Facilities Grant

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what guidelines and recommendations he has made to local authorities with regard to determining the value and suitability of discretionary grant awards under the disabled facilities grant; and if he will place copies in the Library; [29115]

(2) how long on average it took each local authority to make disabled facilities grant payments following approved applications; [29112]

(3) under what circumstances local authorities may delay the payment of an approved disabled facilities grant; [29113]

(4) how long it has taken for each local authority to approve an application for the disabled facilities grant, following the receipt of a valid completed application form; and how many applications for disabled facilities grant, broken down by local authority, were not responded to within the recommended six month period following the receipt of a valid completed application form; [29114]

(5) how much money was awarded by each local authority for the disabled facilities grant; what was the average award made by each local authority for the disabled facilities grant; and what funding was provided to each local authority by the Government towards their spending in respect of the disabled facilities grant in each of the last five years. [29116]

Mr. Byers: Disabled facilities grants (DFG) are administered by local authorities who are under a statutory duty to approve or refuse an application within six months of the date of application. My Department does not collect data on the length of time taken by local authorities to consider applications.

Figures showing each English local authority's expenditure on DFGs, the average value of grant and the Government's DFG allocation over the last five years have been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Section 23(1) of the Housing Grants, Construction and Regeneration Act 1996 sets out the purposes for which mandatory DFG must be approved. Discretionary DFG is available to make a dwelling or building suitable for a disabled occupant in any other respect. Paragraphs 31 to 36 of Annex I to DoE Circular 17/96, (copies of which have already been placed in the Library) gives examples. Paragraph 10 of that Annex also states that discretionary DFG may be paid where the costs of the adaptations exceed the maximum limit for mandatory DFG. There is no maximum limit on the amount which may be paid in the form of a discretionary DFG.

Section 36 of the Act provides that local authorities may delay the payment of DFGs up to 12 months after the date of application. Paragraphs 58 to 61 of Annex 1 to circular 17/96 advises that such a delay should only be made in exceptional circumstances when a particularly heavy caseload of applications is causing severe resource problems for the authority. It should not be made where adaptations are urgently required and where a delay would cause hardship or suffering to the applicant.

Local Government Inspection

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how much is spent annually on external inspection of local government; and if he will make a statement on the methods used to assess the effectiveness of such inspections. [28818]

Dr. Whitehead: The following costs identified represent those of the major [Interruption.] Inspectorates working in the local government field together with the costs of district audit. Apart from district audit and inspection by the Audit Commission Inspection Service, which include a fee element, these costs are centrally funded by sponsoring Departments.

Other inspection bodies, such as the Health and Safety Executive, will have some involvement with local government, but figures for this are not readily identifiable or available.

The figures do not include any element of the indirect costs of inspection to authorities; e.g. staff time, as no agreed or reliable figures are available.

Audit Commission Inspection Service

Audit Commission, district audit and best value inspection costs for the audit year 2001–02 are likely to be in the region of £194 million. Best value inspection costs represent a £44 million component of this figure which includes £23.5 million in direct grant paid by DTLR and the National Assembly for Wales. The remainder of the costs are charged in fees supported through the Revenue Support Grant in England and Wales.

Social Services Inspectorate (SSI)

In 2001–02 SSI inspections cost £5.2 million. £4.5 million of this related to inspection of social services functions that are the responsibility of local councils.

Benefit Fraud Inspectorate (BFI)

The total running costs for the BFI in the last three years is circa £6 million per year.

HM Fire Service Inspectorate

Spend in 2001–02 is £1,660,000.

Office for Standards in Education (OFSTED)

The total direct cost (i.e. excluding overheads) of LEA inspections in 2000–01 amounted to about £2.3 million.

Assessment of the effectiveness of the various statutory and non-statutory components of the inspection regimes applied by each inspectorate, is the responsibility of the relevant sponsoring department. However, the Local Government White Paper seeks to deliver inspection regimes which more fully reflect authority performance, with a substantial reduction in inspection activity for the high performing. Our intention is that inspection will be co-ordinated across all local authority functions and will reflect risk analysis of each local authority based on a comprehensive performance assessment.

Refrigerator Disposal Costs

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what arrangements he has made with regard to the allocation of the adjustment to the Environmental, Protective and Cultural Services block, announced in the provisional local government finance settlement, to cover the cost of implementing refrigerator disposal regulations. [29117]

Mr. Byers: £6 million has been added to the upper tier sub-block of the Environmental, Protective and Cultural Services Standard Spending Assessment for 2002–03 for the costs of implementing refrigerator disposal regulations for the period 1 January 2002 to 31 March 2003. This will be distributed to local authorities using the standard formula for this sub-block.

NIMSA

Mr. Pound: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the achievement of performance targets set for the use of NIMSA funding of the Ordnance Survey. [28979]

Ms Keeble: Performance criteria and deliverables are defined for NIMSA activities. Progress is reviewed quarterly by the NIMSA Review Group. Through NIMSA funding, Ordnance Survey delivers a range of valuable services in the public interest. These outputs are published in an annual report.

Mr. Pound: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will publish the minutes of the NIMSA Review Group's meetings in (a) 2000 and (b) 2001. [28983]

Ms Keeble: No. Publication of Ordnance Survey outputs funded under NIMSA is by an annual report.

Mr. Pound: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the use of NIMSA funding by the Ordnance Survey in (a) 1999, (b) 2000 and (c) 2001. [28982]

Ms Keeble: The National Interest Mapping Services Agreement (NIMSA) was implemented on 1 April 1999. It is an agreement between DTLR, on behalf of Government, and Ordnance Survey for the provision of Ordnance Survey services that are required in the national interest but are not commercially viable.

Since April 1999, NIMSA funds have been used by Ordnance Survey for activities that are defined and agreed by the NIMSA review group comprising officials from DTLR and Ordnance Survey. These activities are agreed each year in advance, but are subject to change by the review group.

Details about NIMSA activities are published annually in an annual report. The report for the year 2000–01 will be published in February 2002.

Lord Birt

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he was consulted on the appointment of Lord Birt in respect of his role on transport. [29313]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 16 January 2002, Official Report, column 298W.

Parliamentary Questions

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many answers to parliamentary questions have been refused by his Department under exemption 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information in each year since 1994. [29422]

Dr. Whitehead: The Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions was formed on 8 June 2001. In the period 8 June 2001 to 18 January 2002, my Department has answered over 3,400 written questions, of which information was withheld in respect of 23 questions because the information requested was wholly or partially commercially confidential.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he will respond to the questions of the hon. Member for the Vale of York, refs. 23897–23900. [29281]

Mr. Spellar: I answered the hon. Member's questions on 17 January 2002, Official Report, columns 422–23W.

Fire Service

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what information is available to him to determine the percentage of fire officers' time spent on average on (a) responding to emergencies, (b) other key duties, (c) administration and (d) sick leave, in the last 10 years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [28432]

Dr. Whitehead: This information is not held centrally. However, information about shifts lost due to sickness by firefighters in 2000–01 was published at tables 30–33 of Her Majesty's Fire Service Inspectorate Best Value Performance Indicators, a copy of which has been placed in the House of Commons Library. This information is also available on www.safety.dtlr.gov.uk/fire/fepd/bvpi/bvpi.htm.

Electoral Modernisation Pilot Schemes

Ms Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will publish the names of those local authorities which have applied to him to run electoral modernisation pilot schemes in the May 2002 elections. [29886]

Mr. Raynsford: My Department has received 41 applications from local authorities to run electoral modernisation pilot schemes during the May 2002 local elections, involving a range of activities. More than half of the bids contain an element of electronic voting and/or counting; the rest are postal voting and some miscellaneous proposals. The local authorities that have submitted bids are:

Basingstoke and Deane District Council
Blackburn and Darwen Borough Council
Bolton Metropolitan Borough Council
Borough of Broxbourne
Bury Metropolitan Borough Council
London Borough of Camden
Chester City Council
Chorley Borough Council
Coventry City Council
Crawley Borough Council
Crewe and Nantwich Borough Council
Doncaster Metropolitan Borough Council
London Borough of Enfield
Epping Forest District Council
Gateshead Council
London Borough of Greenwich

London Borough of Hackney
London Borough of Havering
Huntingdonshire District Council
Hyndburn Borough Council
Ipswich Borough Council
Kingston-Upon-Hull City Council
City of Lincoln Council
Liverpool City Council
London Borough of Newham
North Tyneside Council
North West Leicestershire District Council
Preston Borough Council
Rugby Borough Council
St. Albans City and District Council
Sheffield City Council
Solihull Metropolitan Borough Council
South Tyneside Metropolitan Borough Council
Stevenage Borough Council
Stratford-on-Avon District Council
Swindon Borough Council
Trafford Metropolitan Borough Council
London Borough of Wandsworth
Watford Council
West Lancashire District Council
City of Westminster.

An announcement confirming which bidders have been successful will be made by the end of this month.

Mobile Homes

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to propose changes to legislation to provide better protection for the rights of owners of mobile homes; and if he will make a statement. [29365]

Ms Keeble: Changes to the legislation relating to park homes were included in the recommendations of the Park Homes Working Party. Following consultation, we issued our response to the Working Party's report on 29 November last year, and placed copies of it in the Library of the House. This gives a detailed response to each of the Working Party's recommendations and indicates how we intend to take them forward.

Special Purpose Vehicles

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list those development plans set out in annexe 2 to the SRA's Strategic Plan which will be subject to the establishment of special purpose vehicles. [29123]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 21 January 2002]: The details of the new enhancement framework are currently being developed. The precise number of projects for which SPVs will be created will depend on the outcome of the SRA's negotiations with the private sector, and on factors such as the project's type, complexity and size.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to ensure that third generation mobile telephone base station sites must be a statutory part of new planning guidelines. [28946]

Ms Keeble [holding answer 21 January 2002]: On 22 August 2001 we introduced changes that significantly improved the planning procedures and guidance for telecommunications mast development. The changes, which included amendments to Part 24 of the Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) Order 1995 (GPDO):

> strengthened public consultation requirements on mast proposals of 15 m and below so that they are the same as for planning applications;
> increased the time for a local planning authority to deal with prior approval applications to 56 days;
> underlined that school governors must be consulted on all proposals for new masts on or near a school or college; and > increased fees to enable authorities to carry out full public consultation.

Part 24 of the GPDO does not distinguish between different generations of telecommunications equipment and therefore applies to third generation base stations.

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will publish guidelines for 3G mobile telephony companies to share the use of 3G mobile telephony base stations. [28948]

Ms Keeble [holding answer 21 January 2002]: The Government's policy is firmly to encourage mast and site sharing where that is the optimum solution in the individual circumstances. Indeed, conditions attached to individual operating licences granted by the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry include a requirement to investigate mast sharing before seeking to put up any new mast.

Planning Policy Guidance Note 8, "Telecommunications" (PPG8), makes clear our expectation that developers should provide evidence to local planning authorities that they have carefully considered the use of existing masts, buildings and other structures before seeking to erect any new mast, regardless of size. The authority may be justified in refusing prior approval or planning permissions if it considers the evidence regarding the consideration of such alternative sites is not satisfactory. PPG8 is publicly available and applies to all telecommunications development, including 3G base stations.

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what estimate he has made of the number of new 3G mobile telephony base station sites that will be needed in the United Kingdom. [28947]

Ms Keeble [holding answer 21 January 2002]: This is a matter for the individual telecommunications operators. However, the operators are fully aware of the importance we attach to keeping the number of masts to the minimum practicable, for example through mast sharing, and to ensuring that those which are needed are designed and sited with sensitivity and care.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Prisoners (Guantanamo Bay)

Llew Smith: To ask the Solicitor-General (1) what communications her Department has had with the United States Attorney-General in respect of the legality of the conditions of detention of British citizens held at Guantanamo Bay in Cuba; [28647]

(2) what discussions the Attorney-General has had with the United States Administration on the establishment of ground rules for the military tribunals it is setting up to try suspected terrorists from the al-Qaeda network. [28648]

The Solicitor-General: The Law Officers and our Department have had no such communications or discussions with the United States Government. Such contacts are a matter for the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs.

PRIME MINISTER

Lord Birt

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what is the (a) budget and (b) work programme of the (i) Forward Strategy Unit and (ii) Delivery Unit; and who belongs to each; [29065]

(2) for what period Lord Birt has been appointed to the Forward Strategy Unit; [29189]

(3) how many times he has met Lord Birt since 1 January; [29185]

(4) if Lord Birt has access to Cabinet papers relating to transport; [29315]

(5) how many hours per week Lord Birt works; [29184]

(6) how much Lord Birt has claimed from official funds by way of out-of-pocket expenses; and how much of this relates to taxi travel; [29191]

(7) what assessment he has made of how far the degree of information hitherto made public about the role of Lord Birt is consistent with the Government's guidelines on parliamentary accountability; [29182]

(8) when Lord Birt last travelled by train on official Government business; [29190]

(9) if he will list the transport organisations Lord Birt has met since his appointment; [29186]

(10) what secretarial support is available to Lord Birt; and what the expected annual cost of this is; [29183]

(11) if he will place in the Library a copy of Lord Birt's work on crime; [29193]

(12) what further information concerning the present activities of Lord Birt will be released when the Freedom of Information Act 2000 is fully in operation; [29194]

(13) what office space has been made available to Lord Birt; and in which buildings it is; [29188]

(14) if he will list the Ministers to whom Lord Birt reports. [29187]

The Prime Minister: The role of the Forward Strategy Unit is to provide long-term strategic analysis to me and to other Cabinet Ministers on a range of issues. The information on the work of the unit in the public domain is consistent with the long-standing principle that internal policy advice to Ministers remains confidential.

For the current work programme and budget of the Forward Strategy Unit, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 19 November 2001, Official Report, column 104W.

For the current work programme and budget of the Delivery Unit, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 19 November 2001, Official Report, column 83W.

Ministers, their special advisers and other civil servants meet many people in the course of their work. It is not our policy to make information on meetings or their content public.

Lord Birt as the PM's unpaid strategy adviser, based at No. 10, works with the Forward Strategy Unit on a range of projects.

Details of an individual's conditions of appointment are not made public in order to protect the privacy of the individual concerned.

Lord Birt last travelled by train on official Government business on 28 November 2001 and regularly travels by train on official business. He is entitled to claim reasonable expenses incurred during his work. His travel arrangements and expense claims are in accordance with the rules set out in the Cabinet Office Management Code.

External advisers when working with the Forward Strategy Unit may have access to its administrative facilities which are accounted for within the unit's budget.

In line with the practice of successive Governments, access to Cabinet papers is decided on a case-by-case basis.

As the Government have already made clear, Lord Birt's advice and conclusions on crime were one of the inputs reflected in the Government's strategy document "Criminal Justice: The Way Ahead" (Cm 5074). That document was published and placed before Parliament on 26 February 2001.

Enron

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister what meetings have taken place and on which dates between (a) himself, (b) Ministers within the Cabinet Office, (c) officials within No. 10, (d) officials within the Cabinet Office, (e) special advisers within No. 10 and (f) special advisers within the Cabinet Office and representatives of Enron since 1 May 1997. [28623]

The Prime Minister: It is not the normal practice of the Government to release details of meetings or discussions with private individuals or companies.

Environmental Reports

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister how many of the FTSE 350 companies with which he has held meetings in the last 12 months have produced environmental reports; in how many of the meetings he has held with such companies he raised the importance of such reports; and what further action he will take to encourage such reporting. [29326]

The Prime Minister: I have meetings with a wide range of organisations and individuals. As with previous Administrations it is not my practice to provide details of all such meetings.

Missile Defence

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister when he expects to know the nature of the request from the US Administration concerning British involvement in the Nuclear Missile Defence programme. [26559]

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Nottingham, South (Mr. Simpson) on 19 November 2001, Official Report, column 103W.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Listed Buildings

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to reform the listing process for buildings of historic value, with particular reference to where they have a landmark value because of their location and appearance [26780]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 14 January 2002]: Buildings will continue to be considered for listing against strict criteria of special architectural or historic interest. The Government's guidance to local authorities in Planning Policy Guidance Note 15—Planning and the Historic Environment stresses a general presumption in favour of retaining unlisted buildings in conservation areas which make a positive contribution to the character or appearance of a conservation area. The Government's recent policy statement, "The Historic Environment: A Force for Our Future" (December 2001) stresses the importance of planning authorities taking account of the value a community places on a particular aspect of its immediate environment.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will take steps to ensure that listed buildings cannot be de-listed following an appeal from the owner without public notification and an opportunity for objections to be made. [27898]

Dr. Howells: Decisions on listing and de-listing are based on expert advice received about a building's architectural and historic interest. There is no formal process for appeals against decisions on listing and de-listing, but we will consider fresh evidence at any time. Given this, we see no benefit in the introduction of a formal appeals procedure.

Regulatory Impact Assessments

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many regulatory impact assessments have been produced by her Department since August 2001; and if she will list those produced (a) following initial consultation with affected parties about the most appropriate methodology for assessing costs and other impacts and (b) which set out full commercial impacts, including profitability, employment, consumer prices and competitiveness, as recommended in Good Policy Making. [28398]

Dr. Howells: Full regulatory impact assessments are placed in the House Libraries. Since August 2001 the Department has produced regulatory impact assessments in respect of the draft Regulatory Reform (Golden Jubilee Licensing) Order 2002 and the National Heritage Bill, the former coming under (a) and the latter under neither (a) nor (b). I also refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary, Cabinet Office on 17 January 2002, Official Report, column 483.

Tramways (Preservation)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate she has made of the number of locations and length of pre-1945 tramways which survive under tarmac or are otherwise intact; and what her policy is on their preservation. [28577]

Dr. Howells: A search of the schedule of ancient monuments has revealed that there are 11 entries on tramways. The majority of these form parts of industrial sites.

Under the Monuments Protection Programme, this Department and English Heritage are undertaking a systematic review of England's archaeological resource, with a view to providing statutory protection, principally through scheduling and listing, to those sites identified as being of national interest. Transport systems, including tramways, are being assessed in this context.

Special Advisers

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the average time is that the Head of her Department has recommended since May 1997 between a special adviser leaving her Department and taking up outside employment; and if she will make a statement. [28912]

Dr. Howells: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 21 January 2002, Official Report, column 594W.

Free Television Licences

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the impact on elderly residents of warden-accommodation of the rule that free television licences are available only if all the residents of such accommodation qualify for the concession. [28878]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 21 January 2002]: Under the Accommodation for Residential Care (ARC) concessionary scheme, television licences are available at a fee of £5 for each unit of qualifying accommodation. The requirement that sheltered housing must be provided for disabled people, mentally disordered people or retired people aged 60 or over is one of a number of qualifying criteria for entitlement to the concession. The ARC scheme as a whole was examined by the independent review panel on the future funding of the BBC in 1999, but the panel recommended that the existing scheme should be retained, since it was unable to identify a superior alternative funded from the licence fee.

As announced last year, the Government propose to introduce measures to preserve the rights of ARC beneficiaries who remain in accommodation provided or managed by a local authority, a housing association or a development corporation, when the social mix or the level of warden cover change. Consultations between officials and the BBC about the necessary amendments to the television licence fee regulations are currently under way. We intend to bring forward these amendments as soon as we can but it is important that in doing so we do not create any new anomalies or unnecessary administrative burdens.

Mr. Wood: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to extend the free television licence scheme to all pensioners. [29652]

Dr. Howells: The Government have no plans to extend free television licences to pensioners below the age of 75.

Seaside Resorts

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the impact of recommendations 60 to 64 of the Budd report on Her Majesty's Government's policy of regenerating seaside resorts. [28850]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 21 January 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Scarborough and Whitby (Lawrie Quinn) on 19 December 2001, Official Report, column 317W.

Broadcasting Bill

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when the Broadcasting Bill will be published. [29490]

Dr. Howells: We have no plans to bring forward a new Broadcasting Bill. However, we are planning to publish in the spring of this year a draft Communications Bill, which will implement the policies set out in the White Paper on Communications that was published in December 2000. The Communications Bill will set up a new converged regulatory structure for telecommunications, spectrum management and broadcasting.

Stolen Equipment

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what equipment has been stolen from her Department since 1 May 1997; and what the approximate value of each item was. [26834]

Dr. Howells: Equipment stolen from the Department since May 1997 has been confined to information technology equipment, namely one laptop computer (value £2,000), three personal computer base units (value £1,500) and one personal computer monitor (value £300). All losses are reported by the Department as both a security breach, immediately after the event is detected, and annually to the Treasury as a loss by fraud.

Recreational Boating

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps she is taking to encourage the construction of berths along inland waterways and the coastline for recreational and leisure boating. [27125]

Alun Michael: I have been asked to reply.

We are looking at what action we may need to take for water-based sport and recreation more generally in the light of the research report—"Water-Based Sport and Recreation: the facts" prepared for DEFRA by the School of Environment, University of Brighton and published on 21 December—on facts about water-based sport and recreation on inland rivers, canals and enclosed waters that we published last month. In general it is for local providers to assess demand and supply in order to determine whether there is a need for a change in provision of berths and other facilities for recreational and leisure boating.

DEFENCE

Stewardship Report

Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he intends to publish the first Stewardship report promised in the Ministry of Defence's policy document, "In Trust and On Trust: The Strategy for the Defence Estate". [29723]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence will publish its first Stewardship report on the Defence Estate on Tuesday 22 January. This fulfils the commitment made when "In Trust and On Trust: The Strategy for the Defence Estate" was launched in June 2000.

"In Trust and On Trust" set out clearly the MOD's policies and priorities as well as performance targets against which the effectiveness of our stewardship of the estate could be judged. It also contained a pledge to report annually against the strategy's goals.

The Stewardship report which we are now publishing contains comprehensive information on the estate, covering both rural and built environments, and sustainability. This is the first time that the MOD has published such a comprehensive report on its estate. A copy has been placed in the Libraries of the House and also on the MOD website at www.mod.uk.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many publications were issued by his Department in each of the last four years. [11838]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence produces a huge range of publications in both hard copy and electronic format. No central record is kept of these and it would not be possible to list each new publication as this could be provided only at disproportionate costs.

However our central corporate communications division, which is responsible for most corporate and policy publications, does have a record of the publications that it and its predecessors have produced. From the information available, the following main publications have been produced in each of the last four years:

Financial year 1998–99

Strategic Defence Review (Cmd 999)
Departmental Performance Report
Defence Booklets
Defence Annual Report
Sanctuary Conservation Booklet
Defence Factsheets
Focus internal newspaper

Financial year 1999–2000

Defence White Paper (Cmd 4446)
Defence Annual Report and Mission Booklets
Defence Booklets
Defence Factsheets (series of 28)
Factsheets (in Welsh)
Large text/Braille/audio material
Sanctuary magazine
Focus internal magazine
Departmental Performance Report

Financial year 2000–01

MOD factsheets (series of 33)
Factsheets (in Welsh)
Corporate Booklets (including two policy papers on: Defence Diplomacy and Multinational Defence Cooperation)
Kosovo Lessons from the Crisis (Cmd 4724)
Departmental Performance Report
Focus internal newspaper
Sanctuary magazine

Financial year 2001–02

Departmental Performance Report
Corporate Booklets (including two policy papers on: European Defence and Defence Acquisition)
Focus internal newspaper
Sanctuary magazine.

Military Police

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what the proposed manning level is for each of the next three years for the (a) Ministry of Defence Police, (b) Royal Military Police, (c) Military Provost Guard Service and (d) RAF Police; and if he will make a statement; [26639]

(2) what is the approved number for the (a) Ministry of Defence Police, (b) Royal Military Police, (c) Military Provost Guard Service, (d) RAF Police; and if he will make a statement. [26637]

Mr. Ingram: The current figures are as follows:

	Requirement	Strength
MOD Police[1]	3,395	3,328
Royal Military Police[2]	2,109	2,073
Military Provost Guard Service[3]	528	453
RAF Police[4]	2,384	2,265

[1] Figures as at 1 January 2002. Civilian support staff not included.

[2] Strength as at December 2001. Requirement is the Manpower Planning Target for 2001–02 Financial Year. Figures shown are the Adjutant Generals Corp (Provost Branch) which includes: AG(PRO)-General Police Duties (GPD), AG(PRO)-Special Investigations Branch (SIB) and AG(PRO)-Military Provost Staff (MPS).

[3] Strength as at 1 December 2001. Requirement is the current establishment figure for 2001–02 Financial Year.

[4] Figures as at 1 December 2001.

Based on the known Ministry of Defence Police complement alterations, the overall staffing levels for the next three years are expected to be between 3,000 and 3,300.

The RAF Police are in the process of a major structural reorganisation with a view to reducing the requirement. The trained strength will be reduced over the next six to eight years to align with the reduced requirement. It is likely that the Military Provost Guard Service will increase to offset part of the reduction in the RAF Police but will be aligned to the strength reductions.

Pensions

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the cost to the Armed Forces Pension Scheme of providing widowed spouses of post-retirement marriages with a pension based on all the pensionable service of the service men and women. [27199]

Mr. Ingram: Post-retirement widow and widower pensions (PRWP) were introduced as a requirement of the Social Security Pensions Act 1975. Provision was made in the Armed Forces Pension Scheme (AFPS) for the payment of pensions to widow(er)s of service pensioners who married (or remarried) after retirement, but this change benefited only the widows of those giving service on or after 6 April 1978, and the widowers of those giving service on or after 6 April 1989. Only service on or after those dates was taken into account when calculating the level of pension. Against this background, it would cost in the order of £50 million to extend PRWP's to all current and deferred AFPS pensioners. This would be a one-off cost based on a broad actuarial estimate.

There is no distinction between service men and public sector employees with regard to the fact that the PRWP only applies to those with service on or after 6 April 1978, or 6 April 1989. It has been the long-standing policy of successive Governments that discretionary changes to improve the benefits from public service pensions schemes should be implemented from a current date for future service only. To extend the post-retirement marriage concession to survivors of members of all public service occupational schemes would cost between £300 million and £500 million.

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what formula is used for the annual uprating of armed forces pensions. [28868]

Mr. Ingram: [holding answer 21 January 2002:] Pensions which are already in payment are increased annually in line with the retail prices index under the terms of the Armed Forces Pension Scheme (Pensions Increase) Order.

The increase in rate of pension payable to those who retire each year is broadly in line with annual pay increases. Armed forces pensions are not based on individual earnings but on a representative rate of pension for each rank. This 'band of brothers' approach ensures that all those who leave in the same year in the same rank and with the same number of years' service, receive the same pension. The representative rates of pension are linked to 'spot' rates of pay for each of the ranks. Annual increases in the spot rates of pay automatically increase the representative rates of pension based on them.

Theft and Fraud

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his estimate is of the cost of theft and fraud to (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies in each of the last four years. [27986]

Dr. Moonie: The reported estimated cost to the Ministry of Defence, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies of fraud and theft in each of last complete financial years is as follows:

	MOD	Agencies	NDPBs
1997–98	168,393	421,263	0
1998–99	183,107	527,897	0
2000–01	581,238	300,112	0

No abatement is made for subsequent recoveries. The figures relate to a combination of suspected and proven frauds and thefts with estimated values refined from time to time as investigations, sometime lasting a year or more, reach a conclusion. A significant element of estimated cost or value can relate to 'at risk' estimates applied to suspected procurement fraud cases, the majority of which are usually resolved as 'no crime' or have a proven value lower than original estimates.

Troop Deployments

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the countries in which UK troops are stationed, giving the numbers of troops in each case. [28742]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 9 January 2002, Official Report, columns 821–22W, to the hon. Member for North Essex (Mr. Jenkin) which shows the number of UK regular forces serving overseas as at 1 November 2001 broken down by service.

Departmental Employees

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many employees of (a) his Department and (b) agencies sponsored by his Department work in (i) London, (ii) areas benefiting from EU Objective 1 status, (iii) areas with Objective 2 status and (iv) other areas. [16104]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 19 November 2001]: Statistics on Ministry of Defence employees are not held in the format requested. Officials are currently compiling this information and I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Early Retirement

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) RAF and Royal Marine officers, (b) Navy officers and (c) Army officers have sought early retirement in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [25832]

Mr. Ingram: The figures for Premature Voluntary Release (PVR) of service officers, broken down by the number of applications and number of actual exits, for each of the three services are as follows:

Financial Year	Applications	Exists
1998–99
Navy including Royal Marines	239	164
Army	515	509
RAF	268	243
1999–2000
Navy including Royal Marines	221	[1]238
Army	547	442
RAF	243	213
2000–01
Navy including Royal Marines	245	[1]167
Army	530	531
RAF	278	241

[1] Exits may exceed applications in any year due to the time taken to process applications

RAF Bases

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many military personnel have been carried on tactical exercises from (a) Brize Norton and (b) Lyneham in each of the last five years. [26343]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Cyber-Warfare

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans there are to set up a cyber-warfare unit in his Ministry. [26635]

Mr. Ingram: There are no plans to set up a cyber-warfare unit in the Ministry of Defence although structures already exist to co-ordinate the conduct of information operations which encompass existing military capabilities, such as those traditionally used for command and control warfare, as well as computer operations and emerging technologies.

Military Garments

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what financial checks are carried out on companies tendering for contracts on military garments. [27436]

Dr. Moonie: Prior to a company being invited to tender for a contract the Ministry of Defence will have satisfied itself of the company's financial strength. The checks involve obtaining a financial report containing a complete copy of the company's accounts and then carrying out reviews of items such as the balance sheet and operating cost statement.

Challenger 2

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to improve the global deployment capability of the Challenger 2 Main Battle Tank fleet. [27271]

Mr. Ingram: The lessons for the Challenger 2 Main Battle Tank (CR2) from Exercise Saif Sareea 2 will be fully evaluated, in the light of ongoing operational experience in a range of environments, before any decisions on changes to the global deployment capability of the CR2 are made.

Cadets

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many cadet units have not been allocated cadet centres. [27195]

Dr. Moonie: None.

Mutual Defence Agreement

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many visits of UK personnel to the US under the auspices of the 1958 Mutual Defence Agreement have occurred in each year since 1997. [28255]

Dr. Moonie: The number of visits by UK personnel, involving one or more individuals, to the US under the auspices of the 1958 Mutual Defence Agreement in each year since 1997 is as follows:

Year	Number of visits
1997	200
1998	253
1999	225
2000	207
2001	205

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many UK personnel work in the United States under the auspices of the 1958 Mutual Defence Agreement; and in which US facility they are working. [28254]

Dr. Moonie: There are four UK officials serving in the US under the auspices of the 1958 Mutual Defence Agreement (1958 MDA). All are located in the British Embassy, Washington DC. Their duties are to facilitate the conduct of bilateral business within the provisions of the MDA. In addition there are four staff on secondment from AWE Aldermaston in the US, to assist with the technical development of facilities of mutual interest. Two are stationed at the Los Alamos National Laboratory, one is located at Sandia National Laboratory and one at the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory.

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many exchange of information and visit reports have been generated as a result of exchanges of information under the 1958 Mutual Defence Agreement in each of the last five years. [28256]

Dr. Moonie: Six exchanges of information by visit and reports (EIVRs) have been created within the last five years. In 1997 one on the subject of test monitoring was generated, which first met in 1998. In 1998 one was created on matters concerned with the contract to manage the Atomic Weapons Establishment, which also met in that year. Four EIVRs covering the subjects of executive channel, miscellaneous visits, non-proliferation and arms control technology, and enhanced surveillance were created in 2001.

Nevada Test Site

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many UK personnel work at the Nevada test site; and how many UK personnel have visited the Nevada test site in each of the last three years. [28258]

Dr. Moonie: There are no UK personnel permanently based at the Nevada test site. Numbers of UK personnel who have visited the Nevada test site in the last three years are as follows:

Year	Number of visits
1999	9
2000	26
2001	40

Explosive Remnants of War

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the outcomes of the UN Convention on Certain Conventional Weapons Review Conference in December 2001, with particular reference to the issue of explosive remnants of war. [28072]

Mr. Ingram: The Review Conference of the UN Convention on Certain Conventional Weapons agreed a detailed mandate for a Group of Governmental Experts (GGE) to discuss ways and means to address the issue of explosive remnants of war over the coming year. The GGE is also mandated to explore the issue of anti-vehicle mines. The Chairman-designate of the GGE will undertake consultations on possible options to improve compliance with the Convention. Interested states parties are invited to hold expert consultations on small calibre weapons and ammunition. The Review Conference agreed to convene a meeting of states parties to the Convention in December 2002 to follow up on these decisions.

Flight Lieutenant A. L. Adams

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much has been spent by the RAF in training Flight Lieutenant A. L. Adams. [28384]

Dr. Moonie: Individual training costs are not collected. Flight Lieutenant Adams' Initial Officer Training is estimated to have cost approximately £16,500 and his flying training of the order of £770,000 excluding his salary and allowances.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his estimate is of the costs incurred in the process of redress initiated by Flight Lieutenant A. L. Adams. [28385]

Dr. Moonie: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the personal files recently supplied to Flight Lieutenant A. L. Adams. [28387]

Dr. Moonie: In accordance with exemptions 8a and 12 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information, personal data are not to be disclosed without the consent of the individual to whom the information applies. All personal data relating to Flight Lieutenant Adams' redress of complaint are in his possession and it is for him to determine whether and how they should be placed in the public domain.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the reasons for no conclusion having been reached through process of redress initiated by Flight Lieutenant A. L. Adams. [28386]

Dr. Moonie: Flight Lieutenant Adams voluntarily withdrew from fast-jet flying training in October 1999, and was subsequently restreamed to rotary wing training rather than his preference of multi-engine training. He initiated the process of redress in March 2000. His complaint was rejected by the Commander-in-Chief, Royal Air Force Personnel and Training Command in December 2000. Flight Lieutenant Adams subsequently asked for the matter to be considered by the Air Force Board. Under the procedures followed during the consideration of a redress of complaint, all appropriate documents are disclosed to the complainant, who is invited to comment, before they are submitted to the decision-maker. This inevitably prolongs the process, and Flight Lieutenant Adams has commented, as is his right, on four separate occasions since the relevant synopsis was first disclosed to him in March 2001. It was necessary to postpone a scheduled meeting of the Air Force Board in September in order to take account of his latest comments. The case is now under consideration by the Air Force Board, who have asked for further information on which Flight Lieutenant Adams has been invited to comment before his case can be considered further.

War Criminals (Bosnia)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the role of British peacekeeping forces in Bosnia in relation to the hunt for war-crime suspects, with particular reference to Mr. Karadzic. [28369]

Mr. Ingram: Assistance to the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia (ICTY) as an integral part of SFOR's mission and this includes the detention of individuals indicted as war criminals that SFOR encounter in the course of their duties. SFOR have to date performed 26 detention operations; 14 of which involved British forces.

The arrest and transfer to The Hague of Radovan Karadzic remains a high priority for us, as for the other members of SFOR, and the UK will continue to make every effort to ensure that he is apprehended and brought to justice. While the international community may detain war criminals by force if necessary, we continue to urge Mr. Karadzic to surrender himself to the International Tribunal voluntarily.

Royal Navy Vessels

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which Royal Navy vessels have had modifications and upgrades since 1997; and how long each of them were in port for that purpose. [28350]

Mr. Ingram: All operational Royal Navy vessels will have undergone some form of modification or upgrade since 1997. Rather than bring vessels into port for specific modifications or upgrades this work will generally have been undertaken within a period in which the vessel is either alongside, docked for maintenance or for repair.

United States National Guards

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his policy is on the presence in the United Kingdom of United States National Guards; what notification he has received from United States authorities of their intention to station such personnel within the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [28322]

Mr. Hoon: As with our components of the US visiting force, the presence of US National Guards in the UK is governed by the NATO Status of Forces Agreement of 1951. No request has been received from the United States authorities to station US National Guards permanently in the UK, although they do transit through the UK from time to time.

Russian Armed Forces

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what investment the Government are making in retraining members of the Russian armed forces; and if he will make a statement. [27833]

Mr. Hoon: As at 31 December 2001, the Ministry of Defence's Russian Resettlement Project has spent £7.6 million on the retraining of 13,000 retiring and recently retired officers of the Russian armed forces. The Ministry of Defence funds resettlement courses at five cities around Russia. The range of training courses is aimed at the local job market and covers, for example, logistics, business administration, IT systems and English language.

The Russian Resettlement Project is a major success story of our defence relationship with Russia. Employment is found by 70 per cent. of graduates within four months of successfully completing the course.

European Defence

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with other EU member states about the establishment of a council of European Defence Ministers; and if he will make a statement. [28497]

Mr. Hoon: The question of a formal council of Defence Ministers was discussed at the EU General Affairs Council on 19 November 2001 and an informal meeting of EU Defence Ministers on 12 October 2001.

There is already a programme of informal meetings of EU Defence Ministers, and the General Affairs Council provides a forum for formal discussions as and when required. There are no proposals to establish a separate council of European Defence Ministers.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with other EU member states about the creation of a European concept of Special Forces; and if he will make a statement. [28495]

Mr. Hoon: None.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Shipbuilding Industry

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his policy towards the establishment of a temporary EU defensive mechanism for the shipbuilding industry. [19585]

Mr. Wilson: We share the UK industry's very real concerns about Korean unfair competition, which we take very seriously. We believe the best means of tackling Korean unfair competition is to launch action in the World Trade Organisation (WTO), on which all member states are agreed, and to help yards improve their competitiveness. However, we are strongly opposed to the Commission proposal to reintroduce, in parallel, temporary operating subsidies.

We do not believe that subsidy is an appropriate response to this complex and longstanding problem. Operating subsidies have not been effective in countering Korean unfair competition or in improving the competitiveness of EU yards in the past and we believe the Commission's new proposal will be even less effective at countering Korea. The Commission proposal is likely to be difficult to operate in practice and is open to abuse. Furthermore, it will distort competition within the EU as only some member states stand to gain. The proposal will not benefit UK yards as they do not build the relevant types of ships, namely containerships and product/chemical tankers, and could well be damaged by the subsidies that competing yards stand to receive.

At the December 2001 meeting of the Industry Council, the Commission tried for the third time to secure agreement on its dual approach of subsidies and WTO action but again failed to secure sufficient support from member states. Member states remained firmly split on the subsidies proposal. The UK vigorously pressed the Commission to launch the WTO action but to no avail. The deadlock on the Commission approach therefore continues, with no action against Korea. The Commission will now review the market situation and present its findings in March as a basis for further discussion.

Telephone Sales

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make it her policy to make it illegal for telephone sales and marketing organisations to withhold their telephone number when contacting members of the public; and if she will make a statement. [24456]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Consumers are protected under the Telecommunications (Data Protection and Privacy) Regulations 1999 which ensures that direct marketers must on request provide their address or a free telephone number on which they can be contacted. The Consumer Protection (Distance Selling) Regulations 2000 also require that telephone sales and marketing organisations who cold call consumers at home are obliged to identify clearly the business they represent and the commercial purpose of their call at the beginning of the conversation. If a contract is concluded over the telephone, the regulations also give consumers the right to clear information before they decide to buy (which must then be confirmed in writing) and the right to a cooling off period of seven days in which the consumer can cancel and receive a full refund.

If consumers do not wish to receive unsolicited commercial telephone calls, they can register with the Telephone Preference Service. Telephone sales and marketing organisations are obliged under the Telecommunications (Data Protection and Privacy) Regulations 1999 to desist from calling individuals who are registered on the scheme.

Subscribers can register by calling 0845 070 0707 or through the following website: "http://www.tpsonline.org.uk".

Pharmacy Market

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the Office of Fair Trading inquiry into controls over the pharmacy market will include within its scope dispensing by general practitioners. [24983]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The market study on pharmacies has been initiated by the Director General for Fair Trading and the scope of the study is for him. OFT have confirmed that they are investigating the restrictions on entry to dispense NHS prescriptions. As such the scope of the study could include all those who dispense NHS prescriptions including general practitioners.

Fireworks

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many representations she received from (a) hon. Members and (b) members of the public concerning the use, misuse and sale of fireworks between (i) 1 October and 31 December 1999, (ii) 1 January and 30 September 2000, (iii) 1 October and 31 December 2000 and (iv) 1 January and 30 September 2001. [26699]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The representations received by the Department over these periods, concerning a wide range of issues relating to fireworks is set out in the following table:

Period	MPs	Public
1 October to 31 December 1999	119	260
1 January to 30 September 2000	65	109
1 October to 31 December 2000	111	129
1 January to 30 September 2001	125	501

ECGD

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether it is the financial objective of her Department that the ECGD should operate within a break even framework. [27218]

Ms Hewitt: Yes. ECGD aims to maintain a ratio of its reserves to its estimates of Expected Loss on amounts at risk under its guarantees of at least 1.5. Last year ECGD contributed, after expenses, £205 million to the Exchequer.

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether it is the policy of her Department to eliminate subsidies from export credits. [27219]

Ms Hewitt: Yes. ECGD charges premium to cover its costs and expected losses such that a Reserve Coverage Ratio (ratio of accumulated reserves to expected losses) is maintained of 1.5 or higher.

Regulatory Impact Assessments

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many regulatory impact assessments have been produced by her Department since August 2001; and if she will list those produced (a) following initial consultation with affected parties about the most appropriate methodology for assessing costs and other impacts and (b) which set out full commercial impacts, including profitability, employment, consumer prices and competitiveness, as recommended in Good Policy Making. [28406]

Ms Hewitt: The Department has produced 10 regulatory impact assessments since August 2001. The RIAs relate to:

Radiation (Emergency Preparedness and Public Information) Regulations

The Unsolicited Goods and Services Act 1971 (Electronic Communications) Order 2001

The Working Time (Amendment) Regulations 2001

Utilities Act 2000: Electricity Licence Exemptions

The Maternity and Parental Leave (Amendment) Regulations 2001

The Equipment and Protective Systems Intended for use in Explosive Atmospheres (Amendment) Regulations 2001

The Copyright, etc. and Trade Marks (Offences and Enforcement) Bill

The Registered Designs (Amendment) Rules 2001 and The Registered Designs (Fees) (Amendment) Rules 2001 (combined RIA)

The Trade Marks (Amendment) Rules 2001

The Electricity from Non-Fossil Fuel Sources (Locational Flexibility) Order 2001.

All full regulatory impact assessments are placed in the Libraries of the House.

The Good Policy Making Guide recommends that policy makers take early soundings from affected parties. The results of these informal consultations are not required to be produced in a RIA at this stage. However, Departments are advised to include a partial RIA in formal consultations. Consultations can be accessed via www.ukonline.gov.uk/citizenspace/consultations/.

The Good Policy Making Guide does recommend that as part of the RIA's assessment of costs and benefits, any additional costs and indirect costs should be identified and quantified stating who or what bears them.

There is no specific requirement in the Good Policy Making Guide to consult on appropriate methodology. Nor is there a specific requirement to set out the information at (b). The information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Ceramics

Mr. Stevenson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will ensure (a) respect for copyright, (b) compliance with regulations and (c) traceability for consumer protection on imports of ceramics from China to the United Kingdom under WTO agreements; and if she will make a statement. [28772]

Nigel Griffiths: China became a member of the WTO on 11 December 2001, and is bound by the agreement on Trade Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights ("TRIPS"). This requires all WTO members to provide certain minimum standards for the protection and enforcement of copyright and other intellectual property rights. The agreement is the first broadly-subscribed multilateral intellectual property agreement that is enforceable between Governments.

An EU requirement to apply origin markings to ceramic imports from China would be incompatible with WTO rules. However, EC Regulation No. 3295/94 (as amended) allows a right holder to lodge an application with Customs to prohibit the entry into the Community of counterfeit and pirated goods. It also provides for Customs Officers to contact a right holder if they come across suspected infringing goods during the course of their checks. In this case the goods will be detained and the right holder will be invited to lodge an application within a specified period.

Mr. Stevenson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the Chinese capability to meet its WTO requirements on counterfeiting and copying of ceramic products. [28773]

Nigel Griffiths: China gave a commitment to abide fully with the provisions of the agreement on Trade Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights ("TRIPS") by the date of her accession to the WTO. The agreement requires all WTO members to provide certain minimum standards of protection for patents, copyrights, trade marks and other forms of intellectual property protection; and to provide effective provisions for enforcement of these rights. China's accession to the WTO on 11 December 2001 will provide a welcome boost to the ability of rights holders to enforce their rights within China. Foreign countries can look forward to improved safeguards for their rights; and have been promised reinforced co-operation from the Chinese authorities.

Mr. Stevenson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on manufacturing industry in North Staffordshire. [28770]

Alan Johnson: The North Staffordshire Task Force and Advantage West Midlands are working with local partners to assist manufacturing industry in the area. In addition, the Government recently announced a further £1.5 million support for the Ceramics Industry Forum, many of whose members are in North Staffordshire. I am also meeting my hon. Friend on 23 January to discuss recent announcements by businesses based in the area.

Miners' Compensation

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many former miners' compensation claims have been registered in (a) St. Helens, South constituency, (b) St. Helens metropolitan authority area and (c) Merseyside in relation to (i) vibration white finger and (ii) respiratory diseases. [28700]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 21 January 2002]: IRISC, the Department's claims handlers, have registered claims in the regions as follows:

Number

	(i) Vibration white finger (VWF)	(ii) Respiratory disease
(a) St. Helens, South[1]	439	759
(b) St. Helens metropolitan authority[2]	901	1,605
(c) Merseyside[3]	1,435	2,672

[1] St. Helens, South as defined by the area with postcode prefixes: L 34, 35; WA 9, 10.

[2] St. Helens metropolitan authority as defined by the area with postcode prefixes: WA 8–12; L 34–35.

[3] Merseyside as defined by the area with postcode prefixes: CH 48–49, 60–63; L 3, 9–10, 12, 14, 16–26, 34–38; PR 8–9, WA 8–12, WN 4–5

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many respiratory specialists in (a) Merseyside, (b) the north-west and (c) England were working on the Medical Assessment Process for compensating former miners at (i) 1 January 2001 and (ii) 1 January 2002. [28699]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 21 January 2002]: As at 1 January 2001, there were 104 respiratory specialists working on the Medical Assessment Process (MAP) living and/or working in England as a whole, of which 10 were working in the north-west region, but none working in Merseyside.

As at 1 January 2002, there were 155 respiratory specialists working on the MAP living and/or working in England as a whole, of which 19 were working in the north-west region, but none are working in Merseyside.

North-west centres are defined as: Wigan, Wrexham and Manchester.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many compensation claims by former miners living in (a) St. Helens, South and (b) St. Helens metropolitan authority (i) have yet to be settled and (ii) have been paid their final sum. [28698]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 21 January 2002]: To date, the number of claimants who have not settled their claims or received an offer of compensation, and the number of settled claims is as follows:

	St. Helens, South[1]	St. Helens metropolitan authority[2]
Respiratory disease
Number of unsettled claims which have not received offers	728	1,518
Number of settled claims	16	31
Number of offers outstanding with solicitors	15	56
Vibration White Finger
Number of unsettled claims which have not received offers	256	521
Number of settled claims	134	255
Number of offers outstanding with solicitors	49	125

[1] St. Helens, South as defined by the area with postcode prefixes: L 34, 35; WA 9, 10

[2] St. Helens metropolitan authority as defined by the area with postcode prefixes: WA 8–12; L 34–35

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the average (a) interim and (b) final payment amount is for (i) Vibration White Finger and (ii) respiratory diseases to former coal miners in (A) St. Helens, South, (B) Merseyside and (C) England. [28706]

Ms Hewitt: There are six different types of interim payments that may be made to claimants for compensation for respiratory disease, subject to conditions. Of these, three are of fixed amounts and are listed as follows:

Type of interim	Eligibility
PD D12	A £2,000 interim is made to claimants in receipt of the Industrial injuries benefit for chronic bronchitis and emphysema
Widows' interim 1	Widows who receive a bereavement award, and have not received any other payment, are entitled to a further interim payment of £2,000
Widows' interim 2	Widows who are not in receipt of a bereavement award, although one of the eight qualifying descriptors is cited on her late husband's death certificate but was not found to cause or materially contribute to the death, and have not received any other payment, are entitled to an interim payment of £1,000

The variable interims are:

1. Bereavement awards.
2. Expedited interims—where an expedited offer has been made, but rejected by the claimant, a proportion of the offer is forwarded while the claimant proceeds the full Medical Assessment Process, MAP.
3. Post MAP interims—where a claimant has attended a MAP appointment and for whom the work history has been agreed, but the Department is unable to settle the claim, an interim is made.

Claims for compensation for respiratory disease can be settled by either an expedited payment following spirometry testing or a full and final offer following MAP.

Respiratory disease	St. Helens, South	Merseyside	England
Interim payments
Average bereavement award	7,609	8,322	8,210
Average expedited interim	n/a	n/a	2,862
MAP interim	5,168	4,119	4,024
Full and final offers
Average expedited settlement	n/a	6,467	5,323
Average full and final settlement following MAP	1,351	1,767	2,380

There are four different interims in respect of Vibration White Finger (VWF) claims as listed:

1. Standard £1,000
2. General damages
3. Anniversary
4. Services.

The average interim and full and final figure for the above regions are as follows:

Vibration White Finger	St. Helens, South	Merseyside	England
Average interim payment	4,562	4,523	5,776
Average full and final payment	7,178	7,348	8,048

Power Stations

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many power stations there are in the United Kingdom and how each one is fuelled. [28014]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 21 January 2002]: A list of power stations in the United Kingdom (operational at 31 May 2001 and of more than 1 MW capacity) is given in Table 5.13 of the Digest of United Kingdom Energy Statistics, 2001, a copy of which is available in the Libraries of the House and on the DTI website. The list shows the fuel used by each station and its generating capacity. In total 165 separate stations appear on the list.

Energy Sources

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the extent to which (a) geothermal, (b) hydroelectric, (c) wind and (d) wave sources of energy are used in the United Kingdom. [28015]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 21 January 2002]: We are aware of only one operating geothermal aquifer scheme in the UK, in Southampton, where a geothermal aquifer contributes 2 MW of heat to a 12 MW district heating scheme. The UK is unlikely to see extensive developments based upon aquifers due to a limited resource and limited scope for its exploitation. In the 1980s, the UK conducted major research into geothermal hot dry rock technology, involving the extraction of heat through the artificial injection of water into otherwise dry rock formations, but no prospect was seen at the time of making this technology economically viable in the short or medium term.

The UK has extensive hydroelectric schemes, most of them long-established. Declared net capacity of UK hydro plants in 2000 was 1,479 MW. Scope for expansion is limited by the availability of suitable new sites and environmental considerations.

Wind energy is already well established in the UK, and unit production costs have been falling for some years. The British Wind Energy Association calculates that, at the end of 2001, total UK wind energy generating capacity stood at 473.6 MW installed capacity, and that nearly 200 MW more is confirmed for construction in 2002. We are taking vigorous steps to encourage the development of the wind energy industry, with its enormous potential, both onshore and offshore. The UK's first offshore wind energy installation, off Blyth in Northumberland, opened in 2000. The Government are encouraging more ambitious developments offshore by a substantial capital grants programme.

Wave energy is at an early stage of development in the UK. A 500 kilowatt wave energy device, supported through an SRO contract, is operating on Islay. The Government have recently announced support for further innovative wave energy projects. The UK's potential wave energy resource is enormous.

Household Products

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to introduce legislation to control the use of chemicals in household products; and if she will make a statement. [29509]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The safety of chemical products, such as household products, is governed by the Chemicals (Hazard Information and Packaging for Supply) Regulations 1994. These regulations require that manufacturers must assess a chemical product for its health effects (toxicity, irritancy etc.). If dangerous the product must then be labelled with a warning symbol and phrases indicating the dangers. The particular chemical(s) which cause the product to be classified must be named on the label.

The regulations also require that all potentially dangerous chemicals supplied to the public must be in packaging which is properly labelled and contains warnings about the potential hazards and giving brief advice on suitable precautions. Manufacturers or suppliers of household products are also required to give details of how to use the product safely.

International Communications

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many international communications are routed daily through the UK; and what percentage of those are transmitted via satellite. [28585]

Mr. Alexander: Many millions of traffic minutes per day are routed through the UK, which is an important transit hub for international telecoms traffic. However, neither the Department nor Oftel maintains statistics on the routing of international communications through the UK or on what percentage of these are transmitted via satellite.

Bananas

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the likely effect on UK banana importers of changes to the EU banana regime. [25957]

Mr. Morley: I have been asked to reply.

The EU banana regime has recently been amended to implement Phase II of the Understanding with the US and Ecuador in response to World Trade Organisation concerns and to end the long-running trade dispute. The main effects of this are to transfer 100,000 tonnes of bananas from the C Quota to the A/B Quota, and to make the C Quota exclusive to bananas originating from ACP countries.

Detailed European Commission regulations are necessary for the management of the quota regime, and until these have been proposed, it is not possible to determine the effect on individual UK banana importers.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the outcome of the meeting of the EU Banana Management Committee on 15 November 2001. [25958]

Mr. Morley: I have been asked to reply.

Two European Commission proposals received favourable opinions. The first was to establish the maximum quantity of bananas which may be imported into the Community during the first quarter of 2002 by each registered operator. The second was to amend Commission Regulation 896/2001 to correct certain errors in the text as well as to clarify the rules for determining the reference quantities applicable to traditional operators in the A/B Quota.

In response to a suggestion from the UK, the chairman proposed to issue a working document on strengthening the rules prohibiting linkage between traditional and non-traditional operators.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimates she has made of the value of the reduction in banana imports under C licences as a result of changes to the EU banana regime in the next five years. [25956]

Mr. Morley: I have been asked to reply.

Under the previous arrangements (Phase I of the Understanding with the US and Ecuador), 850,000 tonnes of banana imports under C Quota licences were permitted per year. Under Phase II, the effect on banana traders registered as operators in the C Quota arise both from the transfer of 100,000 tonnes of bananas from the C Quota to the A/B Quota, and from making the C Quota exclusive to ACP countries.

Total imports from ACP countries in 1999 (the last year for which full data are available) amounted to 676,638 tonnes, with similar quantities in the previous two years. This implies that the changes made in Phase II, taken together, should enable the ACP to continue to achieve a market share comparable with that they have had in the recent past. The value of this to ACP suppliers and individual importers will depend on price developments and, in the case of importers, their licence allocations.

HEALTH

Care Beds

2. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his plans to increase the number of care beds across the country. [26361]

Jacqui Smith: Our policy is to enable people to remain independent in their own homes wherever possible. That is where most people want to receive care. Between 1999 and 2000 there was a 5 per cent. increase in the number of households receiving intensive home care. In addition, in October last year, we announced an extra £300 million investment over two years which will buy a range of services including additional care home placements.

Delayed Discharges

17. Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to reduce unnecessary delays in discharges from hospital. [26376]

19. John Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress is being made in reducing delayed discharges from hospital. [26378]

Jacqui Smith: On 8 January, we announced the allocation to councils of the £190 million Building Care Capacity Grant for 2002–03. £100 million was allocated nationally for the grant in 2001–02 and the first payment made in November 2001.

This additional funding has been used to deliver a significant national reduction in delayed discharges since September 2001.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were in hospital on 25 December 2001 as a result of delayed discharges. [27362]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is not collected centrally on a daily basis.

Social Services

18. Ms Munn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent measures he has introduced to improve the performance of local authority social services. [26377]

Jacqui Smith: The Government have announced the introduction of star rating for social services from this summer to enable councils and the public to see how they are performing. Standards for delivery have been published in National Service Frameworks for mental health and older people. "Quality Protects" is delivering improved life chances for children. We have also increased the resources available for social services by an average of 3.2 per cent. a year in real terms between 1996–97 and 2002–03.

GPs

20. Mr. Bryant: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects a resolution of the renegotiation of the general practitioners' contract for England and Wales. [26379]

Mr. Hutton: The NHS Confederation is leading the negotiations with British Medical Association's General Practitioners Committee, on behalf of United Kingdom Health Ministers. It is committed to putting proposals to UK Health Ministers as soon as practicable. I understand an encouraging start has been made but that further work remains.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioners in England and Wales have received golden hellos. [24672]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 8 January 2002]: To date the Department has received 137 completed application forms since the launch of the scheme on 2 November 2001. There is no information available as to how many applications are currently being processed by health authorities.

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practice vacancies there were in each of the last two years. [28020]

Mr. Hutton: The Department's general practitioner recruitment, retention and vacancy survey 2000 for England and Wales reported 1,214 general practitioner vacancies outstanding at some time in the 12 month period between 1 April 1999 and 31 March 2000. These vacancies were reported by 96 per cent. out of the then 104 health authorities in England and Wales. Eight health authorities did not supply the necessary information.

For the 2001 survey 98 out of the then 100 health authorities provided information indicating that there were 2,464 general practitioner vacancies outstanding at some time in the 12 month period between 1 April 2000 and 31 March 2001.

Cleft Lip and Palate Services

21. Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made on establishing a centre of excellence for cleft lip and palate services in the north-west. [26380]

Jacqui Smith: Commissioners and national health service trusts in the north-west are working together on options for the location of the cleft lip and palate centre for the region. This work will be completed by March and will be followed by three months public consultation on the options.

Accident and Emergency

22. David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what investment has taken place in the last five years on accident and emergency facilities in England and Wales. [26381]

Ms Blears: A total of £150 million has been invested in accident and emergency departments through the accident and emergency modernisation programme. It is the biggest investment in A&E services since the beginning of the national health service The first wave of investment was for £30 million in 1998, the second was for £85 million in May 1999 and the final wave of funding was made available to the NHS in January 2001.

NHS Dentistry

23. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he proposes to take in 2002 to improve the provision of NHS dental treatment. [26383]

Ms Blears: An estimated £1.1 billion will be spent on the general dental service and in excess of £50 million revenue will be invested in personal dental service pilot schemes in the current financial year. These levels of expenditure are anticipated to continue in the next financial year.

Primary Care Trusts

24. Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has made to his counterpart in the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions to ensure that local primary care trusts are included as statutory bodies with respect to the proposed changes to the local government planning regime. [26384]

Mr. Hutton: The planning Green Paper—Planning: Delivering a Fundamental Change—has only recently been issued by the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, and the Department of Health will make representations by the due date of 18 March.

It is expected that strategic health authorities and primary care trusts will be included as statutory bodies at the appropriate level of the planning regime.

Royal Sussex County Hospital

25. Mr. Lepper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made at the Royal Sussex county hospital, Brighton, following the publication of hospital star ratings. [26385]

Ms Blears: The Department has commissioned reviews of those trusts with a zero star status. This review is currently being evaluated by officials before submission to the Secretary of State for his consideration.

In the initial review the Royal Sussex county hospital failed to meet three performance targets, namely those of out-patient waiting lists, over 12 hour trolley waits and percentage of patients seen within two weeks of referral with suspected breast cancer.

Significant improvements have been made in each of these areas which we expect will be confirmed when the findings from the above review are published within the next few weeks.

Waiting Lists

26. Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his plans to reduce waiting times and waiting lists in the NHS. [26386]

Mr. Hutton: The NHS Plan sets out the progress this Government want to make over the coming years. The plan, which was announced in July 2000, addresses waiting times for outpatient and inpatient treatment.

By the end of 2005 the maximum in-patient waiting time will be cut from 18 months now to six months and the maximum out-patient waiting time will be cut from over six months now to three months. Urgent cases will continue to be treated much faster.

Our objective is to reduce the maximum wait for any stage of treatment to three months by the end of 2008. As a result of delivering these policies we expect the average time for an out-patient appointment to fall to five weeks and the average time that patients have been waiting for in-patient treatment to fall from three months to seven weeks.

This Government met their 1997 manifesto commitment to reduce the total number of patients on the in-patient waiting list by 100,000. We achieved this in March 2000 and have maintained it ever since. The NHS is expected to continue to reduce the waiting list in order to make achievement of the maximum waiting times more manageable.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many trust managers have been dismissed on grounds of gross misconduct after manipulating waiting list figures. [27255]

Mr. Hutton: The National Audit Office report "Inappropriate adjustments to national health service waiting lists" listed nine trusts where inappropriate adjustments had taken place. In two of these trusts, Salford and Stoke Mandeville, the investigations have reached the disciplinary stage. There have been no trust managers dismissed on grounds of gross misconduct in the other seven cases.

The Department accepts that some of the earlier cases covered in the report were not always handled properly and it accepts in full the recommendations set out the NAO report. In future, any manager found to have deliberately distorted waiting figures will face dismissal on grounds of gross misconduct. This will be supported by a new code of conduct for national health service managers. Anyone who breaches that code of conduct will not be re-employed as a manager—anywhere in the national health service.

Health Inequalities

27. Stephen Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken to tackle health inequalities; and if he will make a statement. [26387]

Yvette Cooper: We have completed our consultation on delivery of the two national health inequalities targets and we expect to publish an implementation plan this year. We are reviewing policy across Government impacting on health inequalities through our cross-cutting spending review and are taking action through a wide range of national health service activity.

29. Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress he has made in tackling health inequalities. [26389]

Yvette Cooper: We have completed our consultation on delivery of the national health inequalities targets and we expect to publish an implementation plan this year. We are reviewing policy across Government impacting on health inequalities through our cross-cutting spending review and are taking action through a wide range of national health service activity.

NICE

28. Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the current programme for the National Institute for Clinical Excellence. [26388]

Ms Blears: The National Institute for Clinical Excellence has to date issued 31 sets of technology appraisal guidance and four sets of clinical guidelines, with a further 44 appraisals and 31 clinical and service guidelines in its forward programme. The guidance published so far covers a wide range of disease areas including cancer, mental health, coronary heart disease, diabetes and long term conditions.

Mental Health

30. Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on developments in the treatment of mental health patients in the Avon health authority area. [26390]

Ms Blears: Avon and Wiltshire Mental Health Partnership NHS Trust have plans in place to progress towards the achievement of the targets set out in the mental health national service framework. The trust is working closely with other local NHS bodies to finalise the outline business case for the £68 million scheme for the modernisation of mental health services in Avon.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much of the £56 million allocated for high security places for dangerous and severe personality disorder persons in the NHS and for hostel places has so far been spent; and how many NHS places and hostel places have been provided. [10528]

Jacqui Smith: New dangerous and severe personality disorder (DSPD) units at Rampton and Broadmoor will deliver 140 places for dangerous and severe personality disorder persons by 2004. These are complex schemes, involving major innovations both in design, and in the approach to service delivery.

Work has concentrated initially on the Rampton site. To date, there has been capital expenditure of £412,000 at Rampton with a projected spend of £500,000 by year end. This is being committed to meet the costs of early design work, design team fees, and to refurbish accommodation for the DSPD team in Rampton. Work will commence on site in March 2002, with completion due in June 2003, and the expenditure of capital has been profiled to achieve this output. The unit is planned to open in the autumn of 2003. Work on the unit at Broadmoor is at an earlier stage of development, and no capital has been committed. However, it is on target to open in 2004.

Revenue spend on the Rampton and Broadmoor developments is projected to be £0.35 million this year. This will meet staff costs. At Rampton these costs include the salaries for the project director, consultant psychiatrist, nurse manager, consultant psychologist, business manager, security adviser and secretarial staff. There are also running costs for the DSPD team accommodation, and the costs of a one off study tour of Holland and Germany. At Broadmoor these costs include salaries for the project director and consultant psychiatrist.

We have decided that money originally earmarked for community hostel places should be allocated to a range of pilot provision within medium secure units and community settings, in order to provide step down care from high security.

Two units will open in early 2003 with a total of 23 beds for offenders with severe personality disorder, and community teams will be established in three locations to deliver care and treatment to this client group in community settings from 2002–03. The capital allocation of £3.5 million for these schemes will be committed over 2002–03.

Work on both sites is proceeding more slowly than originally anticipated in order to ensure that robust local dialogue takes place in advance of any application for planning permission. It is now estimated that about £50,000 will be committed this year. This will meet the cost of training events for the new clinical teams, together with travel expenses, plus commissioning a study to look at the development of staff competencies and staff training needs in working with people with DSPD in forensic settings.

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent progress he has made in improving the treatment of mental health patients. [26382]

Jacqui Smith: All of the targets set to be achieved by this date in the National Service Framework for Mental Health have been met. These include almost 500 additional secure beds; over 320 24-hour staffed beds; 170 assertive outreach teams; access to services 24 hours a day, seven days a week, 365 days a year for all those with complex mental health problems; investment to improve the physical environments in psychiatric wards; and guidance issued to ensure the safety, privacy and dignity of mental health patients.

Funding Formula

31. Linda Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to revise the funding formula for the allocation of resources to health authorities in England and Wales. [26391]

Mr. Hutton: A wide ranging review of the weighted capitation formula used to allocate resources to health authorities and primary care trusts in England is currently taking place. A key criterion of the new formula will be to contribute to the reduction of avoidable health inequalities. The intention is that, following the review, the new formula will be ready for 2003–04 allocations.

Issues relating to a review of the funding formula for resource allocation in Wales, are a matter for the National Assembly for Wales.

Migraine

32. Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his policy is on the treatment of migrainous headaches and migraine. [26392]

Mr. Hutton: We would expect that patients suffering from migrainous headaches and migraine would normally be treated by their general practitioner in the first instance. If this failed to resolve the problem then patients could be referred to a consultant neurologist for further investigation and tests.

The National Research Register is a database of on-going and recently completed research projects funded by, or of interest to, the United Kingdom's national health service. The current issue, Issue 4, 2001, shows that there are 17 on-going projects looking at migraine with another 56 recently completed.

Overseas Treatment

33. Mr. Prosser: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress he is making on the provision of treatment for NHS patients overseas. [26393]

Mr. Hutton: Subject to contract, East Kent health authority plan to send 18 patients to France for treatment before the end of January and up to 80 in total by the end of March. West Sussex/East Surrey and Portsmouth HAs are largely concentrating on potential German providers; subject to agreements on contracts they will send a number of patients to Germany in February and March. In total it is hoped that around 200 or more patients will travel to France and Germany for treatment during the pilot period. Initial guidance to the national health service will be published shortly.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people from (a) East Kent, (b) Portsmouth, (c) West Sussex/East Surrey and (d) other areas of England were sent to other European countries for health treatment between (i) 1 January and 31 December 2001 and (ii) 1 January and 30 January 2002; if he will make a statement on the comparative costs of such treatments compared with the NHS in England, taking into account travel costs; and if he will make a statement on the conclusions of the three test-bed pilot schemes for overseas treatments. [26913]

Mr. Hutton: No patients from East Kent, Portsmouth or West Sussex/East Surrey were sent to other European countries for treatment in 2001. Subject to contract, East Kent plan to send 18 patients to France for treatment before the end of January. Portsmouth plan to send one patient to France during the same period. West Sussex/East Surrey will commence sending patients overseas in February. Portsmouth will send further patients overseas in February and March.

Direct comparisons of the costs of overseas treatment and national health service costs are not straightforward; for example, prices so far for hip and knee replacements include intensive rehabilitation which would not be included in standard NHS reference costs. In general the prices agreed so far for treatment overseas are in excess of NHS average reference costs but comparable to those in the United Kingdom private sector. However, we would expect better prices if and when we commit to larger volumes of patients travelling overseas to individual hospitals.

The test bed exercise continues until the end of the financial year. It is therefore too early to draw any firm conclusions.

Norfolk and Norwich Hospital

34. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to improve physical access to the new Norfolk and Norwich hospital; and if he will make a statement. [26394]

Mr. Hutton: The national health service has spent over £4 million on improving the road to the new hospital and has deposited an additional £1 million for improvements to be carried out.

The Highways Agency has confirmed it cannot approve proposals for an access road from the A47 to the new Norfolk and Norwich university hospital on the grounds of safety.

Norfolk county council is considering other options for a second access road to the hospital site. The hospital trust continues to support any proposals for additional access provided such access is safe.

Consultants' Contracts

35. Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress he is making in his negotiations with hospital consultants on their new NHS contracts, with particular reference to the proposed seven-year rule; and if he will make a statement. [26395]

Mr. Hutton: Our proposals for the new consultant contract, published in February 2001, incorporated improved remuneration and incentives for consultants within a more robust framework of contractual duties and responsibilities, and envisaged that for an initial period, perhaps of seven years, the terms of the contract would prevent newly appointed consultants engaging in similar work outside the national health service.

These proposals, alongside the British Medical Association's own proposals, form the basis of continuing negotiations.

Global Warming

36. Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what potential new diseases he has identified in the United Kingdom as a result of global warming. [26396]

Yvette Cooper: The review "Health Effects of Climate Change in the UK" was published for comment in 2001. This review is currently being edited and the final report will be published during the next few months. It was prepared by an expert group and focused on a range of impacts. These included the possible increase in local outbreaks of malaria and in diseases associated with ticks. The full report is available on the Department's website http://www.doh.gov.uk/hef/airpol/airpolh.htm.

Care Homes

37. Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the change in the number of care home places since 1996. [26397]

Jacqui Smith: The table shows the number of residential places and nursing beds in care homes in England for each year since 1996. The number of places/beds peaked in 1998 at 553,500, an increase of 8 per cent. from 1996. Since then, the total number of places/beds has fallen to 528,000. However, this is still 3 per cent. higher than the 1996 level.

Further information on places and beds can be found in the Statistical Bulletin, "Community Care Statistics 2001: Residential Personal Social Services for Adults, England". A copy of the publication is in the Library.

Residential places and registered nursing beds, 1996 to 2001

Department of Health annual returns

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what level of support funding has been given to care home owners to enable them to meet the requirements of the Care Standards Act 2001; what level of funding will be available for the continuing adjustments; and if he will make a statement. [7991]

Jacqui Smith: The resources provided for personal social services are increasing by, on average 3.4 per cent. per annum in real terms over the next three years. We expect home owners will cover the costs of meeting the standards through the fees they charge. Local authorities are funded to meet these additional costs. The Government, through the agreement between the statutory and independent social care, health care and housing sectors "Building Capacity and Partnership in Care" (paragraph 6.2), issued in October 2001, made it clear that service commissioners should not set contract prices for care places mechanistically. We expect them to have regard to providers' costs and efficiencies and planned outcomes for service users.

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many beds were available in the Hillingdon and Harrow health authority in the care home sector in (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999, (d) 2000 and (e) 2001. [27267]

Jacqui Smith: The table shows the number of places in residential care homes and registered beds in nursing homes, private hospitals and clinics in the areas covered by Hillingdon health authority and the Brent and Harrow health authority area between 1997 and 2001. Information is not separately available for Harrow.

Residential places[1] and registered nursing beds in the Hillingdon and brent and Harrow area[2] between 1997 and 2001

Department of Health's annual returns

Foster Care

38. Mr. Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he takes to monitor the safety of privately fostered children. [26398]

Jacqui Smith: Once a local authority has been notified of a private fostering arrangement it is required under the Children Act 1989 to be satisfied that the foster parents, household and accommodation are satisfactory and that the welfare of the child is being safeguarded and promoted.

The private fostering arrangement has to be monitored by the local authority, through supervising, regulating and advising the foster carers and parents. The local authority is required to visit at specified intervals and to report on these visits. They have the power to impose requirements, or if there are serious concerns, to prohibit the fostering arrangement.

A chief inspector's letter was issued in 2000 reminding local authorities of their duties for supervising children placed in private foster arrangements.

The chief inspector heads the social service inspectorate, (SSI) a professional division of the Department, and independent of the local authority, voluntary and private sector providers of social services. The SSI is responsible for inspecting local council personal social services provision and its organisation and management in order to promote quality standards, improve effectiveness and efficiency, and ensure the safety and well-being of service users.

Abortion

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the health authorities which do not offer abortions within 10 weeks. [19455]

Yvette Cooper: All health authorities in England and Wales funded some national health service abortions within 10 weeks gestation of pregnancy in 2000. However, the percentage funded by the NHS varied, and ranged from 26 per cent. in one health authority area to 96 per cent. or more in three health authority areas.

The sexual health and HIV strategy states that services should be developed to provide NHS funded abortions in line with the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists' clinical guideline "Induced Abortion" and has set a target that from 2005, commissioners should ensure that women who meet the legal requirements have access to abortion within three weeks of the first appointment with the general practitioner or other referring doctor.

Adoption

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if it is his intention to extend the right of adoption to (a) unmarried opposite sex couples and (b) same sex couples; and if he will make a statement. [19224]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 29 November 2001]: We are looking thoroughly at the many and complex issues of partnership registration, rights and responsibilities. Adoption will, alongside all other relevant issues, be considered as part of that work.

Under the existing Adoption Act 1976 single people may adopt (regardless of sexual orientation), but only married couples may adopt jointly. It is open for one unmarried partner to adopt a child and for the other to obtain parental responsibility by applying for a residence order in respect of the child. The Adoption and Children Bill makes no change in this area. The Government's intentions will, of course, be subject to the parliamentary consideration of the Bill currently under way.

NHS Professionals

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he intends to review the NHS's use of framework agreements as part of the tendering process for NHS professionals. [24419]

Mr. Hutton: London, where the first framework agreement was completed, has been the subject of on-going review in line with the structured and widely recognised project management methodology, PRINCE. An initial evaluation was completed with findings presented to the London Agency Project Board. Further evaluation will take place in six months with good practice shared with others undergoing similar processes.

Revenue Resource Allocations

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what amount in (a) real terms and (b) percentage terms of the health authority revenue resource allocations announced on 6 December are accounted for by estimated (i) salary increases for (A) pay review body staff and (B) non-pay review body staff, (ii) medical price inflation, (iii) new pension contribution rates, (iv) implementation of planned national service frameworks and (v) special arrangements for speeding up heart operations. [24328]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 8 January 2002]: Health authority revenue allocations for 2002–03 include funding to meet increases in pay, prices and other pressures faced by all health authorities, and to implement national service frameworks, but these are not separately identified within allocations.

A small number of initiatives, including action to speed up heart operations and extend choice for those who wait longest for heart surgery, will be funded through central budgets. Details will be announced later.

Prosthetics

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what research is being carried out into prosthetics practice in the UK; [26586]

(2) what research is being carried out into trans-femoral socket and limb prescription, design and delivery. [26584]

Jacqui Smith: The Department is not currently funding any research in these two areas.

However, the Department does provide support for research commissioned by charities and the research councils that takes place in the national health service. Details of on-going and recently completed research projects funded by, or of interest to, the NHS are available on the National Research Register at www.doh.gov.uk/research/nrr.htm.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make it his policy to make state-of-the-art prosthetics available on the NHS to those who want them; [26611]

(2) what plans he has to make state-of-the-art prosthetics available on the NHS. [26590]

Jacqui Smith: The national health service already has available to it, via contracts negotiated by the NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency, the widest possible range of prosthetic limb components available. The decision as to which type of prosthesis an individual patient receives is one that should be decided at a local level taking into account an individual's clinical circumstances.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the NHS prosthetics expenditure in the last financial year for which records are available per amputee; and what proportion of this expenditure was used on (a) administration, (b) prosthetics staff and (c) prosthetics. [26587]

Jacqui Smith: The Department does not collect information on the financial expenditure on each individual amputee. Expenditure is decided at a local health authority and national health service trust level.

The NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency estimate that some £23 million including value added tax was spent on prosthetic service contracts and a further £13 million including VAT was spent on prosthetic limb hardware and associated items during 1999–2000.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact on the UK prosthetics industry of the emigration of qualified prosthetics professionals and technicians. [26589]

Jacqui Smith: There has been no report of a significant impact on the United Kingdom prosthetic industry due to the emigration of qualified prosthetic professionals and technicians.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what training is given to orthopaedic surgeons on prosthetics and orthotics, with specific reference to the functional implications of the various levels of amputation and residual limb lengths. [26594]

Jacqui Smith: The Royal College of Surgeons is the body responsible for the training of medical students on surgery. The majority of amputations are carried out by vascular and general surgeons, and relatively few are undertaken by orthopaedic surgeons. Orthopaedic surgeons receive training on amputations and prosthetics at various stages of the medical curriculum, such as:

Medical students receive lectures and tutorials on general surgery, and are taken to a limb fitting centre.

Basic surgical trainees will receive training from mainly vascular surgeons on the practical skills of "common amputations".

Specialist Registrars receive higher surgical training on amputation and rehabilitation, and on prosthetics and orthotics.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines his Department has given to disablement service centres for the prescription and delivery of prosthetics. [26591]

Jacqui Smith: The Department has not issued any guidelines to disablement services centres for the prescription and delivery of prosthetics. Prescriptions and delivery criteria are decided at a local level to take account of an individual patient's clinical need.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the level of funding for prosthetics in each of the last five financial years for which records are available; and what level is anticipated for the (a) current and (b) next financial years. [26588]

Jacqui Smith: The level of funding on prosthetic services is not separately identified in health authority financial baseline allocations. But on 9 January 2001 we announced that funding for providing silicone cosmesis to prosthetic limb users was to be made available totalling £4 million over the next three years. The funding started in April 2001 with £0.5 million for 2001–02, £1.5 million for 2002–03 and £2 million for 2003–04. This was an addition to the baseline allocation.

The local health authority will decide the level of funding an individual disablement service centre receives. We would not expect the level of funding a DSC receives next financial year to be any less than invested this financial year.

Amputees

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many amputees there are in England. [26593]

Jacqui Smith: The latest collection of data from the year 1998–99 reported that there were 51,498 patients with amputations in contact with their national health service limb centre in England.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines have been issued on the use of ischial containment sockets for amputees. [26585]

Jacqui Smith: The Department has not issued any central guidelines for the issue of ischial containment sockets. Ischial containment sockets for amputees are issued on the basis of a clinical decision made by the multi-professional team at a national health service trust.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many amputations have been carried out in each of the last five years for which records exist, as a result of necrotising fasciitis. [26592]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is not available centrally.

Fraud

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate his Department has made of the cost to its budget since 1 May 1997 of fraud; and if he will make a statement. [27300]

Mr. Hutton: The figures requested are in the table.

Year	Amount
1997–98	61,415.25
1998–99	66,897.29
1999–2000	48,148.81
2000–01	56,831.99

The Department of Health now has a Directorate of Counter Fraud Services staffed by professionally trained and accredited counter fraud specialists.

Children at Risk

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what recent steps have been taken to ensure co-ordination between local authorities' social and educational services with regard to supporting children at risk; [27358]

(2) what measures the Government are taking to protect children identified as being at risk. [27240]

Jacqui Smith: The safeguarding of children at risk is a high priority for us. That is why over the last few years we have introduced new legislation, new guidance, new structures and new policy initiatives to make children safer and to ensure that there is a proper focus on children at the very heart of Government. These measures include:

> The Care Standards Act 2000 to improve the inspection and regulation of children's care services, and the Protection of Children Act 1999 which makes it much more difficult for unsuitable people to work with children;
> Revised core inter-agency child protection guidance: Working Together to Safeguard Children (1999) and the new Framework for the Assessment of Children in Need and Their Families (2000);
> New guidance focusing on Safeguarding Children Involved in Prostitution (2000) and a National Plan for Safeguarding Children from Commercial Sexual Exploitation (2001);
> A Minister for Young People—my right hon. Friend the Member for Southampton, Itchin (Mr. Denham)—and a new Cabinet Committee focusing on Children and Young People's issues;
> The first ever national Children's Rights Director for England—Roger Morgan—to act as a powerful champion for some of the most vulnerable children in our country;
> The establishment of the Children and Young People's Unit, which is responsible for ensuring the coherence of Government polices that affect all children and young people under 19;
> Radical new initiatives such as the £885 million Quality Protects programme, Sure Start and Connexions.

The child protection guidance: Working Together to Safeguard Children (1999) and the new Framework for the Assessment of Children in Need and Their Families (2000) both give specific guidance on how education and social services departments should work together to support children in need.

Co-ordination of the planning and delivery of services by education and social services departments is a key element of the Government's five year £885 Quality Protects programme, which is improving the management and delivery of children's services. The Government have published Objectives for Children's Social Services. The Department's public service agreement contains targets including improving the educational outcomes of children in need and children looked after. Local authorities have to produce annual QP management action plans (MAPs) on how they are moving towards the achievement of these objectives. The national overview report of local authority's QP MAPs published in October 2001 reported in relation to services for children in need

> " . . . in general there is plenty of evidence of good collaboration between education and social services; and as these partnerships develop the focus of their work is beginning to broaden"

and

> "closer partnerships in a range of contexts are beginning to draw social work expertise and the needs of vulnerable children onto agendas which in the past might have been seen as 'purely educational'".

In October 2000, the Department of Health and Department of Education and Employment jointly issued "Guidance on the Education of Children and Young People in Public Care". The national overview report shows that for looked after children

> "MAPS this year included considerable evidence of joint working between education and social work staff, designed to support the education of looked after children."

In "Valuing People: A New Strategy for Learning Disability for the 21st Century" issued in March 2001, the Department of Health and the Department of Education and Employment, agreed to further work together to build on our special education needs (SEN) programme of action. The recently published revised special education needs code of practice, gives guidance on how social services and education departments should jointly plan and meet the needs of children with SEN. The SEN Toolkit issued with the code of practice, included a section on the role of social services. This was sent to directors of education and social services. Work has also begun on the commitment in "Valuing People" to find out more about the numbers, characteristics and outcomes of disabled children in residential schools and other residential placements, who are known to be particularly vulnerable to abuse.

Learning disability partnerships boards have been set up in local authority areas to oversee and advise on the implementation of the adult aspects of "Valuing People". Membership should include representation from a range of statutory sector interests, including social services and education. Guidance issued to local councils in August said that one member should be appointed to be a champion for child/adult transition issues. The guidance adds that boards will need to develop effective links with other agencies whose responsibilities are relevant to implementing valuing people; these will include Connexions partnerships, local learning partnerships, further education colleges, and education institutions.

Primary Care

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the levels of investment in primary care research and development have been in each year since 1997. [27359]

Jacqui Smith: The Department's estimated expenditure on primary care research and development for the years since 1997 are:

Year	£ million
1996–97	31.1
1997–98	30.0
1998–99	31.3
1999–2000	39.0
2000–01	38.4

Cancelled Operations

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many operations have been cancelled in each of the last four quarters. [27360]

Mr. Hutton: Data on the number of operations cancelled, by region and health authority, for the time periods requested, are available in the Library.

Data are collected on the number of operations cancelled at the last minute. The latest published figures are for Quarter 1 2001–02.

Operations cancelled at the last minute are those cancelled by the hospital, for non-medical reasons, on or after the day the patient was due to be admitted.

Domiciliary Oxygen Therapy Service

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost to the NHS was of (a) concentrators and (b) cylinder oxygen as part of the Domiciliary Oxygen Therapy Service in the last year for which figures are available. [27242]

Jacqui Smith: The figures requested are shown in the table.

Cost of Domiciliary Oxygen Therapy Service, England, 2000–01

	£ million
Payments to suppliers of oxygen concentrators	14.3
Net ingredient cost of oxygen supplied in cylinders, and oxygen masks[1]	9.6
Fees paid to pharmacies for the collection and delivery of cylinders and provision of associated equipment	14.4

[1] Net ingredient cost (NIC) refers to the headline reimbursement cost of the drug before the deduction of discount and does not include any dispensing costs or fees.

Prescription Cost Analysis (PCA)

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans the Government have to improve the provision of oxygen through the Domiciliary Oxygen Therapy Service. [27241]

Jacqui Smith: We will be considering options shortly.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients received domiciliary oxygen supply services in each year since 1992. [27243]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Invalid Vehicles

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many invalid vehicles provided under the invalid vehicle scheme up to 1976 were on the road in each of the last five years. [27251]

Jacqui Smith: The number of vehicles provided under the invalid vehicle scheme at the end of each of the last five years was as follows:

Year	Total fleet size
1996–97	1,215
1997–98	1,054
1998–99	951
1999–2000	754
2000–01	629

Everyone leaving the invalid vehicle scheme will be eligible to receive indefinitely the higher rate mobility component of disability living allowance, currently set at £38.65 a week rising to £39.30 from April 2002. They may choose to use this, for example, to obtain a motorised scooter or a four wheeled car specially adapted to each driver's needs through the motability scheme. Help with driving lessons is available. Technical officers from the service have visited each driver to discuss his or her future needs and to help decide what option to take.

National At-Risk Register

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans the Government have to introduce a national at-risk register to co-ordinate those lists which exist at a local level. [27239]

Jacqui Smith: A central register is maintained for each area covered by a social services department. The register lists all the children resident in the area (including those who have been placed there by another local authority or agency) who are considered to be at continuing risk of significant harm, and for whom there is a child protection plan.

"Working Together to Safeguard Children" implemented better ways of making sure these registers link up together more effectively when a child moves from place to place. Since the publication of "Working Together" in December 1999, it has been the case that if a child and family have moved permanently to another local authority area, the receiving local authority should convene a child protection conference within 15 working days of being notified of the move. Only once this has taken place may de-registration take place in respect of the original local authority's child protection register.

We have no plans at present to introduce a national risk register.

Accident Rates

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the accident rate per 100 persons has been in each of the last available five years. [27363]

Yvette Cooper: The number of in-patient admissions for accidents and rates per 100,000 population is shown in the table.

Hospital episode statistics: Admissions and rates per 100,000 population where the primary diagnosis[1] is "accidents" (ICD10 codes S00-T98) with a relevant cause[2] code (CD10 codes V01-X59, Y40-Y84)

Year	Admissions	Rates per 100,000 population
2000–01	467,036	934
1999–2000	491,364	988
1998–99	471,297	952
1997–98	480,525	975
1996–97	474,469	967

[1] The primary diagnosis is the first of seven diagnosis fields in the Hospital Episode Statistics data set, and provides the main reason why the patient was in hospital.

[2] The cause code is a supplementary code which indicates the nature of the condition.

Note:

Data in this table are adjusted for both coverage and unknown/invalid clinical data, except for 1998–99 to 2000–01 which are not yet adjusted for shortfalls.

Wheelchairs

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many electrically powered indoor/outdoor wheelchairs have been made available in each year since 1997; [27348]

(2) how much the NHS has spent on the provision of electrically-powered indoor/outdoor wheelchairs in each year since 1997; [27351]

(3) how many people have utilised NHS vouchers as part-payment for powered wheelchairs in each year since 1997. [27350]

Jacqui Smith: Figures on expenditure on electrically powered indoor/outdoor wheelchairs (EPIOCs) are not collected centrally, nor are figures for numbers of vouchers issued separated into manual wheelchairs and EPIOCs.

The table gives the only date available centrally. A number of these figures are incomplete (as annotated):

England	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01
Number of powered wheelchairs issued	4,464	4,033	3,388	[2]3,279
Number of vouchers issued for wheelchairs	[1]560	[2]5,010	6,305	[2]6,250

[1] Collection of data was not mandatory

[2] Incomplete figure (one return missing)

Mixed Sex Wards

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the definition of a mixed sex ward includes those wards which use privacy screens. [27365]

Ms Blears: The term "mixed sex ward" can be used to describe a variety of arrangements. The use of partitioning as a means of dividing wards into bays, which are then used to accommodate either male or female patients, is an acceptable means of protecting patients' privacy and dignity.

However, the use of moveable privacy screens alone is not acceptable, as these provide poor physical separation of facilities. Their use as an adjunct to permanent solutions, such as partitioning, can be helpful in further enhancing a sense of privacy and dignity.

Guidance on maintaining privacy and dignity was first issued to the national health service in 1997. This guidance clearly states that any screening in use must be adequate to ensure privacy is maintained, e.g., which will prevent patients being overhead or overseen by others, where this is not desirable.

Protecting patients' privacy and dignity is of paramount consideration, irrespective of whether the ward is single-sex or accommodates both male and female patients in appropriately designated bays.

Hillingdon and Harrow Health Authority

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients were waiting for in-patient treatment in the Hillingdon and Harrow health authority on 1 January in each year from 1997 to 2002. [27268]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is provided in the table.

Number of patients waiting for in-patient treatment for Hillingdon and Brent and Harrow health authorities—December 1996 to November 2001

	Hillingdon HA	Brent and Harrow HA
December 1996	5,138	10,735
December 1997	5,789	11,817
December 1998	4,689	10,122
December 1999	4,311	9,108
December 2000	3,897	8,462
November 2001[1]	4,215	8,046

[1] November indicates monthly data

Data are quarterly

CFS/ME

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when the report to the Chief Medical Officer on the most effective forms of treatment and management for CFS/ME will be published; [27207]

(2) what plans he has to provide better access to medical support for ME sufferers; [27210]

(3) what his estimate is of the total number of ME sufferers in the United Kingdom; [27211]

(4) how many ME clinics there are in the United Kingdom; and where they are located; [27208]

(5) what support his Department is giving to research into ME. [27209]

Jacqui Smith: The independent chronic fatigue syndrome/myalgic encephalomyelitis (CFS/ME) working group's report was published on 11 January 2002 and can be downloaded from http://www.doh. gov.uk/cmo/cfsmereport/index.htm.

The report of the independent CFS/ME working group has identified CFS/ME as a specific illness. The report makes a number of recommendations around recognition and definition of the illness: treatment and care; health service planning; education and awareness; and research. We shall be bringing this report to the attention of CEs of health authorities, trusts, and primary care trusts so that they can consider its implications when commissioning services.

The Department has commissioned research into the diagnosis and treatment of CFS/ME and details are available on the National Research Register which can be accessed via the Department's research and development website—www.doh.gov.uk/research. The Department has asked the Medical Research Council to develop a broad strategy for advancing further biomedical and health services research on CFS/ME.

The information on the number of ME sufferers in the United Kingdom is not collected centrally. However, the CFS/ME working group report suggests that each strategic health authority should make provision for secondary and tertiary care for people with CFS/ME, based on an estimated annual prevalence rate of approximately 4,000 cases per million population, in the absence of more refined data.

ME is mainly managed in primary care. The range of symptoms and other conditions associated with it should be investigated and treated by the most appropriate primary, community or secondary care service. General practitioners should usually be able to manage most cases in the community setting, but should be able to refer patients for specialist opinion and advice where appropriate. It is the responsibility of local health authorities to commission services for their local populations including those suffering from CFS/ME. Information on the number of specialist ME clinics in the United Kingdom is not available centrally.

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps his Department has taken to increase public knowledge and awareness of ME; [28204]

(2) what arrangements exist between the NHS and health services abroad to exchange information about ME; [28290]

(3) what data are collated by the NHS on the (a) prevalence and (b) treatment of ME; [28203]

(4) if he will make a statement about Government-sponsored research into the (a) causes of and (b) potential cures for ME; [28200]

(5) if he will make it his policy to support research into a possible diagnostic test for ME; [28201]

(6) what assessment he has made of the numbers of (a) adults and (b) children suffering from ME in each of the last 10 years; [28199]

(7) what steps he is taking to ensure that GPs and consultants are advised of new developments in the (a) diagnosis and (b) treatment of patients with ME. [28202]

Jacqui Smith: The chronic fatigue syndrome/myalgic encephalomyelitis (CFS/ME) independent working group's report has identified CFS/ME as a specific illness. The report was published on 11 January and has been placed on the Chief Medical Officer's website so that it can be accessed by all interested parties including general practitioners and consultants. It is hoped that the report and the summary for clinicians will result in improved awareness and understanding of this condition.

The report makes a number of recommendations around recognition and definition of the illness: treatment and care; health service planning; education and awareness; and research. We shall be bringing this report to the attention of chief executives of health authorities, national health service trusts and primary care trusts so that they can consider its implications when commissioning services.

The Department has commissioned research into the diagnosis and treatment of CFS/ME and details are available on the National Research Register which can be accessed via the Department's research and development website—www.doh.gov.uk/research. The Department has asked the Medical Research Council to develop a broad strategy for advancing further biomedical and health services research on CFS/ME.

The information on the number of ME sufferers in the United Kingdom is not collected centrally. However, the CFS/ME independent working group report suggests that each strategic health authority should make provision for secondary and tertiary care for people with CFS/ME, based on an estimated annual prevalence rate of approximately 4,000 cases per million population in the absence of more refined data. This equates to a population prevalence of at least 0.2 per cent.-0.4 per cent. If children only are considered the figure is lower at 0.07 per cent.

We are not aware of any formal arrangements for exchanges between the NHS and health services abroad on CFS/ME. The only exchanges would be through ad hoc meetings and professional networks of relevant experts.

Regarding research into a possible diagnostic test for CFS/ME, we have asked the Medical Research Council to develop a broad strategy for advancing further biomedical and health services research on CFS/ME.

Public-Private Partnerships

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which companies that have been involved, in public-private partnerships with his Departments have become insolvent since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [27601]

Mr. Hutton: Information is not collected centrally about the status of individual companies involved in public-private partnerships. Individual national health trusts are responsible for managing contracts with their private sector partner.

Private finance initiative contracts deal comprehensively with the possibility of early termination due to contractor default, including through insolvency, in order to protect the public interest.

Respiratory Disease

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions he has had with the BMA and the British Thoracic Society concerning the number of respiratory specialists needed in the NHS. [27460]

Mr. Hutton: We have not had any recent discussions with the British Medical Association and the British Thoracic Society concerning the number of respiratory specialists needed in the national health service.

West Midlands South Strategic Health Authority

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what procedures were used to appoint the chief executive of the West Midlands South strategic health authority; and if he will make a statement. [28193]

Yvette Cooper: The appointment of the chief executive designate of the Coventry, Warwickshire, Herefordshire and Worcestershire health authority, in common with that for all the chief executives designate of the other health authorities, was through a process of open competition. The chief executive posts were advertised nationally. The appointment process included the national health service chief executive, regional commissioners from the NHS appointments commission, the directors of health and social care in the Department, patients representatives and the health authority chairs designate. Chief executives will be formally appointed to health authorities on the basis of their franchise plans following the establishment of the new health authorities in April.

Morning-after Pill

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in how many schools the morning-after pill is available; and whether the joint Department for Education and Employment/Department of Health guidance "Supporting Pupils with Medical Needs: A Good Practice Guide" (HMSO, 1996) applies to its supply in schools. [28211]

Yvette Cooper: Information on the number of schools with on-site health service providing emergency contraception to pupils is not collected centrally. The circular (14/96) and accompanying good practice guide, "Supporting Pupils with Medical Needs", jointly issued by the Department for Education and Skills and the Department, is written for school teaching staff, local education authorities and governing bodies. It is not applicable to health professionals who provide prescription only medicines to under 16s within an agreed legal framework and arrangements set out in patient group directions. There are no circumstances in which teachers supply emergency contraception.

Female GPs (Pensions)

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on pension rights for female GPs. [25585]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 17 January 2002]: The pension rights for female general practitioners are the same as those for male GPs, apart from the treatment of widows' and widowers' benefits. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the former Member for North Norfolk on 13 January 1999, Official Report, column 212W.

Redwood Hospital

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he agreed a price for the PPP deal at Redwood hospital between the Surrey and Sussex NHS Trust and BUPA; if a final agreement had been signed off prior to his announcement of the deal on 4 December 2001; what the price is per patient of treatment in the PPP deal at Redwood hospital; and what estimate he has made of the number of nurses who will need to be recruited to increase the capacity at the Redhill/Redwood hospital site following the BUPA deal. [27846]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 17 January 2002]: On 4 December 2001 we announced that we are in discussion over a proposal for the BUPA Redwood facility to become a diagnostic and treatment centre, treating national health service patients. Discussions of a range of detailed issues—including prices and staffing issues—are continuing. Our aim is to secure high quality services for patients and value for money. A final agreement will not be signed until discussions are satisfactorily concluded.

Stroke Services

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) which NHS trusts employ (a) stroke nurse consultants and (b) stroke liaison nurses; [28051]

(2) how many NHS Trusts have in place a multi-disciplinary programme of secondary prevention and rehabilitation for those who have suffered strokes; [28052]

(3) which stroke rehabilitation units admit people under the age of 55 years. [28050]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 17 January 2002]: The information requested is not collected centrally. However, the National Service Framework for Older People includes a standard for stroke. The service model for integrated stroke services and the milestones for action apply equally to all stroke patients, irrespective of age.

It is the role of health authorities, in partnership with primary care groups and trusts, to decide what services to provide for their populations including the employment of stroke nurses. They are best placed to understand local health needs and commission services to meet them.

The NSF will need to cover or link to prevention, acute care, rehabilitation and long-term support for stroke patients and their carers. April 2002 is the milestone for every general hospital which cares for people with stroke to have plans to introduce a specialised stroke service from 2004.

Southend General Hospital

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reason the closure of the cancer unit at Southend General Hospital is under consideration; and which body or person has the responsibility for determining the minimum catchment area size of such units. [28011]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 17 January 2002]: The closure of the cancer unit at Southend hospital national health service trust is not under consideration. The body which determines the minimum catchment area of cancer networks is the relevant regional office of the Department. Cancer networks in the eastern region were last reviewed in 1999. The south Essex cancer network was endorsed by NHS executive eastern despite the fact it falls below the Calman-Hine recommendation that cancer networks should serve a minimum population of 1 million. Current cancer services in the south Essex cancer network serves a population of approximately 680,000.

Barium Enemas

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what performance targets he has set for the waiting time for a barium enema. [28305]

Yvette Cooper: We have acknowledged the importance of diagnostic procedures, and are encouraging hospitals to streamline their services so that tests are carried out, and a diagnosis made, as quickly as possible.

There are no specific performance targets set for the waiting time for a barium enema. However, where this diagnostic procedure is to be used to confirm or exclude a diagnosis of bowel cancer, specific targets have been set. From July 2000, a two week out-patient waiting time standard has been introduced for urgent general practitioner referrals of patients with suspected bowel cancer.

The length of time that a patient might have to wait for any diagnostic procedure is dependent on their clinical condition with priority given to urgent cases.

Antipsychotic Medicines

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made as to the opinion of psychiatrists on the efficacy of atypical antipsychotic medicines. [13783]

Jacqui Smith: The Medicines Control Agency (MCA) is the United Kingdom Government agency responsible for ensuring that all medicines on the UK market are safe, effective and of suitable quality. Any new drug substance which has not been marketed before in the UK will be assessed by the MCA's independent advisory committee—the Committee on Safety of Medicines (CSM). The CSM has psychiatrists among its membership and can also bring in psychiatric expertise if necessary on an ad hoc basis. The CSM assesses medicines purely on the basis of safety versus efficacy and does not consider cost effectiveness.

The National Institute for Clinical Excellence has been asked to provide guidance concerning the clinical and cost effectiveness of atypical antipsychotics in the treatment of schizophrenia. The process of drawing up this guidance involves a detailed appraisal of the available literature followed by drafting of the guidance. The latter activity will include a range of expertise, including psychiatric.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Theft and Fraud

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his estimate is of the cost of theft and fraud to (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies in each of the last four years. [27981]

Mr. MacShane: The cost of theft from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in the UK over the last four years can be broken down into:

1998: £470

1999: £4,400

2000: £5,200

2001: £9,630.

Regulatory Impact Assessments

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many regulatory impact assessments have been produced by his Department since August 2001; and if he will list those produced (a) following initial consultation with affected parties about the most appropriate methodology for assessing costs and other impacts and (b) which set out full commercial impacts, including profitability, employment, consumer prices and competitiveness, as recommended in Good Policy Making. [28402]

Mr. Straw: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office have produced no regulatory impact assessments since August 2001. For further information, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office, on 17 January 2002, Official Report, column 483W.

Religious Persecution

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what training is available in his Department in the recognition of religious persecution. [28644]

Peter Hain: Promotion of human rights, including freedom of thought, conscience and religion, is at the heart of our foreign policy. We condemn instances where individuals are persecuted because of their faith or belief, wherever they happen and whatever the religion of the individual or group concerned.

Our approach is to treat religious freedom as an integral part of our foreign policy. Protecting and promoting freedom of religion is most effective when it is done in the context of the promotion and protection of other human rights. So we emphasise that human rights are everyone's business. That is why we have made human rights an essential element of training for all policy officers, including ambassadors.

We work closely with Amnesty International and other NGOs in designing and running our Human Rights courses. Courses are open to members of other Government Departments, including the Home Office, to attend.

In addition all decision-makers in the Joint Entry Clearance Unit and staff serving overseas as Entry Clearance Officers or Managers or Consular Officers receive training on the provisions of the Human Rights Act 1999 and the European Convention on Human Rights, which includes freedom of thought, conscience and religion.

The FCO also offers its staff a wide-ranging programme of training on inclusion and diversity issues. Our Managing Inclusion course is core training for all grades, both at home and overseas. Regional diversity training is also available for staff engaged locally overseas.

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what resources are available in his Department to monitor human rights violations of Christians; [28643]

(2) what responsibility UK embassies have been given to monitor religious freedom in the host country. [28607]

Peter Hain: Promotion of human rights, including freedom of thought, conscience and religion, is at the heart of our foreign policy. We condemn instances where individuals are persecuted because of their faith or belief, wherever they happen and whatever the religion of the individual or group concerned.

The Human Rights Policy Department (HRPD) is the FCO's central point of advice and expertise on human rights, including freedom of religion. But we emphasise that human rights are everyone's business. Staff at our posts and on geographical desks in London monitor human rights abuses overseas, including persecution of Christians. Human rights is an essential element of training for policy staff, including ambassadors and staff serving overseas as entry clearance officers or managers.

The FCO, in a number of ways, supports practical projects promoting human rights on the ground, including through the Human Rights Project Fund (HRPF). Since its inception in April 1998, the fund has supported over 400 projects and allocated more than £15 million in some 90 countries around the world. Its budget for financial year 2001–02 has been increased to £6.8 million.

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the number of Christians persecuted across the world in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [28608]

Peter Hain: Promotion of human rights, including freedom of thought, conscience and religion, is at the heart of our foreign policy. We condemn instances where individuals are persecuted because of their faith or belief, wherever they happen and whatever the religion of the individual or group concerned.

Staff at our posts and on geographical desks in London monitor human rights abuses overseas, including persecution of Christians. But the FCO does not collate figures on the number of Christians persecuted across the world, not least because of the difficulty in defining this category.

Collecting this information for this PQ would represent a disproportionate cost.

UK Prisoners Abroad

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many UK citizens are in prisons outside the United Kingdom. [28600]

Mr. Bradshaw: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Edinburgh, North and Leith (Mr. Lazarowicz) on 16 January 2002, Official Report, column 306W.

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans his Department has to extend financial assistance to families visiting relatives in prison abroad. [28514]

Mr. Bradshaw: The FCO has no plans to extend financial assistance to families visiting relatives in prison abroad. However, consular staff overseas can and do help to arrange family visits to prisoners detained abroad.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent meetings there have been with Argentine officials over the future of the Falkland Islands. [28345]

Mr. MacShane: The British Government have held no recent meetings with Argentina about the future status of the islands. We remain committed to the Falkland islanders' right to determine their own future and will not consider a change in the status of the islands unless they wish it. In all our dealings with Argentina we are clear that sovereignty over the Falklands is not open to negotiation.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his policy on the sovereignty of the Falkland Islands. [28347]

Mr. MacShane: The Falkland Islands are British. There will be no change in the status of the islands unless that is the wish of the islands themselves.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the circumstances are under which an Argentine national is able to settle on the Falkland Islands. [28346]

Mr. MacShane: The grant of permission to reside in the Falkland Islands is governed by the Falkland Islands' Immigration Ordinance 1999 and all persons, including British citizens, (who do not have Falkland Islands' status), require such permission to be able lawfully to reside in the Falkland Islands. The ordinance does not impose any special restrictions on the residence of Argentine citizens.

Colombia

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he has taken to support the full implementation of the UN recommendations on human rights to the Colombian Government before the next session of the United Nations Commission for Human Rights in March; and if he will make a statement. [29225]

Mr. MacShane: We have a regular, continuing dialogue with the Colombian Government about the human rights situation in Colombia, including the implementation of UN recommendations. I had comprehensive discussions about human rights during my visit to Colombia in October last year. The Minister of State, my right hon. Friend the Member for Neath (Peter Hain), plans to chair the regular NGO forum prior to the commission on Human Rights (CHR). NGOs will be invited to discuss FCO priorities, including Colombia, ahead of the CHR meeting in Geneva.

We strongly support the work of the UN in Colombia. Since March 2000, we have already given more than £250,000 to support the work of the UN Human Rights Office (UNHRO) there, which helped the UN to open a new office in Cali at the end of last year, something which has been particularly welcomed by NGOs. I am pleased to announce today that we have committed a further £120,000 to the UNHRO in Colombia so that it can continue its good work.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how the Government will ensure that aid provided through the recently agreed EU aid package in support of the Colombian peace process is not diverted to illegally armed people; and if he will make a statement. [29226]

Mr. MacShane: The UK, like other EU member states, has stressed to the European Commission in Brussels that EU technical assistance to Colombia must be transparent and be channelled where possible through reputable international and local NGOs working in Colombia. British embassy officials have made the same point to Commission representatives in Bogotá. We particularly welcome the fact that the Commission has recently appointed a representative to Barrancabermeja to oversee the delivery of EU aid to the Magdalena Medio region.

Indonesia

Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he is making about the reported persecution of Christians in Indonesia. [28338]

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent steps he has taken to encourage a reduction in the level of sectarian violence in Indonesia. [28924]

Mr. Bradshaw: The UK's message to the Indonesian Government is clear and consistent: a long-term solution to regional conflicts can be achieved only through political negotiation and consultation with the people. Together with our European partners we are in regular, top-level dialogue with the Indonesian Government, and urge them to maintain law and order and promote reconciliation in areas of conflict. The most recent direct contact was when our chargé d'affaires in Jakarta called on Manuel Kaisiepo, the Minister for Eastern Indonesia, on 29 November 2001. I myself raised the issue with Vice-President Haz during my visit to Jakarta last August.

Iraq

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the last United Nations weapons inspections in Iraq were made; and what assessment he has made of whether Iraq has acquired weapons of mass destruction. [28893]

Mr. Bradshaw: The last UN inspection team left Iraq on 13 December 1998. There have been no independent weapons inspections since then.

In the absence of any independent inspections, we cannot make any categorical assessment of current Iraqi capabilities. We do, however, judge that since 1999 Iraq has pressed ahead with its chemical, biological and nuclear weapons programmes.

Zimbabwe

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when his office last had communications with the Libyan authorities concerning the situation in Zimbabwe. [29290]

Mr. Straw: My Department has not discussed the situation in Zimbabwe with the Libyan authorities.

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last spoke to the Commonwealth Secretary-General concerning the situation in Zimbabwe. [29288]

Mr. Straw: I last discussed Zimbabwe with the Commonwealth Secretary General at the Commonwealth Ministerial Action Group (CMAG) meeting on 20 December. I expect to discuss Zimbabwe with him again in the run-up to the next CMAG meeting on 30 January.

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last spoke to the Zimbabwean High Commissioner concerning the situation in that country. [29291]

Mr. Straw: I have not formally spoken to the Zimbabwean High Commissioner about the situation in his country.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the action the (a) UK, (b) Commonwealth, (c) EU and (d) United Nations are taking to ensure free and fair elections in Zimbabwe. [29324]

Mr. Bradshaw: On 11 January, the EU insisted on invitations to, and accreditation of, international election observers at least six weeks before Zimbabwe's 9 March Presidential election. We are discussing with our European Union partners and others what norms and standards to adopt for judging the electoral process in Zimbabwe.

The Commonwealth Ministerial Action Group said on 20 December 2001 that it expects Commonwealth election observers to be invited and accredited well before the election.

On 15 January, the UN Secretary General called for free and fair elections monitored by the international community.

US/UK Agreements

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what his policy is in respect of the sharing with the US Government of intercept material obtained by GCHQ; and in what circumstances it is deemed inappropriate to share such information for reasons of national security; [28629]

(2) if he will make a statement on the status and importance of the UK/USA Agreement 1948. [28628]

Mr. Straw: It has been the long-standing practice of this and previous Governments not to comment on the detail of confidential arrangements which might exist between the UK and the US for the UK's national security.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many extant US/UK agreements there are the existence of which has not been made public; and if he will make a statement. [28741]

Mr. Straw: All treaties between the UK and US are published and registered with the UN Secretary General. There are however numerous other forms of agreement between the UK and the US, where there is no obligation to publish. Many of these will be in the public domain. The information needed to compile a list of these is not held centrally and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

China and Tibet

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the numbers of political prisoners in (a) Tibet and (b) China. [28325]

Mr. MacShane: According to Amnesty International and Human Rights Watch there is a lack of conclusive independent information on the numbers concerned. Unofficial estimates of those imprisoned for political beliefs and activities are that they may number in the thousands, with many more in administrative detention. The detention of democracy activists and the widespread use of administrative detention are among the central concerns we raise with the Chinese authorities.

GCHQ

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his policy is in respect of the monitoring by GCHQ of communications originating and terminating within the UK. [28635]

Mr. Straw: GCHQ may monitor communications originating and terminating within the UK only in accordance with law, and in particular with the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act (RIPA) 2000.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the purpose of Morwenstow station: and how many (a) US and (b) UK personnel are based there. [28584]

Mr. Straw: GCHQ Bude, previously known as the Composite Signals Organisation Station at Morwenstow, employs approximately 200 people and provides intelligence support serving the interest of the UK and its allies. It is long standing policy not to provide details about the operations carried out at Bude or to provide a detailed breakdown of staffing.

Parliamentary Questions

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many answers to parliamentary questions have not been answered by his Department under exemption 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information in each year since 1994. [29419]

Mr. Straw: We do not keep separate records of answers that refer to the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. To answer this question would entail checking every answer from FCO Ministers since 1994, which could only be done at disproportionate cost.

The Public Administration Committee's Fourth Report on Ministerial Accountability and Parliamentary Questions published on 10 November 1999 (HC 821) includes at Memorandum 7 a list of answers provided by the FCO during Parliamentary Session 1997 to 1998 which referred to the Code of Practice. None referred to Exemption 13 of the Code. The Committee's Fourth Report published on 13 December 2000 (HC 61) lists answers provided for the 1998 to 1999 Session. Five questions answered by the FCO refer to Exemption 13. (Memorandum 6.)

The Committee has not yet published a report covering the 1999 to 2000 Session. Two answers from the FCO in that Session referred to Exemption 13 of the Code of Practice.

International Drug Trade

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact of developments since September in Afghanistan on the international drug trade. [28632]

Mr. Bradshaw: To date, we have not detected a clear impact on the drugs trade in the UK or Europe but we continue to monitor events closely.

We and our international partners are committed to working with the Afghanistan's Interim Administration to tackle drugs cultivation in Afghanistan. We welcome the Chairman of the Interim Administration's edict banning involvement in the drugs trade. Drug control is an important aspect of reconstruction in Afghanistan.

Intelligence Sharing

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in what circumstances material obtained by interception (a) by the UK Government about foreign nationals is passed to the domestic authorities of those foreign nationals and (b) by foreign Governments about UK citizens is passed to the UK authorities. [28624]

Mr. Straw: It has long been the policy of this and previous Governments not to comment on intelligence-related arrangements that might exist between the UK and other countries. If any material were identified under the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000, its dissemination would be strictly controlled by the conditions set out in section 15 of the Act.

Mrs. Blair

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions his Department has provided support for Mrs. Blair during the Prime Minister's official visits abroad in the periods (a) May 1997 to April 1998, (b) May 1998 to April 1999, (c) May 1999 to April 2000, (d) May 2000 to April 2001 and (e) since May 2001. [28627]

Mr. MacShane: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office in London, and British embassies and High Commissions around the world, have assisted No. 10 in arranging official programmes for Mrs. Blair whenever she has accompanied the Prime Minister on his official visits overseas. This is in accordance with the Cabinet Office Ministerial Code of July 1997. Mrs. Blair has accompanied the Prime Minister on the following number of occasions:

(a) May 1997 to April 1998: 5

(b) May 1998 to April 1999: 3

(c) May 1999 to April 2000: 5

(d) May 2000 to April 2001: 3

(e) Since May 2001: 3.

Stolen Equipment

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what equipment has been stolen from his Department since 1 May 1997; and what the approximate value of each item was. [26830]

Mr. Straw: The following equipment has been stolen from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in the UK since 1 May 1997:

	Items stolen	Value (£)
4 June 1997	Laser jet and monitor screen	600
16 June 1997	Computer CPU	750

Subcontinent

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the military situation (a) between India and Pakistan and (b) over Kashmir. [29510]

Mr. Bradshaw: We remain concerned by the continuing military and political tensions between India and Pakistan. We hope that India and Pakistan will continue to seek ways to return to dialogue to resolve all the issues between them. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has kept in close contact over the past month with his Indian and Pakistani counterparts, and with other key interlocutors.

Interception of Communications

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 19 December 2001, Official Report, column 368W, on interception of communications, by what means a statement to the House would be made. [28519]

The Prime Minister: I am replying to this question as it relates to matters for which I am responsible.

Should circumstances arise in which a statement of the kind mentioned in my earlier reply needs to be made, I would then consider the appropriate form.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Correspondence

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will provide a substantive reply to the letters of 6 July and 18 October from the hon. Member for Billericay regarding the dumping of toxic ash at Pitsea Tip. [12677]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 6 November 2001]: My right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment responded to the letters from the hon. Member on 15 January 2002.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will reply to the letter of 9 August from the hon. Member for North Shropshire concerning delays in testing for bovine TB in the Market Drayton area of Shropshire. [12633]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 6 November 2001]: A response to the hon. Member's letter was sent on 15 January 2002. I apologise for the time taken to respond to this letter.

Mrs. Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) when the hon. Member for Broxbourne will receive a reply to her letters of 31 July, 29 August, 26 September, 25 October and 22 November to the Minister for the Environment relating to correspondence from Hertfordshire county council; [18926]

(2) when the hon. Member for Broxbourne will receive a reply to her letters to the Minister for the Environment of 31 July, 29 August, 26 September, 25 October, 22 November and 18 December relating to correspondence from Hertfordshire county council. [25458]

Mr. Morley: The hon. Member's letter of 31 July and subsequent follow up letters have been transferred to the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions as flood damage to highways is their area of responsibility.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 15 January 2002, ref. 26357, if she will make a statement on the reasons for the delay in responding to the letter to the hon. Member for West Chelmsford sent to him via the Foreign Office on 12 June 2001 re Dr. Reza Hussain. [28876]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 21 January 2002]: A response to the hon. Member's constituent's letter of 12 June was sent on 18 January 2002.

Recycling

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of her Department's stationery is recycled. [15361]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 16 November 2001]: The percentage of recycled stationery used by the Department is 48 per cent. for paper based products and 23 per cent. for general stationery products. There is an on-going programme of working with our users and suppliers to replace products with suitable and affordable recycled alternatives from sustainable sources. The Department expects to improve significantly its percentages of recycled stationery over the next six months.

Nuclear Reprocessing

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will establish an assessment, in respect of its relevance to environmental protection policy, of the report published on 23 November by the European Parliament's Scientific and Technological Options Assessment Programme on the possible toxic effects from the nuclear reprocessing plants at Sellafield and Cap de la Hague, France. [19873]

Mr. Meacher: This report is a public document which has already been the subject of independent evaluation by experts appointed by the STOA panel. The contents of the report and these evaluations have been noted, as have the doubts about the report's objectivity which have been raised by some members of the European Parliament and two of the three independent assessors. The Environment Agency which advises the Government on the disposal of radioactive waste into the environment, has been provided with a copy of the report.

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to place an obligation on suppliers to purchase from CHP units. [22602]

Mr. Meacher: Government have secured powers under the Utilities Act 2000 to introduce an obligation on suppliers to purchase electricity generated by CHP.

The Government hope that other measures to be outlined in the draft CHP strategy currently being finalised for consultation will be sufficient for CHP to compete effectively with other forms of electricity generation. If however it becomes clear that CHP is not able to compete effectively, the Government are prepared to examine the case for introducing a CHP Obligation.

Foot and Mouth

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her calculation is of the percentage of animal sales made during the foot and mouth disease epidemic that were conducted outside traditional markets on (a) video links, (b) via the internet and (c) by other means; and if she will make a statement on the (i) safety and (ii) cost of these methods. [24388]

Mr. Morley: The closure of livestock markets to prevent the spread of foot and mouth has led producers to develop a number of other means of selling their stock; we do not have information on the number of animals sold in this way. All animal sales are required to meet movement licence conditions, including bio-security requirements.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what was the total expenditure on (a) compensation, (b) Civil Service costs, (c) decontamination, (d) additional rural aid and (e) payments to vets, slaughterers and valuers arising from the foot and mouth disease epidemic. [26024]

Mr. Morley: The total estimated expenditure arising out of foot and mouth disease is as follows:

(a) compensation for animals slaughtered and for seized and destroyed items is £1,114,200,000;

(b) total Civil Service costs are not yet available;

(c) costs for cleansing and disinfection are £280,000,000;

(d) additional rural payments are not yet available; and

(e) total costs for vets, slaughterers and valuers is £72,100,000.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when blood tests for foot and mouth disease will be completed; and what the timetable is for blood tests relating to foot and mouth disease. [27622]

Mr. Morley: The blood testing necessary to classify each county in Great Britain as free of foot and mouth disease (FMD) is now complete. Pre-movement blood testing of sheep flocks is also no longer required. Blood testing is still required where a farmer re-stocks with sheep, goats, or camelids following an outbreak. It is expected that most blood testing for re-stocking purposes will be complete by early summer.

Blood samples are sent from the local Animal Health Office by courier to the laboratory to arrive within 24 hours of the sample being taken. The laboratories have a target turn-round time for FMD blood tests of seven days and currently the mean turn-round time is three days. Results from the laboratories are then made available by computer to the local Animal Health Office.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what forms of testing are carried out by her Department in relation to foot and mouth disease. [27625]

Mr. Morley: Tests for the detection of foot and mouth disease virus and antibody are performed according to the protocols described in the chapter on foot and mouth disease (FMD) in the OIE Manual of Standards for Diagnostic Tests and Vaccines (2000) which was written by staff at the Institute for Animal Health (IAH), Pirbright. These tests were performed at IAH, Pirbright and five other laboratories on behalf of DEFRA. In addition, one of the antibody detection ELISA tests was improved. This test was validated and the data have been submitted to OIE for their approval as a prescribed test.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures her Department is taking to validate (a) alternative and (b) complementary testing procedures where positive foot and mouth disease cases are confirmed. [27623]

Mr. Morley: DEFRA supports a programme of applied research and test development at IAH, Pirbright. A priority is the development of more rapid and reliable diagnostic tests for use in the laboratory and in the field. Another priority is to develop better methods for identifying infection among vaccinated animals so that vaccinated animals could be safely kept alive. All such tests must be properly validated to ensure international acceptance.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the remaining movement restrictions on livestock farms in Worcestershire, imposed as a result of the foot and mouth epidemic will be lifted. [28899]

Mr. Morley: There are 15 farms in Worcestershire currently under restrictions. It is anticipated that it should be possible to lift all these restrictions by 23 April unless there is any change to the current disease situation.

Flood Warning Notices

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many flood warning notices were sent by the Environment Agency by (a) county and (b) constituency in England and Wales in 2001. [25002]

Mr. Morley: Flood defence is a fully devolved function and DEFRA has policy responsibility only for England. Figures are not available at county and constituency level. The table therefore shows total flood warnings issued by Environment Agency in 2001 in England by region:

	Number
North East	61
North West	127
Midlands	363
South West	520
Thames	815
Southern	774
Anglian	684
Total	3,344

Biofuels

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if it is her policy to encourage the growing of crops for biofuels; and if she will make a statement. [26445]

Mr. Morley: This Department allocated support of £29 million to solid biomass crops through the Energy Crops Scheme, part of the England Rural Development Programme. We are also working with other Departments to put in place schemes with funding of £70 million which will develop markets for biomass in heat, combined heat and power and electricity generation. Following the Green Fuel Challenge my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced that a new duty rate for biodiesel, set at 20p per litre below the rate for Ultra Low Sulphur Diesel, is to be introduced in Budget 2002. Any additional measures to develop biofuels from crops must be based on sound evidence and this Department has recently commissioned a six-month study, on behalf of the Government-Industry Forum on non-food uses of crops, to provide an independent, comprehensive and rigorous evaluation of the comparative energy, environmental and socio-economic costs and benefits of biodiesel production in the UK. The study will compare results with those for other relevant green fuels and relevant energy saving measures.

Farm Incomes

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what were the (a) gross and (b) net farm incomes for each of the past four years for (i) the highest earning decile and (ii) the lowest earning decile. [26028]

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

Mr. Morley: Income data are available only for farms with an economic size of at least eight European Size Units (ESUs), the minimum considered necessary to occupy a full time farmer. Although nearly half the farms in England fall below this 'full-time' size threshold, they account for only 2 per cent. of agricultural output.

The information for farms above this threshold is given in the table. Data for the year 2000–01 will be available on 31 January 2002. The income measure "Cash Income" has been used for gross income.

Ranges of farm incomes for full-time farms in England

£ per farm

	Cash income		Net farm income
	First decile (10th percentile)	Ninth decile (90th percentile)	First decile (10th percentile)	Ninth decile (90th percentile)
1996–97	5,900	110,400	–3,300	68,700
1997–98	–100	85,700	–10,800	40,200
1998–99	–700	78,300	–13,700	35,600
1999–2000	0	69,400	–13,900	32,600

Farm Business Survey

Remuneration

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will estimate the number of individuals in her (a) Department, (b) related agencies and (c) related non-departmental public bodies whose annual remuneration including benefits in kind exceeded (i) £100,000 and (ii) £200,000 in each of the last four years. [26326]

Mr. Morley: As DEFRA was created on 8 June 2001, the historical information requested is not available. However, the numbers for the former Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (MAFF) are as follows:

(a) In the Department:

(i) annual remuneration exceeding £100,000 including benefits (basic salary plus any allowances and bonuses):

1 April 1998: 1

1 April 1999: 1

1 April 2000: 1

1 April 2001: 4

(ii) annual remuneration exceeding £200,000 including benefits:

1 April 1998: 0

1 April 1999: 0

1 April 2000: 0

1 April 2001: 0

(b) In related agencies:

(i) and (ii): none in any year

(c) the information is available in the annual Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies" (as referred to in the central answer provided by the Minister for the Cabinet Office).

Arable Area Payments

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farmers, by region, have arable area payment claims outstanding. [26606]

Mr. Morley: The regulatory deadline for payment of main scheme claims under the 2001 Arable Area Payments Scheme is 31 January 2002. As at 13 January 2002, 33,830 claims (79.15 per cent.) had been passed for payment. Payments of claims is no longer organised on a regional basis, as in previous years. The number of claims unpaid by processing centre is, however, as follows:

RPA processing site	Unpaid claims
Cambridge	987
Carlisle	688
Crewe	335
Exeter	3,469
Newcastle	221
Northallerton	1,895
Nottingham	1,098
Reading	219
Total	8,912

Agricultural Bureaucracy

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many transactions by correspondence, telephone or e-mail take place on average each year between her Department and farmers subject to each (a) quota, (b) headage payment and (c) area payment. [26693]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 11 January 2002]: The information is not available and records held by the Department are not sufficiently detailed to enable it to be extracted. The total number of letters received by the Department from farmers in the categories mentioned in the financial years 1999–2000 and 2000–01 were 32,812 and 34,051 respectively. This excludes claim forms and any covering communications which did not call for a response.

The numbers of claims, payments and quota registrations for the two years were:

	1999–2000		2000–01
	Claims	Payments	Claims	Payments
Headage based schemes	181,285	545,336	320,271	794,527
Area based schemes	73,447	[1]119,159	72,700	[2]91,155
Quota transactions	18,900		18,920

[1] For 1999–2000 this includes advance payments for oilseeds and separate payments for non food set-aside.

[2] For 2000–01 this includes separate payments for non food set-aside.

Agricultural Subsidies

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what area payments are available to producers of (a) maize, (b) wheat, (c) barley, (d) oats, (e) sugar beet and (f) other crops; what is the value of each payment (i) in aggregate and (ii) by volume or area; and what are the conditions upon which payments depend. [26001]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 11 January 2002]: Payments are available to producers under the Arable Area Payments Scheme for crops of Cereals (which include barley, oats and maize), Proteins, Linseed, Rapeseed, Flax, Hemp and Set-aside. Sugar Beet can only be claimed under this scheme for non-food use. It does not attract a payment but may be counted towards a producer's set-aside requirement.

The payment rates for crops claimed in England in 2001 per hectare are £225.6466 for Cereals and set-aside, £264.3094 for Oilseeds, £259.6757 for Proteins and £270.8829 for Linseed, Fibre Flax and Hemp. There is a further supplement to the basic rate available for Durum Wheat of £84.4647.

In 2000, the total value of payments made with respect to English applications was as follows:

	Basic payment	Agri-monetary compensation
Maize	4,340,419	145,988
Cereals (excluding maize)	583,020,470	19,757,296
Oilseeds	88,204,626	2,984,108
Proteins	53,881,564	1,824,176
Linseed	22,363,270	782,726
Durum Wheat Supplement	1,240,699	12,450
Set-aside	100,965,458	3,456,446
Total	854,016,506	28,963,190

The Arable Area Payments Scheme (AAPS) offers payments per hectare to growers of the crops already mentioned. There are a number of conditions that land and crops being claimed must meet, the main ones being as follows. Eligibility of land for AAPS is as a general rule effectively restricted to land that was in arable rotation on 31 December 1991. In order to qualify for full payment, all producers claiming more than 15.62 ha must set-aside a certain percentage of their claimed eligible land. All crops claimed under this scheme must be shown and maintained in line with local standards and must be maintained until specified dates. Details of the scheme requirements are published annually in literature available to claimants.

IACS Payments

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects payment of arable area IACS for the past year to be completed. [R] [26741]

Mr. Morley: Industrial action, which has been delaying the processing of arable aid (AAPS) claims, was suspended by the trade unions with effect from 11 January. This allowed the Rural Payments Agency (RPA) to step up the amount of overtime being worked beginning in the weekend of 12–13 January. Overtime working will now continue, as long as the suspension remains in place, until the backlog of claim processing is cleared. The RPA expects to be able to pay the vast majority of AAPS claims within the regulatory timeframe which ends on 31 January. However, because of the processing time which has already been lost, it is likely that more claims than usual will be carried over into February. Every effort will be made to keep this to the absolute minimum. As at 13 January 80 per cent. of AAPS claims had been passed for payment.

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the average proportion of an arable farmer's income that is made up by an IACS payment at the latest date for which figures are available. [R] [26742]

Mr. Morley: Information on total farm output (including direct subsidies), total input costs, and net farm income for full-time arable farms in England is given in the table. The data relate to 1999–2000. In this year, the average subsidy exceeded the average income.

Data for 2000–01 will be available on 31 January.

Average output (including subsidies), input and income for full-time arable farms in England (1999–2000)

	General cropping farms	Cereals farms
Total farm output (£ per farm)	207,200	123,900
of which:
Direct crop subsidies (£ per farm)	28,800	34,200
Direct livestock subsidies (£ per farm)	2,400	2,300
Direct general subsidies (£ per farm)	600	1,200
Direct crop subsidies (as a percentage of output)	13.9	27.6
Direct livestock subsidies (as a percentage of output)	1.2	1.9
Direct general subsidies (as a percentage of output)	0.3	1.0
Total input (costs) (£ per farm)	199,100	112,200
Net farm income (£)	8,100	11,700

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of arable area IACS payments were made to farmers by (a) 1 January 2001 for the preceding year and (b) 1 January 2002 for this past year. [R] [26740]

Mr. Morley: By 30 December 2001, 29,075 IACS payments (68.03 per cent.) had been passed for payment, with a value of £495,577,987.14. The figures at the same stage last year was 39,516 (90 per cent.) with a value of £725,996,684.

Fish Stocks

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when, at the rate of depletion in 2000, stocks of (a) cod, (b) herring, (c) mackerel and (d) plaice will be fished out in (i) UK and (ii) EU waters; and if she will make a statement. [27164]

Mr. Morley: It is not possible or meaningful to answer the question in the terms asked. Stock levels in future years will depend, in part, on the abundance of future broods of young fish not yet spawned. Also, the stocks are subject to a range of management measures aimed at restoring them, although the outcome of these measures cannot be precisely predicted at present, the assumption underlying the question that these measures will have no effect is not a reasonable hypothesis.

Rather than the rate of depletion of stocks, the indicators used for the state of fish stocks are, for each stock, the spawning stock biomass and the level of fishing mortality. Where these indicators fall below the precautionary benchmarks established by scientists, the scientific advice is that action should be taken to raise them to within safe biological limits. The recovery plans already in place for northern hake and for cod in the North sea, Irish sea and west of Scotland and now proposed by the commission for further stocks, together with the decisions taken by the Council of Ministers to set TACs and quotas for 2002 in line with scientific advice, are aimed at reversing decline in fish stocks where it is occurring and is of concern, rather than allowing it to continue.

Goats

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if goats are to be included with sheep with respect to BSE testing; and what her policy is on the destruction of the national goat herd if BSE is found to be present in sheep. [26898]

Mr. Morley: Goats are included in the testing programme for TSEs which we are putting in place to meet the requirements of EU legislation. If BSE were to be found in the sheep flock, the implications for goats would need to be determined in the light of circumstances at the time, taking into account in particular the views of the Food Standards Agency and the scientific advice offered by the EU's Scientific Steering Committee and by the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee.

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what reasons lie behind the recent changes to the regulations for the transportation of goats for mating. [26765]

Mr. Morley: The movement of animals has been restricted as part of the measures to control the spread of foot and mouth disease. The most recent change to the animal movements licensing scheme affecting goats was introduced on 18 December 2001. From this date, goats were allowed to move freely between At Risk Counties provided an inspection by a Local Veterinary Inspector proved satisfactory. As of 15 January 2002, there are no At Risk Counties in Great Britain. There have been no recent changes to the rules regarding the movement of billy goats for breeding purposes.

Bovine TB

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs in which areas the culling of badgers as part of the Krebs trial has restarted; how many badgers have been culled; and what the estimated cost of the trial is. [26754]

Mr. Morley: The badger field trial was suspended in February last year because of the foot and mouth disease (FMD) outbreak. Badger culling has not yet recommenced but surveying operations have restarted in all trial areas. Up to the time that the trial was suspended, 2,913 badgers had been culled. The overall cost of the trial has been estimated to be approximately £35 million.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many cattle have been culled since 1995 due to being infected with bovine TB, broken down by year and county. [26751]

Mr. Morley: The table shows the number of animals slaughtered because they reacted to the tuberculin test broken down by county for England, Scotland and Wales for the years 1995, 1996, 1997, 1998, 1999,2000 and 2001. A figure by county is not available for Northern Ireland and the relevant figures for each year are shown.

All figures are produced from the State Veterinary Service IT support system. The figure for 1995 is unvalidated raw data. The use of the system for management reporting only began late in 1995 and it is not now possible to validate this data. For the years 1996, 1997 and 1998 the table shows validated agreed data. Statistics meeting 'national statistics' criteria have been used for 1999 and 2000 but the data are yet to be validated and these are therefore provisional. For 2001 the data are provisional and unvalidated as laboratory results are awaited.

[2] Due to the outbreak of foot and mouth disease testing has been greatly reduced. In addition a number [illegible] cases await laboratory results.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many cases of bovine TB there have been in the United Kingdom since 1995, broken down by year and county. [26752]

Mr. Morley: The table shows the number of herds affected by new confirmed incidents of bovine TB broken down by country for England, Scotland and Wales for the years 1995, 1996, 1997, 1998, 1999, 2000 and 2001. A figure by county is not available for Northern Ireland and the relevant figures for each year are shown.

A new herd incident occurs when a herd which was previously TB free either had cattle that reacted to a tuberculin test or had a tuberculous animal disclosed by routine inspection at slaughter. This becomes a confirmed incident where at least one animal is subsequently confirmed as having bovine TB either through laboratory result and/or evidence at slaughter.

The figures for Northern Ireland relate to new herd incidents only.

All figures are produced from the state veterinary service IT support system. The figure for 1995 is unvalidated raw data. The use of the system for management reporting only began late in 1995 and it is not now possible to validate this data. For the years 1996, 1997 and 1998 the table shows validated agreed data. Departmental Sickness Absence

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will commission and publish an independent report on the reasons for the level of sickness absence in her Department. [26972]

Mr. Morley: The Department does not intend to commission and publish an independent report on the reasons for the level of its sickness absence, but it is planning to carry out its own analysis.

A comprehensive analysis of sickness absence in the civil service is produced annually by Cabinet Office. Copies of such reports are placed in the Library of the House.

Responsibility for attendance matters within the Central Science Laboratory, the Veterinary Laboratories Agency and the Centre for Environmental Fisheries and Aquaculture Agency—all former MAFF agencies—has been delegated to the agency chief executives and I have asked them to reply direct. The Pesticides Safety Directorate, the Rural Payments Agency and the veterinary medicines directorate agencies are covered by the departmental response.

Illegal Meat Imports

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the steps that have been taken to control illegal meat imports arriving in the UK via Heathrow airport. [27269]

Mr. Morley: Since April last year we have taken a range of initiatives aimed at improving our ability to prevent and detect illegal imports of animal products. These initiatives have been co-ordinated by officials in the Department for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, but involve other Departments such as HM Customs and Excise and the Food Standards Agency, and the local authorities who are responsible for controls at ports and airports.

Checks on imports of animal products at Heathrow airport are primarily the responsibility of Hillingdon borough council. We have regular discussions with council officers about import controls. In addition customs officers and immigration officers are alert to the need to be vigilant to illegal imports of animal products carried in passenger baggage. Local authority officers, customs officers and state veterinary service officers at the airport liaise in organising checks of passenger baggage for illegal animal products.

Posters have been placed at Heathrow and other airports alerting individuals to what products they may bring in. These are now being improved in the light of experience and discussion has taken place with the airport authority to ensure that posters are sited as effectively as possible.

Tenant Farmers

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to meet the Tenant Farmers Association; and if she will make a statement. [27619]

Mr. Morley: My right hon. Friends the Secretary of State and the Minister for Rural Affairs, and my noble Friend Lord Whitty, have all met representatives of the Tenant Farmers Association over the last six months. I can assure the hon. Member that the close contact DEFRA has established with the tenanted sector will be maintained. Further, my noble Friend Lord Whitty has agreed to meet with the Tenant Farmers Association when the outcome of the review of the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 is known.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make an assessment of the issues facing tenant farmers; and what action she will take to improve their situation. [27620]

Mr. Morley: The Policy Commission on Food and Farming has been established to look at all aspects of the farming industry. DEFRA has been sent a copy of the detailed submission the Tenant Farmers Association (TFA) has made to the commission and departmental officials have met with the TFA to discuss the issues raised. DEFRA has also commissioned a review of the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995. This is being conducted by Plymouth university and their draft report should be available to the Department by the end of January.

It is not possible to say what if any specific action will be taken in relation to tenant farming issues before the results of this study and the Policy Commission's recommendations are known. However the Government are committed to the establishment of a sustainable, diverse, modern and adaptable farming industry.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has received from the Tenant Farmers Association concerning (a) an early retirement and young entrant scheme into the farming industry, (b) her Department's free business advice to all farmers, (c) farm diversification through best practice guides and (d) 50 per cent. rate relief for five years for new non-agricultural enterprises on farms. [27618]

Mr. Morley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State met representatives of the Tenant Farmers Association (TFA) on 30 October, as did my noble Friend Lord Whitty on 16 July and my right hon. Friend the Minister for Rural Affairs on 21 November. The key topics discussed at these meetings were an early retirement scheme, access by tenant farmers to agri-environment and other schemes under the second pillar of the Common Agricultural Policy, and the scope for diversification by tenant farmers under existing tenancy legislation. There has, in addition, been correspondence between my officials and the TFA on the free business advice service provided to farmers.

Fur Farming

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) for what reasons the Fur Farming (Compensation Scheme) (England) Order 2001 (SI 2001, No 3853) does not make provision for (a) the value of male animals and (b) the differential value of different breed of mink; [27755]

(2) for what reasons the Fur Farming (Compensation Scheme) (England) Order 2001 (SI 2001, No 3853) reduces the compensation payable for the value of breeding stock where (a) the farmer elected to cease keeping mink after 1 October 2001 and (b) the farmer elected to cease keeping mink nine months before the Fur Farming (Prohibition) Act 2000 comes into force. [27757]

Mr. Morley: Under section 5(1) of the Fur Farming (Prohibition) Act 2000, fur farmers are able to close down at any time between enactment on 23 November 2000 and the coming into force of the ban on 1 January 2003, without affecting their eligibility for compensation. This winding-down period of more than two years allows each fur farmer to choose the best time when to close in order to mitigate any losses, including on breeding and young stock.

Those fur farmers who choose to close at a later date will derive greater returns for each breeding animal from the market, thus reducing the residual breeding value, and hence the level of compensation. Any differential in the value of different breeds of mink will be reflected in the profitability of the enterprise for which compensation is being provided.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs for what reasons the Fur Farming (Compensation Scheme) (England) Order 2001 (SI 2001, No. 3853) specifies (a) a fixed sum for the value of breeding stock, and (b) a fixed multiplier to determine qualifying income losses; and for what reason there is no appeal under the terms of the order to (a) arbitration and (b) to the Lands Tribunal. [27751]

Mr. Morley: Under Section 5(1) of the Fur Farming (Prohibition) Act 2000, the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food is required to make a compensation scheme. Due consideration was given to all relevant factors in producing such a scheme. It was not considered appropriate for the Government to leave the determination of the value of breeding stock and the income multiplier to an arbitrator or the Lands Tribunal, if they were to meet their obligation to make a scheme that is fair and reasonable. The calculation of average net trading profits could, however, be referred to an arbitrator or the Lands Tribunal.

Air Pollution

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many days of (a) moderate, (b) high and (c) very high air pollution there were (i) in the United Kingdom and (ii) in Buckinghamshire in each year since 1997; and if she will indicate the suspected causes of high and very high readings. [27790]

Mr. Meacher: DEFRA operate a National Automatic Urban and Rural Network that currently includes about 120 sites throughout the UK. Data are produced continuously on an hourly basis. Ratified data are available up to 30 September 2001. After this date care must be taken in interpretation of the pollution levels recorded since high measurements may be the result of instrument error that is still to be identified.

An analysis of moderate, high or very high pollution during 1997–2001 has been undertaken to identify the number and severity of such incidents. Pollution at each site is defined according to the pollutant that is in the highest band during the day. The numbers of days in each band for each pollutant in the United Kingdom since 1997 are given in the table.

There are no National Automatic Urban and Rural Network monitoring sites in Buckinghamshire.

Number of days of moderate, high and very high air pollution in the United Kingdom (at one or more sites) in each year since 1997

	Moderate	High	Very high
1997	269	70	14
1998	259	49	12
1999	269	51	15
2000	240	38	7
2001	250	69	19

High air pollution episodes due to ozone are only recorded in the summer months. The pollution is linked to hot sunny weather when industrial and motor vehicle emissions react under these conditions to form ground-level ozone. Light easterly winds sometimes bring this pollution across to the UK from central Europe. If conditions are very still for several days then high pollution can be generated by pollution emissions from the UK only.

High air pollution episodes due to sulphur dioxide are either due to emissions from domestic heating systems (coal or oil), or from industrial processes. The former episodes are measured during the winter in urban areas with significant use of these fuel types. Industrial related incidents can be many miles away from the source of the pollution when the plume from the process comes to ground.

High air pollution episodes due to nitrogen dioxide are related to motor vehicle emissions and, although infrequent, are usually during very cold, still conditions in the winter months.

High or very high particulate matter (PM_{10}) can be from a variety of industrial, motor vehicle, construction or "natural" sources such as Saharan dust, volcanic eruptions, agricultural dust or fireworks.

There are no high or very high CO episodes.

Whaling

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has made to the International Whaling Commission on the decision by the Japanese Government to use satellite technology to (a) track, (b) monitor and (c) capture, (i) minke, (ii) sperm and (iii) Bryde's whales. [28086]

Mr. Morley: We are raising this issue directly with the Government of Japan.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what involvement her Department has in (a) public-private partnerships and (b) private finance initiative projects. [27934]

Mr. Morley: The Department is involved in four private finance initiative projects as follows:

1. Broadland Flood Alleviation Scheme
2. Pevensey Bay Sea Defences
3. Brooklands Avenue Office Development (Cambridge)
4. Countryside Agency's Spirit (IT services).

As yet the Department is not involved in any public-private partnerships.

Theft and Fraud

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her estimate is of the cost of theft and fraud to (a) her Department, (b) its agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies in each of the last four years. [27974]

Mr. Morley: The Department has only been in existence since June 2001. Information covering earlier periods is therefore not available, and could be constructed retrospectively only at disproportionate cost.

Annual reports which the Treasury prepares on fraud, covering returns from both the former MAFF and DETR, are deposited in the House of Commons Library.

Pesticides

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 12 December 2001, Official Report, column 919–20W, on carbofuran chlorfenvinphos, if she will set out the measures she is taking to help the trade and user groups. [27841]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 16 January 2002]: My noble Friend Lord Whitty met representatives of the National Farmers Union and the brassica industry on 19 December to discuss the problems that would be faced by trade and user groups. My noble Friend accepts that there would be severe consequences for swede and turnip growers putting them at a serious disadvantage with European competitors. While the approval for carbofuran expired as planned on 31 December 2001, he has agreed, exceptionally, to allow the approval for chlorfenvinphos to continue until 25 July 2003, the date the use of the compound will expire throughout Europe. Action has already been taken by the Pesticide Safety Directorate to maintain the chlorfenvinphos approvals. However, industry is being urged, as a matter of urgency, to find alternatives.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will ensure that the ban on the use of chlorfenvinphos and carbofuran, used in the control of cabbage root fly, comes into force at the same time as in the rest of the EU. [27044]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 17 January 2002]: Pesticide products containing chlorfenvinphos and carbofuran have been reviewed as part of the general review in the UK of all organophosphate pesticides. The review was undertaken because of public concerns about the potential toxicity of this group of chemicals. Only for chlorfenvinphos has there been strong lobbying to retain its use on swedes and turnips. The approval was due to expire on 31 December 2001 but in the light of strong representations from growers at the end of last year my noble Friend Lord Whitty agreed to extend the approval until 25 July 2003, the date when the approval will expire throughout Europe. This should allow industry time to find alternatives. Unlike chlorfenvinphos, no strong representations have been made for the approval of carbofuran to continue. This approval therefore expired as planned on 31 December.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research her Department has sponsored into alternatives to chlorfenvinphos and carbofuran. [27046]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 17 January 2002]: None. DEFRA funds generic research into alternatives to conventional pesticides, for example, biological controls, but not into specific chemical alternatives which are primarily for industry to fund. I understand that the brassica industry has done some work to find alternative methods to control cabbage root fly and is being urged to continue this work.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the effect on the competitiveness of UK vegetable growers if chlorfenvinphos and carbofuran are banned in the UK before they are banned in the rest of the EU. [27045]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 17 January 2002]: My noble Friend Lord Whitty met representatives of the National Farmers Union and the brassica industry on 19 December when the industry's assessment of the impact of the loss of these compounds was discussed.

My noble Friend accepts that growers would be seriously disadvantaged by the loss of these compounds. He has therefore agreed, exceptionally, to allow the approval for chlorfenvinphos to continue until 25 July 2003, the date when the approval will expire throughout Europe. This should ensure that UK growers' competitiveness in Europe is maintained. However industry is being urged, as a matter of urgency, to find alternatives.

PIU Energy Review

Mr. Pound: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the PIU report will be published before the end of January. [28980]

Mr. Meacher: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to the hon. Member for Ceredigion (Mr. Thomas), on 9 January 2002, Official Report, column 816W.

Fisheries Policy

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the European commission policy on administrative sanctions in enforcing fisheries policy; what assessment she has made of the compatibility of this approach with the European convention on human rights; and if she will make a statement. [28675]

Mr. Morley: Under CFP regulations member states are required to ensure that appropriate measures are being taken to deal with fisheries infringements. These may take the form of criminal proceedings or administrative sanctions. The Government would need to be satisfied that any proposals for a system of administrative sanctions were compatible with the European convention on human rights. Moreover, any proposals to introduce administrative sanctions would be subject to full consultation with the fishing industry and other appropriate interests.

Recovered Vegetable Oil

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) if the use of recovered vegetable oil for producing animal feed is to be banned in the UK; and if she will make a statement; [28696]

(2) what regulatory impact assessment has been carried out in respect of the EU Animal By-Products regulation; [28695]

(3) if she will make a statement on the impact of restrictions on the use of recovered vegetable oil upon waste disposal authorities; [28697]

(4) if she will make a statement on the implementation of the EU Animal By-Products regulation. [28694]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 18 January 2002]: The proposed EU Animal By-Products Regulation would ban the feeding of catering waste to livestock. This ban was introduced at a late stage in negotiations and, after political agreement to a common position had been reached, the European commission made it clear that it considered that the ban also applied to used cooking oils. The Government consider that used cooking oils can be safely used in livestock feed if they are protected from contamination by the application of HACCP (Hazard Analysis of Critical Control Points) principles and appropriate quality control. If suitable alternative outlets are not in place, a ban could lead to environmental problems. The UK is therefore opposing the ban on used cooking oils which are subject to suitable controls and has been lobbying Members of the European Parliament to make suitable changes at Second Reading. The UK has also made it clear that, in the event of the ban not being reversed, an extended transitional period would be needed to allow time for alternative, sustainable outlets to be developed.

Regulatory impact assessments were placed in the Library of the House on 27 November 2000 and 26 February 2001, along with explanatory memoranda on the regulation (reference 12646/00 and 12648/00). However, as the ban on catering waste had not then been proposed, they did not take account of the costs of such a ban. A revised regulatory impact assessment and a further supplementary explanatory memorandum are in preparation. We expect the Animal By-Products Regulation to come into force in member states towards the end of 2002. Relevant industries and other interests will be fully consulted on its implementation.

Agricultural Shows

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) when she will make an announcement on the exemption of agricultural shows from the 20 day standstill period; [28691]

(2) when she will provide guidance to organisers of county shows on livestock movements for shows. [28693]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 18 January 2002]: On 18 December, the Government announced changes to the livestock movement controls which it intends to introduce in February 2002. It is proposed that animals may move to and from shows and from show to show without triggering a 20 day standstill provided they are individually identified and are kept in approved isolation facilities on the farm of origin before moving to and on returning from shows. The rules will reflect existing protocols and herd health rules. Officials have held detailed discussions with interested parties and written guidance will be issued by the Department as soon as possible.

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will reply to the letter from The Surrey County Agricultural Society on the County Show in time for the show organisers to make plans for the animal show on 3 June. [28692]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 18 January 2002]: We have no record of having received the letter dated 3 June referred to by the hon. Member from The Surrey County Agricultural Society on the County Show.

Livestock Burial

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has held with other EU agriculture Ministers about on-farm burial of livestock. [28860]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 21 January 2002]: The EU Animal By-Products Regulation contains provisions which relate to the burial of livestock. A common position on the regulation was adopted at the November Agriculture Council, following political agreement at the June Agriculture Council. However, the Secretary of State did not discuss the provisions relating to burial at those Councils; discussions had already taken place at official level.

Livestock Markets

Matthew Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when livestock markets will reopen. [29475]

Mr. Morley: On 18 December, the Government announced changes to the livestock movement controls which they intended should be implemented from February 2002 provided there was continued progress in eradicating FMD. Further details will be announced shortly and we hope to have the new system in place from Monday 11 February.

From the start of these arrangements, cattle markets will be allowed to resume, but for sheep and pigs, slaughter markets only will be allowed initially. The question of whether to allow other sheep and pig markets will be kept under review in the light of veterinary and scientific advice.

When markets do reopen, they will be subject to strict conditions to ensure that an appropriate level of biosecurity is maintained.

Flood Defences

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures she has taken (a) to replace and (b) to repair flood defences nationwide that are due to reach the end of their design life over the next decade. [27114]

Mr. Morley: I plan to reduce the risk of flooding by investing in effective flood warning arrangements and in flood and coastal defences in the highest risk areas, and existing flood defences are being repaired, renewed, maintained and improved. As the bulk of expenditure is ultimately met by taxpayers, both DEFRA and the operating authorities have a responsibility to ensure that value for money is obtained when funding works.

This Department provides grants for flood and coastal defence capital works, and associated studies, which meet essential technical, economic and environmental criteria and achieve an appropriate priority score (based on departmental priorities, urgency and benefit:cost ratio). Further to increases in the last two Spending Reviews, additional funding of £51 million over the four years from 2001–02 was announced in November 2000 following the severe flooding. In all DEFRA flood and coastal defence funding is set to increase from £66 million in 2000–01 to £114 million in 2003–04. Funding for future years will be considered in the Spending Review process.

Responsibility for deciding which projects to promote and their timing rests with the operating authorities. The operating authority for each area draws on its local knowledge to decide what needs to be done, including the appraisal of design standards within the economic justification of projects.

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 6 December 2001, Official Report, column 496W, on flood defence, when the validation will be complete; and whether it will identify when councils completed this task. [27474]

Mr. Morley: A list of local authorities that have provided valid information on their flood defence assets to the Environment Agency has been placed in the Library of the House.

This information was received by the agency in the period to July 2001. Where the agreed programme of inspections requires it, a second round of inspections is under way.

The ability of some local authorities to carry out inspections, and the Environment Agency's ability to receive and assess that information, and to follow up the non-receipt of inspection reports, was severely impaired by the aftermath of the 2000 floods. I have therefore agreed that the agency should provide a fully validated report for the period to March 2002 which covers all inspections to that date, summarises the condition of defences, and sets out the agreed approach to inspections.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress she is making in securing adequate flood defences for Lewes. [27537]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 16 January 2002]: Operational responsibility for flood management rests with operating authorities, such as the Environment Agency. The agency has repaired defences in Lewes so that they are largely up to the standard they were before the floods in autumn 2000. The agency is also undertaking a strategic study of the River Ouse catchment with a view to identifying sustainable defence options for Lewes and other towns. I understand that the agency is keeping local interest groups informed of their consideration of defence options. This Department has provided funding for both the emergency repairs and for the strategic study.

Nuclear Accidents

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 3 December 2001, Official Report, column 96W, on nuclear accidents, what assessment has been made of the need to distribute iodine tablets to the population; and how long it will take average prevailing winds to carry fallout from France to the south coast of England. [22353]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

Potassium Iodate tablets are held at or around various nuclear industry sites throughout the United Kingdom including Ministry of Defence sites as part of the detailed emergency planning arrangements in the vicinity of nuclear power plants. Other stocks are also held centrally.

As part of the on-going contingency planning the Department is reviewing stocks and supplies of potassium iodate tablets for use in the unlikely event of a nuclear accident at a nuclear power installation either in the UK or abroad.

Advice from the Meterological Office is that there is no "average prevailing wind" from France. However, depending upon the meteorological conditions at any given time, the quantity and source location of the radioactivity on the French coast and the area of the south coast in question, it may take a few hours.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

MI5 Records

Norman Baker: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on his policy on the release of post-1945 MI5 records into the Public Record Office. [28638]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Government's policy on the release of post-1945 MI5 records into the Public Record Office is that such records should be released when they are over 30-years-old unless release would pose a risk to national security. The Security Service is responsible for determining the sensitivity of the records it holds.

Special Branch (Historical Records)

Norman Baker: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the extent of preserved police special branch historical records, and his policy in respect of release of such material into the Public Record Office. [28626]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The records of the Metropolitan police special branch created up to April 2000 are designated public records and are subject to the review and disposal requirements of the Public Records Act 1958.

During the review process records that are of no historical importance nor of continued administrative use are routinely destroyed. Records that have a long-term historical value are selected for preservation and are transferred to the Public Record Office where they are to be found in class MEPO 38. The records in the class cover a wide range of subjects and are intended to reflect the range of duties performed by the branch. They include both policy files and individual case papers. The earliest surviving records of the branch date from 1888.

The MEPO 38 class currently holds records created for the most part up to 1936. Of these, a number are still withheld from public inspection. They are being assessed for continuing sensitivity using the criteria set out in the 1993 White Paper, "Open Government", (Cm 2290), and will be made available to the public when no longer considered sensitive according to those criteria.

Records created after 1936 are also being reviewed and those of historical importance will be selected for permanent preservation.

HM Land Registry

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the Chief Executive of HM Land Registry will reply to the letter of 24 November 2001 from Dr. and Mrs. Pim about case reference 700/01/202. [29374]

Mr. Wills: Correspondence about individual land registration cases is a matter for the Chief Land Registrar. The Land Registry's target for responding to letters connected with a complaint is five working days. In the current financial year to December 2001, it met this target in 92 per cent. of cases. I understand that, owing to an administrative error, Dr. and Mrs. Pim's letter was regrettably mislaid in the Land Registry and a reply was not sent within the target time. I also understand that the Chief Land Registrar wrote to Dr. and Mrs. Pim on 18 January to apologise for the delay in writing to them and to give them the information they required.

Stolen Equipment

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what equipment has been stolen from the Lord Chancellor's Department since 1 May 1997; and what the approximate value of each item was. [26832]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This answer relates to the Department's offices and courts throughout England and Wales. Of the total figure for the year 2000–01 of £151,603.48 (listed in the table), £129,000 resulted from four separate incidents of theft. This comprises the separate figures of £73,000 (12 April 2000), £15,000 (18 May 2000), £16,000 (28 June 2000) and £25,000 (11 November 2000). Of these amounts, the cheques included in the figure of £73,000 have been recovered and the remainder (cash) was borne by one of the Department's PFI contractors. The figure of £15,000 was also borne by a PFI contractor. The figures are as in the table.

Magistrates Courts

Mr. Luff: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the sum imposed as fines by magistrates courts in the latest 12-month period for which figures are available; how much of that total was collected; and if he will make a statement. [28595]

Mr. Wills: Magistrates courts committees are responsible for the collection of a range of debts imposed through the courts, including fines, fees, compensation, confiscation orders, legal aid contributions and some maintenance orders. It is not possible to separate out just the fines from the total.

The total amount imposed by magistrates in the period October 2000 to September 2001 was £358,702,837. Further amounts were imposed by other agencies, including the Crown court, making a total of new impositions which the magistrates courts had responsibility for collecting of £374,440,914.

The total amount of money collected by the courts in the same period was £232,220,021. Most fines etc are paid by instalment, by agreement with the court. Some of the instalments on impositions made in 2000–01 are therefore not yet due for payment. The gap between the amount imposed and the amount collected is due in part to defendants' inability to pay as well as their attempts to avoid payment. Severe sanctions are available to the courts for non-payment, including the seizure of goods and imprisonment. Nevertheless the present situation leaves much room for improvement. The Access to Justice Act 1999 strengthened the powers of the magistrates courts committees to take effective action against defaulters and we have introduced an information sharing arrangement with the Department of Work and Pensions, which enables magistrates courts committees to trace a significantly increased proportion of defaulters.

Private Finance Initiative

Bob Russell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer of 15 January 2002, Official Report, column 172W, what progress has been made with the PFI scheme for a new court house in Colchester. [28677]

Mr. Wills: Work on completing the outline business case for the provision of new and refurbished magistrates courts across Essex is in progress. It is anticipated that the business case will be ready for submission to the Essex magistrates courts committee, its paying authorities, my Department and the Office of Government Commerce's project review group for approval by the end of February.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefit Costs

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his latest estimates are of the administrative costs, in total and per claimant household, of (a) child benefit and (b) working families tax credit. [11672]

Malcolm Wicks: Child benefit is a universal, non-means tested payment made to families regardless of the level of income. The latest estimates for child benefit are that the total administrative cost is[1] £125 million, or an average cost per family of £0.34 per week.

WFTC is an individually assessed, income-related payment made to families with children where at least one partner works for at least 16 hours a week. The amount of the payment is dependent upon a range of factors including the hours worked, the size of the family and the age of the children. It may also take account of expenditure the family incurs in respect of child care. It is administered by the Inland Revenue; and they estimate that the total administrative cost is £133.8 million (£1.92 per family per week). I understand that they will publish further figures shortly.

Notes:

[1] The figures for child benefit are the estimated administrative costs for 1998–99 taken from the Social Security Departmental Report: The Government's Expenditure Plans for 2000–01 to 2001–02.

[2] These figures are estimates for the 12 months to March 2001.

Benefits (Belgium)

Andrew Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what assessment he has made of the speed with which (a) UK nationals who have worked in Belgium but live in UK and (b) Belgians who have worked in UK get benefit claims dealt with by the Belgian authorities; [17375]

(2) how many people living in the UK are in receipt of supplementary benefit pending satisfaction of claims against the Belgian authorities in relation to employment benefits. [17376]

Malcolm Wicks: Information on the time taken to process benefit claims from UK nationals which rely on contribution records from the Belgian authorities could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Information on the speed with which benefit claims from Belgian nationals are dealt with by the Belgian authorities is solely a matter for those authorities.

As at 30 November 2001 there are two people living in Great Britain and in receipt of income-based jobseeker's allowance while we are awaiting details of their contribution record from the Belgian authorities. The Northern Ireland Assembly is responsible for social security matters in Northern Ireland.

Income Support

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will rank each local authority area in England by the percentage fall in the number of households claiming income support between March 1997 and March 2001. [17771]

Malcolm Wicks: The available information has been placed in the Library.

Social Exclusion

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what estimate has been made of the administrative cost to the (a) state, (b) unsuccessful applicants and (c) successful applicants of the competitive grant schemes, provided by his Department and its agencies open in each year since 1997 to organisations in the voluntary and community sector for the purposes of tackling social exclusion; [22401]

(2) if he will place in the Library a copy of the application form for each of the competitive grant schemes administered by his Department and its agencies open in each year since 1997 to organisations in the voluntary and community sector for the purposes of tackling social exclusion; [22408]

(3) if he will publish a list of the grants made under the competitive grant schemes administered by his Department and its agencies open in each year since 1997 to organisations in the voluntary and community sector for the purposes of tackling social exclusion; [22416]

(4) if he will list the competitive grant schemes, administered by the Department and its agencies, open in each year since 1997 to organisations in the voluntary and community sector for the purposes of tackling social exclusion; and, for each scheme in each year (a) the number of applicants, (b) the number of successful applicants, (c) the total of grants awarded, (d) the number of pages in the application form and (e) if the grant can be used to fund the core costs of the applicant organisation; [22429]

(5) how many competitive grant schemes administered by his Department and its agencies were open in each of the last 10 years to organisations in the voluntary and community sector for the purposes of tackling social exclusion. [22435]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 12 December 2001]: I refer the hon. Member to the answers given by my hon. Friend the Member for Wallasey (Angela Eagle) on 19 December 2001, Official Report, column 482W and 8 January 2002, Official Report, columns 783–84W.

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in (a) the constituency of Buckingham and (b) the UK have been prosecuted twice or more for benefit fraud in each year since 1992. [22522]

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in (a) the Epsom and Ewell constituency and (b) the UK have been prosecuted at least twice for benefit fraud in each year since 1992. [23426]

Malcolm Wicks: Information on benefit fraud at constituency level is not available. Nationally, our research suggests that approximately 5 per cent. of prosecutions involve a person with a previous conviction for benefit fraud. We are putting in place mechanisms to identify second and further convictions.

Age Discrimination

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on age discrimination in financial services. [23218]

Mr. McCartney: We have recognised the importance of tackling age discrimination in employment sectors, including the financial services sector. That is why we have targeted this sector among others, as part of our age positive campaign. Through working with Age Champions, we have been challenging ageism in the financial sector by promoting the business benefits of age positive employment practices. We are considering ways of strengthening the campaign over the coming year.

Our new website, www.agepositive.gov.uk, includes initial research we have undertaken to identify ageist employment practices across a range of sectors which include financial services. The research is also available in the Library.

Benefit Application Forms

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many benefit application forms his Department and agencies produce; to which benefits these forms relate; and if he will place copies of each form in the Library. [24213]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: There are 64 benefit application forms produced by the Department for Work and Pensions. These relate to the following benefits:

Attendance Allowance
Back to Work Bonus
Bereavement Benefit
Child Benefit
Child Maintenance Bonus
Disability Living Allowance
Guardian's Allowance
Housing and Council Tax Benefits
Income Support
Industrial Injuries
Jobseeker's Allowance

Maternity Allowance
Minimum Income Guarantee
Retirement Pension
Social Fund
Vaccine Damage Payment
Invalid Care Allowance
Incapacity Benefit.

Copies of all forms have been placed in the Library.

Winter Fuel Payments

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people living in tenements in Scotland have received half their entitlement to the winter fuel payment because of a computer error relating to residents in separate tenement flats at the same street number; and what action is being taken to ensure they are paid their full entitlement as soon as possible and that the problem will not recur. [25871]

Mr. McCartney: To ensure all eligible people in a household receive the correct level of winter fuel payment, the addresses are matched to ascertain how many people live at each address. The Department is aware that there have been problems regarding people living in tenements in Scotland and, to alleviate this, the Department clerically matches the addresses in areas where there are many tenement flats. This should ensure that the correct payment is made, and this system ought to prevent problems reoccurring. We are unable to provide the figure in the form requested but where an underpayment has come to light, corrective action has been taken.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much money is estimated to have been overpaid in winter fuel payments in each year since 1997 (a) to people who have been paid more than they are entitled and (b) to people who are ineligible for the benefit; and how much of this money has been recovered. [27762]

Mr. McCartney: The information requested is not available in the format requested.

The Department makes every effort to ensure that addresses are matched with household composition to avoid overpayments. Where we become aware of either overpayments or underpayments, corrective action is taken to put it right and prevent this reoccurring.

Stakeholder Pension

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the Stakeholder Pension; and how much this will add to the total value of a pension. [25926]

Mr. McCartney: As set out in our 1998 Green Paper "Partnership in Pensions" the Government's long-term pension reforms are designed to ensure that all pensioners have a decent income in retirement, building on the foundation of the basic state pension available to all. This means everyone recognising their responsibilities; with those who are able, saving for their retirement, the Government supporting those who cannot save, and the private sector providing affordable and secure second pensions.

Before April 2001, many of those who could put money aside to provide for themselves in retirement had no straightforward, good value way to enter a pension scheme. Stakeholder pensions, which were introduced from that date, offered such people a good value, flexible product. Annual charges are capped at 1 per cent. of the fund's value, meaning more of what people pay in goes towards their pension. There are no additional charges for stopping and starting payments or transferring between stakeholder schemes. They are widely available but are particularly aimed at moderate to higher earners who do not already have access to an occupational pension or a good personal pension with an employer contribution. Stakeholder pensions are an important part of the framework this Government have now put in place to give everyone access to a good value pension arrangement and a decent income in retirement.

The added value of a stakeholder pension will vary according to the charging structure of the particular scheme, the investment returns achieved and the individual's pattern of payments.

Poor Households

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of persons in poverty in working households without children are working more than 30 hours per week and are aged 25 years or over. [25979]

Malcolm Wicks: Poverty and social exclusion are complex multi-dimensional issues, affecting many aspects of people's lives—including their living standards, health, housing, the quality of the environment and not just low income. The third "Opportunity for all" report (Cm 5260) sets out the Government's strategy for tackling poverty and social exclusion and presents the latest information on the indicators used to measure progress against this strategy. Specific information regarding low income is available in "Households Below Average Income 1994–95 to 1999–2000".

Pension Credit

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether he will allow annuity holders (a) to draw down the assets and (b) to set up phased annuity schemes for the purposes of assessing entitlement to the proposed pension credit. [26019]

Mr. McCartney: Income drawdown plans may be taken out by personal pension fund holders, but most drawdown providers generally only recommend this option for people with significant funds. Personal pension savings may be split in parts and annuitised separately. Income and potential income from private pensions will be relevant for the purposes of assessing entitlement to pension credit.

Share Ownership

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many shareholders there are in each region; and what proportion of the adult population of their areas they represent. [26240]

Malcolm Wicks: The information available for the latest year is in the following table.

Stocks/shares/unit trusts/PEPs/ISAs holders in 2000–01

Government office region	Number of adult stocks/shareholders in the region (Thousand)	Proportion of adult population of the region who are stocks/shareholders (Percentage)	Number of adult stocks/shares/unit trusts/PEPs/ISAs holders in the region (Thousand)	Proportion of adult population of the region who are stocks/shares/unit trusts/PEPs/ISAs holders (Percentage)

Total Great Britain	8,250	19	14,220	32

Notes:

1. The estimates are based on sample counts that have been adjusted for non-response using multi-purpose grossing factors that control for tenure, Council Tax Band and a number of demographic variables. Estimates are subject to sampling error and to variability in non-response.

2. Questions on assets are a sensitive part of the FRS questionnaire and have relatively low level of response, and hence higher levels of imputation, compared to other parts of the survey. Responses are imputed in around 1 in 10 cases. Evidence also suggests some under reporting of capital by respondents.

3. The final two columns of the table refer to adults reporting one of more of the categories: stocks and shares, unit trusts, PEPs and ISAs.

4. The results are for Financial Year 2000–01 and the number of adults figures are rounded to the nearest 10,000.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what representations he has received in respect of the appropriateness of the application form for disability living allowance for haemodialysis patients; and what proposals he has to make amendments to it. [27545]

Maria Eagle: No such representations have been received and no changes are planned to the disability living allowance claim which would affect haemodialysis patients.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions for each of the last three years, how many and what percentage of (a) applicants for disability living allowance whose applications were accepted and (b) appeals against these decisions to reject applications were upheld; and how many of them were haemodialysis patients. [27546]

Maria Eagle: Information is not available in the form requested.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he plans to conduct a review of the operation of the disability living allowance. [29519]

Maria Eagle: As with other social security benefits, the operation of disability living allowance is kept under review. We have recently made significant improvements to the DLA claim form, we are currently piloting revised arrangements for obtaining relevant information from claimants' general practitioners, and in consultation with organisations representing disabled people, are testing an alternative system for extra-costs disability benefits based on activities for managing life.

Statistics and Reports

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the publication dates of statistics and reports due to be released by his Department and its agencies during calendar year 2002. [28392]

Mr. McCartney: Information on the release dates of statistics published by the Department under the national statistics banner is notified in the National Statistics Update issued by the Office for National Statistics and is available in the Library. Release dates four months ahead are given and the information is rolled forward one month at the end of each month.

Correspondence

Gillian Merron: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Chelmsford, West (Mr. Burns), of 5 December 2001, Official Report, column 430W, on numbers of letters received by his Department, if the details of letters received between 20 June and 20 July are available. [29888]

Maria Eagle: In my written answer of 5 December I said that information between 20 June and 20 July was not available in the format requested. That was incorrect. The information requested is as follows.

We received 1,137 letters for ministerial reply between 20 June and 20 July. Of those 814 (72 per cent.) were answered within 20 working days, 244 (21 per cent.) were answered within 21–40 working days and 79 (7 per cent.) were answered in more than 40 working days.

Unemployment (South Tyneside)

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans his Department has to help unemployed people over 50 years of age back into work in south Tyneside. [15022]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: We are committed to helping people of all ages back into work. Our range of back to work programmes, including new deal 50 plus, new deal 25 plus and new deal for disabled people have helped to ensure that the employment rate for the over-50s has increased each year for the last four years. All of these programmes are operating in south Tyneside. In addition, extra support is available in south Tyneside through the local action team for jobs and work-focused interview site.

Benefits Agency

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what were the staffing levels for each of the last five years in the Benefits Agency offices at (a) Elthorne road, London N19, and (b) Seven Sisters road, London N7, the number of callers per day for the equivalent period and the average waiting time. [23637]

Malcolm Wicks: This is a matter for Alexis Cleveland, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Alexis Cleveland to Jeremy Corbyn, dated 9 January 2002:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions has asked me to respond to your recent Parliamentary Question asking, if he will state the staffing levels for each of the last five years in the Benefits Agency offices at (a) Elthorne Road London N19 and (b) Seven Sisters Road London N7, the number of callers per day for the equivalent period and the average waiting time.

The information is not available in the format requested. Such information that is available is in the attached table.

I hope this is helpful.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

GCSE Point Scores

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what was the average annual change in points score at GCSE in (a) specialist, (b) grammar and (c) all secondary schools in each of the past five years. [19239]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 3 December 2002]: The information requested on the change in average GCSE/GNVQ point score for schools in England is shown in the table:

(a) Specialist

	Score in former year	Score in latter year	Change
1995–96 and 1996–97	38.8	39.9	1.1
1996–97 and 1997–98	40.1	41.5	1.4
1997–98 and 1998–99	40.7	42.2	1.5
1998–99 and 1999–2000	41.5	42.5	1.0
1999–2000 and 2000–01	41.8	42.4	0.6

	(a) Specialist	(b) Selective		(c) All schools
	Change	Score	Change	Score	Change
1996–97	1.1	57.0	0.6	35.9	0.5
1997–98	1.4	59.4	2.4	37.0	1.1
1998–99	1.5	60.7	1.3	38.1	1.1
1999–2000	1.0	62.1	1.4	38.9	0.8
2000–01	0.6	62.8	0.7	39.3	0.4

Note:

As the number of specialist schools increases year on year, the column for 'specialist schools' refers to schools which were designated as specialist for both the appropriate academic years, hence two figures are given for each year. For example, throughout the academic years 1995–96 and 1996–97 there were 102 specialists. Throughout 1996–97 and 1997–98 there were 174 specialists. In the table above the 39.9 figure in the first row refers to the average point score of the 102 schools in 1997. The 40.1 figure in the second row refers to the average point score of the 174 specialists in 1997.

Adult and Community Learning

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the spending per head of population is on adult and community learning in (a) Buckinghamshire and (b) the Chesham and Amersham constituency. [27124]

John Healey: Spending per head of population (adults 19 and over) on adult and community learning in Buckinghamshire was £4.74 in 1999–2000[1]. Figures for the Chesham and Amersham constituency are not available, as expenditure is calculated on an LEA basis only.

[1] Source: Audit Commission

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the spending per head of population is on (a) adult and (b) community learning in the Greater London area, broken down by constituency in this financial year. [27265]

John Healey: Set out is information for each London borough and for London overall for 1999–2000. This is the latest year for which final published data are available from LEA returns to the Audit Commission. Information is not available by constituency. The figures are £s per adult (aged 19 and over).

Individual Learning Accounts

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the use of claims based on individual learning account funds to support terrorist activities. [26774]

John Healey: We have no evidence that ILA funds have been used for terrorist activity.

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many ILA learning providers have to date (a) had complaints and (b) had no complaints made against them. [27158]

John Healey: We have had complaints concerning non-compliance with the ILA rules and regulations against 565 ILA learning providers out of a total of approximately 8,500 registered on the England ILA database.

We had serious concerns about 86 providers and are in the process of investigating 82 of these.

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many of those ILA learning providers that have had no complaints made against them have received all payments owed to them for the ILA scheme. [27159]

John Healey: We have as a matter of priority been working to validate outstanding claims to providers. On 21 December, all learning providers that have had no complaints made against them received payment for claims they had submitted up to 21 November.

We intend making a further payment by Friday 25 January 2002 for learning confirmed between 21 November and 23 November.

Officials will be writing to learning providers once arrangements for future payments for learning that was booked on the ILA system up to its closure on 23 November are finalised.

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if consultation on a replacement scheme for individual learning accounts will be by invitation only; and if she will consider submissions from all interested parties. [27161]

John Healey: Although the views of providers, account holders and other key partners are being particularly sought, we welcome and will consider submissions from anyone who feels they have a contribution to make on a successor programme to ILAs.

Stolen Equipment

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what equipment has been stolen from her Department since 1 May 1997; and what the approximate value of each item was. [26821]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The table details the equipment stolen from the Department for Education and Skills since 1 May 1997 along with the approximate value of the stolen equipment.

The total number of items stolen since 1 May 1997 amounts to 265 at a total approximate value of £129,481

Note:

Electronic security tags are fitted to all portable IT equipment held in London. The tags raise an alarm at reception of an unauthorised person attempts to remove the kit. The level of theft outside London is so low that it is not justified to extend tagging to the Darlington, Runcorn and Sheffield sites of the Department.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list those items valued at more than £50 which have been stolen or lost from her Department in each of the last four years. [28001]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The table details items valued at £50 or more which have been stolen from the Department for Education and Skills in each of the last four years.

Nursery Provision (London)

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what records are kept by her Department on the extent of early years nursery provision in each London borough for the last five years; and if she will publish such records. [28082]

Margaret Hodge: The Department collects data on the numbers of three and four-year-old children taking up free early years education places at (1) maintained nursery and primary schools, and (2) maintained early years settings (other than maintained nursery and primary schools), independent schools, and private and voluntary early years settings in England, that are registered with Early Years Development and Childcare Partnerships, in each local education authority area in England. These data are collected each term throughout the year as part of the Department's Nursery Education Grant data collection exercise.

The Department also collects data on the numbers of three and four-year-old children taking up early years education places in the spring term at (1) maintained nursery and primary schools in England, as part of its annual Schools Census data collection exercise, and (2) maintained early years settings (other than maintained nursery and primary schools), independent schools, private and voluntary early years settings in England, that are registered with Early Years Development and Childcare Partnerships, as part of its annual Early Years Census data collection exercise.

Figures for 1997 to 2001 for LEA areas in England for three and four-year-old children in maintained nursery and primary schools were published in Statistical Bulletin 11–2001 "Provision for children under five years of age in England—January 2001" which is available from the Department's website www.dfes.gov.uk/statistics/ or the Library. In addition, figures for three and four year old children taking up free early years education places in maintained nursery and primary schools and maintained early years settings (other than maintained nursery and primary schools), independent schools, private and voluntary early years settings were published in a table alongside the bulletin on the Department's website.

Ministerial Transport

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she last used the railway service in connection with her official duties; what station she left from and what was the destination; and whether it is her intention to make greater use of the railways in future. [28102]

Estelle Morris: I last used the railway service on Thursday 6 December to travel from Paddington to Bristol. I use the network on a regular basis in connection with my official duties and for travel to and from my constituency.

All travel is conducted in accordance with the Ministerial Code and the accompanying guidance document, "Travel by Ministers".

Teachers' Pay

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what is the pay entitlement of a teacher who has achieved the upper pay spine when changing schools. [28189]

Mr. Timms: Crossing the threshold entitles a teacher to be paid on point 1 of the upper pay scale. That entitlement continues to apply when a teacher changes schools. Further progress on the upper pay scale will be on the basis of discretionary performance points awarded by individual governing bodies. The School Teachers' Review Body is considering whether such points should be portable, as we have proposed. Portability would be consistent with expecting all schools to take account of the same general criteria in awarding such points. It would also facilitate movement between schools.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what measures she is taking to ensure consistency between schools in allocating upper pay spine awards. [28190]

Mr. Timms: Progress on the upper pay scale for classroom teachers will be on the basis of discretionary performance points awarded by governing bodies at individual schools. The Department sent guidance on school salary policies and performance points to schools last September. This said that points should reward substantial and sustained performance and contribution to the school that showed greater breadth and depth than the threshold standards. The guidance also made it clear that schools would have to interpret and develop these general criteria in the light of local circumstances and priorities.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what changes she plans to the head teachers' retirement package arrangements; and if she will make a statement. [29264]

Mr. Timms: £10 million of standards fund money was made available in each of 2000–01 and 2001–02 to support an early retirement scheme for head teachers. This was a two-year scheme aimed at raising the standard of leadership in schools. Although the financial support that this scheme provided will not continue beyond the end of this financial year, it will still be open to employers to grant early retirement to head teachers where they believe that doing so would be beneficial.

Rural Transport

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a direct grant allocation to Shropshire county council to support the additional transport costs incurred by a rural county. [28332]

Mr. Timms: In 2002–03 Shropshire's Education SSA will increase by £6.88 million or 6.16 per cent. Shropshire will also benefit from an overall increase in Standards Fund grant of almost £160 million; and an increase of 2.75 per cent. in the direct grant for schools. We believe that this is a good settlement sufficient to cover all the cost pressures on Shropshire next year, including the additional transport costs incurred by a rural county.

However, we are currently working up a new funding system for introduction in 2003–04. As part of that work we are taking account of the costs associated with rural areas such as home to school transport.

School Expulsions

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what measures are in place to ensure that an expelled pupil is able to carry on in education; and what steps are taken if a pupil continues to disrupt. [28344]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department's guidance to local education authorities is that ideally many permanently excluded pupils should rejoin a mainstream or special school within days or weeks of exclusion. Those permanently excluded pupils who are not re-integrated into a new school should be offered opportunities in Pupil Referral Units (PRU), FE colleges and or on work experience. Rapid re-integration is particularly important for excluded primary pupils and I expect that most of them would be re-integrated within one term. Conversely, for pupils approaching the end of compulsory schooling, a return to school may be unrealistic and in those cases alternative provision like a PRU or FE college is more appropriate.

The guidance does not direct that alternative provision must be found immediately for a permanently excluded child. The Discipline Committee must meet to review the decision no later than 15 school days after notification of the exclusion. During this time the guidance states that the head teacher should plan for the child's continued education. This can be by setting and marking work for the child to do at home. Where a parent lodges an appeal, I expect the school and LEA to work together to secure the pupil's on-going education. Following an unsuccessful appeal, reintegration into a school or PRU may take some time.

Reintegration Panels are responsible for co-ordinating services for excluded pupils. They must draw up an individual re-integration plan for each excluded child. This plan should be in place within a month of the governors upholding the exclusion and it is reviewed on a monthly basis. It should include a target date for return to school, once the school to which the child will return has been identified.

Pupils who continue to be disruptive may be excluded from their new school or, as a last resort, from a Pupil Referral Unit. However, we now have a network of Learning Support Units in schools and Pupil Referral Units to support our drive to tackle poor behaviour and continue to raise standards in schools.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils in the Uxbridge constituency have been statemented in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in each of the last five years. [28487]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The available data are shown in the table:

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average percentage of special needs children is in (a) all schools in England and (b) faith schools in England. [28609]

Primary School Heads

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of primary school heads are estimated to earn more than £60,000 per annum. [28572]

Mr. Timms: The School Teachers' Review Body's leadership group pay survey for 2000 estimated that 0.2 per cent. of primary school heads earn more than £60,000 per annum.

Education (Somerset)

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much the Government have spent on education in Somerset in each of the financial years since 1996–97, broken down by areas on which the funding has been spent. [28743]

Mr. Timms: The information requested is contained in the following table:

Notes:

1. Figures reflect Education SSA plus all school related revenue grants.
2. Real terms figures are calculated using GDP deflators published by the Treasury 20 December 2001.
3. 2001–02 figures are provisional.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much her Department spent on advertising in Somerset between 31 December 2000 and 31 December 2001. [28744]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: In the period 31 December 2000 to 31 December 2001, the Department for Education and Skills spent £11,513 on advertising on Somerset local radio. There was no expenditure on advertising in Somerset local press.

People living in Somerset will also have been exposed to national advertising run by the Department for Education and Skills. It is not possible to calculate what percentage of spending on television advertising can be allocated to Somerset because half of the county falls into the HTV West television region and the other half falls into the West Country television region.

Sex Education

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on her policy on sex education in schools. [28767]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The responsibility for determining a school policy on sex and relationship education rests with governing bodies and head teachers. Our Sex and Relationship Education guidance, published in July 2000, clearly states that governing bodies and head teachers should consult parents in developing their sex and relationship education policy to ensure that the views of parents and the community are reflected. All schools must have a policy, which is made available for inspection and to parents.

The Department recommends that sex and relationship education should be supported by a school's wider curriculum for Personal Social and Health Education (PSHE) and Citizenship. In this way, schools can ensure that pupils receive their sex education in the wider context of relationships and are prepared for the responsibilities and experiences of adult life.

Standards Funds

Mr. Stevenson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the standards funds allocated to Stoke-on-Trent local education authority in (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01 and (c) 2001–02. [28771]

Mr. Timms: The table shows allocations for the standards fund for Stoke-on-Trent local education authority in 1999–2000, 2000–01 and 2001–02. The figures include both Government and local authority contributions.

[1] Including Gifted and Talented Children, Learning Support Units and Learning Mentors

Specialist Colleges

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many schools have applied for specialist college status in the last six months. [28925]

Mr. Timms: The total number of schools that have applied for specialist college status in the last six months is 261.

HIV

Gillian Merron: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what requirements there are for HIV prevention work to take place in (a) schools, (b) colleges and (c) universities. [28931]

Mr. Timms: Sex education, which must include teaching about HIV, AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases, is compulsory in all maintained secondary schools. It is discretionary in primary schools. There are no requirements for HIV prevention work to take place in further or higher educational establishments.

Gillian Merron: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills who is responsible for funding HIV prevention work in (a) schools, (b) colleges and (c) universities. [28932]

Mr. Timms: The Government distribute funding to local authorities through formula assessed Standard Spending Assessments (SSAs). Local education authorities then distribute funding to the schools they maintain, enabling them to fulfil their statutory obligations. Local NHS funding could be used to fund or contribute to HIV prevention within schools, colleges and universities, for example in the production of information resources. Alternatively, schools, colleges and universities may choose to buy in or work with non-statutory local organisations.

Leeds Schools

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many whole-time equivalent teachers were employed in Leeds schools in (a) 1997 and (b) 2001. [28976]

Mr. Timms: Full-time equivalent regular teachers in the maintained schools sector in Leeds were as follows:

	Number
January 1997	5,900
January 2001	6,040

Teacher numbers have been rounded to the nearest 10.

Environmental Appraisals

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many environmental appraisals have been published by her Department since 1 January 2001; and if she will list the last four. [29048]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 21 January 2002]: None.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when the last occasion was on which she requested an environmental appraisal before making a policy decision. [29049]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 21 January 2002]: The Department for Education and Skills has procedures in place to ensure that environmental appraisals take place when necessary. Examples of policy decisions which included appraisal of environmental impacts are: guidance to schools in England on energy and water management which Ministers aim to issue in spring 2002; obtaining accreditation in 2001 for environmental management of one of our headquarters sites to an international standard; and, in the school curriculum, the Growing Schools programme. This last initiative, launched in 2001, encourages teachers to use farming and growing to help pupils explore different aspects of sustainable development such as the effects of climate change, the life cycle of plants and animals, the values and traditions of rural communities, and the place of agriculture in today's economy.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what procedures her Department has to ensure environmental appraisals are undertaken prior to (a) administrative and (b) policy decisions being made. [29050]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 21 January 2002]: Administrative procedures are monitored by an inter-site facilities management working group. This is supported by our procurement policy, which includes guidance on including environmental considerations in whole-life purchasing decisions. On policy, our business planning process reminds policy officials to consider their policy impact on the environment in annual planning, which senior officials review at key points in the year.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans her Department has to appraise the environmental implications of its Spending Review submission to the Treasury. [29051]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 21 January 2002]: As part of this Department's Spending Review submission to the Treasury we will, in common with other Departments, report on the sustainable development impact of our bids, including any environmental impact.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many officials from her Department have attended the Environmental Appraisal and Integration into Policy training course run by the Civil Service College. [29052]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 21 January 2002]: No officials from my Department attended the first of these courses. The course will run three times a year, and has been brought to the attention of my officials. Officials learn about environmental issues through on the job training and written guidance, as well as formal courses by the Civil Service and other training providers.

Standard Spending Assessment

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much (a) Staffordshire and (b) Hertfordshire spent on education as a percentage of SSA in each of the past five years. [29076]

Mr. Timms: The information requested is given in the following table:

Education as a percentage of SSA

Year	£
Staffordshire
1996–97	102.0
1997–98	102.3
1998–99	101.3
1999–2000	101.1
2000–01	100.5
Hertfordshire
1996–97	102.7
1997–98	101.8
1998–199	100.8
1999–2000	99.7
2001–01	100.1

Note:

1. Information is taken from data published in the 2001 and previous years' Departmental Annual Reports. Budget figures up to 1999–2000 were taken from local authorities' latest Revenue Account returns submitted to the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions, and for 2000–01, from LEAs s52 Budget statements.
2. From 1997–98 Staffordshire does not include Stoke-on-Trent

Foreign Language Programmes

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the use of foreign language television and radio in (a) secondary school education and (b) post-secondary school education. [29095]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Foreign language broadcasts which have been carefully scripted with content, structure and language level appropriate to the target learners can be a valuable resource for teaching school pupils and older students. They can provide access to a range of authentic native speakers, up to date and topical materials, and opportunities for introducing cultural elements to language learning.

Broadcasts aimed at the native-speaker audience which are accessed from abroad, normally require selection and mediation by a teacher to ensure suitable content, accessible language and effective use for learning purposes.

Student Debts

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent assessment she has made of the extent to which the possibility of having incurred a debt upon graduation affects the numbers of people who attend university; and what plans she has to change the relative contributions of (a) students and (b) Government to higher education funding. [29108]

Margaret Hodge: Some research, such as that published by the Department in 2001 on "Issues Affecting Decisions on Participation by Lower Socio-Economic Groups" (SEGs), indicates that finance and concern about debt are factors which can deter people from going on to higher education. However, assessing the deterrent effect is difficult in the light of welcome increases in entry numbers. Final UCAS figures for autumn 2001 show that acceptances of English domiciled full-time higher education students are up by 5.9 per cent. compared to the same time last year, building on the rising trend of previous years. But as yet there is no evidence that the proportion of lower SEGs entering HE has increased significantly. Our review of student finance is considering both the student debt issue, particularly in relation to the lower socio-economic groups, and the relative contributions of students, parents and the Government to student support. We expect to make an announcement on the outcome later this year.

Ofsted

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the findings of the recent Ofsted inspection into Gloucestershire local education authority. [29260]

Mr. Timms: My officials have discussed the report with the council's lead members and officers. I am assured that the authority recognises the weaknesses identified by Ofsted, and will be addressing the recommendations in the year ahead. I await the authority's post-Ofsted action plan, which will set out the action proposed.

Teacher Shortages

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent assessment she has made of teacher shortages in Gloucestershire; what steps she is taking to improve the situation; and if she will make a statement. [29261]

Mr. Timms: Information on the number of teacher vacancies in local education authorities is collected once a year in January as part of the annual census of teachers and vacancies. In January 2001, the vacancy rate for Gloucestershire was 0.3 per cent. compared with 1.4 per cent. nationally. This amounts to a total of 14 vacancies across the maintained sector. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State set out our longer term proposals for teachers and teaching in a pamphlet, "Professionalism and Trust", published in November 2001.

Grammar and Spelling Tests

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what her policy is on grammar and spelling tests in (a) primary and (b) secondary education. [29302]

Mr. Timms: In order to make sense of what they read children need a clear awareness of grammar for both literal and inferential understanding, both of which are assessed in the reading tests at each key stage. At Key Stage 1 and 2 spelling is assessed by a separate test. At Key Stage 1 the outcome of the test is reported separately, while at Key Stage 2 it contributes to an overall level for writing. At Key Stage 3 spelling is an integral part of the judgment leading to an overall level for writing. Grammar is assessed within the context of pupils' writing at all key stages. Criteria for grammar that allow teachers and markers to make judgments about pupils' performance are integral to the mark schemes.

Parliamentary Questions

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many answers to parliamentary questions have not been answered by her Department under exemption 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information in each year since 1994. [29414]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information available is shown in the table.

Year	Number
1996–97	3
1997–98	1
1998–99	4
1999–2000	2

Prior to 1996 the information was not collected.

Community Learning

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what is the spending per head of population on adult and community learning in (a) Worcestershire and (b) the West Midlands; what is the average spending per head in (i) the shire counties and (ii) England; and if she will make a statement. [26404]

Mr. Healey: The following is the average spend on adult education per adult (aged 19 and over):

Worcestershire: £0.36

West Midlands*: £2.78

County Councils: £3.80

England: £4.42

*For the West Midlands Region. Figures calculated on the basis of the population 18-65. (Source: Audit Commission figures for 1999–2000.)

These figures reflect decisions taken by individual local authorities on the nature and scale of adult and community learning (ACL) in their area. Since 1999–2000 all areas including Worcestershire have benefited from significant increases in funding. In 2002–03 we will be providing a record £167 million for ACL in England, a 9 per cent. increase in recurrent funding for adult education on 2001–02. Since April 2001 responsibility for adult and community learning has rested with the Learning and Skills Council. One of the objectives behind this change in responsibilities is over time to reduce inequalities in opportunities between areas.

Schools Spending

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what has been the total spending on schools in each London borough in each of the last 10 years.

[28177]

Mr. Timms: The information requested is contained in the table. Expenditure in running these authorities was affected by schools becoming grant-maintained during the early part of this period, and by the return of grant-maintained schools to LEA-maintained status in 1999–2000.

[1] Total funding on schools is given by Net Institutional Expenditure which covers all school-based recurrent spending, including teaching and non-teaching staff salaries, school premises costs, equipment and supplies, and unspent balances held by schools at the year end. It excludes spending on special schools, central administration and support services such as transport and school meals as well as capital expenditure.

NIE includes school balances for most years. However, balance information was not available for some previous years, and in some cases for special schools. Therefore, NIE figures across the series may not be strictly comparable

Expenditure data for 1990–01 to 1998–99 inclusive are taken from RO1 returns; data for 1999–2000 taken from local authorities' S52 outturn statements.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prosecution (Official Secrets)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions have been begun in each year since 1972 under Official Secrets legislation; and what the outcome was in each case.

[28631]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The available information, from the Home Office Court Proceedings Database, relating to England and Wales for the years 1979 to 2000 is shown in the table. This covers proceedings under the Official Secrets Act 1911 and 1989 and tabulates the outcomes of cases completed in the years shown by category.

It is no longer possible, from the data held centrally, to identify court proceedings for such legislation prior to 1979, nor is it possible to identify summary offences under the Official Secrets Act 1920.

[1] Persons shown as found guilty may have been proceeded against in earlier years. In some cases a Voluntary Bill of Indictment was issued, so no magistrates' court proceedings will have taken place.

Government Technical Assistance Centre

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the role of the Government Technical Assistance Centre; and what (a) its budget and (b) establishment are in the current financial year. [28640]

Mr. Blunkett: The role of the Government Technical Assistance Centre, now known as the National Technical Assistance Centre (NTAC), is to provide assistance to the investigations of United Kingdom intelligence and law enforcement agencies.

It will do so by providing techniques for lawful interception of modern multimedia communications and by processing those lawfully intercepted communications in order to provide intelligible material to the intercepting agencies. NTAC also provides techniques to derive intelligible evidence from lawfully seized computer data.

NTAC was established in response to the 1999 Cabinet Office Performance and Innovation Unit report "Encryption and Law Enforcement". It is a Unit within the Home Office and operates from the headquarters of the Security Services.

NTAC is not an investigative facility. Its function is to process lawfully acquired data on behalf of its customers so that such data may be made intelligible and then acted upon by investigators within the relevant customer agency.

Since the summer of 2001 NTAC has been operational in its role in respect of lawfully seized computer data. It plans to commence operational work in respect of lawfully intercepted communications in summer 2002.

Budget 2001–02:

The NTAC budget for 2001–02 is £16 million. Of this, £1 million is Running Cost provision and £15 million is capital provision from an overall three-year Capital Modernisation Fund (CMF) allocation of £25 million. The purpose of the CMF moneys is to establish the technical facilities necessary for NTAC to undertake its operational role.

Establishment 2001–02:

The current (January 2002) operational establishment of NTAC is 16 and will rise to 18 by the end of the current financial year. This includes senior management, operational and support staff. The establishment will rise further as new operational capabilities come on stream.

NTAC also runs a technical programme which is developing its technical facilities. This currently comprises 14 staff and will disband when NTAC is fully operational.

Surveillance

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what controls exist to regulate the monitoring of the location of individuals through signals sent by mobile phones. [28327]

Mr. Denham: Communications data, including location data, may be supplied voluntarily for specified purposes (e.g. investigation of crime) under the Data Protection Act 1998 and the Telecommunications Act 1984. It may additionally be supplied in obedience to Court Orders.

A new regulatory regime will be provided by Chapter II of Part I of the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000. This will be brought into force in due course.

Under Chapter II, an authorising officer must consider that the communications data are necessary for one of the purposes specified by the Act and that the conduct involved in obtaining them is proportionate to what it seeks to achieve.

Access to communications data will be subject to oversight by the Interception Commissioner.

Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions have been initiated under the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000; what the outcome was in each case; and if he will make a statement. [28634]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: None.

Stolen Equipment

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what equipment has been stolen from his Department since 1 May 1997; and what the approximate value of each item was. [26838]

Asylum Seekers

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum-seekers are receiving (a) accommodation and subsistence support and (b) subsistence support only from the National Asylum Support Service. [28779]

Angela Eagle: As at the end of September 2001 the number of asylum seekers (including dependants) supported in National Asylum Support Service (NASS) accommodation was 32,890[1,2]. A further 19,900[1,2] asylum seekers (including dependants) were receiving voucher only support from NASS.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to produce guidelines for the protection of women seeking asylum based on the Immigration Appellate Authority's adopted comprehensive gender guidelines. [28073]

Angela Eagle: We have not identified a need to issue separate guidance on dealing with women asylum seekers. However, in 2000 we reviewed our instructions to asylum caseworkers and incorporated some of the suggestions and principles contained in the guidelines produced by the Refugee Women's Legal Group.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people claimed asylum from (a) Zimbabwe, (b) Afghanistan, (c) Macedonia, (d) Yugoslavia and (e) Pakistan in each month since January 2000; and how many have (a) been accepted, (b) had their applications rejected, (c) returned to their country of origin and (d) are yet to have their application resolved; [28237]

(2) how many people claimed asylum in the United Kingdom each month since January 2000; and how many have (a) been accepted, (b) had their applications rejected, (c) returned to their country of origin and (d) yet to have their application resolved. [28238]

Angela Eagle: The number of applications lodged in the United Kingdom between January 2000 and September 2001, both in total and by nationals of the requested countries, is shown in Table 1. Information on the decision outcomes and removals relating to these applications is not readily available.

The number of asylum and exceptional leave to remain (ELR) grants made to nationals of the requested countries, and in total, and the number of applications refused are shown in Table 2. However, these initial decisions do not all relate to applications made in the same period. A proportion of applications which received an initial refusal result in an appeal being lodged.

Between January 2000 and September 2001, 15,810 principal asylum applicants (to the nearest five) were removed from the United Kingdom, including persons departing 'voluntarily' after enforcement action had been initiated against them and persons leaving under assisted voluntary returns programmes. This figure excludes 570 dependants of asylum seekers who departed during the period April to September 2001. Comparable information on the numbers of Zimbabwean, Afghan, Macedonian, Yugoslavian and Pakistani asylum seekers removed over the same period is not available.

The number of applicants who have applied for asylum since 1 January 2000 and are currently awaiting an initial decision on their asylum application, and the number awaiting the outcome of appeal determinations, is not available, and would be available only at disproportionate cost by examination of individual case files.

[1] Figures rounded to the nearest 10.

[2] Cases which have had their support ceased are excluded from these figures.

Information on asylum applications, initial decisions and removals are published quarterly. The next publication will be available from 28 February 2002 on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people claimed asylum in the United Kingdom each month since January 2000 (a) having apparently arrived via another EU country, (b) having apparently arrived via a safe country outside the EU and (c) having apparently arrived direct from their country of origin; and how many have (i) been accepted, (ii) had their applications rejected, (iii) returned to their country of origin and (iv) yet to have their application resolved. [28239]

Angela Eagle: I regret that reliable information on the entry routes of asylum seekers from their country of origin to the United Kingdom is not available. In 2000 more than two thirds of applications (68 per cent.) were made in-country (that is by people who had already entered the United Kingdom).

Information on asylum applications, initial decisions and removals are published quarterly. The next publication will be available from 28 February 2002 on the Home Office

Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Civilian Casework Officers

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the use of civilian casework officers in the police force to help reduce the paperwork of police officers; and what plans there are to increase their numbers. [13501]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 12 November 2001]: While recruitment is a matter for individual chief officers, we are committed to encouraging broader use of support staff to handle the paperwork involved in case preparation. The recently published "Diary of a Police Officer" found that police officers were spending almost as much time in the police station as they were on the street. A large part of this problem results from paperwork and changes are needed to enable officers to focus on delivering policing. The requirement for additional powers to enable support staff to deal with more of this work is being considered as part of the police reform programme.

In the White Paper "Policing a New Century", published on 5 December 2001, my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary announced that he was setting up a task force, chaired by Sir David O'Dowd, to consider how to take forward the recommendations in "Diary of a Police Officer", and other relevant reports, in order to reduce unnecessary administrative burdens on the police.

Essex Constabulary

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers from the Essex constabulary are seconded to metropolitan London. [28422]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 18 January 2002]: I understand from the chief constable of Essex police that there are no officers from Essex police on secondment to the Metropolitan police.

Police Salaries

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the starting salary is for police officers in (a) London and (b) the rest of the UK; after how long a new police officer will receive a pay rise; and if he will make a statement on police pay with special reference to rises they have had since 1997, and pay rises they will receive. [27672]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 18 January 2002]: A police officer will earn £17,733 on recruitment, rising to £19,842 upon completion of initial training, which is generally after 32 weeks. Police officers in London, who joined after 1 September 1994 and who are not in receipt of housing allowance, receive an additional London allowance of £4,338 plus London weighting of £1,773.

Police pay is increased annually by reference to the median percentage of the manpower index of non-manual private sector workers. In 1997 the increase was 3.5 per cent, in 1998, 4 per cent, in 1999, 3.6 per cent, in 2000, 3 per cent. and in 2001, 3.5 per cent.

Police officers progress up their pay scales by annual increments until they reach the top of their scale.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the public service agreement target for the average staff cost per investigation where an irregularity is corrected was achieved by March 2001. [21289]

Angela Eagle: There has been no such public service agreement target for the Home Office.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress towards the public service agreement target for departmental efficiency. [16914]

Angela Eagle: The Home Office has a Public Service Agreement (PSA) commitment to deliver 3 per cent. per annum running costs gains in each of the years, 1999–2002.

This target has been successfully delivered in both 1999–2000 and 2000–01, and work is under way to achieve the current year target.

Community Service

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had concerning the introduction of compulsory community service for young people. [15014]

Angela Eagle: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has had no such discussions recently. The Home Office is currently considering how young people, particularly those not in further education or employment, might participate more in community based activities. This may include participation in the development of millennium volunteers, the participative content of the citizenship and democracy programme in schools, the development of such programmes in further education and the opportunities for volunteering and community support offered by the Experience Corps.

Crime (Coventry)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the proportion of violent crime and burglary associated with drug addiction; and what plans he has to tackle this problem (a) in Coventry and (b) in the UK. [28884]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth [holding answer 21 January 2002]: While there is strong evidence to show a relationship between drug misuse and acquisitive crime, the current research is insufficiently advanced to reveal a precise link with individual types of crime. Work is on-going in this area through, for example, the new English and Welsh Arrestee Drug Abuse Monitoring programme of interviewing and testing arrestees in eight locations.

We have in place a number of initiatives aimed at diverting drug misusers away from crime and into treatment. These include interventions such as arrest referral, drug treatment and testing orders, and the piloting of drug testing at various points in the criminal justice system under the provisions of the Criminal Justice and Court Services Act 2000. In the current financial year we also launched the Communities Against Drugs

Programme (CAD) with £220 million of central Government funding aimed at tackling drug markets and other drug-related crime at local level.

Security Service

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will give individuals who obtain access to their Security Service files the right to challenge perceived inaccuracies in those files; [28032]

(2) whether an individual requesting access to his Security Service file will (a) be granted access to all the contents of his or her file other than any items which would involve harm to national security or (b) be denied access to his or her entire file if some, but not all, of its contents would involve harm to national security if disclosed; [28034]

(3) what estimate he has made of the average time which will be taken to furnish an individual who has requested access to their Security Service file with the contents of that file; [28037]

(4) whether it will be considered to be in the national interest for the Security Service to be obliged to disclose discontinued files on Government Ministers to those individuals while they remain in their posts; [28029]

(5) whether discontinued Security Service files on the (a) Deputy Prime Minister, (b) Foreign Secretary and (c) right hon. Member for Hartlepool (Mr. Mandelson) will be released if requested by those individuals; [28028]

(6) what advice he has been given about the implications of the Human Rights Act 1998 on access by individuals to files on them compiled by the Security Service; [28033]

(7) if it is his intention to impose charges on individuals who request access to their Security Service files; [28036]

(8) what overall assessment he has made of the effect on the security of the Security Service of enabling individuals to have access to their Security Service files; [28038]

(9) what personnel will be allocated by the Security Service for the processing of applications by individuals to see their Security Service files; [28035]

(10) if he will make a statement on access by individuals to files about their activities compiled by the Security Service, with special reference to his placing a certificate relating to this in the Library; and what criteria will be applied in determining whether the release of a Security Service file on an individual to that individual will harm national security. [28027]

Mr. Blunkett: The Security Service complies with the Data Protection Act 1998.

Section 7 of the Act creates a general entitlement for an individual to ask and be told whether personal data on them is being processed and if it is, be told certain information about that data. However, the Act also provides at section 28 an exemption on grounds of safeguarding national security that applies, among other provisions, to section 7.

As I stated in the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Hendon (Mr. Dismore) on 19 December 2001, Official Report, column 492W, I have signed, at the request of the Security Service, a new certificate describing in general terms the personal data that the Security Service may process that requires exemption under the Act under section 28. A copy of that certificate, with the public reasons for my signing it, was placed in the Library. I have placed a condition on the Security Service to report to me on their use of the certificate.

Anyone can make a subject access application to the Security Service, including Government Ministers. The Security Service will seek to respond as quickly as reasonably possible.

Without anticipating the outcome of any such application, one of the Security Service's statutory functions is protecting national security. In perhaps the great majority of cases the service will need to rely on the section 28 exemption to avoid damage to national security. That will include use of the long established "neither confirm nor deny" approach—an approach acknowledged by the national security panel of the Information Tribunal. In response to a subject access application, the service will, consistent with section 28, consider whether the neither confirm nor deny approach needs to be followed and, if not, to what extent the withholding of all or some information is still necessary to safeguard national security.

The Director General of the Security Service has informed me that he is keeping under review the resources required. In line with the Act, the service charges a £10 subject access application-handling fee.

The Data Protection Act 1998 is compatible with the Human Rights Act 1998.

Police Officers

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers have left the (a) Metropolitan police, (b) West Midlands and (c) Greater Manchester police, in each month in each of the last three years for which figures are available; how many and what proportion (i) resigned, (ii) retired, (iii) transferred to another force and (iv) were dismissed; and if he will make a statement. [27842]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 16 January 2002]: The information requested was not collected centrally on a monthly basis. Information on the categories of wastage requested is collected once a year by Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary and is set out in the tables.

(a) Metropolitan Police

	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01

Prison Sentences

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prison sentences of five years and more were handed down in (a) 1998, (b) 1999, (c) 2000 and (d) 2001. [27894]

Beverley Hughes: The information held centrally on the Home Office Court Proceedings Database, relating to England and Wales, shows that 3,823 persons were sentenced to immediate custody for five years or over in 1998, 4,009 in 1999 and 4,033 in 2000.

Statistics for 2001 are not yet available.

Rape

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the attrition rates for reported rape offences in the last 15 years are compiled on the same basis in England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland in terms of the proportion of cases (a) prosecuted and (b) resulting in a conviction for rape. [27861]

Mr. Keith Bradley: I understand that neither the Scottish Executive nor the Northern Ireland Office produce attrition rates for rape offences. My officials have contacted officials in the Scottish Executive and in the Northern Ireland Office and our understanding is that were they to produce attrition rates, they would be compiled on much the same basis as those produced for England and Wales.

The number of offences recorded and detected by the police together with the number of offenders convicted or cautioned (although in Scotland a caution is a sanction following a charge being proved in court) would be directly comparable, to the extent that each country uses its own principal offence rule for statistical purposes where offenders are convicted of more than one type of offence at the same time.

Theft and Fraud

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his estimate is of the cost of theft and fraud to (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies in each of the last four years. [27985]

Angela Eagle: The estimated costs of losses to the Home Office, its agencies and non-departmental public (NDPB) bodies through theft and fraud are set out in the table.

Fraud and thefts

£000

	Home Office	Agencies	NDPB's	Total
Accounting periods
1997–98	—	—	—	[1]113
1998–99	3.8	114.4	70.1	188.3
1999–2000	204.3	165.4	0.0	369.7
2000–01	79.8	84.4	0.0	164.2

[1] Analysis between Home Office, executive agencies and non-departmental bodies cannot be provided.

Note:

Cumulative total for 1997–2001 is £835.2 million.

Refurbishment

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his estimate is of the cost of buildings refurbishment carried out by his Department in each of the last four years. [27967]

Angela Eagle: The Department does not maintain central records of the cost of every building refurbishment project carried out by the Department including its Executive Agencies and to provide the information requested would be at disproportionate cost. However, in central London and Croydon, the approximate position over the last three years is as follows:

	£ million
1999–2000	6.7
2000–2001	35.2
2001–01	[1]11.5

[1] Up to end of November 2001.

I would also refer to the response given to my hon. Friend the Member for Stoke-on-Trent, North (Ms Walley) on 23 October 2001, Official Report, column 218W.

Immigration

Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications from (a) long stay and (b) indefinite leave to remain in the United Kingdom there were from (i) wives of UK men and (ii) husbands of UK women as at 31 December 2001. [28025]

Angela Eagle: I regret that information on individual types of cases undecided cannot be determined.

Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average length of time was taken to process the application of a wife of a UK citizen who has been married for over 12 months and living in the UK, over the most recent 12 months for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [28026]

Angela Eagle: We do not routinely publish average processing times for individual types of application. We aim to decide all straightforward applications within three weeks, but at present it is taking up to eight weeks due to the exceptionally high number of applications received in 2001, especially in recent months, and process changes which are being introduced to improve our longer term performance. We are working to reduce this to three weeks as soon as possible.

Antisocial Behaviour Orders

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what proportion of breached antisocial behaviour orders resulted in a custodial sentence in Staffordshire in 2001; [26926]

(2) how many antisocial behaviour orders were breached in Staffordshire in 2001. [26927]

Mr. Denham: Information on court proceedings for 2001 will not be available until the autumn.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Metropolitan police recruits were undertaking the 18 weeks training and 10 weeks street duty course during each of the previous 24 months. [26942]

Mr. Denham: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis has provided the following figures for Metropolitan police service recruits undertaking the 18-week training course at Hendon during each of the previous 24 months. The figures include a small number of experienced officers rejoining the service who undertake a two-week refresher course.

Street duty courses are run locally on each of the 32 boroughs. The numbers undertaking this course are not recorded centrally and this information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Football

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he takes to monitor football players and club officials travelling overseas for matches; and if he will make a statement. [27169]

Mr. Denham: This is a matter for the football authorities and their specialist security advisers. The Government are kept informed and liaise with them regularly.

Road Accidents (Breath Tests)

Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what guidance he issues to police officers on breathalysing drivers immediately following a road accident in which there is fatality or serious injury; and if it is normal practice to breathalyse drivers in these circumstances; [26720]

(2) if he will ensure that it becomes normal practice for police officers to breathalyse drivers immediately following a road accident in which there was a fatality or serious injury. [26719]

Mr. Denham: It is the policy of the Association of Chief Police Officers that all drivers of vehicles involved in a collision where police attend should be breath-tested. This has been the position since 1996. I am satisfied that the policy is applied appropriately by all police forces.

Police Numbers (Rural Areas)

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to increase the number of police officers serving in rural areas. [26963]

Mr. Denham: The allocation of resources to rural areas is a matter for individual chief constables. This Government responded positively to the outcome of independent research into the policing- of sparsely populated areas by the creation of the Rural Policing Fund to direct extra resources to rural forces.

In 2000–01 £15 million was allocated to 31 forces with more sparsely populated areas. In 2001–02 this was increased to a full-year allocation of £30 million. We are making available a further £30 million in 2002–03 to the same forces. Essex police benefit from the Rural Policing Fund and were allocated £503,710 in 2001–02. They will receive the same in 2002–03. It is for chief constables to determine how this money should be used to improve the policing of rural areas.

In addition the Crime Fighting Fund (CFF) is enabling all forces to take on a total of 9,000 extra recruits, over and above their previous recruitment plans for the three years to March 2003. Essex police has been allocated 197 CFF recruits over the three years.

Police Houses

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what right to buy would be enjoyed by a serving Metropolitan police officer with a secure tenancy of a police house since July 2000, with non-secure tenancies from 1995 to 2000 and with a wife who was previously a long-term local authority secure tenant. [26952]

Mr. Denham: Those Metropolitan police service tenants who became secure tenants as a result of the changes to the Housing Act 1985 made in the Greater London Authority Act 1999, would not normally be eligible for a right to buy until July 2002.

From the details provided, it is not possible to establish precisely the impact of a spouse who was previously a long-term local authority secure tenant.

Police Numbers (Thames Valley)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers were serving in the Thames Valley police force on 1 January (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999, (d) 2000, (e) 2001 and (f) 2002. [27151]

Mr. Denham: Figures are not collected for police strength at 1 January. Figures for police strength at 31 December in the years 1999 to 2001 have been provided by the Chief Constable of Thames Valley police. The force is unable to provide information for the position on 31 December in the years 1996 to 1998. For these years the table shows strength figures at 30 September provided in statistical returns to the Home Office.

Year and month	Number of officers
30 September 1996	3,682
30 September 1997	3,705
30 September 1998	3,790
31 December 1999	3,732
31 December 2000	3,750
31 December 2001	3,763

Departmental Sickness Absence

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will commission and publish an independent report on the reasons for the level of sickness absence in his Department. [26969]

Angela Eagle: The Cabinet Office already commissions and publishes an independent annual report "Analysis of Sickness Absence in the Civil Service". This report includes details of the causes of absenteeism. The report for the year 2000 will be published shortly.

The Home Office and its agencies have introduced new guidelines, policies and procedures with a view to meeting its target to reducing sickness absence, published in its Service Delivery Agreements for April 2001 to March 2004.

Newspaper Advertising

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the expenditure of his (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies on newspaper advertising by title in each year since 1997. [26984]

Mr. Blunkett: Each campaign may use national and regional media. The target audience and information to be conveyed influences the choice of media used. For national campaigns a mix of broadsheets and tabloids is frequently used. For regional advertising, space has been taken in many prominent regional newspapers as well as local papers.

A breakdown of expenditure on newspaper advertising by title could be supplied only at disproportionate costs. Figures for Home Office expenditure on advertising were given in response to a question from the hon. Member for Perth (Annabelle Ewing) on 19 December 2001, Official Report, column 478W.

Police Paperwork

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to reduce paperwork for police officers. [28476]

Mr. Denham: On 1 November 2001, my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary published PA Consulting's study "Diary of a Police Officer" which had considered what more could be done to free police officers from the unnecessary paperwork and other obstacles which prevent them from spending more time in public.

In the White Paper "Policing a new century" (CM 5326), published on 5 December 2001, my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary announced that he was setting up a taskforce, chaired by Sir David O'Dowd, to consider how to take forward the recommendations in this, and other, relevant reports, in order to reduce unnecessary administrative burdens on the police.

Drug Offences (Uxbridge)

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many drug-related offences were committed in the Uxbridge constituency in each of the last five years. [28535]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Recorded crime figures include statistics on drugs offences, such as possession, but do not record whether other offences are related to offenders' drug habits. Furthermore, the information that is collected on the number of drug offences is only available for the Metropolitan police force area as a whole and would therefore not be a useful guide to the number of drug offences in Uxbridge.

The NEW-ADAM research programme of interviewing and drug testing those arrested by the police sheds some light on the links between drugs and crime, although again the conclusions do not relate specifically to Uxbridge. Research so far, based on eight locations in 1999–2000, indicates that more than three-fifths (by value) of acquisitive crime is committed by users of both heroin and cocaine/crack.

Drug Trafficking

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what recent discussions his Department has had with other EU Governments about the list of aggravating circumstances relating to drug trafficking; [28377]

(2) what recent discussions his Department has had with EU Governments regarding the minimum and maximum sentence tariffs for drug trafficking offences. [28376]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: On 23 May 2001 the European Commission published a draft European Council Framework Decision laying down minimum provisions on the constituent elements of criminal acts and penalties in the field of illicit drug trafficking. It sets out proposals for common minimum, maximum sentence tariffs as well as common aggravating circumstances for drug trafficking offences. The proposal is currently being discussed at official level in the European Union Council working groups responsible for drugs and criminal law. Home Office officials are represented on these working groups.

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions his Department has had with Turkey regarding drug control measures. [28378]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The Government have developed close co-operation with Turkey at an operational level because it is a key country on the supply route of heroin to the United Kingdom. In addition between 1994 and 1999 we provided over £1 million for anti-drugs assistance, mainly in the form of training, and we expect to provide up to £300,000 for training and equipment in 2001–02.

Police Numbers (Portsmouth)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers there are in Portsmouth, South; how many are from ethnic minorities; and if he will make a statement. [24943]

Mr. Denham: The deployment of officers within the Hampshire Constabulary is an operational a matter for the chief constable.

I am told by the chief constable that the Portsmouth division had 399 police officers on 31 December 2001, of whom eight (2 per cent.) were from minority ethnic communities.

It is not possible to provide figures for the Portsmouth, South constituency as it is an integral part of the Portsmouth division and officers will be deployed around the division in response to need.

Graffiti

Richard Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) reported incidents of, (b) arrests for and (c) charges brought for graffiti there were in the Metropolitan police area in (i) 1995–96 and (ii) 2000–01. [27278]

Mr. Denham: It is not possible to distinguish offences of graffiti from other types of criminal damage in the Home Office figures for recorded crime, arrests or court proceedings as the details of individual offences are not collected centrally.

Football Matches

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost of policing football matches (a) in the Metropolitan police area and (b) other police areas has been in each of the last five years; and what proportion of these costs was paid for by the football industry. [27592]

Mr. Denham: The information is not centrally held and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Prisoners (Drug Deaths)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prison inmates died while in custody as a result of illegal drug misuse during 2001. [28077]

Beverley Hughes: No prisoners died as a result of illegal drug misuse in prisons in England and Wales during 2001.

Heavy Goods Vehicles

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many HGV drivers were prosecuted in each of the last five years for driving a goods vehicle with maximum loaded weight of over 7.5 tonnes in the offside lane of a motorway with three or more lanes in England and Wales. [17408]

Mr. Denham: The offence of driving a heavy goods vehicle having a maximum laden weight exceeding 7.5 tonnes within the offside lane of a motorway with three or more lanes is contrary to Regulation 12 of the Motorways Traffic (England and Wales) Regulations 1982.

The Home Office Court Proceedings Database does not identify this specific offence separately from others within the offence category 'motorway offences (other than speeding)', of which there were in total 3,213 offences proceeded against in 2000.

The 'motorway offences (other than speeding)' category includes offences committed under the Road Traffic Regulations Act 1984, s17(4) and the Motorways Traffic (England and Wales) Regulations 1982, Regulations 5–12 and 14.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Civil Service Pensions

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he plans to change the civil service pension scheme to allow widows and widowers to retain their pension after remarrying; and if he will make a statement. [29262]

Mr. Leslie: The civil service will be introducing new pension arrangements with effect from 1 October 2002. New entrants will be given a choice between a new final salary pension scheme and a stakeholder pension with an employer contribution. We are giving active members of the current pension scheme an option to move into the new final salary scheme on 1 October if they wish. The new scheme, which has a higher employee contribution rate than the current scheme, will allow widows and widowers to retain their pension if they remarry. We have no plans to change the arrangements in the current scheme whereby widows and widowers will normally lose their pension entitlement should they remarry.

Civil Service Secondments

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether the salary and other costs of a civil servant from one UK Government Department who is on loan to another UK Government Department are met from the budget of the Department of origin of the civil servant or the Department to which the civil servant is transferred on loan. [29520]

Mr. Leslie: There are no central rules on this. It is a matter to be settled between the two Departments involved.

Ministerial Transport

Bob Russell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he last used the railway service in connection with his official duties; what station he left from and what was the destination; and whether it is his intention to make greater use of the railways in future. [28093]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I last returned from official business in Hull by train on Monday 21 January.

BBC Monitoring

Norman Baker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister for what reason the Winter Supplementary Estimates 2001–02 included provision to transfer sums from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and Ministry of Defence to the Cabinet Office in respect of BBC monitoring. [28330]

Mr. Leslie: Since 1997, funding to support BBC Monitoring's capability to monitor, translate, and report items of interest from foreign broadcasts and media has been provided by four stakeholders: the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the Ministry of Defence, BBC World Service Broadcasting, and the Cabinet Office. Following a review, the four stakeholders agreed in May 2001 to redistribute funding between them in a way which reflected more fully the relative scale of their requirements for BBC Monitoring's services. The sums transferred in the winter supplementary estimate give effect to that change.

Lobbying

Norman Baker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether Government agencies are permitted to incur expenditure on lobbyists where the Government itself is the intended recipient of such lobbying. [28323]

Mr. Leslie: I refer the hon. Member to my answer to him of 17 December 2001, Official Report, column 97W. Decisions on expenditure will be for individual Government agencies to take in accordance with the guidance on Government accounting.

Parliamentary Questions

Norman Baker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many answers to parliamentary questions have not been answered by the Cabinet Office under exemption 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information in each year since 1994. [29418]

Mr. Leslie: As far as I am aware, only one answer to a parliamentary question has been refused, in this House, under exemption 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government information.

WORK AND PENSIONS

SchlumbergerSema

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the objectives in key areas which SchlumbergerSema must meet by May 2002 in order for the company to be granted a contract extension to 2005. [24401]

Mr. Nick Brown: [holding answer 8 January 2002]: The agreement with SchlumbergerSema contains performance and delivery conditions for a contract extension to August 2005. It emphasises the need for the company to meet and improve service standards and commits them to a programme of doctor recruitment. The amendment further requires the contractor to co-operate in the introduction of more fundamental changes in the gathering and presentation of evidence and reports together with the introduction of new processes to reduce the numbers of people who fail to turn up for examinations. It also requires them to agree and document actions to support processes around the intervention regime to be operated in Job Centre Plus as part of the Government's "Welfare to Work" agenda. The agreement to extend the contract must be confirmed or revoked before 31 May 2002.

Pension Credit

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether he will allow the taking of annuities at any age up to 75 years for the purposes of assessing the proposed pension credit entitlement. [26018]

Mr. McCartney: A personal pension may be taken from age 50, but an annuity must be purchased by age 75.

The income from an annuity purchased from a pension fund is treated in the same way as other second pensions within the minimum income guarantee.

Currently, if a person over 60 has not taken an annuity he is treated as having the income he could obtain if he used his pension fund to buy an annuity.

We intend to adopt a similar approach in pension credit.

Stolen Equipment

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what equipment has been stolen from his Department since 1 May 1997; and what the approximate value of each item was; [26822]

(2) if he will list those items valued at more than £50 which have been stolen or lost from his Department in each of the last four years. [27994]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 22 January 2002]: Of a total of approximately 109,224 personal computers and laptops owned by the Department 179 have been stolen in the period in question—this represents 0.16 per cent. The total value of these items is estimated to be £217,300.

Information on items of a lesser value are recorded in the table .

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he will publish the inspection report of the Benefit Fraud Inspectorate in respect of East Riding of Yorkshire council. [30521]

Malcolm Wicks: The Benefit Fraud Inspectorate (BFI) report was published today in respect of East Riding of Yorkshire council and copies of the report have been placed in the Library.

BFI found the council was striving to provide an efficient, secure benefits service and to maintain effective counter fraud performance against a background of staffing difficulties and re-organisation.

Overall, inspectors identified many good features in the council's performance and examples of effective work. There was a clear commitment to customer service and efforts had been made to raise levels of fraud awareness throughout the council. Additionally, the council has introduced inspectors powers and the "Do Not Redirect" scheme.

Despite this, the report notes there were a number of areas where performance fell short of requirements. Inspectors consider a key constraint to the council's performance was the high rate of staff turnover and difficulty in maintaining a fully trained complement of staff.

Inspectors found that the work backlogs resulting from the staffing difficulties were having an adverse effect on standards of service with some delays in processing claims, changes of circumstances and applications for reviews of determinations. Inspectors found the council was addressing shortfalls in performance through a fundamental review of its organisation which included the benefits service.

The report notes that internal and external audit reports had been responded to promptly which inspectors considered was an indication of the council's commitment to maintaining secure systems.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is now considering the report and will be asking the council for its proposals in response to the findings and recommendations of the BFI.

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he will publish the inspection report of the Benefit Fraud Inspectorate in respect of Plymouth city council. [30522]

Malcolm Wicks: The Benefit Fraud Inspectorate report was published today in respect of Plymouth city council and copies of the report have been placed in the Library.

BFI inspectors report that the benefit service had been through a period of considerable change prior to the inspection, including a restructure, the introduction of a document image processing (DIP) system and a change in political control. In addition, during the BFI inspection, the council was implementing the Verification Framework and managing a backlog. Overall, inspectors consider the benefit service was having difficulty in an environment of major corporate change.

Before the inspection the council had taken steps to secure the gateway to benefit with the introduction of the Verification Framework, a new claim form and a system of management checks. Although the council has service level agreements with the local BA and ES, inspectors found the management of these SLAs was limited.

The report notes that the council works hard to keep payments right with a proactive approach to the follow up of renewal claims and reminders to claimants and landlords of their duty to report changes in circumstances. However BFI considers more could be done to target visiting and tailor benefit periods using risk assessment.

In common with some authorities, the council's overall performance in the management and control of overpayments is poor. Inspectors report that prompt action to identify overpayments is negated by ineffective recovery processes.

Although inspectors found fraud investigation work was poor, the report notes that the council had already recognised this and had introduced various policies, guidance and an extensive training programme aimed at improving the quality of the fraud investigations.

The report concludes that the council has recently made major policy and procedural changes. These changes need to be further developed and implemented before tangible improvements will be realised.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is now considering the report and will be asking the council for its proposals in response to the findings and recommendations of the BFI.

Asbestos Judgment

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the Appeal Court decision in the Fairchild case; and if he will introduce legislation to reinstate the principle of apportionment in mesothelioma cases. [25114]

Dr. Whitehead: I have been asked to reply.

The Government are looking closely at the implications of the Appeal Court decision on the Fairchild case. It is too early to determine what action may be necessary.

PRIME MINISTER

North Ayrshire

Q17. Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Prime Minister when he next expects to visit North Ayrshire. [27103]

The Prime Minister: I have no plans at present to do so.

Arms Sales

Tony Baldry: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what discussions he had with the Indian Government on his recent visit concerning the BAE Systems bid to supply Hawk jets; and if he will make a statement. [28301]

(2) what discussions he held with the Pakistani Government on his recent visit concerning United Kingdom arms sales; and if he will make a statement. [28294]

The Prime Minister: During my recent visits to India and Pakistan, I discussed a wide range of issues of mutual interest with the Governments of both countries. These covered a number of defence and security matters including defence export opportunities. The Government continue to support the proposals that BAE systems has made for the supply of Hawk jets to India.

Nuclear Security

Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment he has made since 11 September 2001 of the security of nuclear plants and radioactive materials in transit against terrorist attack; and if he has discussed the security of nuclear facilities with (a) his European Union counterparts and (b) the United States President, since that date. [28646]

The Prime Minister: Security and safety precautions at nuclear sites are kept under regular review. The UK's civil nuclear sites apply stringent security measures regulated by the security regulator, the Office for Civil Nuclear Security.

The security of nuclear material in transit is similarly kept under review. We are also reviewing the transportation of other radioactive materials.

I have discussed the issue with the Irish Taoiseach. Officials have also discussed the matter with their overseas counterparts since 11 September.

It is not Government policy to disclose details of security measures taken at civil nuclear sites, or of nuclear materials in transit.

Lord Birt

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 16 January 2002, Official Report, column 297W, on Lord Birt, under which section of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information he withheld information on the projects worked upon by Lord Birt. [29653]

The Prime Minister: Information relating to internal discussion and advice is not disclosed under Exemption 2, Part II of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Afghanistan

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his letter to the hon. Member for Linlithgow of 11 December 2001, concerning the UN-led conference at Bonn of the main Afghan factions on 27 November, for what reason the Northern Alliance has been allowed to keep troops in Kabul in breach of the Bonn agreement. [28021]

The Prime Minister: The Bonn agreement gave a basis for an Interim Administration to be formed in Afghanistan. That Administration is responsible for security within Afghanistan, and is using its police forces in Kabul to provide this with the support of the International Security Assistance Force. Under the terms of the Military Technical Agreement between the Interim Administration and the International Security Assistance Force (signed on 4 January), some military units have left Kabul. All other armed groups in the Kabul area are confined to designated barracks.

International Criminal Court

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his written answer of 14 January 2002, Official Report, column 89W, on the International Criminal Court, if he will place in the Library copies of the written demarches sent to Secretary of State Powell on ratification of the statute of the International Criminal Court. [29654]

The Prime Minister: Further to my answer of 14 January, two demarches were sent to the US Department of State by the Belgian presidency. One was written, and I am happy to place a copy of that in the Library. The other, I now understand, was changed from a written to an oral demarche by the Belgian presidency.

WALES

Manufacturing

8. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on Government support for manufacturing industry in Wales. [27064]

Mr. Touhig: Despite recent labour market statistics which reflect the fundamental strength of the Welsh economy, some parts of the economy, such as manufacturing, continue to face real and sustained difficulties.

There are no simple solutions at hand to ease these problems, but the Government are helping British manufacturing to raise its game and to shift its focus from competing on the basis of cost alone towards high skill, high value-added products and processes.

10. Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent discussions he has had with the First Secretary of the National Assembly for Wales about Government support for manufacturing industry in Wales. [27066]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I meet the First Minister regularly to discuss a range of issues, including manufacturing in Wales.

Despite recent labour market statistics which reflect the fundamental strength of the Welsh economy, some parts of the economy, such as manufacturing, continue to face real and sustained difficulties.

There are no simple solutions at hand to ease these problems, but the Government are helping British manufacturing to raise its game and to shift its focus from competing on the basis of cost alone towards high skill, high value-added products and processes.

Miners' Compensation

9. Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on the number of claims in Wales under the miners' compensation scheme for respiratory disease that have been settled in full. [27065]

Mr. Touhig: I regularly discuss coal health compensation issues with my hon. Friend the Minister for Industry and Energy and attend the UK Coal Health Monitoring Group that he chairs.

As the hon. Gentleman will be aware, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales established the Welsh sub-group of the Coal Health Claims Monitoring Group specifically to address coal health issues in Wales and to report back to the GB-wide group. I am convinced the measures discussed, and the actions so far agreed, will further speed up the processing of coal health claims.

My hon. Friend the Minister for Industry and Energy attended the Welsh sub-group of the Coal Health Claims Monitoring Group in November to discuss the operation of the scheme in Wales.

Special Advisers

12. Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many special advisers he has working for him. [27068]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I have two special advisers.

14. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the number and cost of special advisers in the Wales Office. [27070]

Mr. Paul Murphy: They are paid in accordance with the Cabinet Office pay scales for special advisers: these are currently under review.

Rural Economy

13. Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to discuss regeneration of the rural economy with National Assembly for Wales Secretaries. [27069]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I meet the Welsh Assembly secretaries regularly to discuss a range of issues, including the Welsh rural economy.

Welsh Language

15. Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what instructions are given to his offices in Wales on whether to answer the telephone in Welsh or English. [27071]

Mr. Paul Murphy: My Cardiff office is served by the National Assembly for Wales switchboard, which answers with a bilingual greeting.

Dairy Farming

16. Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he last met the Agriculture Secretary to discuss dairy farming in Wales. [27072]

Mr. Paul Murphy: My hon. Friend the Under-Secretary has regular meetings with the Assembly Agriculture Secretary and discusses many aspects of Welsh agriculture.

The recent FMD outbreak has exacerbated an already difficult situation for Welsh farmers. I therefore welcome the Assembly's strategy "Farming for the Future", which sets out a vision for the industry to achieve future sustainability, supported by the Assembly and key stakeholders. I would encourage farmers to work with the Assembly and its partners to face up to the changes necessary to create a viable agricultural future for Wales.

EU Structural Funds

17. Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the First Minister of the National Assembly about the progress of the Objective 1 programme in Wales. [27073]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I meet the First Minister regularly to discuss a range of issues, including progress with the Objective 1 programme. At 9 January 2002, 421 Objective 1 projects had been approved, worth a total of £280 million in European grants. £64.3 million worth of Objective 1 grant has already been paid out by the Assembly.

Proportional Representation

18. Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the operation of the proportional representation system in National Assembly for Wales elections. [27074]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The electoral system is that outlined in the White Paper "A Voice for Wales" which was subsequently endorsed by the people of Wales in a referendum. The electoral system is a matter reserved to Parliament under the devolution settlement and the Government have no plans to bring forward legislation to change it.

Crime

19. Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the measures taken by the Government to tackle crime in Wales. [27075]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Communities in Wales are gaining the full benefits of our partnership approach to fighting crime. With funding running into millions of pounds, local partnerships are implementing projects targeted at crime hotspots, domestic violence and drug related crime. Much of this funding is being channelled specifically into the most deprived communities and is going a long way towards building safer and more inclusive communities.

Regional Selective Assistance

20. Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent discussions he has had with the First Minister of the National Assembly for Wales about the operation of regional selective assistance in Wales. [27076]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I meet the First Minister regularly to discuss a range of issues. Regional Selective Assistance (RSA) is the most important grant available to businesses in Wales looking to invest to grow. 240 companies received RSA grants between January and December 2001, to the value of £130.5 million in grant funding and £553 million in total investment. This funding will result in the creation of 8,700 jobs and the safeguarding of another 4,700 jobs.

New Deal

21. Mr. John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the operation of the new deal in Wales. [27077]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The new deal has been a huge success story in Wales. There has been a 75 per cent. fall in the number of young people aged 18–24 claiming JSA in Wales since launch of new deal and a 50 per cent. fall in the number of long term JSA claimants over 25.

Economy

22. Albert Owen: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent discussions he has had with the First Minister of the National Assembly for Wales and Cabinet colleagues about the performance of the Welsh economy. [27078]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I meet the First Minister and Cabinet colleagues regularly to discuss a range of issues, including the Welsh economy. I very much welcome last week's labour market statistics which show that unemployment in Wales fell by 7,000 over the last quarter.

Heroin Addiction

23. Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the latest figures for heroin addiction in Wales. [27079]

Mr. Paul Murphy: There is currently no statutory requirement in the UK to report drug users to any central database; therefore there are no comprehensive data for heroin addiction in Wales.

There is a report from the Welsh Drug Misuse Database (WDMD) for the years 1999 and 2000, which offered an analysis of reports from reporting agencies to the WDMD relating to problem drug users who presented for help and treatment during 1999 and 2000. The increase shown in heroin as a main drug in treatment cases does not necessarily indicate a rise in the number of people dependent on the drug.

In May 2000, an 8-year strategy was published by the National Assembly entitled: "Tackling Substance Misuse in Wales: A Partnership Approach". The strategy covers not only illegal drugs but also alcohol, over-the-counter and prescription drugs and volatile substances. The four aims of the strategy embrace those of the UK strategy Tackling Drugs to build a better Britain.

The National Assembly made £2 million available through the Drug and Alcohol Treatment Fund (DATF) in 2001–02 to support drug and alcohol treatment services in Wales and to improve access to treatment, particularly for vulnerable young people. The fund is administered through Drug and Alcohol Action Teams (DAATs) and has supported many treatment services including those who provide services to people with a heroin dependency. This fund is in addition to expenditure from key agencies including health, the police and probation.

Electoral System

24. Ian Lucas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will bring forward proposals to change the system for election of Members of the National Assembly for Wales. [27080]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I have no plans to do so.

Rail Services

25. Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has held with the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions regarding rail services in Wales since October 2001. [27081]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I have regular discussions with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, which include rail services.

I welcome the SRA's 10-year strategic plan, a forward looking plan which will deliver good results for rail passengers and freight users across Wales.

The Assembly have developed a good working relationship with the SRA and the Wales and Borders Single Franchise is being taken forward as a priority in the strategic plan. This provides a real opportunity to increase the quality and frequency of services and the new franchise is expected to be operational next year.

Correspondence

26. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many letters he received from hon. Members during July 2001; and if he will make a statement. [27082]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy of the reply in the Library of the House.

Countryside

27. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he next expects to meet representatives of the farming community to discuss the crisis in the countryside. [27083]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I am planning to meet representatives of the National Farmers Union shortly. During last year both my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary and myself travelled extensively through Wales and met members of the farming community.

I welcome the recent announcement by the National Assembly for Wales that they have spent almost £28 million to the end of December to help the rural economy recover from the effects of foot and mouth disease. In Wales, this is in addition to over £51 million paid out as compensation for culled animals and over £60 million paid out under the Livestock Welfare (Disposal) Scheme.

Alcoholism

28. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the First Secretary of the National Assembly for Wales and others on the mechanisms for co-ordinating policy for reducing alcoholism in Wales. [27084]

Mr. Touhig: I have not recently discussed with Assembly colleagues the issue of alcoholism in Wales.

However I am aware that the Assembly is tackling the problem of substance misuse, including alcohol abuse, through its 8-year substance misuse strategy "Tackling Substance Misuse in Wales: A Partnership Approach".

Incineration Plant (Wrexham)

29. Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will hold discussions with the First Minister and the Environment Secretary on the cross border impact of the proposals for an incineration plant at Wrexham. [27085]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I understand that the National Assembly has received a number of requests to call-in this planning application. It is for the Assembly to decide how to proceed. I will however draw the hon. Member's concerns to the attention of Assembly Ministers.

Health Service

30. Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent discussions he has had with the First Minister regarding the state of the national health service in Wales. [27086]

Mr. Touhig: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and I meet regularly with the National Assembly First Minister and the Assembly Health and Social Services Minister to discuss a range of issues, including the NHS in Wales.

TRANSPORT, LOCAL GOVERNMENT AND THE REGIONS

Railtrack

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if it is his policy to limit funding for investment by Railtrack and its successors to the total in the regulatory settlement for Control Period 2. [26296]

Mr. Spellar: The funding available to Railtrack and its successor is the regulatory settlement for Control Period 2, as supplemented by the agreement between Railtrack and the Department in April 2001. If bidders for Railtrack consider that this is insufficient, they will need to include proposals for additional funding in their bids.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what minimum notice Railtrack gives to train operating companies for planned maintenance work. [26059]

Mr. Jamieson: Current timetabling arrangements require Railtrack to have notified the train operators of intended works 26 weeks before taking possession of the network.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if it is his policy for a not-for-profit company to replace Railtrack plc. [28738]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to my hon. Friend the Member for Preston (Mr. Hendrick) on 23 October 2001, Official Report, columns 195–97W.

Rail Safety

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many rail track failures have been recorded by Railtrack in each of the last five years. [26073]

Mr. Jamieson: I understand from Railtrack that the number of broken rails in each of the last five financial years were:

	Number of broken rails
1996–97	709
1997–98	755
1998–99	952
1999–2000	918
2000–01	697

Road Deaths

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many deaths there were in motor accidents during the period of the annual Christmas anti-drink campaign in each of the last five available years in which a contributory factor was (a) consumption of alcohol, (b) consumption of non-prescription drugs and (c) tiredness of the driver. [27379]

Mr. Spellar: Information is not available for the periods requested. National estimates of drink drive fatalities are only made based on the involvement of a driver who had consumed over the legal limit of alcohol. These estimates are not produced for time periods of less than one calendar month. No estimates are made of road deaths involving the use of non-prescription drugs or tiredness of a driver.

London Underground

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many staff came in (a) one hour and (b) two hours late on each London Underground line and in total in (i) the last five years and (ii) each of the last 12 months; and what were the reasons given for the absence. [27710]

Mr. Spellar: This is an operational matter for London Underground Ltd., who have advised that the information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will publish the drop out rates of persons applying for management positions on the London Underground (a) within one month, (b) one to two months and (c) two to six months after the application was received, within the last 12 months. [27708]

Mr. Spellar: This is an operational matter for London Underground Ltd., who have advised that within the last 12 months the number of applicants for management positions who withdrew applications, did not attend interviews or refused job offers is as follows:

(a) within one month of receipt of application—20 applicants

(b) one to two months afterwards—75 applicants

(c) two to six months afterwards—37 applicants.

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how long it took on average to recruit new management staff for London Underground from (a) previous internal positions and (b) external positions in the last 12 months. [27707]

Mr. Spellar: This is an operational matter for London Underground Ltd., who have advised that in the last 12 months it took, on average, 8.8 weeks to recruit management staff from previous internal positions, and 10.6 weeks from previous external positions.

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the meetings he has had in the last 10 months with London Underground. [28481]

Mr. Spellar: My right hon. Friend and ministerial colleagues meet London Underground representatives on both a regular and ad hoc basis, to discuss a variety of relevant matters.

Air Traffic Control Centre, Prestwick

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when the National Air Traffic Service Prestwick Centre will be completed. [27730]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 16 January 2002]: The events of 11 September 2001 have led to a review of the phasing of the National Air Traffic Services (NATS) capital investment plan, which includes the New Scottish Centre (NSC). Work on the NSC building has been suspended, but continues on evaluating systems solutions.

My officials continue to be in close discussion with NATS, who are keeping the position under review. NATS will commission further work at NSC as soon as traffic forecasts make it prudent to do so.

Oil Tankers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make it his policy to refuse access to UK waters of single hull oil tankers; and if he will make a statement. [28045]

Mr. Spellar: The rights of innocent or transit passage, as provided in the United Nations convention on the law of the sea, benefit UK ships in foreign territorial waters and prevent the UK from refusing access through UK territorial waters to single hull oil tankers. However, it was recently agreed that after 2007 the oldest (unprotected) type of single hull tankers will not be allowed to operate anywhere; and the UK will not permit newer single hull tankers, fitted with partial protection, to enter its ports after 2015, exercising a new right which that agreement has given.

Correspondence

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he intends to respond to the concerns raised by the Cally Rail Group in letters of 4 October 2001 to himself, and of 24 October and 17 December 2001 to his Department, in connection with the carrying out of Channel Tunnel Rail Link work on and around Caledonian Road, London N1. [28039]

Mr. Byers: My Department wrote to the Cally Rail Group on 17 October and 5 December 2001 and has subsequently provided a holding reply to their letter of 17 December. A further substantive reply has now been sent offering a meeting with representatives of the group.

Strategic Rail Authority

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions whether his Department's statements and the SRA plan have taken into account the delays in establishing the first special purpose vehicles in estimating completion dates for infrastructure investments. [28567]

Mr. Spellar: To avoid possible delays the Strategic Rail Authority has set aside funds within its strategic plan to help reduce commercial risk in projects before competitions to build them are held.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions which new recommendations from multi-modal studies have been included in the SRA plan. [28565]

Mr. Spellar: The Strategic Rail Authority is working with my Department on the processes by which the study outcomes will be taken forward in the short, medium and long terms. The authority is currently undertaking further work on the access to hastings study.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what impact the Strategic Rail Authority's new strategic plan will have on plans for the proposed Worcester Parkway station at Norton; and if he will make a statement. [28597]

Mr. Spellar: The Strategic Rail Authority's strategic plan makes it clear that £430 million will be available over the next 10 years for the Rail Passenger Partnership Scheme which is designed to provide partnership funding for local schemes which support local and integrated transport objectives. The scheme was recently relaunched by the authority and the bidding criteria were not affected or altered by the strategic plan.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions by what mechanism the £7.5 billion public sector funding will be used to lever in the new commitments that will deliver the (a) short and (b) medium term priorities set out in the SRA strategic plan. [29232]

Mr. Jamieson: The private sector investment will be levered in through the franchising process, Special Purpose Vehicles and specific funding schemes such as the Rail Passenger Partnership fund.

Central Trains

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions for what reason a two-year extension to the Central Trains franchise is expected to achieve an early increase in capacity. [28573]

Mr. Spellar: An extension to the existing Central Trains franchise will provide an opportunity to secure early new investment in, for example, new rolling stock and additional services.

Rail Network

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what estimate he has made of the (a) capacity and (b) levels of usage of the rail network to carry individual services. [28548]

Mr. Spellar: The Strategic Rail Authority has carried out numerous studies to gauge rail use and travel patterns in order to help determine priorities for investment. It has also carried out specific capacity studies to determine where enhancement is required. The priorities for investment have been identified in the authority's strategic plan.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the changes to subsidy resulting from the implementation of cost plus agreements on the railways. [28561]

Mr. Spellar: Under 'cost plus' agreements, the franchisee does not commit to a subsidy/premium profile for several years at a time. Instead, the franchisee is paid an agreed margin on the costs it is expected to incur in running the franchise in the coming year.

Prolonging these arrangements has led to a number of problems and the Strategic Rail Authority intends, as soon as possible, to replace those franchises on 'cost plus' terms with longer-term franchise contracts negotiated through competitive processes.

Freight Facilities

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions whether additional funds are being made available to the relaunched Freight Facilities Grant scheme. [28558]

Mr. Spellar: The Freight Facilities Grant scheme now covers coastal and short sea shipping. Additional funding is accordingly being sought under SR2002.

Fuel Taxes

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what recent assessment he has made of the impact of fuel taxes on road and rail passenger usage. [28571]

Mr. Spellar: The Department's latest assessment of the impact of changes in the cost of fuel, including taxes, on road use is given in Annex C of "Modelling using the National Road Traffic Forecasting framework for 'Tackling Congestion and Pollution' and 'Transport 2010: The 10-Year Plan'—Technical Report".

In this assessment, the long run elasticity of car use with respect to fuel cost per car kilometre is 0.23. This means, for example, that an increase (decrease) in fuel cost per car kilometre of 10 per cent. would lead to a 2.3 per cent. decrease (increase) in car kilometres.

As announced in the 10-Year Plan, the Department is developing its multi-modal modelling capability. This will enable estimates to be made of the impact on rail passenger usage of changes to fuel taxation.

Rail-Air Links

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) if it is his policy that rail links to Glasgow and Edinburgh airports will not receive public funding for completion before 2010. [28569]

(2) if it is his policy that Airtrack will not receive public funding for completion before 2010. [28568]

Mr. Jamieson: No. The SRA's strategic plan makes it clear that a number of major schemes, including Airtrack and direct rail links to Edinburgh and Glasgow airports, are being explored further in terms of feasibility and value for money. If increased funding becomes available, particularly through partnerships with other parts of the public sector, it may be possible to make earlier progress on some of them than intimated in the current strategic plan.

East London Line

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) how much of the proposed East London line will be complete by 2006; [28549]

(2) whether he expects the East London line to be extended to Wimbledon by 2006. [28564]

Mr. Spellar: By 2006 the SRA expect to have completed and commissioned the new East London line infrastructure from New Cross Gate and Old Kent Road junction in the south to Dalston junction in the north. The new rolling stock is also expected to have been delivered by that date. The planned service to Wimbledon will be possible once the relevant South Central works by GoVia, and, if powers are granted, the relevant Thameslink 2000 works, have been completed.

South West Trains

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) when work on extending South West Trains suburban platforms will be completed; [28555]

(2) what assessment he has made of the timeframe for (a) establishing a special purpose vehicle and (b) completing work on the planned extension of South West Trains suburban platforms. [28542]

Mr. Jamieson: The establishment of a Special Purpose Vehicle and the timing of works on platform extensions are both the subject of negotiations between the Strategic Rail Authority, Stagecoach and Railtrack. The SRA are keen to progress the project, which will allow the operation of longer trains to help reduce overcrowding, as soon as possible.

Tyne and Wear Metro

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the common usage by light and heavy rail services of the Tyne and Wear metro route. [28574]

Mr. Spellar: In December 1999 the Deputy Prime Minister, then Secretary of State for Transport, announced approval of funding for the extension of the Tyne and Wear metro system to Sunderland. The new line is due to open in March. In addition to building new tracks from the centre of Sunderland to South Hylton, this scheme has made use of excess capacity on existing heavy rail Railtrack lines. The promoters have worked closely with the HSE to ensure that the scheme complies with all the necessary safety requirements to enable common usage of heavy rail infrastructure.

London Rail Termini

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what estimate he has made of the impact on capacity at London rail termini of the presence of more than one train operator. [28551]

Mr. Jamieson: The Strategic Rail Authority has identified opportunities for improvement in capacity at key London termini by bringing services under single operator control where possible.

Waterloo

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions whether it is his policy to retain a single train operator at Waterloo. [28588]

Mr. Spellar: Eurostar, Wales and Borders and South West Trains currently operate from London Waterloo. The Strategic Rail Authority has stated that it proposes to simplify the train operator franchise structure by bringing services at key London termini under single control wherever possible.

Thameslink 2000

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions by what date a special purpose vehicle will be established in respect of the financing of Thameslink 2000. [28589]

Mr. Jamieson: The SRA is currently investigating options for the funding of the Thameslink 2000 project, if powers are granted. These options include the possibility of establishing a special purpose vehicle. It is not possible at this stage to predict when an SPV would be in place.

Cotswold Line

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of impact on investment plans for the Cotswold line between Worcester and Oxford of a two-year extension of the Thames Trains franchise; and if he will make a statement. [28598]

Mr. Spellar: A two-year extension of the current Thames Trains franchise is one of the options which the Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) is currently considering. Proposals for further investment in the Cotswold line and others included in the franchise are matters to be considered by the SRA in deciding whether to agree an extension.

Rail Freight

Mr. Lyons: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what financial incentives are available to companies wishing to move freight from road to rail. [28382]

Mr. Spellar: The Strategic Rail Authority operates two grant schemes to help companies switch traffic from road to rail. The Freight Facilities Grant helps companies with the capital cost of providing rail facilities and the Track Access Grant helps rail freight operators to meet the charges paid to Railtrack for access to the network, which in turn allows operators to offer a more competitive price to companies.

Mr. Lyons: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the quantities were of freight carried on Britain's rail network in each of the last four years. [28383]

Mr. Spellar: Freight moved is measured in net tonne kilometres (NTKMs). This takes into account the net weight of the goods carried (excluding the weight of the locomotive and wagons) and the distance carried. The total amount carried in each of the last four years is shown in the table:

Billion NTKMs

	Freight moved
1997–98	16.9
1998–99	17.3
1999–2000	18.2
2000–01	18.1

Growth in 2000–01 was not achieved because of the Hatfield derailment and subsequent network-wide problems.

Trans-Pennine Franchise

James Purnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if, in advertising the Trans-Pennine franchise, the Strategic Rail Authority will ensure that the service continues to stop at Stalybridge station. [28508]

Mr. Spellar: There is currently an hourly Trans-Pennine service for Stalybridge station that is protected by the Passenger Service Requirement (PSR). Bidders for the new Trans-Pennine Express franchise have been instructed by the Strategic Rail Authority that services protected by the PSR must be maintained.

Metropolitan Line

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many delays were caused by signal failures on the Metropolitan line in each of the last five years. [28482]

Mr. Spellar: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Parliamentary Under- Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions my hon. Friend the Member for Plymouth, Devonport (Mr. Jamieson), to the hon. Member for Westbury (Dr. Murrison) on 18 July 2001, Official Report, column 197W. London Underground advise me that it is not possible to separate the data for signals and points.

Postal Voting

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many votes were cast by post in the (a) 1997 and (b) 2001 general elections, broken down by constituency as (i) a percentage of total votes cast and (ii) a percentage of the electorate. [28475]

Dr. Whitehead: Figures of the number of votes cast by post, the total votes cast and the total electorate for the 1997 general election were published, by constituency, in Table 4 of "Election Expenses" (House of Commons Paper 260) in February 1999. Publication of the corresponding data for the 2001 general election was the responsibility of the Electoral Commission and is contained in the report entitled "Postal Votes, Proxy Votes and Spoilt Ballot Papers at the 2001 General Election" published on 17 January. Copies of both publications are in the Libraries of the House.

Thames Trains

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many and what percentage of trains operated by Thames Trains departed late from West Drayton station in each month of (a) 2000 and (b) 2001. [28484]

Mr. Spellar: The Strategic Rail Authority do not keep performance figures disaggregated to station level. However, the following table shows a summary, by four weekly reporting period of the number of Thames Trains arriving at their destinations punctually:

Industry period	Percentage of Thames Trains arriving at destination punctually and reliably
Period beginning 2 January 2000
0010	87.4
0011	92.4
0012	92.1

Speed Cameras (Uxbridge)

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many speed cameras are operating within the Uxbridge constituency. [28491]

Mr. Spellar: This information is not held centrally.

Nuclear Transportation

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Baillieston (Mr. Wray), on 8 January 2002, Official Report, column 601W, on nuclear transportation, if he will list (a) the dates and (b) the reasons for the last five occasions on which the International Atomic Energy Agency radioactive materials transport standards have been revised as a result of reviews. [28590]

Mr. Spellar: The IAEA's Regulations for the Safe Transport of Radioactive Material, originally published in 1961, are kept under continuous review and revised from time-to-time, as necessary, to ensure they remain effective in the light of up-to-date radiological protection standards, technological advances and operational experience. Revisions have been made in response to proposals for change and problems identified by experts from member states and concerned international transport organisations, most recently as follows:

Year of publication/Title	Main reason(s) for revision
2000
Regulation for Safe Transport of Radioactive Material, 1996 Edition (Revised), Safety Standards Series No. TS-R-1 (ST-1, Revised)	Minor editorial amendments to 1996 Ed. Pressure test requirements aligned with International Standards
1996
Regulations for the Safe Transport of Radioactive Material, 1996 Edition, Safety Standards Series No. ST-1	Major revision incorporating: additional air transport requirements (Type 'C' package); additional requirements for uranium hexafluoride; enhanced immersion test requirements; updated activity limits; modified, radionuclide-specific exemption values.
1990
Regulations for the Safe Transport of Radioactive Material, 1985 Edition (As Amended 1990). Safety Series No. 6	Consolidation into a single volume of the original 1985 Edition, the two previous supplement documents and inclusion of further minor changes and changes of detail.
1988
Regulations for the Safe Transport of Radioactive Material 1985 Edition Supplement 1988, Safety Series No. 6—Supplementary 1988	Further amendments arising from a request to member states to identify problems applying the Regulations and proposals for change. Also incorporates amended texts to the supporting documents to the Regulations.
1986
Regulations for the Safe Transport of Radioactive Material 1985 Edition Supplement 1986, Safety Series No. 6—Supplementary 1986	Corrects minor errors and introduces changes of detail, unanimously agreed by the member states by direct replacement pages to the original text.

Year of publication/Title	Main reason(s) for revision
1985 Regulations for the Safe Transport of Radioactive Material 1985 Edition, Safety Series No. 6	Fully revised edition carried out by expert panels beginning in 1979 and approved by the Board of Governors in 1984. International System (SI) of units introduced as primary units. Implements the new system of dose limitation of the 1982 Edition of the IAEA's Basic Safety Standards.

Train Company Competition

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions by what means he intends to promote competition between train companies following the introduction of longer franchises and a single franchise serving each London terminus. [28737]

Mr. Jamieson: The main competition for rail operators is from road and other modes of transport, and this competitive pressure would not be reduced by the introduction of larger franchises or a policy of single franchises serving each London terminus. The aim would be to produce a more reliable, cohesive and attractive service for passengers.

Railways

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what additional capacity is (a) planned and (b) under consideration for the railway lines between (i) London and Portsmouth, (ii) London, Southampton and Lymington and (iii) Bristol and Brighton, and for Island Line; when he expects each improvement to be complete; what the cost will be; and how much of the cost will be met from public funds; [28732]

(2) what improvement is (a) planned and (b) under consideration for major stations on the railway lines between (i) London and Portsmouth, (ii) London, Southampton and Lymington and (iii) Bristol and Brighton, and for stations on Island Line; when he expects each improvement to be complete; what the cost will be; and how much of the cost will be met from public funds. [28733]

Mr. Spellar: Capacity on the Portsmouth and Southampton routes will be increased in stages over the early years of the replacement South West Trains franchise through rolling stock investment. It is proposed that capacity be increased to facilitate a half-hourly service on the Bristol to Portsmouth route. Longer term increases in capacity will depend on infrastructure investment to permit longer trains to operate. These projects, and their financial arrangements, are subject to the outcome of commercial negotiations for the new South West Trains and Wessex franchises. The Strategic Rail Authority are developing a franchise proposition for the replacement of the Island Line franchise, in consultation with the Island council. Further announcements will be made by the authority in due course.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions under the 10 year plan for rail, how much public money will be available in each of the next 10 years to support (a) infrastructure investment and (b) subsidies for operating costs to (i) the Railtrack successor body and (ii) the train operating companies. [29233]

Mr. Jamieson: The £33.5 billion of government support to the rail industry over the next 10 years, is projected to be profiled as in the table. A breakdown is provided between government capital investment and resource (revenue) expenditure.

The level of future Government subsidy provided through existing franchise contracts is detailed in the 2001 SRA annual report. No other breakdown can be provided for individual companies over each of the next 10 years.

£ billion[1]	Resource	Capital	Total
2001–02	1.6	0.6	2.2
2002–03	1.4	1.5	2.8
2003–04	1.4	2.5	4.0
2004–05	1.5	2.4	3.9
2005–06	1.5	2.9	4.4
2006–07	1.5	2.7	4.2
2007–08	1.5	2.2	3.6
2008–09	1.6	1.3	2.9
2009–10	1.5	1.2	2.7
2010–11	1.5	1.2	2.7
Total	14.9	18.6	33.5

[1] Rounded

Rail Services (Disabled Access)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what percentage of (a) rail stations and (b) rolling stock are accessible for those who are mobility impaired; and what plans there are to increase the percentage. [28819]

Ms Keeble: This information is not currently held centrally. The answers will also depend on the definition of "mobility impairment" which is used—some stations and rolling stock may not be wheelchair accessible but can be accessed by other mobility impaired people. The Strategic Rail Authority will announce shortly a requirement for train operators to prepare new disabled people's protection policies. When available, these will allow national information to be provided.

Rail Infrastructure Investment

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the level of investment in infrastructure has been in each year since 1997 on main railway lines in the UK. [28618]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 18 January 2002]: Information on rail infrastructure investment is available from Railtrack's annual report and accounts for each of the relevant years. These figures are not publicly available by individual route.

Driving Test Examiners (West Yorkshire)

Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many driving test examiners were employed in each test centre in West Yorkshire in (a) January 2002, (b) July 2001 and (c) January 2001; and how many in each category were (i) full-time and (ii) part-time. [28354]

Mr. Spellar: The following number of driving examiners were based at test centres in West Yorkshire:

	January 2002		July 2001		January 2001
	Permanent	Other[1]	Permanent	Other[1]	Permanent	Other[1]

Housing

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what measures his Department is taking to improve the quality of housing in areas of deprivation. [28769]

Ms Keeble: In July 2000 the Government set a target to bring all social housing up to set standards of decency by 2010, tackling one-third of the problem by March 2004 with most of the improvement taking place in deprived local authority areas.

"The Way Forward for Housing", the Government's housing policy statement, set out a range of measures many of which would contribute towards achieving this target, including:

a significant increase in investment—an additional £1.8 billion was provided in the last spending review on top of increases announced in 1998 and 2000—much of which will benefit deprived areas;

a range of investment options for local authority housing including transfer of homes to registered social landlords and arms-length management arrangements; and the introduction of local housing strategies.

A copy of the policy statement is in the Library.

Congestion

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when targets for congestion will be agreed as part of the 10-year transport plan. [28906]

Ms Keeble: "Transport 2010: The 10-Year Plan", published in July 2000, contained a target

> "to reduce road congestion on the inter-urban network and in large urban areas in England below current levels by 2010 by promoting integrated transport solutions and investing in public transport and the road network".

Fire Service SSA

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to reform the standard spending assessment allocation for fire services taking into account fire prevention work; and if he will make a statement. [28919]

Dr. Whitehead: In partnership with the Local Government Association and other local authority organisations we are reviewing the local government finance grant distribution formula. We have already made the commitment that, when the new formula is introduced for the 2003–04 Local Government Finance Settlement, the perverse incentive of the fire calls indicator (whereby fire authorities are effectively penalised for reducing the number of calls) will be removed. Other options that are being considered include increasing the share that is allocated for fire safety education.

Fishing (Light Dues)

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will calculate the amount paid in light dues by British registered fishing vessels in the last 12 months for which figures are available; and what proposals he has to exempt British registered fishing vessels from the payment of light dues. [29086]

Mr. Jamieson: The amount of light dues invoiced to UK registered fishing vessels for the financial year 2001–02 (April to March) is £672,326. We have no current plans to exempt fishing vessels from the payment of light dues, but we intend to consult all users of the general lighthouse authorities' aids to navigation on the charging structure.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list those European Union member nations which levy light dues on their domestically registered fishing vessels; and what assessment he has made of the effect of light dues on the competitiveness of British registered vessels in comparison with vessels from fishing fleets of other European Union member nations. [29087]

Mr. Jamieson: The lighthouse authorities in the UK and Ireland are funded through the general lighthouse fund, which is administered by DTLR. The Irish Government make a contribution to the fund towards the costs of provision of aids to navigation in the Irish Republic, and do not require fishing vessels in the Irish Republic to pay light dues. We do not have information on arrangements for covering the costs of provision of aids to navigation in other member states.

Road Maintenance Survey

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions for what reasons the present form of the annual road maintenance survey is to be discontinued; how the replacement statistical series will differ; and if he will make a statement. [28907]

Mr. Jamieson: The National Road Maintenance Condition Survey (NRMCS) reports on the condition of roads, footways, kerbs and verges in England and Wales. It was introduced in 1977 as a visual survey of defects and subsequently extended to include surveys of structural condition and skidding resistance. Recent technical advances and organisational changes affecting the management of the national and local road networks have provided the opportunity to collect the information more efficiently.

In future, the data for statistics of road maintenance conditions will be those which each authority now collects in order to manage its own network and to produce best value performance indicators. This has a number of advantages. Firstly, there will be cost savings to authorities as they will no longer be asked to collect separate data for NRMCS. This should also give rise to increased response rates. Secondly, the new methods of data collection use latest technology to monitor the whole of the road network, as opposed to a sample of 100 m road lengths as in the old NRMCS. As a result, we will be able to publish meaningful comparisons at authority and regional level for the first time which will also serve to improve the accuracy of the national results.

The new survey will be more comprehensive than the old NRMCS. Coverage will include motorways (excluded from the old visual survey), and roads with a concrete running surface will come within the survey for the first time. In addition the condition of cycleways will be recorded.

The new information will also enable the monitoring of two objectives in the 10-Year Plan for Transport—halting local road deterioration by 2004 and eliminating the backlogs in their maintenance by 2010–11. The new survey will continue to provide information on the condition of roads but should also enable the calculation of more precise estimates of the amount of outstanding maintenance than those currently derived from the visual survey.

These new arrangements are being phased in over three years. Each part of the new survey will run in parallel with the corresponding part of the old survey for a period of one year to ensure consistency over time.

Ministerial Meetings (Scottish Parliament)

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he last met the Scottish Minister for Transport; and what issues were discussed. [29483]

Mr. Jamieson: The Secretary of State met Wendy Alexander, the Scottish Minister for Transport, on Wednesday 16 January. A number of issues were discussed including the SRA Strategic Plan, the ScotRail franchise, and the recent industrial action on the Scottish railways.

Wind Power

Jim Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what his policy is relating to guidance to district councils concerning the grant of planning consent for siting smaller wind turbines (a) singularly and in pairs, (b) in the support of farmers seeking to diversify through earning revenue through wind power generation and (c) to local communities for local power generation for the benefit of the community. [29283]

Ms Keeble: Guidance on planning policy for renewable energy is set out in PPG 22. This provides local planning authorities with guidance on a range of issues that affect the siting of renewable energy projects, including the siting of one or two wind turbines.

English Partnerships

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what consultations are taking place over the future of English Partnerships. [29388]

Ms Keeble: As part of stage one of the current review of English Partnerships, a range of EP's partners and stakeholders, including the regional development agencies, have been consulted. Consultations have also taken place with groups of staff from English Partnerships and with the management of the organisation.

A dedicated e-mail address has also been set up to encourage comments from anyone interested in the review.

Rail Delays

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will publish the total weekly rail delays, in minutes, for each week from 1 May 1997 to 21 January 2002, broken down to show delays (a) attributable to Railtrack and (b) attributable to train operating companies; and if he will make a statement. [27054]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 22 January 2002]: The information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Local Government Expenditure Review

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will publish the timetable for the review of local government expenditure. [29328]

Dr. Whitehead: We will implement reform of the local government grant distribution system in time for setting out the provisional 2003–04.

Rail Industry (EU Guidelines)

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what guidance he has given to the Strategic Rail Authority on the implications of the European Council's Broad Guidelines of the Economic Policies of the Member States and the Community on the future structure of the rail industry. [29121]

Mr. Byers: The Government's policies, including those of the Strategic Rail Authority, are consistent with these Broad Guidelines.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Stolen Equipment

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Solicitor-General what equipment has been stolen from her Department since 1 May 1997; and what the approximate value of each item was. [26840]

The Solicitor-General: I am not aware of any departmental equipment being stolen from the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers since 1 May 1997.

The details of other Departments for which the Attorney-General is responsible are as follows:

Year	Equipment	Valued at
Crown Prosecution Service
1997–98	—	—
1998–99	1 computer	2,000.00

Saville Inquiry

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Solicitor-General what costs have been incurred by her Department in connection with the Saville inquiry; and what her estimate is of the final cost to her Department. [29066]

The Solicitor-General: The Departments for which the Attorney-General answers in Parliament are the Crown Prosecution Service, the Serious Fraud Office and the Treasury Solicitor's Department, as well as his own Department, the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers.

The Crown Prosecution Service and the Serious Fraud Office have not incurred any costs in connection with the Bloody Sunday inquiry and do not expect to do so.

The Treasury Solicitor's Department carries out legal work for other Departments, such as the Ministry of Defence, on a full cost recovery basis. While substantial work has been done by the Treasury Solicitor's Department in relation to the inquiry, in so far as that work is directly connected with the inquiry, the cost will be recovered or has been recovered from the client Department or Departments represented. The Treasury Solicitor's Department has provided representation before the inquiry for two ex-members of staff. The cost of this representation, which has been borne by the Department, is approximately £15,500.

The Attorney-General and lawyers in both the Treasury Solicitor's Department and the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers will, in the normal course of their duties, have been called upon to give advice on certain matters arising as a result of the Bloody Sunday inquiry. In so far as these costs can be assessed, an approximate figure would be £70,500. No assessment can be made of what the final cost may be as it will depend on whether further advice or assistance is sought or becomes necessary.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Wind Power Generators

Jim Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much of the EU grant aid has been issued to farmers in Objective 1 areas for siting small scale wind power generators; and what steps her Department is taking to ease access to these funds. [29285]

Alan Johnson: No EU grant aid from the structural funds has been issued to farmers for siting small scale wind power generators in Objective 1 areas.

The Department's website has information on the structural funds and potential sources of match funding. The website of each Government office in the regions gives details of the programmes for the region. These sites also contain advice on how applications can be made.

Consumer Protection

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to review consumer protection laws in relation to internet purchasing of goods and services. [26076]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Existing consumer protection laws, such as the Distance Selling Regulations and the Sale of Goods legislation, apply equally to internet purchasing as when shopping on the high street. In November 2001 I launched a campaign with my hon. Friend the Minister for E-Commerce and Competitiveness to raise awareness of consumer rights when e-shopping and to demonstrate that internet shopping is safe as long as shoppers follow basic guidelines.

Consumer protection laws will be reviewed to ensure, in compliance with the E-Commerce Directive, that they do not prevent contracts being concluded by electronic means. The E-Commerce Directive will also create some additional safeguards for those purchasing goods and services online.

Radioactive Waste (North-East Atlantic)

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate she has made of the minimum length of time the isotopes deposited west of Land's End in the 1960s and 1970s will remain radioactive. [27190]

Mr. Meacher: I have been asked to reply.

Radioactive waste was deposited at several locations in the north-east Atlantic during the 1960s and 1970s. This waste contained many different radioactive isotopes with widely varying rates of decay. For example, plutonium-239 (Pu-239) has a half-life of around 24,000 years, whereas tritium (H-3) has a half-life of 12.3 years. In view of this, it is not possible to make a single estimate of the length of time that the material will remain radioactive. Details of the radionuclides which the material contained are included in the "Report of the Independent Review of Disposal of Radioactive Waste in the North East Atlantic" (HMSO, 1984), copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Places of Worship

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what estimate she has made of the cost to English Heritage of administering the VAT/grant recovery scheme for places of worship; and if she will make a statement; [28915]

(2) for what reason the administration of the VAT/grant recovery scheme for places of worship is administered by English Heritage; and if she will make a statement. [28914]

Dr. Howells: CSL Group Ltd. are DCMS's appointed contractors for the Listed Places of Worship (LPW) Grant scheme. Initial estimates are that the LPW Scheme could be worth up to £30 million per year. There is no cap on the scheme; all listed places of worship that meet the criteria will receive a grant. This Department has been asked to make a small contribution to the costs of the scheme. We have asked English Heritage to help us meet this commitment, which they have chosen to do through the redirection of £2 million in grant-in-aid from the Joint Places of Worship (JPOW) scheme.

Film Council

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the criteria employed by the Film Council to assess the suitability of applications to each of its funds. [29429]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 22 January 2002]: The Film Council sets out its criteria for assessing the suitability of applications in the published application guidance for the relevant fund. Each guidance complies with the policy and financial directions issued to the Film Council under sections 26 (1), (3), (3A) and (4) of the National Lottery Etc. Act 1993 (as amended by the National Lottery Act 1998).

In respect of its film financing funds—the development fund, the new cinema fund and the premiere fund—the eligibility and selection criteria are clearly linked back to attaining the objectives for the relevant fund. The guidance also states that applications for development or production finance will be assessed on the creative merits of the projects by the head of the relevant fund. Their creative judgment to fund a project is complemented by an assessment of financial and contractual matters all under the control of the Film Council's chief executive officer.

In respect of the training fund the key criteria are that the application meets the various training specifications as set out and that the project meets the objectives of the fund.

In respect of the regional investment fund for England, the Film Council is in the process of delegating decision-making on applications to new regional film agencies. These agencies will operate under a detailed framework agreement which sets out the parameters within which any decisions should be made.

A similar framework agreement which includes parameters for creative, operational and financial criteria is in place with the council's delegate body responsible for "First Light"—a fund for film making by children and young people.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make an estimate of the value to the Film Council of (a) profit share schemes, (b) shares in copyright and (c) other property or rights received, as a result of grants made under each of the Film Council's funds since 1 April 2000. [29430]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 22 January 2002]: The valuation of film rights is not made under the headings listed in the question. The valuation is made in accordance with the additional disclosure requirements of the accounts direction given by the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport for the Film Council's national lottery fund.

The Film Council prepares a valuation of film rights at the end of each financial year. In respect of its lottery funds this valuation is disclosed in its report and lottery accounts. The accounts for 2000–01 were laid before Parliament on 12 December 2001. In 2000–01 the net value of film rights is reported as £12,490,930 against awards made totalling £24,864,352. A detailed breakdown is contained within schedule 1 to the accounts. The valuation for grants made since 1 April 2001 will be undertaken after the end of the financial year as part of preparation of the 2001–02 accounts.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list grants made by the Film Council since 1 April 2000 stating for each the (a) amount of the grant, (b) date of the grant, (c) purpose of the grant, (d) company, person or organisation to whom the grant was made, (e) name of the film or project for which the grant was to be used and (f) fund from which the grant was made. [29431]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 22 January 2002]: I am arranging for copies of the information requested by the hon. Member to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many applications to each fund of the Film Council since 1 April 2000 have been successful. [29428]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 22 January 2002]: Between 1 April 2000 and 31 December 2001 the following applications to the Film Council have been successful:

Lottery Film Franchises—55
Premiere Fund—17 awards
Development Fund—75 (including 12 successful slate applications)
New Cinema Fund—33 (including 12 awards to run digital shorts programmes)
Training Fund—79 (including bursary awards to 61 individuals)
First Light—54.

These figures exclude awards which have lapsed, been withdrawn or have not been taken up. Some projects have applied for and received separate allocations of funding against specific elements of the same project.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the work of the Film Council. [29411]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 22 January 2002]: The Film Council started work in April 2000 with the long term objective of creating a sustainable UK film industry.

It has done this by supporting a range of film productions, and most importantly for the long term, helping the development of films and film-makers. The Film Council is developing close relationships with European colleagues; it has for the first time brought together film interests in each of the English regions; introduced programmes for young people and training for the industry; and it is working up policies on exhibition and distribution and to give practical help for exports.

The Film Council's annual report, which will be published shortly, will give more details of their achievements.

Free Television Licence (Wealden)

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many pensioners in Wealden receive the free television licence for people over 75 years of age. [29713]

Dr. Howells: TV Licensing, which administers for the BBC as licensing authority the free television licence scheme, is not able to provide geographical breakdowns of the number of free licences issued. However, estimates based on the 1991 Census indicate that there were approximately 9,000 people aged 75 or over in the Wealden constituency.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Gurkhas (Commemoration)

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will introduce plans to commemorate the military assistance given by Nepal to the United Kingdom in (a) the two World Wars and (b) other significant conflicts. [24748]

Mr. Bradshaw: We rightly commemorate the immense contribution that the Nepalese, through the Gurkhas, have made to the United Kingdom in the world wars and in other conflicts. The Gurkhas, as an integral part of the British Army, are commemorated at Remembrance

Day. The Nepalese Ambassador is the only non-Commonwealth foreign representative to attend the commemoration. The Gurkha Statue near the Ministry of Defence Main Building, unveiled by Her Majesty the Queen in December 1997, is another permanent reminder of the contribution of the Gurkhas, and the Gurkha Gardens in Winchester is no less important a memorial.

The Gurkhas are also commemorated in a more practical way through the work of the Gurkha Welfare Trust, an independent registered charity, which provides financial, medical and community aid to alleviate hardship and distress among Gurkha ex-servicemen of the British Army and their dependants after they have returned to their homeland of Nepal. The MOD recognises the valuable work that this trust does and makes a substantial annual grant towards its administrative costs.

Fraud

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate his Department has made of the cost to its budget since 1 May 1997 of fraud; and if he will make a statement. [27303]

Mr. Straw: The information is as follows:

Cost of fraud in Foreign and Commonwealth Office

	FCO (fraud)	Recovered	Net loss
May 1997 to March 1998	114,385	4,396	109,989
April 1998 to March 1999	102,202	6,705	95,497
April 1999 to March 2000	11,183	11,183	0
April 2000 to March 2001	16,326	15,553	773
April 2001 to December 2001	38,125	20,092	18,033

Total identified fraud for period 1 May 1997 to 31 December 2001 = 282,221
Total sums recovered to date = 57,929
Net loss = 224,292

Stolen/lost Property

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those items valued at more than £50 which have been stolen or lost from his Department in each of the last four years. [27988]

Mr. MacShane: The following equipment, valued at over £50.00, has been reported stolen or lost from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in the UK in the last four years:

Afghanistan

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has sought, and what communications he has received, from the United States Administration in respect of the circumstances surrounding the uprising and battle at the prison fort outside Mazar-e-Sharif in Afghanistan; how many prisoners were killed; if United Kingdom citizens are known to have been killed or captured; and what role British military personnel played in the action. [28504]

Mr. Bradshaw: We do not have details of the numbers killed or captured, and are not aware that any UK citizens were among those killed or captured.

My hon. Friend will understand that, for reasons of operational security, I cannot go into specific details about the involvement of British troops in this incident. However, I can tell my hon. Friend that, following an uprising by Taliban fighters being held at the fort, who overpowered their captors and seized the armoury, British troops went to the aid of their US colleagues. Under heavy fire they attempted to recover two US personnel apparently captured by the Taliban fighters.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the dates of foreign visits he has made since 11 September; which countries he visited; whom he met; what was discussed; what the size of his entourage was; which other Ministers accompanied him; and what the total cost was of each visit. [28789]

Mr. Straw: Since 11 September I have made the following overseas visits and met the following leaders:

12 September

Special GAC Brussels.

Belgium—Secretary General Solana, President Prodi, Vice-President Kinnock, Commissioner Lamy, Commissioner Patten.

21 September

Extraordinary European Council, Brussels.

24–27 September

Jordan—King Abdullah, Prime Minister al-Ragheb, Foreign Minister Khatib, President Arafat.

Iran—President Khatemi, Foreign Minister Dr. Kharrazi.

Israel—Prime Minister Sharon, Foreign Minister Peres.

Egypt—President Mubarak.

8 October

GAC Luxembourg.

17 October

GAC Luxembourg.

17–18 October

Turkey—President Sezer, Prime Minister Ecevit, Foreign Minister Cem.

23–25 October

USA—Vice-President Cheney, Secretary of State General Powell, Secretary of State for Defence Rumsfeld and Deputy Secretary of Defence Wolfowitz.

29 October

GAC Luxembourg.

30–31 October

Russia—Foreign Minister Igor Ivanov, Defence Minister Sergei Ivanov.

Poland—Prime Minister Miller, Foreign Minister Cimoszewicz.

9–14 November

USA—UNGA.

19 November

Democratic Republic of Congo—President Kabila, Foreign Minister Ukitundu.

Rwanda—President Kagame, Foreign Minister Bumaya.

Burundi—President Buyoya, Vice-President Ndayizeye.

Uganda—President Museveni, Foreign Minister Wapakhabulo.

A range of issues was discussed during these visits, including the international coalition against terrorism, the middle east peace process, EU affairs, bilateral relations and regional issues.

The Prime Minister attended the Extraordinary European Council in Brussels on 21 September and the Laeken European Council in Brussels, 13–15 December. The Chancellor of the Exchequer attended the Laeken European Council. The Minister for Europe attended the GACs on 29 October, 10 November and 19 November and the Laeken European Council.

A detailed list of Cabinet Ministers' visits overseas and information on expenditure by all Ministers on overseas travel for the period 1 April 2001 to 31 March 2002 will be published as soon as possible after the end of this financial year.

Colombia

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he has taken to ensure that the Colombian Government conducts a full investigation into human rights violations in Colombian cities; and if he will make a statement. [29227]

Mr. MacShane: We are very concerned about the deteriorating human rights situation in Colombia. I had comprehensive discussions with the Colombian Government about human rights, including allegations of human rights violations in the town of Barrancabermeja, during my visit to Colombia last October. Last year, HM ambassador to Colombia and other embassy staff visited Medellin, Cali and other major cities and towns where they met and expressed support for peace activists and human rights NGOs, and raised our concerns with the Colombian authorities. We strongly support the work of the Colombian human rights ombudsman, who I met last October, who regularly publishes reports into human rights violations.

Visas

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many applications for a visa to visit family members in the United Kingdom were refused in (a) November and (b) December 2001. [28787]

Mr. Bradshaw: Provisional figures, based on monthly statistical returns from the largest 110 entry clearance posts handling 98 per cent. of all visa applications are:

Refused November 2001: 3,846[1]

Refused December 2001: 2,164[2]

[1] Figures from six posts still awaited.

[2] Figures from 29 posts still awaited.

Terrorist Attacks (Middle East)

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what assessment he has made of the number of terrorist attacks carried out by members of the Fatah from within the Palestinian Authority in the last 12 months; [28831]

(2) what assessment he has made of the organisations responsible for the terrorist attack on the Israeli town of Afula on 27 November 2001. [28832]

Mr. Bradshaw: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Eastwood (Mr. Murphy) on 9 January 2002, Official Report, column 919W.

World Conference Against Racism

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in negotiating and translating the final text for the Declaration and Programme of Action agreed at the UN World Conference Against Racism held in Durban from 31 August to 8 December 2001; what preparations he has made to publish and distribute English and other language versions of the final text in the UK; what preparations he has made to consult NGOs and minority ethnic organisations on the construction of a national plan of action based on these texts as required by the Durban agreement; and what his time scale is for consultation with (a) devolved Administrations and (b) dependent territories. [29246]

Peter Hain: The agreed Declaration and Programme of Action of the World Conference Against Racism (WCAR) were published by the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights on 2 January. English, French and Spanish versions are currently available on the website of the OHCHR www.ohchr.ch. The UN General Assembly Third Committee will reconvene in February to adopt the documents formally. Home Office officials will hold a preliminary consultation with NGOs and others involved in the preparations for WCAR on 4 February to discuss, inter alia, publication and further translation of the documents in the UK and the construction of a national plan of action. The devolved Administrations, who were also consulted before Durban, have been invited to the 4 February meeting. The Home Office will send copies of the documents to the dependent territories for consultation once they have been formally adopted by the UN.

Poland (EU Accession)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what role Britain is playing in helping Poland to join the EU. [28916]

Peter Hain: My right hon. Friends the Prime Minister and the Foreign Secretary and I have regular contact with our Polish counterparts. We are heavily involved in the Commission's Twinning programme: since 1998, we have won involvement in 23 Polish projects, covering such areas as organised crime and implementation of the CAP. Our action plan with Poland covers a range of further bilateral assistance to their accession preparations. We are doing all we can to assist Poland with her accession negotiations, as we want to see Poland ready by the end of this year to join the EU.

Iraq

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what evidence he has been given indicating whether the al-Qaeda network has a presence in Iraq. [28894]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have seen no evidence which demonstrates that an al-Qaeda network exists in Iraq.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the United States Administration on extension of the war on terrorism to Iraq. [28895]

Mr. Bradshaw: We frequently discuss all aspects of Iraq policy with our US counterparts. We are not speculating about the prospects of military action beyond Afghanistan.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on sanctions on Iraq; and what plans there are to end them. [28892]

Mr. Bradshaw: UN controls on Iraq, imposed after its invasion of Kuwait in 1990, have successfully contained Iraq's ability to attack its neighbours, use chemical weapons against the Iraqi people and develop weapons of mass destruction (WMD)—all of which are part of its quite recent history. UN resolution 1284, a UK initiative, continues to offer Iraq the route out of these controls, if it chooses to co-operate and meet its international obligations, particularly on the disposal of its WMD. All members of the Security Council believe that rigorous controls must however remain on the Iraqi regime while it refuses to co-operate. In the meantime, the UK continues to lead the way in refining these controls to improve the flow of goods to the Iraqi people, while maintaining control on the Iraqi regime's access to WMD/military-related items.

Environmental Appraisals

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many officials from his Department have attended the environmental appraisal and integration into policy training course run by the Civil Service College. [29007]

Peter Hain [holding answer 21 January 2002]: No FCO officials have attended the course at the Civil Service College. We have developed our own suite of training courses covering environment, with the help of the University of Surrey Centre for Environmental Strategy. The courses provide guidance on how to integrate environment into foreign policy and FCO operations.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the last occasion was on which he requested an environmental appraisal before making a policy decision. [29004]

Peter Hain [holding answer 21 January 2002]: No such request has been made.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what procedures his Department has to ensure environmental appraisals are undertaken prior to (a) administrative and (b) policy decisions being made. [29005]

Peter Hain [holding answer 21 January 2002]: Consultation with the relevant FCO department is required on all administrative and policy decisions with an environmental impact.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans his Department has to appraise the environmental implications of its Spending Review submission to the Treasury. [29006]

Peter Hain [holding answer 21 January 2002]: The FCO will submit a Sustainable Development Report to the Treasury as part of its Spending Review submission. The environmental implications of the submission will be considered in this report.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many environmental appraisals have been published by his Department since 1 January 2001; and if he will list the last four. [29003]

Peter Hain [holding answer 21 January 2002]: No such appraisals have been published.

International Terrorism

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next expects to speak to the Indonesian authorities concerning al-Qaeda and the war on terrorism. [29292]

Mr. Straw: Regular discussions with the Indonesian authorities on a range of matters, including terrorism, continue.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the United States Government regarding the extension of the campaign against international terrorism; and if he will make a statement. [27678]

Mr. Straw: We regularly discuss all aspects of the campaign against terrorism with the US Government. We share the concern of all responsible governments at the existence of international terrorist networks.

Ministerial Visit (Africa)

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which countries he will be visiting during his forthcoming visit to Africa; and if the Prime Minister will be accompanying him. [29289]

Mr. Straw: I am paying a joint visit with French Foreign Minister Vedrine on 21–23 January 2002 to the Democratic Republic of Congo, Rwanda, Burundi and Uganda. The Prime Minister will not be accompanying us.

Money Laundering (African Governments)

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent investigations he has undertaken to check that senior members of the Governments of (a) Kenya, (b) Zambia and (c) Zimbabwe and their respective families have not laundered money through (i) the City of London and (ii) Switzerland. [29118]

Peter Hain [holding answer 21 January 2002]: The UK plays a leading role in international efforts to combat money laundering and corruption. The UK co-operates with a wide range of international partners to this end.

I am withholding further information under Exemption 4(b) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Turkey (EU Accession)

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of Turkey's progress towards meeting the entry requirements for accession into the EU; and if he will make a statement. [27679]

Mr. Straw: We welcome Turkey's recent constitutional changes as progress towards meeting the Copenhagen criteria. As the Laeken European Council in December noted, Turkey's reforms have brought forward the prospect of the opening of EU accession negotiations for Turkey. Further reforms are needed before Turkey can start negotiations with the EU. We are therefore encouraging the Turkish Government to continue their programme of political and economic reform, in line with the Accession Partnership, notably with regard to human rights.

China

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Chinese authorities to ensure that there will be no human rights abuse in China during the preparations and hosting of the 2008 Olympics. [28716]

Mr. MacShane: We take every opportunity to press the Chinese authorities to improve their human rights record. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary did so with the Chinese Foreign Minister, Mr. Tang Jiaxuan, on 17 January.

Civil Defence Grant

Mr. Miller: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the level of civil defence grant will be for the next financial year. [30365]

Mr. Leslie: The Government have now completed their consideration of what is necessary and affordable for emergency planning by local authorities having regard to the demands that have been placed on emergency planners in recent times. We have decided, subject to the Civil Defence (Grant) Bill completing its passage through Parliament, to maintain the total grant level at around this year's level, currently estimated at some £18.6 million. The next stage is to decide how the grant will be distributed between the eligible authorities. Consideration is currently being given to the use of a formula and we will consult local authority representatives before finalising the grant allocation mechanism.

Special Advisers

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the average time is that the Head of his Department has recommended since May 1997 between a special adviser leaving his Department and taking up outside employment; and if he will make a statement. [28910]

The Deputy Prime Minister and First Secretary of State: I refer the hon. Member to the answer provided to him by the Prime Minister on 21 January 2002, Official Report, column 594W.

Civil Servants

Mr. Wray: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) how many civil servants work for each Government Department; [28068]

(2) in each Government Department, what proportion of civil servants are (a) women and (b) from ethnic minorities. [28071]

Mr. Leslie: Figures for April 2001 were published on 8 November 2001 in a press notice, copies of which can be found in the Library of the House. This information can also be accessed on the world wide web at www.civil-service.gov.uk/statistics.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the salary is for each of the civil service grades. [28069]

Mr. Leslie: The latest information, broken down by salary and grade level, is published in "Civil Service Statistics 2000" and is based on 1 April 2000 data. Copies of the publication can be found in the Library of the House. Table H of that publication shows numbers of civil servants by salary band and responsibility level. Departments and agencies are responsible for their own grading structures, but these have been allocated to broad responsibility levels to give a common basis for tabulation.

For the senior civil service, new bands will be introduced from 1 April 2002. I refer my hon. Friend to the Prime Minister's reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Aberdeen, North (Mr. Savidge) on 10 January 2002, Official Report, column 993W, and to the documents placed in the Library of the House.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Empty Properties

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what her estimate is of the (a) annual cost and (b) total value of the empty properties owned by (i) her Department, (ii) her agencies and (iii) other public bodies for which she has had responsibility in each of the last four years. [30075]

Hilary Benn: The Department for International Development owns no empty properties. There are no agencies or other public bodies for which we are responsible.

Afghanistan

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the frequency of the accidental triggering of land mines arising from the internal emigration of Afghans from the cities to the countryside following the start of the bombing of Afghan cities in October 2001. [28652]

Hilary Benn: Afghanistan has long been one of the countries most severely affected by land mine contamination, a problem which has existed for about 20 years.

The provision of precise information on mine/UXO victims since September 2001 is very limited. Reporting to hospitals by land mine/UXO victims has been disrupted by hostilities and by the restrictions on freedom of movement. The limited information that has been reported to the Mine Action Programme for Afghanistan (MAPA) indicates that land mines continue to claim lives throughout the country as people move in areas that are at risk. Unfortunately the problem is expected to worsen with the increasing repatriation of refugees and internally displaced persons (IDPs).

Mine action operations will continue to be focused on supporting humanitarian aid movements through the clearance of communication routes, airports and high priority areas near to civilian populations, thereby reducing the risk for returnees. Coalition forces are sharing information with the United Nations Mine Action Service (UNMAS).

As part of our overall commitment of £60 million to support the UN led humanitarian and recovery effort, we have allocated £3 million through UNMAS for future humanitarian mine action interventions in Afghanistan. This will cover mine clearance operations in Afghanistan as described above.

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what (a) money and (b) logistical resources have been (i) donated to and (ii) committed to the reconstruction of the physical, environmental and institutional infrastructures of Afghanistan by the United Kingdom and other donor countries. [28521]

Hilary Benn: We have set aside £20 million in this financial year to support the Interim Administration and the United Nations-led transitional recovery and rehabilitation process, while continuing to respond to humanitarian needs. This includes a contribution of £2 million already provided to the UN Afghan Interim Authority Fund to provide salaries of key public servants, equipment and supplies. As well as financial assistance, we are providing technical personnel and logistical, material and other practical support.

At the international conference on the reconstruction of Afghanistan held in Tokyo from 21–22 January 2002, I announced a significant contribution to be used for the long term rehabilitation of Afghanistan. The UK has committed £200 million over the next five financial years for both reconstruction and humanitarian activities. The majority of this pledge will be channelled through UN agencies and non-governmental organisations.

This pledge is in addition to the significant sums that the UK has contributed to the World bank, European Union and Asian Development bank, which will also direct further funds into Afghanistan in the coming years. The UK share of the European Union pledge alone with be 20 per cent.

More than 50 countries and international organisations are currently represented at the Tokyo conference and a consolidated total of pledges will be announced when the conference concludes. This will be reported on the website www.reliefweb.int.

Money Laundering (African Governments)

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what attempts she is making to monitor money sent overseas by President Mugabe; [28759]

(2) what attempts she is making to monitor money sent overseas by President Daniel Arap Moi of Kenya; [28760]

(3) what discussions she has had with the Swiss authorities in order to freeze President Mugabe's overseas accounts. [28761]

Peter Hain: I have been asked to reply.

The UK plays a leading role in international efforts to combat money laundering and corruption. The UK co-operates with a wide range of international partners to this end.

I am withholding further information under Exemption 4(b) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Special Educational Needs

Angela Watkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will ensure that special schools continue to be part of the range of special needs provision. [27056]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Government's policy on special schools is clear. We want to build on the wealth of expertise within the special school sector and ensure it is at the heart of inclusive education systems. Special schools have a continuing and vital role to play, and in future will need to be confident, outward looking centres of excellence working in partnership with mainstream schools. It is for local education authorities to determine the pattern of their provision in order to meet pupils' needs and take account of parents' wishes.

School Funding (London)

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what has been the total spending on schools in each London borough in each of the last 10 years. [28177]

Mr. Timms: The information requested is contained in the table. Expenditure in running these authorities was affected by schools becoming grant-maintained during the early part of this period, and by the return of grant-maintained schools to LEA-maintained status in 1999–2000.

[1] Total funding on schools is given by Net Institutional Expenditure which covers all school-based recurrent spending, including teaching and non-teaching staff salaries, school premises costs, equipment and supplies, and unspent balances held by schools at the year end. It excludes spending on special schools, central administration and support services such as transport and school meals as well as capital expenditure.

NIE includes school balances for most years. However, balance information was not available for some previous years, and in some cases for special schools. Therefore, NIE figures across the series may not be strictly comparable.

Expenditure data for 1990–2001 to 1998–99 inclusive are taken from RO1 returns; data for 1999–2000 taken from local authorities' S52 outturn statements.

School Teachers' Review Body

Mr. Joyce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the report of the School Teachers' Review Body. [29889]

Estelle Morris: The 2002 report of the School Teachers' Review Body has been laid before Parliament and is available in the Vote Office. I am grateful to the Chair and members of the Review Body for sustaining their important work on the modernisation of the pay system for the teaching profession.

In making their recommendations, the Review Body were required to have regard to:

> the principles of good school leadership, incentives for excellence, a strong culture of professional development and better support for teachers to focus on teaching;
> the Government's priorities for delivering a higher quality education service;
> local government funding levels, from which all service improvements and pay settlements must be funded;
> the Government's inflation target, which required responsibility in all pay settlements;

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

> the need for schools to recruit, retain and motivate sufficient teachers and members of the leadership group of the required quality to deal effectively with the challenges they face;
> any prospects there may be of making the pay structure simpler and more flexible; and > the cost of registration with the General Teaching Councils for England and Wales.

I have considered the report carefully against these considerations and am satisfied that they are met. Accordingly I have decided to accept the Review Body's main statutory recommendations subject to consultation. They are in line with the Government's prudent and disciplined approach to public spending and their commitment to deliver high quality public services and low inflation.

My proposals, which will take effect from 1 September 2002 except where stated otherwise, are as follows:

General pay increase

> With effect from 1 April 2002, the values of the pay spine and scale points and allowances for qualified and unqualified classroom teachers, members of the leadership group and advanced skills teachers should be increased by 3.5 per cent.; London allowances other than the inner London Supplement should be increased by 3.5 per cent.; and a sum of £33 should be added to all spine and scale points for qualified teachers in recognition of the cost of General Teaching Council fees.

Main pay scale for classroom teachers

> The main pay scale for classroom teachers should be shortened from nine points to six, and the distinction between good honours graduates and others abolished so that all newly qualified entrants will be eligible to apply for the performance threshold after five years.

Upper pay scale

> The Review Body have asked that sufficient resources be made available to ensure that teachers who meet the performance criteria for progression on the upper pay scale can in fact progress. This is not a statutory recommendation, because funding is not part of teachers' statutory conditions of employment. I do not propose to increase special grant funding. The special grant is no more than a contribution to funds already available in school budgets, to encourage headteachers and governing bodies to award points as appropriate.
> Upper pay scale points should remain an entitlement when teachers transfer between schools and also that there should not be scope for voluntary forfeiture.

Leadership group pay

> Governing bodies should have the authority to change the headteacher's individual school ranges (ISR) at any time in order to attract or retain a headteacher. The existing provision for the governing body to set, in exceptional circumstances, an ISR to extend beyond the school group maximum should be available for retention as well as for recruitment purposes. The justification for such a decision should be required to be recorded in writing.
> Up to two performance points should be available to be awarded in any one year to members of the leadership group when the governing body considers such action to be justified.
> Where headteachers are given a temporary ISR in circumstances where they are seconded to turn around a failing school, and do not receive one or more performance points because they revert to their main posts, such points should be paid as a lump sum.
> Two extra points should be added on top of each school range, including the creation of extra spine points L42 and L43, to allow such an extension for group eight, in order to provide adequate scope for setting and reviewing ISRs.

The performance threshold

> Monitoring should continue in order to ensure any patterns of disadvantage among applicants for the performance threshold are quickly detected and their causes remedied.
> External assessors should visit schools and local authority services/units with applicants on a selective rather than universal basis.
> Teachers reaching the top of the main pay scale in September 2002 should be eligible to apply for threshold assessment in autumn 2002 as well as teachers reaching the top of the pay scale in September 2001.
> The Department should monitor the impact of guidance on threshold standards during the third round of threshold assessment and hold further discussions with the parties on the wording of the standards themselves if significant concerns remain.
> The Department should consult the interested parties on the issue of recognition of sixth form college professional standards and make a decision accordingly.
> The Department, in consultation with the parties, should ensure that effective feedback arrangements are implemented and efforts continue to improve and simplify the application process.
> The Department should ensure that the review process operates more quickly in future.
> The above proposals should take effect as soon as appropriate.

Advanced skills teachers (ASTs)

> The Department should pursue with the interested parties the issues it raised in evidence in relation to inreach and outreach duties, management roles and review of pay ranges. The requirement for new ASTs to have passed the performance threshold will be removed.

Other issues

> The fifth management allowance for classroom teachers should be retained.
> The Department should work together with the interested parties to establish more coherent and consistent procedures for payment for in-service training, initial teacher training activities and out-of-school learning activities.
> The Department should resolve the issue of recognition of relevant teaching and non-teaching experience through the award of experience points in consultation with the interested parties.
> The Department should again produce a statement on the pay structure, for issue to teachers in 2002.
> The Department will consider further with the interested parties whether it should undertake a study into the pay and conditions of headteachers in early years education in 2002.

The Department will consider further with the interested parties whether it should initiate a review of the pay and terms and conditions of unattached teachers.

The Department will report in its evidence in September 2002, for the main 2003–04 pay review, on progress in response to the following requests by the Review Body for reviews of:

- the scope and nature of the evidence, information and statistics it collects and provides on teacher recruitment, retention and labour market issues;
- how it monitors the use of pay flexibilities and advises on their application. Better monitoring and advice might obviate the need for prescriptive guidance and further the Department's aim of simpler pay arrangements;
- the nature of its advice and direction on the application of pay policies to borderline and atypical groups; and
- the scope for greater co-ordination of the current support network of assessors, advisers, local recruitment co-ordinators etc.

Finance

I have considered pressures on local government funding. The cost of the headline increase and shortening the main scale is estimated to be £560 million in 2002–03. This will be affordable within the resources available to local authorities. Education Standard Spending (ESS) will increase by 5.7 per cent. after adjustments.

Next steps

I am grateful to the Review Body for recommending a general increase at a level which is fair and which can be implemented without staging. I will now initiate consultation with the employer organisations, the teacher associations and other interested parties as required under section 2(1) of the School Teachers' Pay and Conditions Act 1991, before I make provision by order for teachers' pay and conditions in 2002–03.

Pupil Exclusions

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils were excluded in 2000–01 who had previously been excluded from maintained schools. [23419]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested is not available centrally.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the Government's policy of excluding pupils from schools. [29259]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 22 January 2002]: The Government's current policy on exclusion from schools is set out in sections 64–68 of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998, and in Circular 10/99, "Social Inclusions: Pupil Support". Head teachers, governors, LEAs and appeal panels should have regard to this guidance in discharging their functions in relation to pupil exclusion.

The Department will be issuing a consultation paper on a draft revision of the guidance this week. The revised draft guidance consolidates the earlier amendments but at the same time represents a thorough revision of the whole text. It supports the right of a head teacher to govern their school as they see fit, ensuring their schools are safe places to learn and teach in. It also puts into place clear guidance to ensure that the sanction of exclusion is not used inappropriately. The existing guidance remains in force until responses to the revised draft guidance are considered and a new version published in the summer.

Permanent exclusions fell to 8,300 in 1999–2000, a decrease of one fifth from 10,400 in 1998–99 and nearly a third less than the peak of 12,700 in 1996–97. The Government's target of an 8,400 reduction by 2002 has been met. The Government do not intend to set fresh targets for reducing permanent exclusions further. We can now move the agenda on to promoting the fundamentals of good behaviour, and focus on early intervention and the prevention of exclusion.

Departmental Funding Resources and Initiatives

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list all (a) funding resources and (b) initiatives sponsored by her Department for (i) the private sector, (ii) the voluntary sector and (iii) local authorities. [26847]

Estelle Morris: Most of my Department's expenditure is delivered through schools and local education authorities (LEAs), and partner organisations, including non-departmental public bodies, which in turn pass funding to providers and institutions in the private, voluntary and other sectors.

The bulk of funding for local authorities is made up of the Education Standard Spending Assessment, £22.5 billion in the current financial year, the Standards Fund, £2.5 billion, and credit approvals of £0.5 billion. The Department also makes some separate grants available to local authorities, for example for Education Maintenance Allowances.

The Department has allocated £450 million in private finance initiative credits to local authorities in 2001–02 to support public-private partnerships in schools.

Full details of the initiatives sponsored by my Department for the private sector, the voluntary sector and local authorities could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The Department is currently contributing a comprehensive Home Office-led exercise, which is mapping involvement and funding in the voluntary and community sector. I expect my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary to place this information in the Library when the exercise is completed.

School Funding

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list for each of the years (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02 the average level of funding for (i) each secondary pupil in England and (ii) pupils attending specialist schools. [28963]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 21 January 2002]: The table provides the information requested at part (i):

Average funding per secondary pupil in England

Year	SSA	Grants	Total
2000–01	3,180	230	3,410
2001–02	3,310	380	3,690

Notes:

1. Figures reflect Education SSA (secondary sub-block) plus an estimate of all school related revenue grants in DfES's DEL relevant to secondary pupils (aged 11–15).

2. Secondary school grant figures are estimated in cases where grants are allocated for more than one phase of education.

3. Secondary schools grant figures include the specialist school element of the Standards Fund.
4. Figures are in cash terms.
5. 2001–02 figures are provisional as some grant allocations have still to be finalised.
6. Figures rounded to nearest £10.

In response to part (ii) of the question, specialist schools receive additional annual funding calculated from pupil numbers taken from the annual school census returns each year. In 2000–01 schools received £122 per pupil for all pupils up to 1,000 and over 1,200 pupils. In 2001–02 schools will receive £123 per pupil for all pupils up to 1,000 and over 1,200 pupils.

Specialist Schools

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what advance notice is required by her Department for associated applications for specialist school status for the (a) March 2002 and (b) October 2002 bidding rounds; and if she will make a statement. [29195]

Mr. Timms: There is no specific notice requirement for associated applications for specialist school designation. However, as stated in the guidance documents setting out the assessment criteria for applicant schools, DfES is willing to consider outline proposals from schools interested in submitting associated applications in advance of the closing date of a specialist school competition. Associated application arrangements will typically involve a group of secondary schools as part of a strategic approach to specialist school provision in an area. In due course each application will be judged on its individual merits. To give schools interested in making associated applications an advance indication of the likely view to be taken on the proposals as a whole we would encourage them to show their outline proposals to DfES at least six months before the closing date in which the first associated application will be submitted.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what her estimate is of the value of sponsorship by the private sector for specialist schools to date which has been available (a) in cash and (b) in kind; and if she will make a statement. [29196]

Mr. Timms: The aggregate contribution of private sector soonsorship to specialist schools to date is at least £58 million. Most applications will have elements of cash sponsorship and sponsorship in kind though the split varies greatly from school to school. The breakdown of cash and in kind sponsorship for each specialist school is on each school's file and not collated centrally. It is therefore not possible to give estimates of the cash and kind amounts except at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many applications for specialist school status have been rejected on the basis that the school in question has performance indicators which show a declining trend of performance; and if she will make a statement. [29202]

Mr. Timms: We do not maintain figures on the number of schools where a declining trend in performance has been a factor in a school's application being unsuccessful. GCSE performance is one of a range of factors taken into account as part of an applicant's specialist school development plan but has never been the sole factor in deciding not to approve an application for specialist school designation.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what her estimate is of the level of investment in specialist schools for each year from May 1997 to 2005, broken down by (a) extra capital funding and (b) extra current expenditure; and if she will make a statement. [29204]

Mr. Timms: The level of investment in specialist schools broken down by (a) capital and (b) extra recurrent expenditure from 1996–97 to 2003–04 is provided in the table. Any future and additional funding will be considered as part of the 2002 Spending Review.

£ million

Financial year	Capital	Recurrent	Total
1996–97	7.0	16.0	23.0
1997–98	7.7	25.4	33.1
1998–99	8.0	32.8	40.8
1999–2000	4.5	42.9	47.4
2000–01	13.2	58.7	71.9

2002–03	16.6	91.4	108.0
2003–04	16.8	110.2	127.0

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many specialist schools have increased the curriculum hours devoted to their chosen specialism, following award of specialist status; and if she will make a statement. [29209]

Mr. Timms: The information requested is not available centrally.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the specialist schools in (a) Somerset and (b) Dorset, giving the specialism in each case. [29210]

Mr. Timms: A list of specialist schools by specialism in (a) Somerset and (b) Dorset is given below:

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what measures of deprivation are considered when considering applications for specialist school status; and if she will make a statement. [29211]

Mr. Timms: In accordance with the guidance documents which set out the criteria for the consideration of specialist school applications, some preference may be given to applications from areas of social deprivation as measured by pupils' known eligibility for free school meals.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will publish the latest research showing the effects of specialist school status on school performance; and if she will make a statement. [29212]

Mr. Timms: The latest research commissioned by the Department was published in 2000. An analysis of the performance in 2001 of specialist schools operational from September 2000 or before will shortly be prepared by Professor David Jesson on behalf of the Technology Colleges Trust and I expect this analysis to be published in the spring.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the nature of the links which she requires between primary feeder schools and secondary schools which are successful in becoming specialist schools. [29214]

Mr. Timms: The requirements for specialist school community development plans are set out in the published guidance documents on each specialism. Applications for specialist school designation must include proposals to work with at least five named schools, which will typically include one or more of the applicant's feeder primary schools. Although there are no specific requirements covering the nature of work which specialist schools undertake with their primary partners we would normally expect such links to range from, for example, the provision of access to specialist resources and facilities to joint teaching and learning activities, including specialist subject INSET, or project work to help progression between Key Stages 2 and 3.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the criteria considered by her Department when assessing bids for specialist school status. [29215]

Mr. Timms: The criteria against which applications for specialist school designation are assessed are published in eight guidance documents each dealing with one of the eight categories of specialism. These set out the considerations taken into account when deciding to designate specialist schools and are based around the eligibility of sponsorship and the quality of the school and community development plans. Copies of guidance documents have been place in the Library.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the local education authorities which have 30 per cent. or more of their pupils in specialist schools; if she will make a statement on the reasons for which further schools in such LEAs will not be considered for specialist school bids; and if she will indicate for how long the ban on further bids in such areas will last. [29216]

Mr. Timms: The local authorities which have 30 per cent. of their secondary age pupils in specialist maintained secondary schools are listed in the table.

Annual Schools' Census

The restriction which applied to the application process for October 2000 and March 2001 specialist school competitions on allowing further applications from schools in local education authorities where there was already 30 per cent. of secondary aged pupils in mainstream specialist schools was lifted in July 2001.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what targets she has set for the number of successful bidders for specialist school status in the (a) March 2002 and (b) October 2002 bidding rounds in terms of (i) overall numbers, (ii) breakdown by specialisms, (iii) geographical spread, (iv) deprivation characteristics of the catchment areas and (v) joint bids; and if she will make a statement. [29217]

Mr. Timms: We have not set targets for the number of specialist schools beyond those already published—at least 830 by September 2002, at least 1,000 by September 2003 and at least 1,500 by September 2005. Apart from a target of 200 sports colleges by September 2004 in connection with the school sport co-ordinator programme, we have not set targets for the number of successful applications in relation to specialisms, geographic spread, deprivation characteristics of catchment areas or joint applications.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what research her Department has carried out into the difficulties faced by schools in deprived areas in raising the private sector funds needed to apply for specialist status; what plans she has to reduce the £50,000 threshold; and if she will make a statement. [29220]

Mr. Timms: The Department has not carried out research on the ability of schools to raise sponsorship but we do keep specialist school sponsorship requirements under regular review. We have no plans to abolish the requirement for schools to raise sponsorship to support a specialist school application or to reduce the level of sponsorship required.

New Schools

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what her estimate is of the number of (a) beacon schools, (b) academy schools, (c) specialist schools and (d) new faith schools in each year from 1997 to 2007; and if she will make a statement. [29207]

Mr. Timms: The information is as follows:

Year	Specialist schools	Beacon schools
September 1997	258	0
September 1998	330	75
September 1999	403	200
September 2000	536	550
September 2001	685	1,000

Year	Faith schools opened in each calendar year
1997	5
1998	9
1999	6
2000	4
2001	5

Targets for increasing the number of specialist schools and beacon schools are as follows:

Year	Specialist schools	Beacon schools
2002	At least 830	1,150
2003	At least 1,000	1,350
2004	—	1,500
2005	At least 1,500	—

At present no city academies are open. The target is to expand the city academy programme year on year and for at least 20 academies to be open by 2005.

Secondary Schools

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what her estimate is of the number of secondary schools for the period 1997 to 2007. [29208]

Mr. Timms: The available information requested is shown in the table:

Number of secondary schools[1] as at January each year 1997 to 2001

January	Number of schools
1997	3,569
1998	3,567
1999	3,560
2000	3,550
2001	3,481

[1] Includes middle deemed schools.

The Department does not produce forecasts for the number of new schools. Planning the provision of new schools is the responsibility of local education authorities.

Expenditure (Scotland)

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of her Department's budget has been spent in Scotland since the institution of her Department in its present form. [29518]

Estelle Morris [holding answer 22 January 2002]: Most of the expenditure on education and skills in Scotland is devolved to the Scottish Executive.

My Department does, however, incur some expenditure in Scotland on Career Development Loans and Investors in People (£1.5 million and £0.1 million respectively in 2001–02). Expenditure in Scotland on those programmes makes up less than 0.01 per cent. of my Department's budget for 2001–02.

There is also some expenditure by the Student Loans Company (SLC) on student support for those studying in Scotland. Information on relevant student support is not held centrally but the SLC has agreed to write to the hon. Member further on this.

Parental Choice

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills in respect of each local education authority and for England, how many pupils did not obtain admission to the secondary school of their first choice in the most recent year for which information is available, in (a) absolute terms and (b) as a proportion of the total number of pupils transferring to secondary schools. [29659]

Mr. Timms: This information is not held centrally. However, research undertaken by the Office for National Statistics, on behalf of the Department for Education and Skills, looked at parents' experiences of the process of choosing a secondary school. Findings from this nationally representative survey of parents of children starting secondary school in September 1999 and September 2000 found that 92 per cent. of parents received an offer of a place in the school listed as their first preference.

Sixth Form Funding

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which local education authorities she estimates to be entitled to education budget transitional support grant on the basis of the transfer of post-16 support to learning and skills councils in 2002–03; and if she will estimate the size of the grant in each case. [29714]

Mr. Timms: The transfer of sixth form funding to the LSC from April 2002 will be cost neutral at LEA level—the adjustments to individual SSAs to take account of the transfer will match the payments that LEAs get back from the LSC. But we propose to pay a special grant to a minority of LEAs where the changes being made to the funding methodology would not fully eliminate the impact of the funding changes in 2002–03.

I expect details of the special grant to be released after consultation on the Local Government Finance Settlement has been completed at the end of the month.

Standard Spending Assessment

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the standard spending assessment per secondary pupil in each local education authority was for (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01 and (c) 2001–02; and if she will estimate this figure for each (i) local education authority and (ii) learning and skills council in 2003–04 in total and (A) for 11 to 16 and (B) post-16 years pupils. [29715]

Mr. Timms: The information requested from 1999–2000 to 2001–02 is in the table. Allocations for 2003–04 have not yet been made so figures for that year are not available.

We are currently working up a new funding system for introduction in 2003–04, and that will affect funding allocations from that year.

TREASURY

Children's Tax Credit

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the number and nature of representations received calling for an increase of the children's tax credit in order to meet the cost of nurseries and child minders. [28762]

Dawn Primarolo: We are not aware of any representations to increase the level of children's tax credit to help with the costs of nurseries and child minders.

Euro Bank Accounts

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of euro accounts opened in the United Kingdom banks; and what percentage this is of the total. [29271]

Ruth Kelly: The latest quarterly review by the Association for Payment Clearing Systems (APACS) identified that there were about 135,000 euro bank accounts and approximately 6 per cent. of UK businesses have opened one.

Tobacco

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the revenue lost due to excise evasion on (a) hand-rolling tobacco and (b) cigarettes since the abolition of European fiscal frontiers; and how much of this revenue has been recovered. [24801]

Mr. Boateng: Relevant information concerning estimates of fraud can be found in the Customs and Excise technical paper "Measuring Indirect Tax Fraud", published on 27 November 2001, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Excise Movement and Control System

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the progress and expected time scale of measures to implement a computerised excise movement and control system throughout the EU. [26513]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 14 January 2002]: The Commission published a proposal for a decision of the European Parliament and of the European Council on computerising the movement and surveillance of excisable products on 19 November 2001. The proposal, if agreed, would establish the computerised system within five years.

VAT (Cancer Charities)

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the revenue that would be forgone if charities which pay irrecoverable VAT on the cost of building and refurbishing cancer treatment facilities were to be allowed to recover VAT or to have such work zero-rated. [26534]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 16 January 2002]: No estimate is available of the cost to the Exchequer of allowing charities to recover VAT on the cost of building and refurbishing cancer treatment facilities or the cost of having such work zero-rated.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the definition is of a hospice for the purposes of VAT; [26535]

(2) what his policy is towards the liability of hospices for VAT; [26533]

(3) if he will make a statement on how EU law affects his powers to determine the liability of charities for VAT on the construction and refurbishment of facilities for cancer treatment. [26531]

Mr. Boateng [holding answers 16 January 2002]: EU VAT law provides no specific relief for charities constructing or refurbishing facilities for cancer treatment. Neither does it provide any definition of a hospice. In the UK, the construction of new residential hospices is zero-rated provided the organisation that commissioned the building work also occupies it. The construction of new non-residential treatment facilities and the repair or refurbishment of existing buildings is standard-rated. Long-standing agreements with our European partners allow us to retain our existing zero-rates but prevent us from introducing any new ones.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to allow Macmillan Cancer Relief to recover VAT on its building costs incurred in respect of buildings which are owned or managed by the national health service. [26532]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 16 January 2002]: The Government looked very carefully at the issue of irrecoverable VAT as part of the 1999 Review of Charity Taxation, concluding that to allow refund would be prohibitively expensive and would breach fundamental principles of VAT law.

Customs are ready to provide help and advice to any charity experiencing VAT problems. They have recently written to the Chief Executive of Macmillan Cancer Relief and hope to meet the charity soon to discuss the VAT implications of their building programmes.

Intra-community Trade

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give the intra-Community trade declared despatch arrival values for January to February 2001 as a percentage of the corresponding values for January to February 2000. [24549]

Mr. Boateng: HM Customs and Excise collect statistics for intra-Community trade via the Intrastat system.

The declared intra-Community trade for arrivals and despatches for January and February 2001, expressed as percentages of the corresponding values for the same months of 2000 are as follows:

Arrivals

January 2001

Declarations as a percentage of value of January 2000 declarations—116 per cent.

February 2001

Declarations as a percentage of value of February 2000 declarations—106 per cent.

Despatches

January 2001

Declarations as a percentage of value of January 2000 declarations—117 per cent.

February 2001

Declarations as a percentage of value of February 2000 declarations—109 per cent.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the compliance rate of traders in statistical submissions for intra-Community transactions in January and February; and what percentage was received by the due date. [24550]

Mr. Boateng: HM Customs and Excise collect statistics for intra-Community trade via the Intrastat Supplementary Declaration. Declarations can be submitted on paper or electronically.

During 2001, paper declarations were to be submitted to Customs by the tenth day following the end of the reference period to which the declaration referred. Electronic declarations were to be submitted by the last day of the month following the end of the reference period to which the declaration referred.

Partially compliant traders are those who submit some, but not all, of their declarations by due date.

The percentages of declarations for January and February 2001 received by the due date are as follows:

Declarations received by respective due date

	Percentage
Date	Paper	Electronic

Single Market

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the changes in Customs and Excise duties arising from the operation of the European single market and cross-channel shopping; and what estimates were made before the single market came into force. [24803]

Mr. Boateng: No changes in Customs and Excise duties arose from the operation of the European single market and cross-channel shopping.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the changes in revenue to the Exchequer arising from the introduction of the European single market (a) through the increased allowances on importation of EC-produced cigarettes and tobacco products and (b) through increased smuggling of cigarettes and tobacco products. [24837]

Mr. Boateng: Customs and Excise make no estimates about the effects of the European single market on the smuggling of cigarettes and tobacco products.

VAT

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much on average each VAT inspector raised an additional VAT liability in the last financial year; and what is the average annual cost of employing a VAT inspector. [24380]

Mr. Boateng: In 2000–01 each VAT inspector raised, on average, £446,000 in net additional liability. The average cost of employing a VAT inspector is around £40,000.

Ian Lucas: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if a person registered for VAT can reclaim from the Customs and Excise the costs of building (a) a mausoleum for himself and (b) a home for himself. [28308]

Mr. Boateng: Anyone building a home for themself, whether or not they are VAT registered, is able to claim the VAT paid on goods and materials under the DIY builders refund scheme, details of which are available from the Customs and Excise National Advice Service on 0845 010 9000. The scheme applies only to dwellings, not to mausoleums.

Departmental Overspend

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which Departments overspent their allocated budget in 2000–01; and by how much in each case. [27927]

Mr. Andrew Smith: As set out in "Public Expenditure 2000–2001 Provisional Outturn" Cm 5243, one Department overspent its departmental expenditure limit in 2000–01—the Foreign and Commonwealth Office by £4,932,000.

International Aid

Tony Baldry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he estimates the Government will reach the UN target of 0.7 per cent. of GNI for international aid. [27863]

Mr. Boateng: The Government remain fully committed to the UN 0.7 per cent. oda/GNP target. We have set out our plans for the next three years to 2003–04 and, as these show, development assistance as a proportion of GNP will rise to 0.33 per cent. in 2003–04, up from 0.26 per cent. in 1997. In his speech in New York and in his pre-Budget report speech, the Chancellor emphasised his commitment to ensuring further substantial increases in development assistance. The forthcoming Spending Review is an opportunity to consider plans for development spending beyond 2003–04, alongside other priorities and pressures.

Aid effectiveness is also important as well as aid volumes. The Government are committed to redirecting their development assistance budget to the poorest countries, particularly those with effective Governments pursuing high growth and pro-poor economic and social policies. In addition the Government have untied all their aid as from 1 April last year.

Enron

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will suspend Arthur Andersen accountants from Government contracts until the US Senate Committee investigation into Enron is completed. [28518]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I am aware of no evidence to suggest any involvement by UK members of Arthur Andersen and so there are no grounds to consider suspending the firm from Government contracts.

Oil and Gas Industry (National Insurance)

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans HM Treasury has to amend the liability for and collection method of NIC contributions from those individuals employed offshore in the UK continental shelf area by non-UK companies; and if he will make a statement. [29479]

Dawn Primarolo: We have no plans to amend the liability for or collection method of national insurance contributions from these individuals.

Aggregates Levy

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of the introduction of the aggregates levy on the Scottish economy in terms of (a) employment and (b) output. [29362]

Mr. Boateng: A Regulatory Impact Assessment for the aggregates levy was published at the time of the Budget 2000. It is available from the Customs and Excise website.

Terrorism (Spending)

Mr. Howard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide a breakdown of the expected cost to Her Majesty's Government over the current financial year of the measures to combat terrorism announced by the Home Secretary on 15 October 2001, Official Report, columns 923–25. [10008]

Mr. Blunkett [holding answer 25 October 2001]: I have been asked to reply.

£8.5 million of additional funding has been allocated for a range of anti-terrorism measures in the current year. In addition to this, my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer, in his Statement on the pre-Budget report, announced on 27 November that a further £30 million had been made available to the Metropolitan police and other police forces to fund the need for additional policing since 11 September, during the current financial year.

National Minimum Wage (Wealden)

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in Wealden received the recent increase in the national minimum wage. [29712]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Charles Hendry, dated 23 January 2002:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question about the number of people in Wealden who have received the increase in the national minimum wage (NMW). (29712)

Estimates for Parliamentary Constituencies are not available.

DEFENCE

Gulf War Veterans

Mr. Savidge: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the latest figures are for deaths to Gulf veterans; and what the figures are among the control group. [30323]

Dr. Moonie: Peer reviewed scientific data comparing the mortality rates of UK Gulf veterans to an era group of service personnel who did not deploy to the Gulf were published for the first time in the Lancet on 1 July 2000. Updates to these figures were provided by the Ministry of Defence to the House on 20 July 2000, 22 January 2001 and 18 July 2001. The MOD has undertaken to continue to monitor the mortality of both Gulf veterans and the era group and will publish updated figures on a regular basis. The figures as at 31 December 2001 are shown in the table.

Overall, in the period 1 April 1991 to 31 December 2001, the mortality of UK Gulf veterans was no different than that of the control group. Slightly fewer Gulf veterans have died from disease-related causes than have those in the control group, whereas the number of Gulf veterans dying of external causes is a little higher than for the control group. These differences are similar to those shown by the figures published in July 2001.

Computer Crime

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many cases of computer (a) hacking, (b) fraud and (c) theft his Department recorded in 2000 and 2001; and on how many occasions in 2000 and 2001 computer systems in his Department have been illegally accessed by computer hackers within and outside his Department. [10975]

Dr. Moonie: The number of incidents affecting computer systems for the years 2000 and 2001 are summarised in the table:

Incident type	2000	2001[1]
Computer hacking total of which there were:	9	12
website defacements	3	2
internal incursions	6	10
Computer fraud	4	4
Computer theft[2]	267	312

[1] Reports thus far.

[2] Computer theft figures include desktops, laptops and items of computer peripheral equipment.

None of the instances of hacking had any operational impact, and despite widespread and frequent probes of the Ministry of Defence firewalls connected to the internet, there is no evidence of any successful incursion from an external source to any departmental computer system. While website defacement may constitute an offence under The Computer Misuse Act 1990, none of the instances recorded provided clear grounds for prosecution.

In the case of computer fraud, all instances are cases where MOD computers have been used in support of fraudulent activities, rather than specific fraud of a computer based system.

Cadets

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much grant was given to fund (a) army cadet forces and (b) Harrow School cadet force in each of the last three years. [22163]

Dr. Moonie: The amount of grant given to fund army cadet forces and Harrow School cadet force in each of the last three years is set out in the table:

£ million

Financial year	Army cadet forces	Harrow school cadet force
1998–99	3.558	0.008
1999–2000	3.606	0.008
2000–01	3.402	0.009

Notes:

1. Grants are allocated to cadet forces on a "per person" basis.
2. Harrow School Cadet Force is a Combined Cadet Force with some 450 members.
3. Grants are not the only funds provided to the Cadet Force; they are also allocated funds from the usual Ministry of Defence budgetary chain.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much has been spent on the army cadet force per annum since 1997. [20978]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 11 December 2001]: The amount spent on the army cadet force per annum since 1997 is shown in the table:

£ million

Financial year	Expenditure on the army cadet force
1997–98	27.1
1998–99	27.5
1999–2000	31.7
2000–01	32.0

Note:

This expenditure includes funding made available from the usual Ministry of Defence budgetary chain and Cadet Force grants.

RAF Aircraft

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his estimate is of the difference in planned expenditure between the 25th (a) A400M aircraft for the RAF and (b) C130J aircraft over the lifetime of the programme; and what the in-service date would be of the last aircraft. [28366]

Dr. Moonie: Any cost comparisons between these two aircraft are misleading because they provide different capabilities and their in-service dates are 10 years apart. For example, we expect that the A400M will have a 50 per cent. greater payload capacity and provide the RAF with a new capability to carry outsize loads too. We estimate that the acquisition costs of the A400M are approximately £1.6 billion (40 per cent.) greater (on an outturn basis) than those of the C130J. However, the difference at current prices is approximately £0.5 billion (12 per cent.).

The final C130J was accepted into service in June 2001 and we expect the 25th A400M to be delivered in 2014.

Staff Numbers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people were employed in his Department in each of the last four years. [23797]

Dr. Moonie: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office (Mr. Leslie) gave to the hon. Gentleman on 18 December 2001, Official Report, column 256W.

Lost/Stolen Property

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those items valued at more than £50 which have been stolen or lost from his Department in each of the last four years. [27992]

Dr. Moonie: Reported cases of stolen equipment are held centrally on a summary basis and relate only to suspected theft by Crown personnel and contractors of stores and equipment, usually recorded as multiples or combinations of small value items such as tools, items of clothing, foodstuffs etc. Full details of items of equipment valued at more than £50 which have been proven to have been stolen or recorded as lost could only be provided at disproportionate cost. However, a list of separately identified discrete items suspected of being stolen in each of the last four financial years and with an estimated individual or collective loss value of £1,000.00 or more is given as follows:

Ministerial Transport

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he last used the railway service in connection with his official duties; what station he left from and what was the destination; and whether it is his intention to make greater use of the railways in future. [28087]

Dr. Moonie: The Defence Secretary's travel arrangements are made in accordance with the guidance set out in Chapter 7 of the Ministerial Code and the accompanying guidance document Travel by Ministers. The most efficient and cost effective mode of transport is used, bearing in mind security considerations. Travel by rail is used when most appropriate.

The Secretary of State for Defence last used a train on official duties on 5 September 2001, travelling to Luton Parkway station. He also regularly travels by rail between the Ministry of Defence and his constituency, most recently on 21 January.

Afghanistan

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 17 January 2002, Official Report, column 392W, on Afghanistan, if he will place copies of his guidance on the handling of prisoners in Afghanistan in the Library; and under which paragraph of Exemption 1 he withheld details of the dates of issue. [29405]

Mr. Hoon: I am withholding copies in accordance with section (a) of Exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. This section of Exemption 1 also applied to my hon. Friend's previous question on dates.

Former WEU Agencies

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the (a) European Union Satellite Centre and (b) European Union Institute for Security Studies are operational as agencies of the European Union; and if he will make a statement. [29638]

Mr. Hoon: The former Western European Union bodies, the Satellite Centre and Institute for Security Studies, transferred to the European Union and began operation as agencies in support of the Common Foreign and Security Policy with effect from 1 January 2002.

Departmental Staff

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate total annual staff costs for his Department and its agencies by nation and region of the UK; and if he will make a statement. [6829]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Foot and Mouth

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what requests she has received from Northumberland county council for her Department to provide evidence to Professor Dower inquiry into the foot and mouth outbreak; what response she has made; and if she will make a statement. [28187]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 17 January 2002]: Northumberland county council notified me of the inquiry they had established and their invitation for written comments. In reply we forwarded comments on a series of topics which were likely to be of interest to the inquiry. Subsequently we have received some specific questions from Professor Dower and the inquiry team and a reply has been sent to meet their deadline.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 23 October 2001, Official Report, column 164W, on the costs of the foot and mouth outbreak, what the present estimate is of the total cost to public funds of the foot and mouth outbreak. [28243]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 17 January 2002]: The latest estimate of the cost of the foot and mouth disease outbreak stands at £2,059 million.

This includes a provisional forecast of £19 million for costs to MOD and other Government Departments. We are still awaiting costs from five other Government Departments but these amounts are expected to be very small.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what efforts she made to ensure value for money from contractors employed to assist with culling and farm clean-up work during the foot and mouth outbreak. [28184]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 17 January 2002]: We have made extensive use of professional project managers, quantity surveyors and forensic accountants to ensure value for money is attained on contracts placed during the foot and mouth crisis.

These have been supported as necessary by legal and procurement experts.

HFCs

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of plant and equipment installed in her Department's offices in the last 12 months contains HFCs. [15519]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 16 November 2001]: No central record is kept of plant and equipment installed in the Department. The Department is, though, well aware that in October 2000 regulations came into force which confirmed the total ban on the use of CFCs (chlorofluorocarbons) and introduced a ban on HCFCs (hydrochlorofluorocarbons) in new equipment from 1 January 2001. Substitute refrigerants have therefore been introduced whose benefits include reduced ozone depletion potential, toxicity, flammability and global warming potential. These substitute refrigerants include approved HFCs. The Department therefore endorses the use of the Office of Government Commerce Buying Solutions since they supply HFC based equipment. Our facilities managers and design consults are well aware of the regulations and specify new equipment accordingly.

BSE

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) on what date her Department became aware that meat from the offspring of a cow with BSE had entered the human food chain; [28688]

(2) on what date her Department informed the Food Standards Agency that meat from the offspring of a cow with BSE had entered the human food chain. [28687]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 18 January 2002]: The Animal Health Office discovered that an offspring had been moved while under restrictions on 3 January. After further investigation, a detailed written report outlining the circumstances of the case was received in London on 8 January. The Food Standards Agency was informed on 10 January.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she made of using postal services to obtain the passports of the offspring of cattle with BSE during the foot and mouth epidemic. [28690]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 18 January 2002]: There was no practical alternative to using postal services in circumstances where it was desirable to minimise visits both on to and off farms.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how many cases comprise the backlog in the seizure of animal passports in relation to BSE controls; and if she will make a statement; [28684]

(2) what response she has made to the Food Standards Agency's request for her Department to clear the backlog in the seizure of animal passports in relation to BSE controls. [28685]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 18 January 2002]: Animal Health Offices have been asked to seize all outstanding passports for offspring animals under BSE restrictions and to report on progress early in the week beginning 21 January. Animal Health Offices have also been instructed to prioritise offspring cull work.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs by what means her Department became aware that meat from the offspring of a cow with BSE had entered the human food chain. [28686]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 18 January 2002]: The Animal Health Office contacted the offspring's owner in order to arrange for it to be slaughtered. The farmer informed the Animal Health Office that the animal had been moved. Further investigation revealed that the animal had been slaughtered for human consumption.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to confiscate animal passports of cattle which are the offspring of animals with BSE and are awaiting slaughter. [28185]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 17 January 2002]: There are no changes to our policy that the passports of all offspring born after 1 August 1996 to suspected BSE cases should be removed. Checks are being made to ensure that this has happened in all cases. This does not alter the owner's responsibility to comply with restriction notices served on them.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many offspring of BSE-infected cattle were awaiting slaughter in January 2001; and what is the present number. [28186]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 17 January 2002]: 134 offspring of BSE-infected cattle were awaiting slaughter in Great Britain on 14 January 2001. As at 14 January 2002, there were 478 offspring awaiting slaughter.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to extend the loan action scheme to England. [29375]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 22 January 2002]: I assume the hon. Gentleman is referring to the loan action scheme to improve energy efficiency in small and medium enterprises run by the Energy Saving Trust in Scotland, or the similar scheme which the Trust operates in Northern Ireland. The introduction of a similar scheme in England would be a matter for consideration by the Energy Saving Trust and the recently formed Carbon Trust, in the preparation of their business plans.

Flood Defences (Lewes)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the implications for flood defence provision in Lewes resulting from the decision on the contribution of East Sussex County Council to the flood levy for 2002–03. [27539]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 16 January 2002]: I understand that the Sussex Local Flood Defence Committee is meeting again on 25 January to discuss the 2002–03 levy and its implications for the Environment Agency's plans for flood management. I await the agency's assessment of any implications for flood defence provision in Lewes.

Animal Experiments

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to seek changes to EU legislation in respect of the mandatory testing of chemicals on animals. [28633]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 22 January 2002]: In line with Government policy on experiments on live animals, the policy of the Department is to seek reduction in such experimentation wherever possible, consistent with the protection of human health and the environment. We take the view that, while a complete ban is not yet achievable, much more should be done to reduce the numbers of animals used in determining the environmental fate and effects of chemicals.

We are aware of the concern that has been raised that the EU Review of Chemicals legislation might lead to a large increase in the number of animals used in tests. We sympathise with these concerns, and have made it clear to the Commission of the European Communities and to other member states that a key objective of this review must be to keep the need for animal experimentation to an absolute minimum. This should include:

requiring companies to share information about chemicals

prioritising chemicals for testing finding and validating test methods which do not require the use of animals.

Lost/Stolen Property

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list those items valued at more than £50 which have been stolen or lost from her Department in each of the last four years. [27998]

Mr. Morley: The Department records show that the following items have been stolen or lost in the last four years. Data from 8 June 2001 relate to Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs while previous information covers Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

Air Pollution

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much funding has been made available by her Department to tackle air pollution in Buckinghamshire in each year since 1997. [27791]

Mr. Meacher: Resources to allow local authorities in Buckinghamshire and elsewhere to carry out their local air quality management duties have been provided every year since 1997 through the annual Local Government Finance Settlement. A total of a little over £2 million is included for these purposes in the annual settlement. Resources for individual local authority duties are not ring-fenced, however, and decisions on the allocation of resources are a matter for local authorities themselves. In addition to this, supplementary credit approvals are made available each year to local authorities to help with the purchase of air quality monitoring and modelling equipment. Since 1997, we have awarded a little over £420,000 (Table 1) to support local authority capital expenditure in Buckinghamshire on air quality equipment.

Refrigerators

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress is being made to help small businesses continue to sell secondhand refrigerators, previously collected from the large retail outlets. [29524]

Mr. Meacher: The majority of old refrigerators are now being collected by local authorities. We would encourage small businesses to work with local authorities to identify those units suitable for re-use. Such arrangements are likely to be welcomed by local authorities as a means of reducing their costs.

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much of the money to help local authorities with the extra costs of storing refrigerators announced on 4 December 2001 has been made available to Blackpool borough council. [28824]

Mr. Meacher: £6 million has been added to the provisional local government finance settlement for 2002–03 for the costs of implementing the ozone depleting substances regulation relating to the period 1 January 2002 to 31 March 2002. This will be distributed to local authorities using Standard Spending Assessments (SSA). The extra money has been added to the upper tier sub-block of the Environmental, Protective and Cultural Services SSA.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has received from local authorities with regard to the allocation of Government resources available in order to meet the cost of implementing the refrigerator disposal regulations. [29111]

Mr. Meacher: The Department has received a number of representations from local authorities concerning the allocation of funding for the implementation of EC Regulation 2037/2000. We have received representations through letters, e-mail and telephone calls. Officials are maintaining a close dialogue with local authority representatives with a view to obtaining a comprehensive understanding of the additional costs which local authorities face.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has received from the Environment Agency concerning the arrangements for the storage and disposal of refrigerators in advance of the development of purpose-built infrastructure in the UK. [29096]

Mr. Meacher: The Department has worked very closely with the Environment Agency on the development of guidance on the storage and disposal of fridges. There continues to be close co-operation on the finalisation of technical standards and new fridges recycling facilities and, more generally on the implementation and enforcement of the European Ozone Depleting Substances Regulation.

Regulatory Impact Assessments

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many regulatory impact assessments have been produced by her Department since August 2001; and if she will list those produced (a) following initial consultation with affected parties about the most appropriate methodology for assessing costs and other impacts and (b) which set out full commercial impacts, including profitability, employment, consumer prices and competitiveness, as recommended in good policy making. [28401]

Mr. Morley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office, on 17 January 2002, Official Report, column 483W.

Stolen Equipment

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what equipment has been stolen from her Department since 1 May 1997; and what the approximate value of each item was. [26823]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 22 January 2002]: The Department's records show that the following items have been stolen since 1 May 1997. Data from 8 June 2001 relate to Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs while previous information covers Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

Home Energy Conservation

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of local authorities (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) in Scotland are on course to achieve a 30 per cent. improvement in home energy conservation by 2010. [25893]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 15 January 2002]: As domestic energy efficiency is a devolved matter, it is the responsibility of the respective Parliament and Assemblies to comment on the situation in their countries.

Statutory guidance issued on the Home Energy Conservation Act 1995 (HECA) in England makes it clear that local authorities are expected to identify measures that will lead to "substantial progress" towards 30 per cent. improvement in energy efficiency in all residential accommodation within 10 years of April 1996, but that some authorities may feel it more appropriate to develop a strategy which covers a different time scale.

In the four years to 31 March 2000, authorities have reported that overall their HECA strategies have achieved energy efficiency improvements of 6 per cent. Of the 354 local authorities in England with HECA responsibilities, almost 50 per cent. are reporting 6 per cent. or more improvement. Details of percentage improvement to March 2001 are not yet available but we expect to publish these shortly.

If we assume a similar rate of progress over the next six years, ECAs might on average be expected to achieve a 15 per cent. improvement in domestic energy efficiency. However, we would expect that schemes such as Warm Front and the Energy Efficiency Commitment 2002–05 (EEC) would lead to greater improvements.

In order to help local authorities achieve greater energy savings in the future, we are looking at the working of HECA as part of our current review of local authority energy efficiency activity.

The Home Energy Conservation Bill 2001 would require local authorities to implement their energy conservation reports, something missing from the current legislation.

Correspondence

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) when the Minister of State, the right hon. Member for Cardiff, South and Penarth (Alun Michael), will reply to the letter of 18 November 2001, from Ms Anne Parker concerning the implementation of the recommendations of Task Force for the Hills; [28286]

(2) when the Under-Secretary, the hon. Member for Scunthorpe (Mr. Morley), will reply to the letter of 18 November 2001 from Ms Anne Parker concerning the implementation of the recommendations of Task Force for the Hills; [28284]

(3) when the Under-Secretary, Lord Whitty, will reply to the letter of 18 November 2001 from Ms Anne Parker concerning the implementation of the recommendations of Task Force for the Hills. [28285]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 17 January 2002]: We have no record of having received the letters referred to by the hon. Member.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 15 January, ref. 26357, if she will make a statement on the reasons for the delay in responding to the letter to the hon. Member for West Chelmsford sent to him via the Foreign Office on 12 June 2001 re Dr. Reza Hussain. [28876]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 21 January 2002; pursuant to his reply, 22 January 2001 column 779W]: the answer I gave the hon. Member on 22 January 2001, Official Report, column 779W, I said that a response to the hon. Member's constituent's letter of 12 June for West Chelmsford was sent on 18 January 2002. This was incorrect. The letter was sent out on 21 January 2002.

Livestock Markets

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what guidance she intends to issue to auctioneers concerning the reopening of livestock markets. [29180]

Mr. Morley: Detailed guidance for auctioneers covering biosecurity and other conditions relevant to the reopening of livestock markets is currently being drawn up. It will be disseminated shortly to the Livestock Auctioneers' Association and it will also be placed on the DEFRA website www.defra.gov.uk.

Agricultural Shows

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what guidance she intends to issue to agricultural societies concerning the resumption of local agricultural shows. [29179]

Mr. Morley: Detailed guidance for agricultural societies, covering biosecurity and other conditions relevant to the resumption of livestock shows, is currently being drawn up. It will be issued as soon as possible to the Association of Agricultural Shows and other interested organisations. It will also be placed on the DEFRA website www.defra.gov.uk.

End of Life Products

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the likely cost implications of Directive 200/53/EC and Regulation 2037/2700 on (a) county councils, (b) London boroughs and (c) district councils. [28546]

Mr. Meacher: The End of Life Vehicles Directive 2000/53/EC has far reaching consequences for a number of different economic operators. However, it is not intended that local authorities will have any direct responsibility for implementing this directive.

The directive requires producers to be responsible for all or a significant part of the costs of take back and treatment of end of life vehicles from 2007. These arrangements should help to ease the situation for local authorities in dealing with abandoned vehicles. It has not yet been decided how take back and treatment of end of life vehicles between 2002 and 2007 will be funded.

A Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA) on the proposal for a Council Regulation (EC) on substances that deplete the ozone layer was undertaken in December 1998. The RIA did not estimate compliance costs for the extraction of ozone-depleting substances from the insulating foam in domestic refrigeration equipment as the draft proposal did not make it mandatory. It was not until June 2001 that the European Commission gave EU member states its final interpretation of EC Regulation 2037/2700 that it did require the recovery of controlled substances in the insulating foam of domestic fridges and freezers.

The Department recently announced a payment of £6 million to English local authorities to cover their costs of handling fridges and freezers until March 2002. We are urgently assessing the impacts of the regulation, including the costs, and will determine what further action is required beyond that.

Agricultural Waste

Matthew Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to help farmers to dispose of (a) plastic and (b) redundant wire. [29470]

Mr. Meacher: We will be addressing the question of how to deal with farm plastics and other waste materials in the forthcoming consultation document on agricultural waste.

Fox Hunts

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to reassess the case for independent regulation and inspections of fox hunts; and if she will make a statement. [29352]

Alun Michael: Consideration is being given to the best way of dealing with the issue of hunting.

GMOs

Mrs. Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if the terms of the agreement with SCIMAC setting up farm-scale evaluations of GMOs that (a) plants that have been harvested should be removed from the trial sites and (b) the sites should be subsequently ploughed, destroying any remaining roots, have been complied with. [15282]

Mr. Meacher: The agreement on the Farm Scale Evaluations requires that produce from the trials should not enter the food or feed chain. It does not specify how this requirement is to be met. The specific rules that apply on crop disposal and post-harvest management are those set out in the statutory release consent (in the case of the beet and oilseed rape) and the relevant part of the SCIMAC code of practice on GM herbicide-tolerant crops. These provisions have been complied with, although there is a case currently under review to determine whether a breach of consent has occurred.

Egg Imports

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) egg products and (b) shell eggs were imported; and how many egg products were imported from the USA in each of the last three years. [28188]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 22 January 2002]: Overseas trade statistics show that the UK imports of (a) egg products and (b) shell eggs over the past three years were as follows:

Thousand cases

	1998	1999	2000
(a) Egg products[1]	1,468.8	1,601.8	1,470.5
(b) Shell eggs	610.1	707.9	1,652.2

[1] Converted to shell egg equivalent

Of the (a) egg products shown in the previous table, the following were imported from the USA during the same period.

	Thousand cases
	1998	1999	2000
(a) Egg products from USA[1]	36.3	30.2	63.7

Illegal Meat Imports

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to help local authorities to control illegal meat imports at airports (a) in the UK and (b) at Heathrow airport. [28532]

Mr. Morley: Under the relevant UK legislation which implements European rules, local authorities are responsible for checks on imports of animal products. DEFRA already provides detailed guidance and advice to them on discharging their functions at Borders Inspection Posts. We have taken steps to improve co-ordination and ensure that enforcement authorities obtain information to help target resources effectively. We have also improved publicity to bring to the attention of travellers the rules on what can be legally imported. We are examining the enforcement powers available to local authorities to ensure that they are adequate.

We maintain close liaison with local authorities, including at Heathrow, and will continue to keep all measures under review.

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of changes in employment in the CHP sector in the UK in 2001. [22594]

Mr. Meacher: We have no reliable estimates of reductions of employment in the CHP sector in the UK in 2001.

Social Exclusion

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) if she will place in the Library a copy of the application form for each of the competitive grant schemes administered by his Department and its agencies open in each year since 1997 to organisations in the voluntary and community sector for the purposes of tackling social exclusion; [22413]

(2) how many competitive grant schemes administered by her Department and its agencies were open in each of the last 10 years to organisations in the voluntary and community sector for the purposes of tackling social exclusion; [22437]

(3) if she will list the competitive grant schemes, administered by the Department and its agencies open in each year since 1997 to organisations in the voluntary and community sector for the purposes of tackling social exclusion and, for each scheme in each year (a) the number of applicants (b) the number of successful applicants, (c) the total of grants awarded, (d) the number of pages in the application form and (e) if the grant can be used to fund the core costs of the applicant organisation; [22424]

(4) if she will provide a list of the grants made under the competitive grant schemes administered by her Department and its agencies open in each year since 1997 to organisations in the voluntary and community sector for the purposes of tackling social exclusion; [22420]

(5) what estimate has been made of the administrative cost to (a) the state, (b) unsuccessful applicants and (c) successful applicants of the competitive grant schemes, provided by her Department and its agencies open in each year since 1997 to organisations in the voluntary and community sector for the purposes of tackling social exclusion. [22380]

Alun Michael [holding answer 12 December 2001]: The information is not available in the form requested, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost, having regard in particular to the recent creation of the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs. However, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department, my hon. Friend the Member for Wallasey (Angela Eagle) on 19 December 2001, Official Report, column 482W. The website http://www.parliament.the-stationery-office.co.uk/cmhansrd/pa/cm200102/ cm011219/text/11219w47.htm#11219w47.htm_spnew5 contains references to the available information on Government grants to voluntary organisations.

North Sea Conference

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the dates are for the forthcoming second North Sea Conference; where the conference will be held; what intergovernmental preparatory meetings have been held; what non-governmental organisations have been consulted in preparation; and if she will place in the Library copies of papers and documents that (a) will be submitted to the North Sea Ministerial Conference, and (b) constitute background material for the conference. [28494]

Mr. Meacher: The fifth conference of Ministers responsible for the protection of the environment of the North sea will be held in Bergen, Norway on 20 and 21 March. The Committee of North Sea Senior Officials has met a number of times to prepare for the conference, most recently in September 2001 and January 2002. A further meeting will be held next month. The meetings are attended by Government representatives, intergovernmental organisations and non-governmental organisations with observer status.

22 NGOs have observer status: the Baltic and Maritime Council, Birdlife International, Committee of Agricultural Organisations in the EU, European Anglers Alliance, European Bureau of Conservation and Development, European Chemical Industries Council, European Community Sea Ports Organisation, European Waste Water Group, European Water Association, Europeche, Greenpeace International, High North Alliance, International Association of Oil and Gas Producers, International Chamber of Shipping, International Fishmeal and Oil Manufacturers Association, International Transport Workers' Federation, Local Authorities International Environmental Organisation, Nordic Fishermen's Council, Seas at Risk, Union of Industrial and Employers' Confederations of Europe, World Nuclear Association, and World Wide Fund for Nature.

The substantive background document which will be presented to the conference is a comprehensive progress report, reviewing action taken and progress achieved since the last conference. This is currently being finalised by the Secretariat in Oslo. I will place copies in the Library when it is published. The conference is likely to adopt a declaration, defining action for the future. I will place a copy in the Library.

Organophosphate Pesticides

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to the answer of the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food of 27 April 1998, Official Report, column 30W, on organophosphate pesticides, what report has been received on the research study by CBD Porton Down into the dose effect profiles for OP sheep dips on brain electrical activity and sensitive behaviour indices in non-human primates; and if she will make a statement on her Department's response to that study. [29063]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 21 January 2002]: The project was delayed in starting and as a result the completion was rescheduled for late summer 2002.

Countryside Stewardship Scheme

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the effect of reduced Countryside Stewardship scheme payment levels on the take-up of the scheme by farmers and landowners; and (a) how many participants there are and (b) what are the payments made by her Department in each of the years in which the Countryside Stewardship Scheme has been in operation. [29083]

Mr. Morley: Changes to Countryside Stewardship scheme payment rates were last implemented in 2001. Following a payment review, only five payments were reduced while the remaining 134 were either maintained or slightly increased. Overall, the net effect was estimated to be an increase of about 2 per cent. in total payments.

The continuing demand for the scheme, with nearly 3,000 applications last year, indicates that the current level of payment is generally acceptable.

By the end of the 2001–02 scheme year, there will be around 14,000 Stewardship agreement holders and we are looking for a further 3,000 applications for the 2002–03 scheme year.

The total payments made to farmers in each of years since 1991, when the scheme was introduced by the then Countryside Commission, are as follows:

£ million

	Annual expenditure
1992–93	5.3
1993–94	8.5
1994–95	10.5
1995–96	11.6
1996–97	10.9
1997–98	15.7
1998–99	19.9
1999–2000	23.4
2000–01	28.9
2001–02	47.3
Total expenditure 1992–2002	182.0

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the operation of the Countryside Stewardship scheme; and whether it is her Department's policy to reduce Countryside Stewardship scheme payment levels directly in line with declining farm incomes. [29082]

Mr. Morley: Countryside Stewardship payment rates are reviewed regularly. In line with EU rules, the rates take account of any income lost in undertaking Stewardship options, together with any additional costs incurred, such as specialised management or extra capital works and, where necessary, a small incentive element of up to 20 per cent.

When we carried out our latest review of payment rates we found that, because of the severe decline in farm incomes since the previous review, a few of the current rates exceeded the actual loss of income involved in participating in the scheme. Although a small number of rates were adjusted downwards to reflect this, the great majority of payment rates were either maintained or increased and overall the net effect was estimated to be an increase of about 2 per cent. in total payments. This shows the efforts that we have made to protect payment rates from external economic circumstances.

Nitrate Pollution

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on (a) the environmental harm caused by nitrate levels in the land phase of the hydrological cycle and (b) the source of the research upon which the theory is based. [29091]

Mr. Meacher: Nitrates in soil can leach into water. High nitrate levels in water contribute to eutrophication and reduce biodiversity. A risk assessment of such environmental harm is contained in a Regulatory Impact Assessment annexed to the Department's current consultation document "How should England implement the 1991 Nitrates Directive?" published on 20 December 2001.

A report by WRc to DETR in 1999 entitled "Diffuse pollution: sources of N and P" explains the scientific processes and extent of environmental harm and contains an extensive reference list. Copies of this report are available from the Foundation for Water Research.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of research evidence showing that (a) the process of denitrification includes the addition of phosphate and (b) phosphate is the cause of eutrophication in saline water. [29085]

Mr. Meacher: The research evidence suggests phosphate is not a significant influence on denitrification, though there are circumstances where phosphate limited plant growth can influence the capacity for denitrification to occur or where the anaerobic conditions required for denitrification also lead to the mobilisation of phosphorus from sediments.

The research evidence shows that for marine waters generally the growth of algae is limited by the amount of nitrogen available (rather than the amount of phosphorus), so eutrophication can result if there is an increase in nitrogen. The position in estuaries or transitional waters may be more complex, and in a few places the availability of phosphorus may be the limiting factor.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Lord Birt

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what changes to policy have resulted from Lord Birt's work on crime. [29192]

Mr. Blunkett [holding answer 22 January 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 17 January 2002, Official Report, column 469W.

Private Prisons

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reason private prisons are not required to submit (a) sickness and (b) minority ethnic staff data. [28637]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 22 January 2002]: Her Majesty's Prison Service collects data on sickness levels and ethnic identity on its own employees. These details are not collected in respect of staff employed at private sector prisons as a matter of course because personnel issues are the concern of the contractors and such information is therefore not contractually required. The information is however, made available on request.

MI5 Records

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reason the request by the Advisory Council on Public Records to be allowed to consider the conditions under which MI5 records are released was refused; and if he will make a statement. [28630]

Mr. Blunkett [holding answer 22 January 2002]: In July 1998, my right hon. Friend the then Home Secretary, invited the Advisory Council on Public records to review the criteria employed by the Security Service to select files for permanent preservation on grounds of historical interest. During the course of the review the chairman of the Council, Lord Justice Woolf, wrote to the Home Secretary to ask whether he wished to extend the terms of reference to encompass issues relating to access to Security Service records.

The intelligence services and the Interception Commissioners and Investigatory Powers Tribunal have full access to all service records necessary for their functions and therefore the Home Secretary replied that he was not contemplating changing the arrangements to widen access beyond this "need to know" approach. This was recognised in Lord Justice Woolf's report. However, the Home Secretary did agree that officials of the Public Records Office, with the necessary security clearance, should be invited by the Security Service to examine files earmarked for destruction after review by the service. This now happens.

The Advisory Council reported in December 1998 and the report was placed in Library on 3 February 1999. At the same time the then Home Secretary announced that he was accepting in full the recommendations of the committee. All of these have now been implemented.

Saville Inquiry

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what costs have been incurred by his Department to date in connection with the Saville inquiry; and what his estimate is of the final cost to his Department. [29068]

Mr. Blunkett [holding answer 22 January 2002]: The Home Office has responsibility for the protective security arrangements for public figures, for which some costs have been incurred in relation to this inquiry. It is not our policy to comment on the details of protection arrangements for individuals, as to do so could compromise their security.

The Home Office has no other direct involvement in the Bloody Sunday inquiry and does not employ staff full-time on inquiry related work. Some small administrative costs have been incurred.

Market and Opinion Research

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what record his Department keeps of the expenditure of his Department on (a) polling exercises and (b) focus groups. [29516]

Mr. Blunkett [holding answer 22 January 2002]: The Department conducts or commissions market or opinion research only when it is justified by the specific needs of a particular policy or programme, and when this is the most economical, efficient and effective way to achieve the purpose.

Detailed breakdowns of costs and analysis by types of research, such as polling exercises and focus groups, are not held centrally or captured by the Department's accounting systems. Data are recorded under broad expenditure headings, further disaggregation would be possible only at disproportionate cost.

Magistrates Court

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress is being made towards the provision of a witness service in every magistrates court by March. [29369]

Mr. Keith Bradley [holding answer 22 January 2002]: The Magistrates Court Witness Service is being established and run by the organisation Victim Support, with funding from the Home Office. As at 14 January 2002, witness services had been established in 220 (58 per cent.) of the 382 magistrates courts in England and Wales. Victim Support advise that the process of recruiting staff and volunteers for the remaining 162 courts is in progress, and that they are hopeful of meeting the target of establishing witness support services in all magistrates courts by 31 March 2002.

Victims of Crime

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the operation of the duty on the Probation Service to keep victims of serious violent and sexual crimes informed of the offender's release. [29367]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 22 January 2002]: Under the new statutory duty, local Probation Boards are required to consult and notify victims about release arrangements of offenders serving a sentence of 12 months or more for a sexual or violent offence. We expect approximately 3,500 more victims of serious crimes each year will be informed of an offender's release under these arrangements. There are currently no figures collected centrally on the actual numbers of victims notified of offenders' release arrangements since the legislation came into force on 1 April 2001.

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what percentage of prosecutions the victim chose to make a personal statement to the court in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [29368]

Mr. Keith Bradley [holding answer 22 January 2002]: I understand from the Lord Chancellor's Department and the Court Service that information of this nature is not collated.

Asylum Support

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers received advice or assistance from each of the reception assistance agencies in relation to their application to the National Asylum Support Service in (a) 2000–01 and (b) the current financial year to date. [28891]

Angela Eagle: Voluntary sector agencies are grant funded by the Home Office to assist asylum seekers who need to make an application for support. The number of asylum seekers assisted by reception assistants from individual agencies is as follows:

	3 April 2000 to 31 March 2001[1]	1 April 2001 to 31 December 2001[2]
Refugee Council	17,373	19,391
Migrant Helpline	12,894	8,845
Refugee Arrivals Project	5,554	4,337
Refugee Action	2,717	2,456
Scottish Refugee Council	504	425
Welsh Refugee Council	150	164
Total	39,192	35,618

[1] based on information provided by the voluntary sector agencies

[2] provisional

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide a breakdown of the amount of grant made to each of the reception assistance agencies by the National Asylum Support Service under section 111 of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 in (a) 2000–01 and (b) the current financial year to date. [28780]

Angela Eagle: The level of grant paid by the Home Office to the voluntary sector organisations is as follows:

	2000–01[1,3]	2001–02[2,3]
Refugee Council	7,934,000	10,038,000
Refugee Action	2,290,000	3,246,000
Migrant Helpline	2,094,000	2,587,000
Refugee Arrivals Project	1,913,000	1,971,000
Scottish Refugee Council	595,000	743,000
Welsh Refugee Council	343,000	200,000

[1] Information based on outturn figure.

[2] Information based on estimate of outturn figure.

[3] Excludes payments for provision of emergency accommodation.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the total cost was of providing (a) accommodation and (b) emergency accommodation under the National Asylum Support Service-run asylum support system in (i) 2000–01 and (ii) in the current financial year to date. [28781]

Angela Eagle: The total cost of (a) accommodation paid for directly under contract by the National Asylum Support Service (NASS) for (i) 2000–01 was £54.1 million and for (ii) current year to 30 November £150.1 million, and (b) emergency accommodation for (i) 2000–01 was £27.5 million and for (ii) current year to 30 November £38.2 million.

These figures reflect the increased activity undertaken by the NASS since it began operation on the 3 April 2000.

Costs in 2000–01 are cash based and for current year resource based. All figures are rounded to nearest £0.1 million.

Republic of Ireland

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (a) contacts and (b) exchanges have been organised with relevant authorities in the Republic of Ireland at which issues of (a) racism and racist attacks, (b) immigration and (c) asylum seekers have been discussed; and what agreement was reached on further co-operation. [29250]

Angela Eagle: On the issues of racism and racist attacks, the Government have frequent informal contacts with European Union (EU) representatives, including the Republic of Ireland, at international fora such as the recent World Conference Against Racism. Information on racist incidents is one of the issues discussed at the European Union Terrorism working Group, which normally meets six times a year.

The Home Office Immigration and Nationality Directorate hold biennial bilateral meetings with the relevant authorities in the Republic of Ireland (Asylum, Immigration and Citizenship Division, Asylum Policy Division, Immigration Policy Division, Reception and Integration Agency) on issues of concern to both countries in relation to immigration and asylum. These are held for the purpose of exchanging experience and providing an update regarding recent and prospective developments.

The United Kingdom immigration service holds regular operational meetings with the Republic of Ireland's Department of Justice and Garda Siochana (Irish police) in order to develop closer co-operation on asylum and immigration matters, including Common Travel area issues. The primary aims of the operational group are to enhance operational co-operations, improve the exchange of information on asylum seekers to prevent abuse, to deal more effectively with human smuggling and trafficking and to explore the scope for additional co-operation on the removal of failed asylum seekers to third countries via the United Kingdom.

In addition, the Irish Government have appointed a Garda liaison officer to the Irish Embassy in London who is tasked with taking forward cross border and intelligence liaison between the two countries in order to counter immigration trafficking.

Su Jin Park

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will investigate the handling by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate at Croydon of mail sent by recorded delivery on 26 November by Su Jin Park. [29266]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 22 January 2002]: Su Jin Park's application was posted to the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) Public Enquiry Office in Birmingham. They forwarded it to IND in Croydon on 28 November 2001. Of late, it has been taking up to eight weeks to consider new applications. The reasons for this are (i) the exceptionally high number of applications received in 2001; and (ii) process changes that are being introduced. I regret that it was not possible to decide Miss Park's application before her planned departure from the United Kingdom but am pleased that she was able to travel as a result of obtaining an emergency travel document from the Korean Embassy. Her passport will now be returned to the Embassy.

Sentenced Persons Transfer Convention

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the targets are for the efficient and effective operation of the Convention for the Transfer of Sentenced Persons; how these performance indicators were constructed; and how far the operation of procedures has matched these targets in each year since its coming into force. [29249]

Beverley Hughes: The Council of Europe Convention on the Transfer of Sentenced Persons sets no targets for the consideration of applications for repatriation. Since January 2001, Her Majesty's Prison Service has set and applied the following targets to those parts of the process that lie within its control. These targets were constructed to take account of the need to obtain information from agencies outside the Prison Service in support of individual applications.

Applications from foreign nationals imprisoned in England and Wales:

(a) From receipt of the prisoner's application to referral to the receiving jurisdiction: 12 weeks.

During this period the caseworker will obtain and collate the documentation necessary to consider the application, including court documentation, police or customs reports, information on previous convictions, and prison reports. Any translations needed for non-English speaking countries will be done at this stage.

(b) From the receipt of the response from the receiving jurisdiction to the final determination of the request by the Prison Service: 12 weeks.

During this period the information provided by the receiving jurisdiction is assessed, in particular on the enforcement of the sentence to determine if repatriation can proceed. If both jurisdictions are content to proceed the consent of the prisoner must be obtained to the terms and conditions of the transfer.

Applications from British nationals imprisoned overseas:

(c) Consideration of applications submitted by another jurisdiction: 12 weeks.

During this period checks are made with the Metropolitan police to determine whether the prisoner has any outstanding charges in the United Kingdom; with the Home Office to check that the offence committed by the prisoner is an offence under UK law and that the sentence does not exceed the maximum available under British law for the same offence; and with the United Kingdom Passport Office to determine whether the prisoner concerned is a British national.

Once this information has been received a response is prepared and sent to the sentencing jurisdiction. This includes detailed information about the administration of sentence following repatriation, and other information required by the convention.

(d) Collection of the prisoner from overseas following receipt of written consent from the sentencing jurisdiction and the prisoner: four weeks.

During the period 1 January 2001 to 31 December 2001, the following targets were met: Applications from foreign nationals imprisoned in England and Wales, target (a) 58 per cent. and target (b) 91 per cent. Applications from British nationals imprisoned overseas, target (c) 67 per cent. and target (d) 100 per cent.

At-risk Prisoners

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what special arrangements the Prison service makes over the Christmas and new year period to (a) prevent suicides, (b) prevent self-harm and (c) increase observation of at-risk prisoners. [29525]

Beverley Hughes: The last two weeks of any year is a difficult time for most prisoners and particularly harrowing for those with suicidal thoughts. Staff are reminded of the enhanced dangers and to ensure that anti-suicide policies and procedures are firmly adhered to. There were four self-inflicted deaths in late 2001 but the overall total for the year was reduced by 11 per cent. for the second year running and the rate per 100,000 of average daily population was the lowest since 1993.

Prisons go to great lengths at Christmas and the new year to make establishments as pleasant and relaxed as possible in the prison environment. Specific arrangements will vary between prisons depending on local circumstances and available staffing levels, for example, allowing all prisoners one call on Christmas day to contact their family.

Lost/stolen Property

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those items valued at more than £50 which have been stolen or lost from his Department in each of the last four years. [27991]

Angela Eagle: A list of items stolen or lost from the Home Department in the last four years and approximate value of each item stolen is provided in the following tables.

Family Visitor Appeals

Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the net income was from fees for family visitor appeals during the first year of operation of the charging policy. [27870]

Angela Eagle: The net income from fees for family visitor appeals in the first year of the scheme was £104,000.

Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost of collecting and refunding fees for family visitor appeals was during the first year of operation of the charging policy. [27871]

Angela Eagle: Most of the costs of collecting and refunding the fees are staff costs. Many individuals are involved, including those at diplomatic posts overseas, but there are few who spend a significant proportion of their time on these tasks. Consequently, it is not possible to provide the information requested by the my hon. Friend except at disproportionate cost.

Prisoners (Drugs)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) male and (b) female prison inmates have been charged with possession of illegal drugs in each of the last three years. [28078]

Beverley Hughes: Information on the number of prisoners charged is not collated centrally. Numbers of prisoners found guilty at adjudication of possessing a controlled drug are given in the table.

	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01

Child Asylum Seekers

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent measures have been taken to deal with unaccompanied children seeking asylum. [28511]

Angela Eagle: We are committed to offering protection and appropriate levels of care to unaccompanied minors who claim asylum in the United Kingdom. To achieve this we work closely with the Department of Health, local authorities and non-governmental organisations.

With regard to recent measures I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave my hon. Friend, the Member for Wigan, (Mr. Turner) on 8 November 2001, Official Report, column 386W.

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many unaccompanied children have sought asylum in each year since 1996. [28510]

Angela Eagle: The information requested has been provided in the table.

Unaccompanied[1,2,3] children, aged 17 or under, applying for asylum to the United Kingdom, 1996 to 2000

[1] Unaccompanied at the point of their arrival, and not known to be joining a close relative in the United Kingdom.

Information on unaccompanied minors is published annually in the statistical bulletin "Asylum Statistics United Kingdom", a copy of which is available in the Library; and from the Research, Development and Statistics (RDS) website: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Terrorism-related Allegations

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had with foreign Governments over the activities of Bachir Aouni; and if he will make a statement. [25179]

Mr. Blunkett: None. Mr. Aouni is held in custody pursuant to a request from Italy for his extradition.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will investigate the links between Alam Moussa (aka Louis Szondy) and Sakina Security Services; and if he will make a statement; [25182]

(2) if he will investigate the links between Bachir Aouni, currently serving a prison sentence in respect of fraud, and a north London mosque; and if he will make a statement; [25183]

(3) if he will investigate the links between Bachir Aouni and GIA; and if he will make a statement. [25181]

Mr. Blunkett: The police continue a range of investigations into terrorist-related allegations, and I discuss their action with them on a regular basis. It would not be appropriate for me to comment on individual cases, and anyone who has information they believe to be relevant should pass it on to the police.

Vulnerable and Intimidated Witnesses

Mr. Rammell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans to implement the special measures for vulnerable or intimidated witnesses recommended in the "Speaking up for Justice" report. [30364]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The "Speaking up for Justice" report on vulnerable or intimidated witnesses in the criminal justice system published in 1998 proposed a range of special measures available for use at the trial including:

video-recorded statements to replace the evidence-in-chief video-recorded pre-trial cross-examination

live TV links

screens around the witnesses box so that the witness does not need to face the defendant in court removal of wigs and gowns assistance with communication if necessary, including the use of an intermediary; and power for the judge to clear the public gallery in cases involving sexual offences or intimidation so the witness can give evidence in private.

The measures requiring legislation were included in Part II of the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999.

Implementation of the special measures will be phased as we have an opportunity to see how they are working.

The implementation in the Crown court will take place six months from today to allow a lead-in for the agencies to conduct training and preparation. All the special measures will be implemented for vulnerable witnesses, with the exception of intermediaries and pre-trial cross-examination which will be subject to pilot projects. The same measures, with the added exception of video-recorded statements, will be implemented at the same time for intimidated witnesses.

All other measures will be introduced in 2003–04 for all qualifying witnesses.

In magistrates courts implementation of special measures in July 2002 will be restricted to TV links and video recorded evidence for child witnesses in cases involving sexual offences, violence (including threats) and cruelty. This would provide protection for children in cases involving assaults, muggings and domestic violence. It would also bring the adult magistrates courts into line with the current provision in the Youth court.

Most of the measures will be extended to magistrates courts by 2003–04 (after their evaluation in the Crown court) to bring them in line with the Crown court.

A whole range of guidance and training materials for the criminal justice agencies are being published tomorrow including:

Recognising Capability—a training programme for those in the criminal justice system working with vulnerable or intimidated witnesses

Achieving Best Evidence in Criminal Proceedings: Guidance on vulnerable or intimidated witnesses including children

Vulnerable Witnesses: A Police Service Guide

Adult pre-trial therapy

Early Special Measures Meeting between the Police and Crown Prosecution Service and Meetings between the Crown Prosecution Service and Vulnerable and Intimidated Witnesses: Practice.

Copies of these publications will be placed in the Library.

Over the next couple of years we will also be starting pilot projects on video-recorded pre-trial cross-examination and the use of intermediaries.

Council Tax (Police Costs)

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average cost per head of the police element of the council tax. [28666]

Dr. Whitehead: I have been asked to reply.

In England, the average police authority council tax for 2001–02 is approximately £26 per head of population. This includes council tax that is met by council tax benefit. This excludes the City of London, for which the council tax for police services cannot be separately identified.

HEALTH

Cancelled Operations

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many operations were postponed in each of the last five years by hospital authorities; and if he will make a statement; [11476]

(2) if he will rank each hospital in England by the number of postponed operations as a proportion of total operations, giving the relevant number for each hospital. [11477]

Mr. Hutton: We are committed to achieving the NHS Plan targets for improving performance on cancelled operations.

From April 2002, when a patient's operation is cancelled by the hospital on the day of surgery for non-clinical reasons, the hospital will have to offer another binding date within a maximum of the next 28 days or fund the patient's treatment at the time and hospital of the patient's choice.

To ensure that this target is achieved, we have established a Theatre project, to develop good practice in operating theatres and ensure that this is spread throughout the national health service. This will improve the patient and carer experience; improve employee satisfaction and morale; optimise theatre utilisation, planning and scheduling; and reduce cancelled operations.

In addition, as part of the Government's £100 million strategy to reduce long waits in accident and emergency a 100 million programme of investment was announced. This will contribute to a drive to reduce hospital bed occupancy rates by purchasing additional operations in the private sector. This, alongside continued growth in general and acute hospital beds, will free up capacity in the NHS for emergency patients, help to eliminate long trolley waits and dramatically reduce—by up to 75 per cent.—the number of planned operations cancelled at the last minute.

The number of operations cancelled by hospitals, for non-clinical reasons in England, from 1996–97 to 2000–01 are given in the table.

Year	Number of cancelled operations in year
1996–97	52,047
1997–98	50,505
1998–99	56,150
1999–2000	60,242

Information collected by the Department of Health are numbers of operations cancelled for non-clinical reasons on the day of admission, or on the day of the operation.

The number and proportion of operations cancelled for non clinical reasons on the day of admission, or on the day of operation are given in the table.

The data supplied are for the latest available full year at health authority level. Trust level data have only been collected on a shadow basis since Quarter 1, 2001–02 and it is unclear how robust this is at this level at present. Also, when measuring relative performance, it is better to measure over a whole year, rather than a single quarter.

Child Illnesses

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many school-age children suffered from (a) chronic illness, (b) asthma and (c) cancer in each of the past five years; and if he will make a statement. [22490]

Yvette Cooper: Data on the number of chronically ill children are not collected, but it is estimated that approximately one in three of the population suffers from one or more of a wide range of chronic conditions including arthritis, diabetes, epilepsy and asthma.

There are no comprehensive data on the number of people with asthma but it is estimated to affect 4 to 6 per cent. of children sufficiently severely to require medical supervision. The table shows hospital admissions for patients aged five to 14 years. The table does not show actual incidence of asthma—some patients may be admitted more than once and many sufferers may never need hospital admission.

Baby Food

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to extend the protection of the EU directive on pesticide residue levels in baby food. [20570]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 13 December 2001]: Legislation implementing the European Union directive and setting tough low maximum limits for pesticides in infant formula and processed baby foods comes into force in July 2002. Where food is made for babies in the home, pesticide residues in the ingredients are subject to rigorous controls on pesticide use which take into account the sensitivity of all age groups.

NHS Spending

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his estimate is of the level of NHS spending as a share of gross domestic product for each year from 1990–91 to 2003–04; what comparable figures he has for the average of European Union countries; and if he will make a statement. [22272]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 13 December 2001]: The United Kingdom gross cash national health service expenditure as a percentage of gross domestic product (GDP) is set out in the table. The figures for 2001–02 onwards are for planned expenditure.

NHS Expenditure as a percentage of GDP

	UK
1990–91	5.2
1991–92	5.6

The only source of comparable data is published by the Organisation of Economic Co-operation and Development. These data exist only for calendar years, and the latest complete set of data is for 1998. The average public expenditure as a proportion of gross domestic product for all European Union countries is as follows:

OECD Health Data 2001

Assuming private spending remains at its current level of around 1 per cent. of GDP, total United Kingdom health care expenditure will reach around 7.6 per cent. by 2003–04. This will be a significant step towards reaching the European Union average, which (again, including private spending—around 2 per cent. on average in the EU) has remained around 7.9 to 8 per cent. in recent years.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the percentage of the GNP of the UK that has been spent on the NHS in each of the last five years. [28079]

Mr. Hutton: The amount of health care expenditure by the national health service is calculated as a percentage of gross domestic product. The gross NHS expenditure as a percentage of gross domestic product is given for financial years in the table.

United Kingdom NHS spend

1996–97	5.7

Free Nursing Care (Battersea)

Martin Linton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of pensioners and disabled people requiring long-term care in Battersea who will receive free nursing care next April. [22945]

Jacqui Smith: Just over 80 people in Battersea are receiving free nursing care from 1 October 2001 and a similar number will receive this from April 2002. This is the number of people assessed as eligible for free nursing care currently resident in nursing homes in Battersea. Many other local residents already receive assistance with the costs of their care by a registered nurse through the local authority or receive it free from the national health service in residential accommodation or at home.

Autism (Wandsworth)

Martin Linton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the help available for autistic children and adults and their families in Wandsworth. [22944]

Jacqui Smith The learning disability White Paper "Valuing People—A New Strategy for Learning Disability for the 21 Century" issued in March 2001 sets out the Government's proposals for maximising opportunities for all disabled children and supporting young people's transition into adult life. It focuses in particular on the needs of learning disabled children and their families, but does so within a framework which applies equally to all disabled children, including those on the autistic spectrum.

Children with autism will benefit from a range of initiatives we are taking to improve services for disabled children. As part of the Quality Protects programme we set new national objectives for children's services which for the first time set out clear outcomes for children, and in some instances give precise targets which local authorities are expected to achieve. These were updated in "Valuing People".

Disabled children have been made a priority area in Quality Protects. The last spending review made substantial additional funding available for the Children's Services grant which now totals £180 million in 2001–02, £220 million in 2002–03 and £290 million in 2003–04. Of this, £60 million has been earmarked for services for disabled children and their families—£15 million in 2001–02 and 2002–03 and £30 million in 2003–04.

We have also announced that services for disabled children will be a key area to be addressed by the national service framework for children. We want to make autism an exemplar under the children's national service framework, so that when the framework is concluded people will be able to see how services should be provided.

The Special Educational Needs Code of Practice 2001 which came into effect from 1 January 2002 provides strengthened and more focused advice on identifying, assessing and providing for children's special educational needs. The Department for Education and Skills will also be publishing good practice guidance on aspects of provision for children with autism, mainly aimed at schools and local education authorities.

The White Paper, "Valuing People", published in March 2001, covers all adults with autism who also have a learning disability. White Paper implementation guidance issued in August last year states that

> "Adults with Asperger's Syndrome or higher functioning autism are not precluded from using learning disability services, where appropriate, and may require an assessment of their social functioning and communication skills in order to establish their level of need."

By bringing together health, social care and educational agencies, "Valuing People" gives us the scope to improve opportunities and services for people across the autistic spectrum.

It is for local statutory bodies, Wandsworth in this instance, to determine the services they provide in the light of their knowledge of local needs and priorities.

Ambulance Paramedics

Mrs. Dean: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) ambulances and (b) paramedics there were per 1000 population in (i) Staffordshire, (ii) other similar authorities and (iii) England, in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [24074]

Ms Blears: Information on the number of ambulance vehicles in each ambulance service, health authority and nationally is not collected. Information on the number of paramedics per 1,000 per population is shown in the table.

NHS Hospital and Community Health Services (HCHS): ambulance paramedics per 1,000 population by organisation in England as at 30 September each year

General Practitioners

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health with reference to SIs No 3740 and 3742, if it is Government policy to provide for (a) the automatic removal of a general practitioner from a health authority's list after a sentence of imprisonment of more than six months and (b) the absence of any opportunity for the doctor to make a case against removal; and whether it is his intention to impose a ban on such a general practitioner's right to practise without regard to the reasons for that imprisonment. [23822]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 19 December 2001]: The regulations provide that the removal of a doctor from, or the refusal to admit a doctor to, a medical or supplementary list after a criminal conviction and a sentence of more than six months imprisonment will be automatic. These regulations were introduced after consultation with the British Medical Association.

Our legal system provides that the most serious criminal offences are to be dealt with by a Crown court and those less serious offences by a magistrates' court. The threshold laid down in these regulations reflects the respective responsibilities of these courts, in that only a Crown court may impose a custodial sentence of more than six months following a conviction. Given that a magistrates court may not impose such a sentence, our view is that anyone who receives such a sentence, in relation to obviously serious offences, is unsuitable to work in the national health service as a general medical practitioner.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reason general practitioners who are on contracts do not receive a (a) full golden hello and (b) sum proportional to their contract or hours worked. [24599]

Mr. Hutton: Golden hello payments are intended to encourage doctors to become and remain national health service general practitioners. New GPs who work exclusively as locums, hold fixed term contracts of two years or less or who have a commitment of less than 25 per cent. do not therefore qualify for a payment until they take on a substantive post with at least 25 per cent. time commitment and a longer contract.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average waiting time to see a GP in Greater London; and what the equivalent figure was in 1997. [24645]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 8 January 2002]: From September 2001 data are being collected quarterly on the lead time for the first available appointment with each general practitioner practice. From the September 2001 survey, results showed that within the London region, 72 per cent. of practices, with appointment systems in place, could offer a patient an appointment with a GP within two working days. 90 per cent. of practices had an appointment system in place to see a GP.

NHS (Directors' Secondments)

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many executive directors of NHS trusts and health authorities were on secondment to other organisations as at 1 December 2001. [26597]

Mr. Hutton: The number of executive directors of national health service trusts and health authorities on secondment to other organisations as at 1 December 2001 was as follows:

Region	Chief Executives	Executive Directors	Total
West Midlands	1	7	8
Trent	3	7	10
South West	2	7	9
Northern and Yorks	1	5	6
South East	6	1	7
North West	2	10	12
Eastern	4	6	10
London	2	10	12
TOTAL	21	53	74

Flu Immunisation (Jarrow)

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children were immunised against flu in Jarrow during this year's immunisation campaign. [26041]

Jacqui Smith: Information regarding the numbers of children immunised against flu is not routinely collected. The Department collects information on influenza uptake only for people aged 65 and over. As at 31 December 2001, Gateshead and South Tyneside health authority have achieved an uptake of 69.9 per cent. in this age group.

Dioxins

Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what response he has made to the recommendations of the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment on acceptable limits of dioxins in food. [26714]

Yvette Cooper: I am informed by the Food Standards Agency that the recommendation of the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment (COT) is for a tolerable daily intake (TDI) for dioxins and dioxin-like polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) of two picogrammes TEQ/kilogramme bodyweight per day (pg TEQ/kg). This is a fifth of the level previously set. A TDI is the amount of a chemical that can be consumed every day without causing harm.

The Food Standards Agency's extensive programme of research and surveys for these contaminants has shown that the average dietary exposure in the United Kingdom is already below the new TDI. However, in common with the United States of America and the European Union, about one-third of the UK population may exceed the TDI from their daily diet. Almost all of these will be below 3.5 pg TEQ/kg, which represents a small erosion of the safety margin that is inherent in the TDI.

The most effective way to reduce exposure to these chemicals through the food supply is to continue to decrease emissions to the environment, from both industrial and non-industrial sources. Measures already taken have resulted in a 70 per cent. decrease in emissions over the last nine years and the agency will continue to work closely with the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs and the Environment Agency to ensure that emissions are reduced still further.

Respiratory and Circulatory Disease (Easington)

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in the Easington Primary Care Group area suffer from respiratory and circulatory illnesses as a percentage of (a) the local population and (b) the population covered by the Durham health authority. [26770]

Jacqui Smith: Between 1 April 1999 and 31 March 2001, approximately 5,700 patients from Easington were admitted to hospital with respiratory or circulatory diseases, representing 5.8 per cent. of the local population and 0.9 per cent. of the population covered by County Durham and Darlington health authority.

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients suffer from diabetes in the Easington Primary Care Group area as a percentage of (a) the local population and (b) the population covered by the Durham health authority. [26771]

Jacqui Smith: Local registers indicate that 2,630 patients from Easington currently suffer from diabetes, representing 2.7 per cent. of the local population and 0.4 per cent. of the population covered by County Durham and Darlington health authority.

Care Home Beds (Buckinghamshire)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many beds were available in Buckinghamshire in the care home sector between 1997 and 2001. [27119]

Jacqui Smith: The table shows the number of places in residential care homes and registered beds in nursing homes, private hospitals and clinics in the Buckinghamshire area between 1997 and 2001.

Migraine

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to include migraine in the new NHS framework for long-term neurological conditions. [26953]

Jacqui Smith: Detailed decisions about the scope and content of the national service framework for long-term conditions have not yet been made, other than outlining that it will draw out some of the common issues faced by people with a long-term condition, and also pay particular attention to specific neurological diseases.

We held a scoping workshop on the 12 November 2001 attended by patients and service users, national health service professionals, NHS managers, social care professionals, and representatives from voluntary organisations and other Government Departments.

Tees Health Authority

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients were waiting (a) more than six months and (b) more than 12 months for in-patient treatment in the Tees health authority area in (i) December 1996 and (ii) December 2001. [26738]

Jacqui Smith: Information relating to in-patient waiting times in Tees health authority is shown in the table. Data relating to December 2001 are not yet available so the most recent published data has been given.

Mental Health (Children)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many school-age children from ethnic minority communities suffer from mental health problems; and if he will make a statement. [26737]

Jacqui Smith: A survey of the mental health of children and adolescents in Great Britain was carried out in 1999 by the Office for National Statistics on behalf of the Department of Health, the Scottish Health Executive and the National Assembly for Wales.

Nearly 10 per cent. of white children and 12 per cent. of black children were assessed as having a mental health problem whereas the prevalence rates among Asian children were 8 per cent. of the Pakistani and Bangladeshi children and 4 per cent. of the Indian children.

Despite the large number of interviews achieved in this survey, ethnic differences are difficult to interpret because of the small numbers in the sample who regarded themselves as belonging to particular ethnic groups. Nevertheless, Indian children, particularly girls, seem to have far lower rates of mental disorder than both white or black children.

Mental health services for children will be part of the Children's National Service Framework. Part of the remit of the framework will be to tackle problems surrounding access and inequality, which can particularly affect people from ethnic minorities.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what provision exists for school-age children who suffer from mental health problems (a) in the UK and (b) in the Teesside area; and if he will make a statement. [26739]

Jacqui Smith: The responsibility for the provision of child and adolescent mental health services (CAMHS) in England lies with health authorities and local authorities. They are required to have joint development strategies which will ensure that a comprehensive range of services are available for children and young people.

We have an ongoing commitment to the improvement of CAMHS and it will be an important part of the Children's National Service Framework. We shall be working closely with the Department for Education and Skills when developing the CAMHS module of the National Service Framework. This is a major development and will safeguard the quality of child mental health services.

The Department for Education and Skills is developing a number of initiatives designed to help schools and teachers work with children with a range of emotional and behavioural needs. In June 2001 they issued their guidance "Promoting Children's Mental Health within Early Years and School Settings". This covers not only mental health problems faced by children but the approaches schools can take to promote children's mental health.

The framework for comprehensive service provision contained in "Promoting Children's Mental Health within Early Years and School Settings" sets out four service levels. Tier 1: a primary level provided by non-specialists, tier 2: a level provided by uni-professional groups, tier 3: a specialist service for more severe, complex and persistent disorders, and tier 4; tertiary services such as day units and in-patient units for older children and adolescents who are severely mentally ill or at suicide risk.

In Teesside, services for children with mental health problems requiring input at tiers 1 and 2 are provided through educational psychology service links with schools and school nurses. This ensures that the identified teachers link with locality CAMHS groups to ensure continuity.

At tier 3 psychiatrists, Grade A and B clinical psychologists and community psychiatric nurses from Tees and North East Yorkshire national health service trust's Roseberry Centre at Middlesbrough provide out-patient outreach services along with primary care link workers.

At tier 4, for children up to the age of 12 requiring in-patient care, the health authority utilises the Fleming Nuffield Unit at Newcastle. Children in the age group over 12 to 18 years have in-patient provision through the Roseberry Centre. If it is identified by clinicians that an adolescent requires a more secure environment because of behavioural presentation or offending behaviour, the adolescent forensic service at Newcastle is utilised.

Hospital Doctors (Criminal Convictions)

Ian Lucas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will require hospital doctors registered as practitioners in England and Wales to disclose any criminal convictions they have in any jurisdiction. [26743]

Mr. Hutton: Department of Health circular Health Service Circular 2001–019 (Appointment Procedures for Hospital and Community Medical and Dental Staff) requires applicants for hospital and community medical and dental posts in the national health service in England to declare if they have ever been convicted of any criminal offence, bound over or cautioned in the United Kingdom or any other country. Employees already in post have a contractual duty to inform their employer if they are charged with a criminal offence.

Practitioners in Wales are a matter for the National Assembly for Wales.

MRI Scanners

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) new and (b) replacement MRI scanners have been provided through exclusively central funding since January 2000. [27245]

Yvette Cooper: Since January 2000, 34 additional MRI scanners, 18 replacement MRI scanners and upgrades to two existing MRI scanners have been allocated from central funding. Of these, 13 additional and 10 replacement MRI scanners had been delivered by 14 January 2002.

A further 50 additional MRI scanners will be provided from central funding by 2004, as outlined in the NHS plan and NHS cancer plan.

Linear Accelerators

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) new and (b) replacement linear accelerators have been provided through exclusively central funding since January 2000. [27246]

Yvette Cooper: Since January 2000, 15 additional linear accelerators and 42 replacement linear accelerators have been allocated from central funding. Of these, eight additional and 22 replacement linear accelerators had been delivered by 14 January 2002.

A further 25 additional and 20 replacement linear accelerators will be provided from central funding by 2004, as outlined in the NHS Plan and NHS Cancer Plan.

CT Scanners

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) new and (b) replacement CT scanners have been provided through central funding since January 2000. [27247]

Yvette Cooper: Since January 2000, 21 additional CT scanners and 113 replacement CT scanners have been allocated from central funding. Of these, two additional and 60 replacement CT scanners had been delivered by 14 January 2002.

A further 50 additional CT scanners will be provided from central funding by 2004, as outlined in the NHS Plan and NHS Cancer Plan.

Tuberculosis

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of TB were reported between 1980 and 2000 in the UK. [27594]

Yvette Cooper: The number of reported tuberculosis cases in the United Kingdom from 1980 to 2000 are shown in the table.

Healthy Living Centre Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many applications for funding from the healthy living centre initiative have been received from projects based in Buckinghamshire; and what the outcome was in each case. [27782]

Ms Blears: Six applications have been received. Five have been rejected and one is still under consideration.

Two Shires Ambulance NHS Trust

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff were employed by Two Shires Ambulance NHS trust in each year since 1997; and what the average sickness absence rate for staff was (a) in the UK and (b) in Two Shires Ambulance NHS trust in each year. [27784]

Ms Blears: The total number of (whole-time equivalent) staff employed at the Two Shires Ambulance national health service trust for the years 1997–2000 are as follows:

Year	Number
1997	450
1998	510
1999	550
2000	580

The collection of NHS trust sickness absence rates commenced in 1998 and the Two Shires Ambulance trust returned their first in 1999. The results of the sickness absence survey for 2000 are not yet finalised and the collection for 2001 has not yet taken place.

In 1999 the sickness absence rate for the Two Shires Ambulance NHS trust was 5.5 per cent.

Cancer Survival Rates

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps the Government are taking to bring survival rates of British cancer patients into line with other European countries. [27826]

Yvette Cooper: The NHS Cancer Plan, which was published in September 2000, sets out a programme of action to tackle the disease. The strategy will speed up access to high quality services across the country to bring cancer services in line with the rest of Europe.

Theft and Fraud

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his estimate is of the cost of theft and fraud to (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies in each of the last four years. [27979]

Mr. Hutton: The figures requested are in the table.

Year	£
(a) Department
1997–98	61,415.25
1998–99	66,897.29
1999–2000	48,148.81
2000–01	56,831.99
(b) Agencies
1997–98	1,461
1998–99	Nil
1999–2000	3,493
2000–01	Nil
(c) Non-departmental public bodies
1997–98	10,458
1998–99	6,903
1999–2000	2,739
2000–01	6,582

The Department now has a Directorate of Counter Fraud Services staffed by professionally trained and accredited counter fraud specialists.

Doctors (Qualification Checks)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what checks are carried out by NHS trusts to verify the qualifications of doctors before they are offered employment; and if he will make a statement. [28040]

Mr. Hutton: All national health service employers have a duty to check that the doctors they employ are suitably qualified and experienced. This includes checks on General Medical Council registration, qualifications (original certificates), criminal records and health. Employers also take up personal and professional references for potential employees.

In the case of general practitioners, the health authority will make such checks before allowing principals and non-principal general practitioners to be entered on their lists of approved practitioners.

Where doctors are employed in a locum capacity employers will either make the checks themselves or require the supplying agency to do so. This principle is enshrined in the national contract for the supply of locum doctors and the locum code of practice.

Primary Care Collaboratives

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to extend the primary care collaborative which was launched in 2000 by the National Primary Care Development Team; and if he will make a statement. [28223]

Mr. Hutton: The National Primary Care Development Team of the Modernisation Agency has demonstrated that it is possible to balance demand with capacity to ensure patients are looked after by the clinician best placed to meet their needs and that staff are less likely to feel overwhelmed by demand. They are actively disseminating the "advanced access" model developed by the collaborative across the country, which covers nearly 1,000 practices who provide care for seven million patients.

In December 2001, we announced the introduction of 11 new national primary care development centres across England. These new centres are being developed to roll out the benefits of the collaborative to every primary care organisation across the country.

We have provided an earmarked increase of £83.5 million to the primary care trust primary care access fund in 2002–03 to help primary care trusts work with their practices to improve primary care access.

Hampshire Ambulance Service

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is (a) Hampshire Ambulance NHS trust's target time for responding to emergency calls in (i) Ringwood, (ii) Fordingbridge and (iii) the Avon Valley and (b) the actual time taken in the last two years in good road conditions by the emergency ambulance provided at Totton; and if he will make a statement; [28222]

(2) what proportion of emergency calls in the last two years from (a) Ringwood, (b) Fordingbridge and (c) the Avon Valley received a response from the ambulance service provision at Totton within the target time; and if he will make a statement. [28215]

Ms Blears: Our target response times require that ambulance services prioritise emergency calls. Immediate life threatening calls are classified as category A, and other emergency calls are classified as category B/C. Ambulance services are required to respond to 75 per cent. of category A calls within eight minutes and 95 per cent. of category B/C calls within 19 minutes.

Information relating to response times in the geographical areas mentioned is not collected separately. The information available about responses to emergency calls is available only at ambulance trust level. Information about the number of emergency calls and the proportion of emergency calls resulting in an ambulance arriving at the scene of the reported incident within the Government's target response time for Hampshire Ambulance national health service trust and all other ambulance trusts in England are contained in the Department of Health Statistical Bulletin "Ambulance Services, England 2000–01". A copy is in the Library and available on the Department's website at www.doh.gov.uk/public/sb0115.htm.

Emergency Contraception

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what advice the Government received in March 2000 from the Committee on Safety of Medicines on the need for medical supervision of the supply of the morning-after pill to girls under 16; whether that advice has been superseded; and what action is taken to ensure that its supply complies with that advice; [28207]

(2) what clinical trials were conducted on the morning-after pill's use by girls under 16; and what considerations underlay the decision to license it without age limit; [28205]

(3) what steps are recommended to ensure that (a) the morning-after pill and (b) paracetamol, when supplied to girls under 16 (i) in family planning clinics, (ii) by general practitioners, (iii) by hospital accident and emergency departments, (iv) by school nurses and (v) direct by pharmacists, does not react with other medication. [28212]

Yvette Cooper: In March 2000, the advice of the Committee on Safety of Medicines (CSM) was sought on an application by Medimpex (in conjunction with Schering Health Care) to reclassify levonorgestrel (the morning after pill) 0.75 mg from prescription only to pharmacy availability for emergency hormonal contraception in women aged 16 and over. The CSM considered, on the evidence before it, that the criteria for prescription only status no longer applied to levonorgestrel 0.75 mg for this indication in this age group, and therefore advised that levonorgestrel 0.75 mg should only be supplied to those aged 16 and over without medical supervision. In giving its advice, CSM recognised that, although the efficacy and safety profile of levonorgestrel 0.75 mg for emergency hormonal contraception may not be expected to be different in the under 16s, provision to this age group posed special risk management issues. The CSM therefore advised that emergency contraception should only be supplied to those under 16 under medical supervision. That advice has not been superseded. The minutes of the CSM meeting of 23 March 2000 are available on their website www.mca.gov.uk/aboutagency/regframework/csm/csmhome.htm.

Medical supervision includes the supply by other health professionals (such as nurses and pharmacists) working to a patient group direction. Supply of the prescription product complies with the usual requirements for prescription only medicines.

The Royal Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain has set professional standards and developed comprehensive guidance for pharmacists on the retail supply of emergency hormonal contraception (EHC). The guidance says that > "pharmacists should make every reasonable effort to satisfy themselves that clients are aged 16 or over. Pharmacists should ensure that, where they believe a client to be under 16, the request is dealt with sympathetically and the client is offered appropriate help and support to enable her to obtain EHC by another route."

No clinical trials of levonorgestrel use specific to girls under 16 have been conducted in the United Kingdom. The marketing authorisation granted in 1999 for levonorgestrel 0.75 mg tablets as a prescription only medicine was supported by evidence from two large randomised controlled studies, one conducted by the World Health Organisation, and published data from uncontrolled studies. Most women in the clinical trials were aged between 16 and 48, but a few girls aged 14 and 15 were included. There were no data available for girls between ages 11 and 14 years. Age analysis of efficacy and safety in randomised studies did not identify any population that responded differently to treatment.

General practitioners and other health professionals who supply levonorgestrel and paracetamol to girls under 16 are all professionally trained to provide advice and to follow procedures designed to ensure that these products are used safely. Health professionals operating under a patient group direction have to follow formal protocols which include measures to avoid unwanted interactions with other medicines. As an added safeguard, under European legislation, the patient information leaflet approved for all medicines must contain information about interactions with other medicines and measures that should be taken to avoid them.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions the morning-after pill was prescribed (a) in total and (b) to girls under 16 (i) in family planning clinics, (ii) by general practitioners, (iii) by hospital accident and emergency departments, (iv) by school nurses and (v) direct by pharmacists in each year since 1998; and what percentage (b) was of (a). [28206]

Yvette Cooper: Not all of the data requested are collected centrally. Information on emergency hormonal contraception supplied under a patient group direction, by school nurses and pharmacists is not available and only family planning clinics report data by age.

The tables show prescriptions for emergency hormonal contraception dispensed in family planning clinics and prescriptions dispensed in the community by community pharmacists and dispensing doctors in England.

Dr. Richard Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on the provision of the morning after pill for 13 to 16-year-old girls. [29462]

Yvette Cooper: According to recent research, around a quarter of young people have sex before their sixteenth birthday. Under 16s are also less likely than older women to use contraception consistently. Our teenage pregnancy strategy recognises the importance of helping young people resist peer pressure to have early sex while seeking to ensure that those who are sexually active have easy access to high quality contraceptive advice. Emergency contraception is a safe and effective method of preventing unplanned pregnancy. It also brings young people into contact with a health professional where they can discuss their relationship, any on-going contraception needs and the importance of using condoms to protect against sexually transmitted infections.

Emergency contraception is considered to have a similar safety profile for under 16s as for older women and is supplied to under 16s under medical supervision, within the legal framework established in 1986.

Drug Safety (Roaccutane and Antidepressants

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessments she has made of the adequacy of the warning of the side effects of (a) roaccutane and (b) antidepressants; and what is his estimate of the effects of both. [28118]

Jacqui Smith: [holding answer 17 January 2002]:The safety of all medicines on the United Kingdom market is continuously monitored by the Medicines Control Agency and the independent advisory body, the Committee on Safety of Medicines (CSM). The product information includes the Summary of Product Characteristics for Prescribers and the Patient Information leaflet included in each pack of the medicine. These are also kept under continuous review to make sure that they provide the most up to date and relevant information to healthcare professionals and the public regarding the safe use of the medicine.

Roaccutane (isotretinoin) is licensed only for the treatment of very severe and disfiguring forms of acne. Roaccutane is a prescription only medicine and the terms of the marketing authorisation specify that it must be prescribed by, or under the supervision of, a consultant dermatologist. In addition, the supply of Roaccutane is restricted to hospitals or specified retail pharmacies.

The product information for Roaccutane was last updated in June 2001 with regard to warnings and possible side effects. One of the key previous amendments to the product information was the strengthening of the warning relating to depression and other psychiatric reactions including suicide, which was approved in March 1998.

Two major classes of antidepressant are the Selective Serotonin Re-uptake Inhibitors (SSRIs) and the Tricyclic Antidepressants. The safety profiles of SSRIs and TCAs are well-established and are reflected in the product information for prescribers and patients. MCA/CSM carried out a major review of the safety profile of SSRIs, which was completed in 2000 and resulted in product information being updated and an article being published in the drug safety bulletin "Current Problems in Pharmacovigilance".

Respiratory Consultants

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the projected increase of 150 additional respiratory consultants by 2004 includes persons already in the process of specialising. [28809]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 21 January 2002]: Current supply projections show that there will be an increase of around 150 trained specialists in respiratory medicine available to take up consultant posts in the specialty by 2004. The projections include specialist registrars currently in training in the specialty of respiratory medicine and take account of the long term effect of measures to increase consultant recruitment and deliver the NHS Plan target of 7,500 more consultants by 2004.

Worcestershire Community and Mental Health NHS Trust

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the deficit of the Worcestershire Community and Mental Health NHS trust; and what steps will be taken to address it. [28248]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 21 January 2002]: The Worcestershire Community and Mental Health national health service trust is projecting a £300,000 deficit against its turnover of £87 million (0.35 per cent.). I am advised that the underlying causes of the deficit are expenditure on bank and agency nursing staff, prescribed drugs and locum medical staff.

The trust has taken action to contain expenditure across the organisation, including reducing spending on locum medical staff by securing appointments to a number of consultant post vacancies.

Worcestershire health authority, Wyre Forest Primary Care Trust and prospective PCTs are currently in discussion with the trust in relation to the service and financial framework for 2002–03. I would expect the outcome of these discussions to secure a settlement which will fund the existing range of mental health services as well as developments in line with the NHS plan and National Service Framework for Mental Health and Older Adults.

Complementary Medicine

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to ensure that student doctors and nurses familiarise themselves with complementary medicine. [29434]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 22 January 2002]: It is not for the Department to determine the content of education and training for health professionals.

Individual medical schools determine their own undergraduate medical curriculum in the light of recommendations from the General Medical Council's Education Committee, which has the statutory responsibility to determine the extent of knowledge and skill required for the granting of primary medical qualifications in the United Kingdom. The Education Committee's recommendations on undergraduate medical education are currently under review.

For nursing, midwifery and health visiting, the United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting determines the standard, kind and content of education leading to registration.

The Foundation for Integrated Medicine, with which the Department works closely, held a symposium on familiarisation in complementary and alternative medicine for medical undergraduates on 23 November 2001. This was aimed at curriculum co-ordinators and teachers of CAM in all medical schools and was well attended.

Learning Disabilities

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health.

(1) if he will meet representatives from Mencap to discuss care problems for children and adults with severe learning difficulties; and if he will make a statement; [29074]

(2) what steps he is taking to improve domiciliary care support for families caring for children and adults with profound and multiple learning difficulties; [29073]

(3) what steps he is taking to improve services for children and adults with profound and multiple learning difficulties following the publication of the White Paper, Valuing People. [29075]

Jacqui Smith: Our strategy for improving services for people with learning disability is set out in the White Paper, "Valuing People: A New Strategy for Learning Disability for the 21st Century", published in March 2001. It is the first White Paper on the subject for 30 years and takes a cradle to grave, cross-Government look at services. It is based on four key principles—rights, independence, choice, and inclusion. The proposals in "Valuing People" are for all children, young people, adults and older people with learning disabilities, and their families. They cover people with severe and profound learning disabilities through to people with mild or moderate learning disabilities and people with learning disabilities from across the autistic spectrum.

Learning disability partnership boards in each local authority area are responsible for overseeing implementation of the "Valuing People" proposals at local level. Boards consist of representatives of a wide range of statutory and voluntary sector interests, including social services, health, education, employment, and housing, as well as people with learning disabilities and carers. We will be looking to boards to ensure that the strategies they develop adequately reflect the needs of all learning disabled adults in their area. We will be looking closely at the joint investment plan boards have to produce by the end of this month to ensure that this happens.

Action to implement the proposals in "Valuing People" for improving the lives of children and young people with learning disabilities is being taken forward through the Quality Protects programme. Disabled children are now a priority area in this programme to transform children's social services. From 2001–02 to 2003–04 £60 million has been earmarked for services for disabled children and their families—£15 million this year and 2002–03 and £30 million in 2003–04.

We are also improving support for profound and multiple learning disabled children as part of other programmes to improve service for all disabled children:

The implementation of the Carers and Disabled Children Act 2000 from 1 April 2001 is allowing direct payments to be made to parents of disabled children, giving greater choice and flexibility in how they receive services.

From June 2001, we have funded the charity Contact a Family by £500,000 per annum to run a new National Information Centre for families with disabled children. This includes a national telephone help and advice line.

We have increased its funding to the Family Fund Trust which provides grants to help reduce the stress on families with severely disabled children. In 2000–01, the Government contributed funding of £25.4 million. This funding has increased by £1 million this year and will increase by £2 million in 2002–03 and £3 million in 2003–04.

We have recently announced the development of a National Service Framework (NSF) for children. This will set out to tackle inequalities, raise standards, and reduce unacceptable variations in NHS and social services. Services for disabled children will be a key part of the NSF.

Mencap contributed to the development of "Valuing People" through membership of two of the working groups which took forward the early work. It continues to be involved in the implementation of some of its proposals and its chief executive is a member of the Learning Disability Task Force which has been set up to oversee implementation at national level. Ministers and departmental officials regularly meet representatives of Mencap and discuss aspects of "Valuing People"; I hope to meet Mencap representatives again on 5 March.

Patient Journey Times

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people live more than half an hour's journey from (a) a malignant haematology and bone marrow transplant, (b) a chemotherapy out-patient, (c) a specialist endocrinology, (d) a neurology, (e) a renal, (f) a plastic surgery, (g) a genetics, (h) a paediatric cardiology and (i) a paediatric surgery unit (i) in each health authority (ii) in England and (iii) on the Isle of Wight; and what proportion these figures are of the population of each. [29664]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not available as information collected by the Department identifies the national health service trust concerned but not the exact site or unit locations at which different specific services are provided.

Funeral Arrangements

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on the number of NHS patients buried by NHS trusts in unmarked graves; [27353]

(2) if he will make a statement on the provision of minimum funeral standards in NHS hospitals. [27352]

Mr. Hutton: This information is not collected centrally by the Department.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Asylum Appeals

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what the average delay between hearing an asylum appeal and the appellant receiving a determination was in the last quarter for which figures are available. [28903]

Ms Rosie Winterton: For asylum appeals heard between 1 October 2001 and 31 December 2001, the average time taken from hearing an asylum appeal to promulgation of the appeal is:

3.60 weeks at Adjudicator tier.

4.80 weeks at Tribunal tier.

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many appeal determinations have been passed on to the Home Office to deliver since 7 January. [28901]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Between 7 January and 21 January the IAA have passed the Home Office 494 determinations for delivery.

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many appeals against refusal of asylum were completed between 1 April and 30 November 2001. [28902]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Between 1 April and 30 November 2001, 29,455 asylum appeals were completed at the Adjudicator stage; 9,435 leave to appeal to the Immigration Appellate Tribunal applications were dealt with; and 2,362 substantive hearings took place at the Tribunal.

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what proportion of people have unsuccessfully appealed against refusal of asylum then sought to appeal against that decision in the last quarter for which figures are available. [28904]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Of asylum appeals received between 1 April 2001 and 30 June 2001, where the Adjudicator has made a decision: 80 per cent. were unsuccessful in their appeal against refusal of asylum. Of the 80 per cent. that were unsuccessful at Adjudicator appeal, 38 per cent. went on to appeal to the IAT.

Immigration Appellate Authority

Simon Hughes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what the average time taken by the Immigration Appellate Authority is to process from receipt to determination (a) oral family visitor appeals, (b) paper-only family visitor appeals, (c) asylum appeals and (d) other immigration appeals. [28785]

Ms Rosie Winterton: For cases promulgated by the IAA between 1 April 2001 and 31 December 2001, the current average time to process cases from receipt to determination is:

6.95 weeks for oral family visitor appeals

2.68 weeks for paper-only family visitor appeals

19.80 weeks for asylum appeals

17.96 weeks for other immigration appeals.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many (a) oral and (b) paper-only family visitor appeals were received by the Immigration Appellate Authority in December 2001. [28786]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In December 2001, the Immigration Appellate Authority received 97 cases for oral hearing and 129 cases for paper-only hearing.

Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service

Simon Hughes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will make a statement on the development of the information technology project for the Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service; whether guidance in the report Successful IT-Modernising Government in Action has been followed in relation to the project; whether the IT project is subject to any oversight by an IT project board; whether the IT system is able to record details of children who are the subject of court reports; whether the system fulfils obligations under the Data Protection Act 1998; and what was the (a) start date, (b) original planned completion date, (c) latest expected completion date, (d) original planned cost and (e) latest expected cost of the project. [28526]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Establishment of CAFCASS as a new, unified service provides an opportunity for improved communication and case management across the service. CAFCASS's IT project has been taken forward in two phases: Phase 1 installation of a national (England and Wales) infrastructure to support the service from launch; Phase 2 development of an integrated system to replace and extend Phase 1 systems and provide improved management information and interfaces with other organisations. The guidance in the report "Successful IT—Modernising Government in Action" has been followed. A Project Board was constituted under Prince 2 project management methodology.

In addition to the Phase 1 infrastructure, CAFCASS inherited systems holding case data from its predecessor services; almost all of which continue to provide operational service. This includes the recording of details of children who are the subject of court reports in the same way they did before CAFCASS's launch. CAFCASS is Data Protection Act registered. Future changes to systems will ensure CAFCASS's continued compliance.

(a) A Support Infrastructure Project was established, under Prince 2 methodology, in June 2000 with the Project Initiation Document issued at end September 2000.

(b) The planned completion date for Phase 1 was 1 April 2001. This was found to be unrealistic before rollout, and revised to 31 May 2001. The planned completion date for Phase 2 was 31 March 2002.

(c) Phase 1 was completed on time in May 2001. A statement of requirements for Phase 2 was completed for April 2001. CAFCASS is currently reviewing its IT strategy to assess immediate and longer term needs in the light of the operating experience it now has. This will include a decision on whether Phase 2 is the best option for CAFCASS's future operation.

(d) Phase 1 was planned at £5.2 million. Early estimates for Phase 2 were approximately £5–6 million. Firm costs have not been established as the project has not proceeded to procurement.

(e) Phase 1 was completed at £5.9 million due to more fit out work being needed than had been expected at many sites. CAFCASS is reviewing the IT strategy on which the future cost of Phase 2 will depend.

Market and Opinion Research

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what expenditure has been incurred by her (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies in each of the last four years on (i) opinion polling, (ii) focus groups and (iii) other forms of market research; and if she will list the surveys commissioned and the purpose of each. [27945]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Lord Chancellor's Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies conduct a range of exercises to measure public satisfaction with services and future needs. Many of these are carried out at a local level so that services can be provided to match the needs of local communities. The cost of collating and detailing all this activity would be disproportionate.

Refurbishment

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what his estimate is of the cost of buildings refurbishment carried out by his Department in each of the last four years. [27966]

Mr. Wills: The amount spent by the Lord Chancellor's Department on refurbishment of buildings in the last four financial years is shown in the table.

Financial year	Cost of refurbishment
1997–98	23,517,936.20
1998–99	22,006,208.75

Departmental Publications

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many publications were issued by her Department in each of the last four years. [11824]

Golden Jubilee

Bob Russell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) when an announcement will be made as to which applicant towns have been granted city status to commemorate the 50th anniversary of Her Majesty's Accession to the Throne; [28752]

(2) if she will arrange for more than one English town to be granted city status to commemorate the 50th anniversary of Her Majesty's Accession to the Throne. [28753]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Decisions on the grant of city status are made by the Queen, under the Royal Prerogative, on the advice of Ministers. Her Majesty the Queen has not expressed a wish to grant city status to more than one town in England to mark Her Golden Jubilee, and my noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor expects to advise Her on that basis. He will announce the results of the competition as soon as possible.

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will list the applicants for the grant of a Lord Mayoralty or Lord Provostship to mark Her Majesty the Queen's Golden Jubilee. [10823]

Ms Rosie Winterton [pursuant to the reply, 25 October 2001, c. 400W]: Applications for the grant of a Lord Mayoralty have been received from the following cities:

Bath
Cambridge
Carlisle
Chichester
Derby
Exeter
Gloucester
Lancaster
Lincoln
St. Albans
St. David's
Salford
Southampton
Sunderland
Truro
Wolverhampton
Worcester.

All the applications for the grant of Lord Mayoralty and for the grants of city status in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland for Her Majesty's Golden Jubilee are receiving consideration. My noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor will announce the results as soon as possible.

Terrorist Finance

Ms Walley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what recent discussions he has had with the Isle of Man Government over terrorist finance; and if he will make a statement. [28922]

Mr. Wills: I have not had personal discussions with the Isle of Man Government on this issue, but there have been a number of contacts between the United Kingdom and Isle of Man Governments at official level. The Isle of Man already has strong anti-money laundering legislation. The Isle of Man Government have committed themselves to implementing the Financial Action Task Force Special Recommendations on Terrorist Financing. The Isle of Man Government are moreover, introducing further anti-terrorism legislation, which includes new provisions to counteract terrorist financing. It will enable the United Nations Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism to be extended to the Isle of Man.

Magistrates Courts (Worcestershire)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what proportion of fines levied by magistrates courts in Worcestershire were collected in the latest 12 month period for which figures are available. [28900]

Mr. Wills: Magistrates Courts Committees have responsibility for the collection of a range of debts imposed through the courts, including not only fines but also fees, compensation, confiscation orders, legal aid contributions and some maintenance orders. It is not possible to separate out just the fines from the total.

It is not possible to provide the information requested in respect of Worcestershire only, as magistrates courts in Worcestershire are administered by West Mercia Magistrates Court Committee, which also covers Herefordshire and Shropshire and the information from these areas cannot be identified separately.

In addition to impositions by magistrates in West Mercia Magistrates Courts during the period October 2000 to September 2001, further amounts were imposed by other agencies, including the Crown court and magistrates in other areas. Some amounts imposed in West Mercia were transferred to other areas for collection.

The total amount of money collected by the courts in West Mercia included some amounts imposed in earlier periods, such as those being paid by instalment, and some amounts imposed in other areas, and therefore does not relate directly to an amount imposed in West Mercia.

The proportion of money collected by West Mercia Magistrates Courts Committee during the period October 2000 to September 2001 as a percentage of new impositions was 67 per cent.

Jurors (Allowances)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what recent assessment he has made of the extent to which payments to jurors meet the financial consequences of their appointment. [28820]

Mr. Wills: No assessment is made of the extent to which payments to jurors meet the financial consequences of their appointment. However, a potential juror can apply to a Crown court judge for excusal if they feel that they will suffer any financial loss through completing jury service. The maximum allowances payable to jurors are reviewed each year and are, as a general rule, increased in line with inflation. Lord Justice Auld has recommended a full review of the allowances payable to jurors. The Government are considering this as part of the package of recommendations.

Lay Magistrates

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many (a) lay magistrates and (b) vacancies for lay magistrates there are, broken down by county. [29711]

Mr. Wills: The total number of lay magistrates in England and Wales is published in the "Judicial Appointments Annual Report". The table taken from the 2000–01 edition shows the total number of lay magistrates, broken down by commission area. Figures are not kept broken down by county.

The numbers of magistrates required on each Bench is determined each year by the Lord Chancellor's local Advisory Committee. It is determined after consultation with the Bench chairman and magistrates courts committee with the aim of achieving average sittings for each magistrate within the range 35 to 45 half-days a year.

The number depends on such factors as work load and the number of expected retirements and resignations, and the capacity of the Bench to cope with new appointments. Each Advisory Committee has a different recruitment cycle so the total number of vacancies is constantly changing. However, in the year ending 31 March 2001 the Lord Chancellor appointed 1,366 new magistrates against 1,667 vacancies that Advisory Committees hoped to fill (81.9 per cent.) The target is that by 2003 at least 95 per cent. of vacancies are filled every year.

TREASURY

Housing Market

14. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the total equity in domestic homes in aggregate market values (a) now, (b) five years ago and (c) ten years ago. [27564]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The market value of households' total equity in domestic homes has risen by over 75 per cent. in the past five years. It was:

(a) £1,535 billion in 2001—Q3;

(b) £860 billion in 1996—Q3;

(c) £935 billion in 1991—Q3.

Climate Change Levy

15. Mr. Challen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received on the climate change levy. [27565]

Mr. Boateng: The Government have received representations from a variety of businesses, trade bodies, environmental organisations and other interested parties. They are being considered as part of the Budget process.

Business Regulation

16. Mr. Hendry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received from business leaders about the administrative burden on businesses. [27566]

Dawn Primarolo: The Chancellor receives many representations from businesses and others on a range of issues, including administrative burdens. He receives a number of representations leading up to each Budget and in response to consultation documents and draft legislation that we publish to ensure that all those affected can have their say. Business leaders are represented on a number of consultative committees that discuss the implementation of new policies.

The Government welcome these representations and value their contribution to policy development.

Customs and Excise

17. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received regarding the seizure of motor vehicles by Customs and Excise in the last three years. [27567]

Mr. Boateng: Vehicle seizure is proving an effective weapon in tackling smuggling as evidenced by real reductions in levels of cross-channel passenger smuggling and its use has been recommended by two major, independent evaluations in the last three years. Customs have, in response to these recommendations, put in place a robust vehicle seizure policy which hits the smugglers hard. They have gone to great lengths to publicise their policy and ensure that people are aware of the penalties smugglers face.

Child Poverty

19. Mr. Tynan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures he will introduce to reduce child poverty in the next four years. [27570]

Dawn Primarolo: This Government are committed to abolishing child poverty within a generation and halving it by 2010. As part of this commitment, we recently published a strategy document entitled "Tackling child poverty: giving every child the best possible start in life", which will inform the Budget and Spending Review 2002. As a result of tax and benefit changes announced in the last Parliament, there are now 1.2 million fewer children in poverty than there would otherwise have been.

During this Parliament, the Government will continue to make progress towards their goals with the introduction of two new tax credits—the child tax credit and the working tax credit. The Government are also making substantial new investments in services for children. Over the four years to 2004, average real-terms annual growth in spending on education and training in England will be over $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. In addition, extra funds have been made available for SureStart, Neighbourhood Renewal and the Children's Fund.

Self-employment

20. Mr. Baron: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions he has had with organisations representing the self-employed on levels of their taxation. [27571]

Mr. Boateng: The Government meet a number of organisations throughout the year to discuss taxation issues.

Inner Cities

21. John Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he has taken to tackle poverty in inner city areas. [27572]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government are committed to tackling poverty and ensuring a just society with opportunity for all.

As a result of personal tax and benefit measures this Government have introduced since 1997, there are now 1.2 million fewer children in poverty than there otherwise would have been, while the poorest third of all pensioners will receive an extra £2.5 billion this year.

The working families tax credit and disabled person's tax credit, along with the first ever national minimum wage, are helping to make work pay, while prudent management of the economy is helping to achieve high levels of employment.

To increase investment in deprived areas, an exemption from stamp duty for all property transfers up to £150,000 became available in the UK's most deprived areas from 30 November 2001.

To further stimulate business investment in England the Government have committed £20 million in match funding to a £40 million Community Development Venture Fund. This fund will provide finance for firms operating in disadvantaged areas and the Government hope to see it up and running by the end of this financial year.

The National Strategy for Neighbourhood Renewal, meanwhile, sets out how the Government will go about narrowing the gap between the most deprived areas and the rest. Key to the strategy is harnessing the mainstream resources of Government Departments, but a £900 million Neighbourhood Renewal Fund is also in place to kick start the renewal process in the 88 most deprived local authority areas.

The National Strategy and Neighbourhood Renewal Fund are specific to England.

Interest Rates

22. Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of the Bank of England Monetary Policy Committee's interest rate decision of 10 January on manufacturing industry. [27573]

Ruth Kelly: Decisions on interest rates are a matter for the Monetary Policy Committee. When forming its judgment, the MPC takes into account sectoral and regional information, as required by the Bank of England Act.

Euro

23. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent analysis he has conducted into the economic implications of euro membership for the United Kingdom. [27575]

Ruth Kelly: The Government have said that they will complete an assessment of the five economic tests within two years of the start of this Parliament.

24. Mr. Connarty: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what mechanisms he has put in place to monitor the impact of the euro-zone economies on the UK economy. [27576]

Ruth Kelly: The impact of the euro-zone economies on the UK economy is monitored as part of the Treasury's regular forecast rounds. Further information can be found in the Treasury's pre-Budget and Budget reports.

31. Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last discussed convergence criteria with the Governor of the Bank of England. [27583]

Ruth Kelly: The Chancellor meets regularly with the Governor of the Bank of England to discuss a range of issues.

33. Adam Price: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will take action to ensure a downward revision of the exchange rate of sterling against the euro. [27585]

Ruth Kelly: While the Government do not have an exchange rate target, a stable and competitive pound is sought over the medium-term. The key to a stable and competitive pound is low and stable inflation, backed up by sound public finances.

37. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions he has had with ministerial colleagues on his five economic tests for joining the euro. [27590]

Ruth Kelly: The Chancellor has discussions with Cabinet colleagues on a regular basis, and on a wide range of issues.

Mike Gapes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of the introduction of euro notes and coins on the British economy. [27568]

Ruth Kelly: UK businesses that have trading links with the euro area, not just those who export or import, will be affected. The Government are therefore committed to working with business to secure the right level of euro preparations in the UK for working with the euro now.

International Development

25. Dr. Tonge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects the Government will reach the UN 0.7 per cent. of gross national product target for international aid. [27577]

Mr. Boateng: The Government remain fully committed to the UN 0.7 per cent. ODA/GNP target. We have set out our plans for the next three years to 2003–04 and, as these show, development assistance as a proportion of GNP will rise to 0.33 per cent. in 2003–04, up from 0.26 per cent. in 1997. In his speech in New York and in his pre-Budget report speech, the chancellor emphasised his commitment to ensuring further substantial increases in development assistance. The forthcoming Spending Review is an opportunity to consider plans for development spending beyond 2003–04, alongside other priorities and pressures.

Aid effectiveness is also important as well as aid volumes. The Government are committed to redirecting their development assistance budget to the poorest countries, particularly those with effective Governments pursuing high growth and pro-poor economic and social policies. In addition, the Government have untied all their aid as from 1 April last year.

Taxation

26. Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the proportion of revenue raised by (a) direct and (b) indirect means. [27578]

Mr. Andrew Smith: No such estimates are available, however a detailed breakdown of current receipts is published in Table B11 of the November 2001 pre-Budget report.

30. Kevin Brennan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures he is taking to relieve the burden of taxation on the poorest families. [27582]

Dawn Primarolo: As a result of personal tax and benefit measures introduced since 1997, families with children in the poorest fifth of the population are on average £1,700 a year better off. The new working tax credit and child tax credit, the rates and thresholds of which will be announced in the Budget, will do more to help families on low incomes.

Low-income Families

27. Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures he is taking to support families on low income. [27579]

Dawn Primarolo: Over the course of the last Parliament, the Government introduced a number of changes to help provide decent family incomes, including:

increasing child benefit;

introducing the children's tax credit;

introducing the working families' tax credit; and increasing the children's allowances in income support.

WFTC now benefits nearly 1.3 million families and on average these families are receiving £35 a week more than they did under family credit.

Building on success of WFTC, the Government will be introducing from 2003 a new credit for families with children, the child tax credit. We will provide a seamless stream of support for families, paid direct to the main carer, building on the foundations of universal child benefit. The child tax credit will be complemented by the working tax credit, which aims to improve work incentives and make work pay.

Deprived Areas

28. Derek Twigg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to increase the levels of public expenditure on public services in areas of deprivation. [27580]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Government are committed to narrowing the gap in outcomes between the most deprived parts of the country and the rest. The National Strategy for Neighbourhood Renewal, published last year, sets out the Government's approach to renewing poor neighbourhoods.

Central to that approach is the harnessing of mainstream spending by Government Departments, to ensure improved basic standards of service provision in all areas of the country. Supporting this mainstream spending are a number of additional programmes, targeted toward helping the poorest off.

Aggregates Levy

32. Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions he has had with the aggregates producers and construction industries in (a) Scotland and (b) the rest of the UK on the implementation of the aggregates levy. [27584]

Mr. Boateng: A number of discussions have recently been held at both ministerial and official level with representatives of the aggregates industries throughout the UK, including Scotland, about the implementation of the aggregates levy.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of (a) the benefit of the proposed reduction in national insurance contributions as a result of the introduction of the aggregates levy in Scotland and (b) the yield of the levy. [29361]

Mr. Boateng: The reduction in employers' national insurance contributions associated with the introduction of the aggregates levy, along with the new sustainability fund, is designed to ensure that the aggregates levy does not result in an increased burden to business as a whole. The expected yield from the aggregates levy was published in November 2001 in the pre-Budget report.

Heavily Indebted Countries

34. Roger Casale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what further steps he is taking to reduce the foreign debt of the world's poorest countries and to eliminate global poverty. [27586]

Mr. Boateng: The UK continues to work hard to ensure that the Heavily Indebted Country (HIPC) initiative delivers a sustainable relief from debt for eligible countries. We also call on other countries to follow our leads on bilateral policies, such as 100 per cent. relief at Decision Point, and in holding payments in trust for those countries yet to receive debt relief. Already 24 countries have qualified for debt relief, and they will benefit from over $56 billion in debt reduction, which will bring their debts to below the average of developing countries.

The objective of the UK's development assistance programme is to help reduce global poverty. We recognise the need to increase the overall level of finance for development in order to achieve this and have been active in mobilising increased international resources. In his speech to the Federal Reserve bank on 16 November, the Chancellor proposed the creation of an international development trust fund and called upon donor nations to substantially increase their development assistance budgets.

Tourism

35. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on the level of value added tax applied to tourism services; and if he will make a statement. [27587]

Mr. Boateng: The Government have received various representations about the level and impact of VAT on the tourism industry, generally from businesses affected by the foot and mouth outbreak. The Government are aware of the serious financial difficulties some of these businesses are facing and have put in place a package of measures specifically aimed at helping them. This includes flexible VAT payment arrangements for all those experiencing genuine difficulties and a joint helpline, set up by Customs and the Inland Revenue, to help resolve tax matters.

Budget

36. Tim Loughton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with business leaders in advance of his forthcoming Budget. [27588]

Mr. Boateng: The Chancellor and his Ministers have numerous meetings with business leaders on a wide range of issues.

Internet Use

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library the information in the National Statistics Omnibus for (a) 2000 and (b) 2001 on internet use, broken down by (i) age and (ii) gender, in each region and nation of the United Kingdom. [29695]

Ruth Kelly: The information falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Jim Cousins, dated 24 January 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question regarding data from the National Statistics Omnibus on internet use, for 2000 and 2001, broken down by (i) age and (ii) gender in each region and nation of the United Kingdom. (29695)

Since July 2000, the National Statistics Omnibus Survey has provided information on internet use for individuals in Great Britain based on a month's data gathered four times a year. These data are published along with household level data from the Expenditure and Food Survey, each quarter in the National Statistics First Release on Internet Access. These releases include background information on the National Statistics Omnibus Survey and the Expenditure and Food Survey.

The internet access first releases presenting the latest figures on internet access are available in the House of Commons Library. The release dated December 2001 presented data from the Expenditure and Food Survey for households with home access to the internet broken down by region.

Currently regional breakdowns of the individual level data from the Omnibus Survey are not published by age and gender in the internet access first releases as they are not reliable at that level of detail due to small sample sizes. We are currently investigating combining the four months of data to produce annual estimates which will increase the sample size and reliability of the information. If the results are then sufficiently robust we will publish this information and make it available in the House of Commons Library. We will inform you of the outcome.

Private Sector Capital

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the private sector net capital flow to and from the United Kingdom in each of last five years, indicating flows to (a) the USA, (b) South and Central America, (c) sub-Saharan Africa and (d) India and Pakistan. [29700]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Jim Cousins, dated 24 January 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question on private sector net capital flows between the United Kingdom and (a) the USA, (b) South and Central America, (c) sub-Saharan Africa and (d) India and Pakistan. (29700)

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) does not compile a full geographical breakdown of the United Kingdom's financial account (previously known as the capital account) flows, although some information is available for the direct investment component. A limited geographical breakdown of UK foreign direct investment, both abroad and in the UK is published annually in the Foreign Direct Investment first release. This first release was published on 13th December 2001 and is available in pdf file format from the ONS website in the press release facility:

http://www.statistics/gov.uk/press release/Archive.asp

More country information is available directly from the FDI inquiry itself. The contact details of the statistician responsible are printed on the front page of the first release.

Nuclear Industry

Ms Drown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has for (a) fiscal measures and (b) other charges on the nuclear industry to take account of risks of nuclear accidents that are not met by the industry's own insurance. [27552]

Mr. Boateng: None. The third-party liability of nuclear installations is governed by international agreement. This is set at £140 million. In the UK, we require installations to purchase insurance for third-party cover for each incident up to this limit. The Department for Trade and Industry is currently negotiating with international partners to triple this limit. The nuclear industry will need to pay for additional commercial cover up to this limit; but we have no plans for fiscal or other charges.

Overseas Development

Jim Dobbin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the timetable for the achievement of the UN target for overseas development assistance and on steps taken to encourage other nations to increase aid budgets. [27569]

Mr. Boateng: The Government remain fully committed to the UN 0.7 per cent. ODA/GNP target. We have set out our plans for the next three years to 2003–04 and as these show, development assistance as a proportion of GNP will rise to 0.33 per cent. in 2003–04, up from 0.26 per cent. in 1997. In his speech in New York, the Chancellor emphasised his commitment to ensuring further substantial increases in development assistance. In his speech in New York in November, he called on all rich nations to commit further substantial increases to development assistance.

Pre-Budget Report

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will extend table 4.3 on the pre-Budget report by showing comparable figures for marginal deduction rates of (a) 50 per cent. or more and (b) 40 per cent. or more. [19649]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 30 November 2001]: Before Budget 1998, an estimated 760,000 households faced marginal deduction rates (MDRs) of 50 per cent. or more, while 800,000 faced MDRs of 40 per cent. or more. After Budget 2001, an estimated 1.1 million households faced MDRs of 50 per cent. or more while 1.12 million faced MDRs of 40 per cent. or more. These figures, which cover the number of households in receipt of either income related benefits or WFTC where at least one person works 16 hours or more, include the effects of income tax and national insurance contributions, and the withdrawal of housing benefit and council tax benefit. The effect of tax and benefit changes introduced since Budget 1998, including the working families tax credit (WFTC), has reduced the number of households facing MDRs in excess of 70 per cent. by around half a million. As the WFTC is more generous than the family credit that it replaced, more families benefit from it, hence the larger numbers of households now facing MDRs at 40 and 50 per cent.

Tax Credits Fraud

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many penalties have been imposed on claimants for (a) working families tax credit and (b) disabled persons tax credit in each year since the credits commenced; how many of these penalties were imposed as a result of fraud; and what the total value of the penalties was. [25027]

Dawn Primarolo: The tables show the number of penalties imposed on applicants for working families tax credit and disabled person's tax credit (WFTC and DPTC) for the periods in question. Since WFTC and DPTC were introduced in October 1999 up to 31 December 2001, 645 penalties have been imposed against WFTC and DPTC applicants. The total value of these penalties is £596,863.13.

	Number of penalties
WFTC
1 October 1999–30 September 2000	106
1 October 2000–30 September 2001	401
1 October 2001–31 December 2001	128
DPTC
1 October 1999–30 September 2000	1
1 October 2000–30 September 2001	8
1 October 2001–31 December 2001	1

Footballers' Testimonials

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will treat the proceeds from footballers' testimonials as taxable income. [29257]

Dawn Primarolo: The proceeds from footballers' testimonial events may already be chargeable to tax under present law. However, whether they are or not depends on the circumstances of each particular case.

Poverty

John Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he is taking to reduce poverty in inner city areas. [29278]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government are committed to tackling poverty and ensuring a just society with opportunity for all.

As a result of personal tax and benefit measures this Government have introduced since 1997, there are now 1.2 million fewer children in poverty than there otherwise would have been, while the poorest third of all pensioners will receive an extra £2.5 billion this year.

The working families tax credit and disabled person's tax credit, along with the first ever national minimum wage, are helping to make work pay, while prudent management of the economy is helping to achieve high levels of employment.

To increase investment in deprived areas, an exemption from stamp duty for all property transfers up to £150,000 became available in the UK's most deprived areas from 30 November 2001.

To further stimulate business investment in England, the Government have committed £20 million in match funding to a £40 million Community Development Venture Fund. This fund will provide finance for firms operating in disadvantaged areas and the Government hope to see it up and running by the end of this financial year.

The National Strategy for Neighbourhood Renewal meanwhile, sets out how the Government will go about narrowing the gap between the most deprived areas and the rest. Key to the strategy is harnessing the mainstream resources of Government Departments, but a £900 million Neighbourhood Renewal Fund is also in place to kick start the renewal process in the 88 most deprived local authority areas.

The National Strategy and Neighbourhood Renewal Fund are specific to England.

Self-Assessment (Tax)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many fines were levied for the late return of self-assessment tax forms from people resident in the Buckingham constituency in the last 12 months; and how much was raised. [30065]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue does not hold local figures of this nature.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people (a) in total and (b) living in the Buckingham constituency were fined for late filing of self-assessment forms in each year since 1997; and how much revenue was raised in each year. [30062]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue does not hold local figures of this nature. I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answers I gave him on 15 January 2002, Official Report, columns 226–27W, for the national figures requested.

Aggregates Tax

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to exempt small rural quarries from the proposed aggregates tax. [28717]

Mr. Boateng: The Government have no such plans.

Small Businesses (Insurance)

Chris Grayling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make an assessment of changes to the cost and availability of insurance for small businesses since 11 September; and if he will make a statement. [27549]

Ruth Kelly: Insurance companies themselves remain responsible for determining the terms, conditions, and price of their products. Costs and availability change constantly in response to market conditions.

I am not aware of any greater changes since 11 September, except in the case of insurance against terrorism risk. Nor am I aware of any special impact on small businesses.

Working Families Tax Credit

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the reply of 19 December 2001, Official Report, columns 323–34W, how many of the working families tax credit applications investigated by the Inland Revenue involved co-operation between the Inland Revenue and (a) the investigative organisations of the Benefits Agency, (b) the National Intelligence Unit and (c) local authorities; and what proceedings are in place for facilitating such co-operation. [26473]

Dawn Primarolo: Exact figures are not available in the format requested. However, the nature of such investigations often means that information is shared and passed on between the Inland Revenue, other Government Departments and local authorities, as allowed by statutory regulations.

DEFENCE

C130K

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 26 November 2001, Official Report, column 662W, how many C130Ks he plans to decommission in each year over the next 10 years; and when he plans to have completed its phasing out. [26623]

Mr. Ingram: Current plans for the last element of the rolling programme to replace part of the Hercules C130K fleet with C130Js are for two of the C130K aircraft based at RAF Lyneham to be retired by 30 April 2002 and one aircraft to be retired towards the end of 2002. There are currently no detailed plans for the decommissioning of the remaining 26 C130K Hercules, which is predicted to occur by around the end of this decade.

Service Applicants (Fitness)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many and what percentage of applicants to the (a) Army, (b) RAF, (c) Royal Navy and (d) Royal Marines were turned down on medical grounds in each quarter of the last seven years, broken down by gender. [26136]

Mr. Ingram: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 19 December 2001, Official Report, column 339W. The information that is available is shown in the table, which includes some corrected and updated figures for Royal Marine Other Ranks. A breakdown by gender is only available for the Army. The principal reason for the significant variation in failure rates between the RAF other ranks and those of the other services is that the medical examination is undertaken at a much later stage in the selection process, by which time many of the applicants have already withdrawn for other reasons.

Newspaper Advertising

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the expenditure of his (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies on newspaper advertising by title in each year since 1997. [26988]

Dr. Moonie: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

However, since 1999–2000, the Ministry of Defence's total public relations expenditure has been published in the annual departmental performance report.

Legislation

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he plans to introduce a similar measure to the US Montgomery GI Enhancement Act in the UK. [27720]

Mr. Ingram: I have no such plans.

Trident

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the studies sponsored by his Department in each of the last three years concerning future options for Trident. [28260]

Mr. Ingram: We said in the Strategic Defence Review of 1998 that we need to ensure that Trident can remain an effective deterrent for up to 30 years. As with other key military capabilities, we routinely undertake studies into options for achieving the optimum operational life and value for money.

Service Deployment

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the countries in which British troops are (a) stationed and (b) active. [28080]

Mr. Ingram: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence gave to the hon. Member for North Essex (Mr. Jenkin) on 16 January 2002, Office Report, column 316. A copy of this letter was sent on 19 January 2002, and a copy has been placed in the Library of the House. British troops are deployed on active service in 18 countries and overseas territories in the Balkans, the middle east, Cyprus, the Falkland Islands, Georgia, the United States of America, Africa and Asia, as well as at sea.

Royal Navy Vessels

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Royal Navy vessels have been brought into service since 1997; and for how long they are estimated to remain in service. [28349]

Mr. Ingram: The Royal Navy has brought 16 vessels into service since 1997. On current plans their estimated remaining service lives are as shown in the table.

Vessels brought into service since 1997	Estimated remaining service life (years)
HMS Ocean	16

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Royal Navy vessels have been decommissioned since 1997; and what the age of each of the vessels was. [28348]

Mr. Ingram: Since 1997 21 Royal Navy Vessels have been decommissioned. The age of each vessel when decommissioned is shown in the table.

Vessels decommissioned since 1997	Age of vessel when decommissioned (years)
HMS Peacock	14

Warships

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to complete the Review of Warship Maintenance and Support; and if he will make a statement. [28929]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence is seeking to modernise arrangements for warship support and achieve savings to the defence budget. We have received proposals from the dockyard companies for potential partnering arrangements at the naval bases at Portsmouth, Devonport and the Clyde. We have also received alternative proposals from our trade unions for the pursuit of efficiencies at the naval bases. All options are currently being compared for value for money, together with their technical, commercial and human resource implications, for a decision in the near future.

Royal Armoured Corps

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is (a) the establishment and (b) the actual strength, excluding attached troops, of the regiments of the Royal Armoured Corps. [28833]

Mr. Ingram: The establishment and strength of the regiments of the Royal Armoured Corps as at 1 December 2001 is detailed in the table:

Regiment	Establishment	Strength
Household Cavalry Mounted Regiment	324	312
Queens Dragoon Guards	358	383
Scots Dragoon Guards	451	386
9th/12th Royal Lancers	358	353
2 Royal Tank Regiment	460	447
Royal Dragoon Guards	451	459
Household Cavalry Regiment	421	412
Queen's Royal Hussars	451	300
King's Royal Hussars	451	417

Pensions

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration the Armed Forces Pension Scheme review has given to using additional voluntary contributions as a means of making specialist pay pensionable; and if he will make a statement. [29237]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence plans to introduce a facility to enable all serving personnel to make additional voluntary contributions (AVCs) through deductions from pay, to enable them to "top up" their pension benefits where they have scope to do so under Inland Revenue rules. This would also be available for those on specialist pay. As we made clear in our consultation document on the current review of the Armed Forces Pension Scheme, published in March of last year, we are also considering the option that MOD, as employer, might fund part of the costs of AVCs in respect of specialist pay. The decision will depend on whether or not this is judged to be a reasonable and cost-effective way of improving recruitment and retention. A decision on the review is expected later this year.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for an education campaign to enable armed forces personnel to make informed judgments on the Armed Forces Pension Review Body's conclusions. [29495]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence is in the process of developing a multi-media communications package which we plan will comprise booklets, letters, factsheets, internet material, personal forecasts, presentations and roadshows designed to enable all serving military personnel to make a timely and informed judgment about the relative merits of the current Armed Forces Pension Scheme and the anticipated new scheme.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment the Armed Forces Pension Review Body has made of proposals to uplift for inflation the best of the three final years of a serviceman or woman's service when determining pensionable pay; and if he will make a statement. [29496]

Mr. Ingram: In the Ministry of Defence's consultation document on the Armed Forces Pension Scheme (AFPS) Review, the MOD indicated the intention to move to a final salary scheme and the possibility of basing the pension on the best year's salary in the three years before retirement. In response to views expressed during the consultation, we are currently considering whether we might introduce a mechanism to provide an uplift for inflation under the new AFPS.

Welbeck Army College

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for the future use of Welbeck Army College. [29297]

Mr. Ingram: The Army sixth form college will remain at its current Welbeck home until at least September 2005. Following detailed examination during the Defence Training Review, it has been decided to expand the college to include students from the RAF, Royal Navy and the civil service. A public-private partnership (PPP) project is currently under way to deliver the requirements of the Defence sixth form college, and this will be judged against a benchmark site at a former Army Barracks at Garats Hay near Loughborough. I must stress that the private sector is not constrained by this benchmark, and tenderers will be given the opportunity of selecting an alternative site to provide the facilities and services. It is too early to say where the college will ultimately be sited.

Army Complement

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the change in the shortfall in the official complement of the Army was between (a) 1 May 1997, (b) 1 May 2001 and (c) the latest date for which the figure is available. [29469]

Mr. Ingram: The table shows the shortfall in whole Army strength figures against the in-year requirement as at 1 May 1997, 1 May 2001 and 1 December 2001 which are the latest data available.

	Shortfall
(a) 1 May 1997	4,933
(b) 1 May 2001	6,761
(c) 1 December 2001	6,169

US Forces

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he takes to ensure that activities undertaken by US forces operating in the UK are consistent with the terms of the European convention on human rights; and if he will make a statement. [28708]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 22 January 2002]: US forces operating in the UK are a visiting force, and as such are subject to the NATO Status of Forces agreement of 1951, which requires a visiting force to respect the law of the host nation. Our legislation recognises the European convention on human rights.

EU/NATO Capabilities

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list (a) those non-EU European NATO member countries and other EU applicant countries who have offered contributions for improving European military capability and (b) those countries whose offer has been (i) accepted and (ii) rejected; and if he will make a statement. [29636]

Mr. Hoon: The countries are:

Bulgaria
Republic of Cyprus
Czech Republic
Estonia
Hungary
Iceland
Latvia
Lithuania
Malta
Norway
Poland
Romania
Slovak Republic
Slovenia
Turkey.

The EU has welcomed all these contributions.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress made by the EU/NATO working groups on (a) the preparation of an EU/NATO security agreement, (b) the setting of capability goals, (c) the preparation of an agreement on the modalities for EU access to NATO assets and capabilities and (d) the definition of permanent arrangements for future EU/NATO consultations in times of crisis and non-crisis; and if he will make a statement. [29635]

Mr. Hoon: Work between the EU and NATO continues in all the areas mentioned. An interim security agreement is in place. Discussions continue on details of a permanent arrangement. NATO experts have been closely involved with EU colleagues in work to elaborate and identify the capabilities required for the Headline Goal. The EU's capability action plan will be implemented in close co-operation with relevant NATO initiatives. We have made good progress towards agreement on EU access to NATO assets and capabilities, although arrangements are not yet finalised. Permanent consultation arrangements between NATO and the EU were defined at Nice and have been implemented satisfactorily. Consultation and transparency between the two organisations have been very good.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to take an initiative within the European Union to improve the arrangements for the participation of non-EU allied countries in the ESDP in order to create an associate status for the countries concerned; and if he will make a statement. [29632]

Mr. Hoon: The EU is committed to the fullest possible involvement of both the non-EU European allies and the EU accession partners in the European Security and Defence Policy (ESDP).

The Nice European Council agreed a substantial set of provisions governing consultation with these countries and arrangements for their participation in EU-led operations. These arrangements already provide for a high level of participation by our non-EU European allies in ESDP.

Operation Fingal

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he anticipates that the UK numbers of ground troops in Operation Fingal will be substantially reduced. [29608]

Mr. Ingram: I anticipate that the number of UK forces involved in Operation Fingal, the UK contribution to the International Security Assistance Force (ISAF), will reduce substantially when the UK command of the ISAF ends in mid-April 2002.

International Terrorism

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with his European counterparts regarding the Belgian initiative of drawing up a White Paper on European security by submitting a WEU contribution on the repercussions of countering the threat that international terrorism poses for collective defence; and if he will make a statement. [29631]

Mr. Hoon: Discussions were held during the Belgian Presidency of the EU with a view to commissioning the EU Institute for Security Studies to produce an academic overview of member states' defence policies. This work will be taken forward under the Spanish Presidency.

European Crisis Management

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans there are for the EU Council to establish an intergovernmental council fund for European military and non-military crisis-management operations outside the control of the Commission and the European Parliament; and if he will make a statement. [29633]

Mr. Hoon: Discussions are continuing between EU member states over the financial arrangements to be put in place for European military and any non-military crisis management operations under the Common Foreign and Security Policy. No decisions have yet been reached.

European Defence

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans there are to transform the informal meeting of EU defence ministers into a formal defence council meeting; and if he will make a statement. [29637]

Mr. Hoon: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 22 January 2002, Official Report, column 736W. There are no plans to transform informal Defence Ministers' meetings into a formal council.

We expect informal meetings of EU Defence Ministers to continue, and the General Affairs Council provides a forum for formal decision-making as and when required.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the EU military exercise programme covering the period 2001 to 2006. [29634]

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

Mr. Hoon: The exercise programme is confined to political/military decision making procedures. There are no plans to hold separate EU field exercises.

European Security and Defence Policy (ESDP) procedures will be exercised for the first time in May 2002. This exercise will test top level co-ordination and the decision-making procedures of the ESDP bodies, including the Political and Security Committee, the EU Military Committee and the EU Military Staff. In 2003 there are plans to hold another exercise at this higher strategic level with EU and NATO bodies, and a workshop to examine the role of deployable force headquarters at the operational level.

Beyond that, the EU envisages further exercises, expanded to include testing of the linkages and procedures between the higher strategic level structures and potential operational headquarters for EU-led operations, such as SHAPE or national headquarters like the UK's Permanent Joint Headquarters at Northwood. However, no detailed exercise planning beyond 2002 has been carried out.

EU troop exercises are unnecessary, as current programmes of national, NATO and bi or multi-lateral exercises are already sufficient to generate the capabilities that the EU is likely to require.

Armed Forces (Marital Status)

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what programmes are run by the RAF, the Army and the Royal Navy to assist service men and women who are experiencing relationship breakdown; and if he will make a statement. [27676]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 23 January 2002]: The services rarely interfere or become directly involved in matrimonial or relationship disputes, unless requested to do so by the parties concerned, as these are essentially a private matter. Nevertheless, each service places great importance on the welfare of service families, recognising the significant contribution they make as well as the deleterious effects of mobility and separation aspects of service life. Consequently, there is a range of welfare facilities able to provide help and support on a wide range of issues, including relationship breakdown if requested. The service welfare organisations liaise with Relate at local level and provide those service personnel seeking professional marriage guidance counselling with an early referral.

With the naval service personnel are able to meet with a professional from one of the Navy's caring organisations: the Naval Personal and Family Service (NPFS) or the Naval Chaplaincy Service (NCS). The NPFS employs qualified social workers able to offer direct advice, counselling, support (practical and emotional) and advocacy on behalf of clients.

Within the Army, the main source of help is through the Soldiers, Sailors, Airmen and Families Association—Forces Help (SSAFA-FH), a charity contracted to provide a range of professional welfare services, particularly overseas. Army personnel also have access to other welfare organisations, available at most garrisons, as follows: the Army Welfare Service (AWS), the Army Families Federation (AFF) and the Army Families Advice Bureau (AFAB). In Germany, the Army also provides funding for dependants to return to the UK to be trained in marriage guidance counselling by Relate; this then provides an additional resource in theatre.

As with the other two services, the RAF has no programmes in place specifically to provide assistance to those experiencing relationship problems. However, there are a number of networks and organisations available to individuals or couples able to provide support and guidance if requested. These include the SSAFA-FH RAF(UK) Social Work Service which has staff based on 32 Stations in the UK. The RAF has recently launched a community support website that gives practical information and links to organisations which may be able to provide the necessary help and guidance. The website, www.rafcom.co.uk, is designed to tackle issues that may contribute to relationship problems.

Gulf War

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to apply for funds, in order to assist UK service men, from the seized assets of Saddam Hussein made available by the US Government for anybody affected by the Gulf war. [29379]

Dr. Moonie: I have no such plans. The Ministry of Defence cannot use frozen Iraqi funds to pay compensation to individuals who have suffered as a result of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait. Only a small percentage of the Iraqi funds frozen by the UK authorities under UN resolutions actually belong to the Iraqi Government, the bulk belonging either to businesses or private individuals who are resident in Iraq. UN resolutions do not allow the use of these funds in this way.

Claims against Iraq were handled by the UN Compensation Commission (UNCC). The UNCC imposed a deadline for the submission of claims of 1 January 1995. Claims from UK claimants to the UNCC were submitted via the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's Claims Section.

I cannot comment on the policy of the US Government towards their own personnel.

Territorial Army

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 9 January 2002, Official Report, column 828–29W, on the Territorial Army, when he will write to the hon. Member for New Forest West. [29839]

Dr. Moonie: I wrote to the hon. Member on 23 January.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Public Relations Consultants

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much was spent by (a) his Department and (b) bodies for which it is responsible on external public relations consultants in each of the last four years. [27396]

Mr. MacShane: The total expenditure by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on external public relations consultants in the last four years was:

2001–02	[1]60,904
2000–01	347,857
1999–2000	0
1998–99	59,337

[1] Financial year to date

The bulk of the expenditure in 2000–01 relates to the "Know Before You Go" public awareness campaign aimed at encouraging UK travellers to be better prepared when travelling overseas.

Among the FCO's executive non-departmental public bodies, only the British Council has engaged such consultants in the same period. The costs were:

2001–02	[1]20,925
2000–01	4,650
1999–2000	3,256
1998–99	214,901

[1] Taking December 2001 as the last month

The figure for 1998–99 includes costs connected with the British Council's "Vision" project. The project looked at re-defining the Council's purpose and strategic direction and examining its visual identity.

Saville Inquiry

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what costs have been incurred by his Department to date in connection with the Saville inquiry; and what his estimate is of the final cost to his Department. [29589]

Peter Hain: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has incurred no direct costs in connection with the Bloody Sunday inquiry.

A few staff spend a small amount of time dealing with issues relating to the inquiry, but they absorb this task into their normal duties, so staff time costs are not separately calculated.

Foot and Mouth

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans the Government have to co-operate with the European Parliament's inquiry into the foot and mouth outbreak. [29771]

Peter Hain: The Government are ready to co-operate with the Temporary Committee that has been appointed by the European Parliament to inquire into the recent outbreaks of foot and mouth disease. We await news of how the committee intends to proceed.

Charter of Fundamental Rights

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in which cases the Charter of Fundamental Rights has been cited in the European Court of Justice in the Advocate-General's opinion or the judges' decision. [29768]

Peter Hain: Providing the full list would incur disproportionate cost.

We are aware of the following cases in the European Court of Justice where the European Union Charter of Fundamental Rights has been referred to in the Advocate General's opinion or the judge's decision:

The Opinion, delivered on 8 February 2001, of Advocate General Tizzano: Case C173/99: Broadcasting, Entertainment, Cinematographic and Theatre Union (BECTU) v. Secretary of State for Trade and Industry.

The Opinion, delivered on 22 March 2001, of Advocate General Jacobs: Case 270/99: Z v. European Parliament.

The Opinion, delivered on 14 June 2001, of Advocate General Jacobs: Case C-377/98: Kingdom of the Netherlands v. European Parliament and the Council of the European Union.

The Opinion, delivered on 10 July 2001, of Advocate General Leger: Case C-353/99 P: Council of the European Union v. Heidi Hautala MEP.

The Opinion, delivered on 20 September 2001, of Advocate General Mischo: Joined Cases C20/00 and C64/00: Booker Agriculture Ltd v. The Scottish Ministers and Hydro Seafood.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which member state Governments have stated that they (a) wish and (b) do not wish to see the Charter of Fundamental Rights incorporated into European Union law. [29769]

Peter Hain: The European Union Charter of Fundamental Rights was proclaimed as a political declaration at the Nice European Council in December 1999.

At the same time Heads of State or Government agreed to a review of the Charter's status at the next intergovernmental conference in 2004 as to whether, and if so how, the Charter should be integrated into the treaties.

A Convention on the Future of Europe, whose membership includes the representatives of the Heads of State or Government of the member states, and which will hold its inaugural meeting on 28 February 2002, has been convened to prepare the 2004 intergovernmental conference. One of the issues it will consider will be the charter's status.

European Union

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the accession process of the candidate countries for accession to the European Union under the Treaty of Nice; and what plans the Government have to ensure enlargement if the Republic of Ireland does not ratify the treaty. [29767]

Peter Hain: The Government believe that the Treaty of Nice is necessary to make enlargement a success. We understand that the Irish Government are considering how to address the concerns of the Irish people regarding the treaty. In the meantime, as agreed by all EU Governments, including the Irish Government, other member states are proceeding with their ratification processes. The Laeken

European Council in December 2001 confirmed the EU's determination to complete negotiations with those candidates that are ready by the end of 2002 so that they can join the EU in time to participate in the 2004 European Parliament elections. The UK is fully committed to this goal.

European Council

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the Government's objectives are for the European Council's meeting at Barcelona; and if he will make a statement. [29765]

Peter Hain: At the European Council in Barcelona, Heads of Government will review progress on economic and social reform undertaken as a result of proposals agreed at the Lisbon and Stockholm European Councils. The Government are committed to this reform process, with its strategic aim of making the European Union the most competitive and dynamic knowledge-based economy in the world with full employment by 2010.

The Government's objective for Barcelona is to take stock of progress made, and to focus member states' efforts on making concrete progress on the further reforms necessary. We would particularly like to see progress in the five areas identified by the Spanish presidency as priorities: transport and communication networks; energy; education and training; labour markets; and financial services. We support the Spanish approach and will be working closely with them throughout their presidency.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in achieving the goals of economic and social reform set out at the European Council's meeting at Lisbon; and if he will make a statement. [29766]

Peter Hain: I refer the hon. Member to the answer the Economic Secretary to the Treasury gave to the right hon. and learned Member for Folkestone and Hythe (Mr. Howard) on 26 November 2001, Official Report, column 640W.

The hon. Member may also be interested to read the recent Communication by the European Commission "The Lisbon Strategy—Making Change Happen". The Government welcome the Commission's Communication, which will feed into discussion at the European Council in Barcelona, 15–16 March. This document is available at www.europa.eu.int/comm/press_room/presspacks/Barcelona/com_en.pdf.

Gibraltar

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in deciding the methods by which Gibraltarian voters will vote in European parliamentary elections; and if he will make a statement. [29770]

Peter Hain: We are seeking legislative time in order to introduce primary legislation to extend the European parliamentary franchise to Gibraltar. The detail of the legislative and practical arrangements is currently being considered by both HMG and the Government of Gibraltar and consultations between us are already under way.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Clocks (Portcullis House)

John Austin: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee how many clocks have been (a) ordered and (b) supplied for installation in Portcullis House; when the order was placed; when the installation is planned to take place; and if he will make a statement. [28331]

Derek Conway [holding answer 22 January 2002]: No clocks have been ordered or installed in Portcullis House.

When Portcullis House was being planned no provision was made for a master and slave clock system or individual clocks to be provided because the time would be available on other equipment in the offices: the annunciator, telephones and personal computers.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

HIV

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what funds her Department made available for educating children and young people in African nations on methods of HIV prevention in (a) 1999, (b) 2000 and (c) 2001. [29329]

Hilary Benn: The information requested is not available as DFID activities in this area usually represent only part of wider projects and as such cannot be separately identified within our statistics.

Tanzania

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what proportion of Tanzania's debt has been written off as part of the enhanced HIPC initiative; and what assessment she has made of the effect on annual debt repayments of the purchase of an air traffic control system. [29705]

Hilary Benn: Under the enhanced HIPC initiative, 54 per cent. of Tanzania's debt in real terms was written off. This does not include the full value of Paris Club debt prior to the enhanced HIPC initiative or the additional bilateral relief beyond the enhanced HIPC initiative. Additional relief beyond the enhanced HIPC initiative will reduce Tanzania's debt by a further 9 per cent.

It is difficult to assess the impact of individual projects on Tanzania's overall debt servicing obligations. However we recognise that debt management is a key part of maintaining longer-term debt sustainability. DFID is working closely with the World bank, International Monetary Fund, other development partners and the Government of Tanzania to ensure that such investments, and the resulting impact on annual debt repayments, are fully scrutinised as part of the public expenditure review and debt management processes.

GATS

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment she has made of the effects of GATS—General Agreement on Trade in Services—on developing countries; and if she will make a statement. [29508]

Hilary Benn: It is not yet possible to make a full assessment as so few commitments have been made under the GATS. The Government support on-going assessment of trade in services, as do all WTO members. DFID is funding both the World bank and UNCTAD to help build capacity in developing countries to identify areas of interest to them.

Afghanistan

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what commitment the Government plan to make at the Tokyo conference on reconstruction in Afghanistan. [29274]

Hilary Benn: At the conference in Tokyo on Afghan reconstruction from 20 to 21 January, the UK announced a significant contribution of £200 million over the next five years for both reconstruction and humanitarian assistance. This pledge is in addition to the significant sums that DFID contributes to the World bank, European Union and Asian development banks who will also be channelling funds into Afghanistan over coming years. DFID's share of the European Union pledge alone will be 20 per cent.

Belize

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the relations between her Department and the Government of Belize. [29276]

Hilary Benn: We remain engaged in dialogue with the Government of Belize on a range of issues aimed at supporting and promoting a pro-poor Government agenda. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State met with Prime Minister Musa in October 2001 as part of this engagement and DFID officials also continue to have regular contact.

PRIME MINISTER

PIU Energy Report

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Prime Minister if the finding of the PIU report on Energy will be made public; and if he will make a statement. [30188]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Ceredigion (Mr. Thomas) on 9 January 2002, Official Report, column 816W.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Civil S[illegible]

Ms Atherton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which Government Departments are reviewing the mandatory retirement age for civil servants. [29761]

Mr. Leslie: All Departments have reviewed mandatory retirement age for their staff in the light of the "Winning the Generation Game" report from the Performance and Innovation Unit.

Ms Atherton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the (a) time scale and (b) terms of reference for the review of the mandatory retirement age for senior civil servants in his Department. [29760]

Mr. Leslie: The normal retirement age for members of the senior civil service is 60. The main objective of the review currently being undertaken is to produce a model which will provide Departments with a range of options for managing their senior civil servants. These could include opportunities for moving to flexible working patterns as part of a phased retirement process, and mechanisms for retaining staff with strong potential beyond age 60, particularly those with key skills in such areas as project management. The time scale for implementation has not been finalised but will take account of the differing circumstances and staffing structures of Departments.

WALES

Regulatory Impact Assessments

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many regulatory impact assessments have been produced by his Department since August 2001; and if he will list those produced (a) following initial consultation with affected parties about the most appropriate methodology for assessing costs and other impacts and (b) which set out full commercial impacts, including profitability, employment, consumer prices and competitiveness, as recommended in "Good Policy Making". [28413]

Mr. Paul Murphy: My Department has produced no regulatory impact assessments since August 2001.

Comprehensive Spending Review

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list, by date and subject, the representations he has received in (a) writing and (b) person from (i) the First Minister of the National Assembly for Wales, (ii) the Welsh Assembly Government and (iii) committees of the National Assembly for Wales regarding the forthcoming Comprehensive Spending Review. [30673]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I have regular meetings with the First Minister and periodic meetings with the Minister for Finance, Local Government and Communities. We discuss a range of matters, including the Spending Review.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list, by date and subject, representations he has made in (a) writing and (b) person to the Chancellor of the Exchequer regarding the forthcoming Comprehensive Spending Review. [30672]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I am in regular contact with my Cabinet colleagues on the Spending Review.

Regional Regeneration

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what his estimate is of per capita Government public expenditure on regeneration in each of the Welsh regions in financial years (i) 2000–01 and (ii) 2001–02; [26868]

(2) if he will list the regeneration projects (a) wholly and (b) partly funded by the Government in the Cynon Valley for the financial years (i) 2000–01 and (ii) 2001–02 with the expenditure to date on each project. [26867]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The National Assembly for Wales has responsibility for the allocation and distribution of funds aimed at regenerating areas of Wales, including the Cynon Valley.

Environmental Appraisals

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans his Department has to appraise the environmental implications of its Spending Review submission to the Treasury. [29036]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The existence of the Barnett formula means that I am not required to make a full Spending Review submission.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Stolen Equipment

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what equipment has been stolen from his Department since 1 May 1997; and what the approximate value of each item was. [26828]

Dr. John Reid: The information is as follows:

Two portable computers, a printer and a camcorder to the value of £8,000.

In addition, computer components were reported stolen from official premises. These components were old and of negligible value.

Lost/Stolen Property

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list those items valued at more than £50 which have been stolen or lost from his Department in each of the last four years. [28004]

Dr. John Reid: On 4 December 1998, a portable computer, valued at £3,000 was reported stolen from an officer's home.

On 7 May 1999, a portable computer and printer valued at £4,500 were reported stolen from official premises.

On 26 May 1999, a camcorder, valued at £500, was reported stolen from departmental offices.

Ministerial Transport

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last used the railway service in connection with his official duties; what station he left from and what was the destination; and whether it is his intention to make greater use of the railways in future. [28105]

Dr. John Reid: I last used the railway service on official duties in late November 2001.

Details of the travel arrangements of the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland are by convention not published.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Literacy and Numeracy Test Results

Ann Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement about her Department's inquiry into the premature disclosure of the literacy and numeracy test results in September 2001. [30933]

Mr. Timms: An inquiry into the premature disclosure of the literacy and numeracy test results has been carried out by the Department's security officer, in conjunction with the Department's head of statistics and a representative of the National Statistician.

The inquiry has been unable to establish the source or nature of the leak of the 2001 Key Stage 2 test results. The main reasons for this are:

(a) There appears to have been no leak of a paper or document; the Evening Standard article on 14 September seems to have been based on one or more casual conversations from which the story was constructed; and

(b) Given the significant number of people in the Department for Education and Skills, Ofsted, the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority, the associated contractors and those elsewhere who had access to the information, there is no prospect of identifying the person who provided the relevant information, unless the journalist concerned is prepared to reveal his source or sources.

The inquiry concludes that there is no evidence of a deliberate disclosure from Ministers, officials or advisers in the Department. Indeed, on the limited evidence available, the disclosure seems unlikely to have come from any departmental source.

The inquiry makes a number of recommendations for strengthening the control and management of sensitive information in advance of the advertised day of its disclosure. These are being taken forward.

Temporary Classrooms

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of the number of temporary classrooms in each English local education authority. [29333]

John Healey: As part of the data collected through the appraisal of Asset Management Plans, the Department has some information on the overall floor area of temporary accommodation at schools, but it is not possible from these data to identify with any precision the actual number of temporary classrooms.

The data we have on temporary buildings will be appraised with a view to publishing analysis to support benchmarking later this year.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many private finance initiatives there have been which have involved replacing temporary classrooms with permanent buildings; if she will list each of these; and if she will make a statement. [29334]

John Healey: This information is not held centrally, and there would be a disproportionate cost involved in obtaining it from local education authorities and voluntary aided schools.

Scotland

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many of the staff members of her Department located in London have been involved in matters pertaining to Scotland since the inception of her Department in its present form. [29517]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 22 January 2002]: This Department is broadly responsible for matters pertaining to England, with some responsibilities for Wales, and for representing UK education and skills policy to audiences outside the UK. Officials of this Department liaise with their counterparts in the Scottish Executive on matters of mutual interest. Details of the number of staff located in London who have been involved in matters pertaining to Scotland could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Hackney Borough Council

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what intervention powers her Department has used in respect of Hackney borough council since May 1997. [29732]

Mr. Timms: In July 1999 the Secretary of State directed the council to outsource its school improvement service and ethnic minority service to Nord Anglia plc under powers set out in the School Standards and Framework Act 1998.

In October 2001 the Secretary of State directed the council to implement arrangements to establish a new body to run the education services in Hackney from August 2002 under powers set out in the Local Government Act 1999.

Remuneration

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will estimate the number of individuals in her (a) Department, (b) related agencies and (c) related non-departmental public bodies whose annual remuneration including benefits in kind exceeded (i) £100,000 and (ii) £200,000 in each of the last four years. [26325]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The number of people in DfES, (and before June 2001 in DfEE) and related agencies whose annual remuneration including benefits exceeded (a) £100,000 and (b) £200,000 in each of the last four years is as follows:

Year	Over £100,000	Over £200,000
1999	3	0

Information relating to staff for non-departmental public bodies is available in the annual Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies 2000" copies are available in the Library.

School Expulsions

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children from (a) primary and (b) secondary schools were expelled from their school in each year since 1997. [28340]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Information on how many children have been excluded from primary and secondary schools since 1997 are set out in the National Statistics publication "Permanent Exclusions from Maintained Schools in England, Issue 10/01", published in November 2001. Information from this publication can be viewed at http://www.dfes.gov.uk/statistics/DB/SBU/b0298/index.html. Figures for 2000–01 are not yet available.

Number of permanent exclusions

Year	Primary schools	Secondary schools
1996–97	1,573	10,463
1997–98	1,539	10,087
1998–99	1,366	8,636
1999–2000	1,226	6,713

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of children expelled from school were (a) boys and (b) girls in each year since 1997. [28341]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Information on the proportion of permanent exclusions from maintained schools since 1997 are set out in the National Statistics publication "Permanent Exclusions from Maintained Schools in England, Issue 10–01", published in November 2001. Information from this publication can be viewed at http://www.dfes.gov.uk/statistics/DB/SBU/b0298/index.html. Figures for 2000–01 are not yet available.

Percentage of permanent exclusions

	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000
Boys	83	84	83	84
Girls	17	16	17	16

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what process is to be followed if a child is to be expelled from school. [28342]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The law governing exclusions is set out in sections 64 to 68 of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998. The DfES guidance on the procedures for excluding pupils is set out in Circular 10/99, Chapter 6, Annexe D. Head teachers, governors, LEAs and appeal panels must have regard to this guidance in discharging their functions in relation to pupil exclusion. I have attached a copy of Circular 10/99 to this reply and will arrange for copies to be placed in the Library shortly.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the most common reason was for expulsion for (a) boys and (b) girls in each of the last five years. [28343]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 17 January 2002]: The Department does not collect data on the specific reasons for expulsion from schools.

Pupil:Teacher Ratio

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the pupil:teacher ratio was in maintained secondary schools in each education authority in each year since 1979. [28848]

Mr. Timms: The table provides information for 1979, 1984, 1989, 1994 and each year from 1996 to 2001.

Pupil:Teacher ratio in maintained secondary schools by local education authority area, position in January each year

PFI

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the costs and benefits of using private finance initiatives to improve and upgrade the school buildings in each local education authority in England; and if she will make a statement. [29197]

John Healey [holding answer 23 January 2002]: Local education authorities (LEAs) are responsible for the local strategic management of the school estate. This responsibility includes the need to ensure best value when making investment decisions. When considering major investment in school buildings, one of the options that authorities should consider is the private finance initiative. Where an LEA decides, following an options appraisal, that it wishes to pursue the use of PFI, it will submit an outline proposal to my Department. If, following evaluation against published criteria, provisional support is received to develop an outline business case, the authority must demonstrate that PFI represents a better value for money solution than a conventionally procured alternative.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many local education authorities have put in place private finance initiative capital projects since May 1997; if she will list each such local education authority and the size of each capital project; and if she will make a statement. [29199]

John Healey [holding answer 23 January 2002]: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the list of current projects, regularly published by my Department, via the Teachernet website at www.teachernet.gov.uk/schoolsprivatefinanceinitiative. This provides details of the numbers and PFI credit allocations for private finance initiative capital projects undertaken by local education authorities.

PFI Contracts

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what her policy is on encouraging local education authorities to use PFI contracts to upgrade school buildings; and if she will make a statement. [29200]

John Healey [holding answer 23 January 2002]: The use of PFI contracts to upgrade school buildings is one of a number of funding options available to local education authorities. If an authority wishes to develop a PFI project, it must first make preliminary proposals to the Department, which are assessed against published criteria. Although the Department currently allocates each year around £850 million PFI credits, we are not able to support all of the proposals put forward. The proposals which best match the published criteria receive provisional support at this stage.

Projects are not formally approved until a full Outline Business Case (OBC) has been submitted to the Treasury-chaired Project Review Group. This OBC must include a public sector comparator (PSC). It is a condition of approval that the proposed PFI solution must demonstrate better value for money than the PSC, as well as satisfy various other criteria necessary to demonstrate the viability of the project.

Selection

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many specialist schools are exercising the provision in the School Standards and Framework Act 1998 to select up to 10 per cent. of pupils by aptitude in relevant subjects; if she will list such schools; and if she will make a statement. [29205]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 23 January 2002]: On the basis of the latest collated information, 25 specialist schools are selecting a proportion of their pupils by aptitude in the relevant subjects. Details are given in the following table. Most of these schools were selecting by aptitude prior to the 1998 Act.

Notes:

1. This information was taken from progress reports submitted by 403 schools in December 2000. Progress reports for schools operational as of September 2000 have been received but the information from these has not yet been collated.
2. The 1998 School Standards and Framework Act provides for schools with a specialism to select up to 10 per cent. of their intake on the basis of aptitude for a specialist subject prescribed in regulations. Prior to the 1998 Act schools had greater discretion over aptitude selection and this accounts for the percentages above 10 per cent.

Specialist Schools

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assistance the Technology Colleges Trust is giving to schools seeking specialist status; how many grants have been facilitated by the trust in order to help schools to meet the £50,000 threshold of specialist status since 1997; and if she will make a statement. [29198]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 23 January 2002]: The Technology Colleges Trust is an independent charitable trust grant-aided by the Department to advise schools in drawing up applications, and through its work in promoting the Specialist Schools Programme attracts sponsorship to support individual school's applications. Detailed information on grants facilitated by the Technology Colleges Trust is not readily available and can be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, we do have an analysis of applications for Arts, Technology and Language status in June and October 1999, and March 2000, which shows that of the 238 applications submitted 88 applicants included sponsorship facilitated through the Technology Colleges Trust.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what further research she has commissioned in order to evaluate the effects on school performance of specialist school status; and if she will make a statement. [29206]

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

Mr. Timms [holding answer 23 January 2002]: For Excellence in Cities (EiC) areas there is an element of work about specialist schools within the research about the impact of EiC policies being carried out by the National Foundation for Educational Research. Research on the impact of specialist schools was commissioned by the then DfEE from Leeds university and the London school of economics and was published in 2000. Last October Ofsted published a report on the progress of specialist schools. Professor David Jesson will shortly be preparing an analysis of educational outcomes of specialist schools in 2001 on behalf of the Technology Colleges Trust and I expect this to be published in the spring.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Public Bodies

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the members she has appointed to public bodies in the last 12 months. [27885]

Tessa Jowell: In the last 12 months, my predecessor, my right hon. Friend the Member for Islington, South and Finsbury (Mr. Smith) and I made 121 public appointments and reappointments to public bodies as detailed. This does not include appointments to bodies sponsored by my Department where my role is to advise on appointments made by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister or, through him, by Her Majesty the Queen.

ITC/BBC Appointments

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) how many names were on the shortlist she received from the panel from which she had to propose a deputy-chairman of the ITC; if she will make a statement on the process by which she chose a name to propose following her receipt of the shortlist; and if she took into account the political views of the people on the shortlist received from the panel; [29412]

(2) how many names were on the shortlist she received from the panel from which she had to propose a vice-chairman of the BBC; if she will make a statement on the process by which she chose a name to propose following her receipt of the shortlist; and if she took into account the political views of the people on the shortlist received from the panel. [29413]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 22 January 2002]: Both the process for the appointment of the BBC Vice-Chair and the process for the appointment of the ITC Deputy-Chair complied with the guidance issued by the Commissioner for Public Appointments. This provides that all public appointments should be governed by the overriding principle of selection based on merit and that political activity is not a criterion for appointment. In the interests of confidentiality, it is not our policy to release information about individual shortlists.

Horse Racing

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) if it is her policy to ensure that the racing industry is not financially disadvantaged by the end of the current levy scheme for racing; [30030]

(2) if it is her policy that the determination of the future of a racing levy scheme will establish a long term commercial relationship between racing and the betting industry. [30031]

Mr. Caborn: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Wrexham (Ian Lucas) on 21 January 2002, Official Report, columns 625–26W.

Redgrave-Pinsent Lake

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the projected completion date is for the Redgrave-Pinsent lake at Caversham; and when the athletes will be able to use the training water at the lake. [29820]

Mr. Caborn: The 2,200 metre rowing course at Caversham is expected to be completed in time for Amateur Rowing Association (ARA) training in autumn 2003.

Sport England has offered the ARA the opportunity to train on approximately 1,000 metres of the lake in the winter 2002, during construction.

National Lottery

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what targets she intends to set to reduce underspend of National Lottery proceeds. [29838]

Mr. Caborn: Around 92 per cent. of the National Lottery Distribution Fund balance is already committed to projects, and money is drawn down from the fund when it is needed and not before. The Department is working closely with the distributing bodies to reduce the distribution fund balance, so that more projects will benefit more quickly from the money the lottery raises for good causes. Distributors are collectively expecting a decline in the balance to £1.6 billion by March 2004.

Football

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what agreement she has reached with the Football Association on the appointment of new directors to WNSL. [29836]

Mr. Caborn: The Football Association and Sport England announced on 15 January 2002 that they are to reconstitute and restructure the board of WNSL. This is in line with the way forward identified in the interim report of Patrick Carter's review of the English National Stadium (HC479).

Tourism

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she intends to restore a marketing role to the English Tourism Council. [29837]

Dr. Howells: Tomorrow's Tourism did not give English Tourism Council a role to market England. However, in the light of events last year and consultations my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has had with senior industry representatives, we are reviewing the options for stimulating better co-ordination of the public and private sector funds currently spent on marketing tourism in England.

Public Service Broadcasting

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list (a) broadcasting companies and (b) other organisations to which her Department has recently written consulting about the definition of public service broadcasting; and if she will place a copy of the consultation letter in the Library. [30010]

Dr. Howells: My officials had informal discussions with ITV Network Ltd., SMG Television, Granada Media Group, Carlton Television, Channel 4 Television Corporation and Channel 5 Broadcasting Ltd., as the leading commercially funded public service broadcasting organisations and companies, about implementation of the proposals on self regulation and backstop powers set out in Chapter 5 of a New Future for Communications. I shall develop my proposals on these matters, to be published in the forthcoming draft Communications Bill, in the light of these and other discussions. I am arranging for copies of the letters to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses in advance of these discussions.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Child Support Agency

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his answer of 19 December 2001, Official Report, column 180W, if he will place the Action Plan referred to in the Library. [26563]

Malcolm Wicks: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Mike Isaac to Mr. Mark Todd, dated 23 January 2002:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in replying to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency promised a substantive reply.

Mr. Smith is unavailable, therefore I am writing to you on his behalf.

You have asked pursuant to his Answer of 19 December 2001, Official Report, column 180W if the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions will place the Action Plan referred to in the Library.

I have arranged for a copy of the Child Support Agency Audit Assurance Action Plan to be placed in the Library.

I hope this is helpful.

Benefit Payments (Lewes)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in the Lewes constituency on income support claimed this benefit for (a) less than three months, (b) three to six months, (c) six to 12 months, (d) one to two years and (e) more than two years, in (i) May 1997 and (ii) May 2001. [27520]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 16 January 2002]: The available information is in the table. The data are based on a 5 per cent. sample and are subject to a degree of sampling error. Figures of less than 500 are subject to a high degree of sampling variation and should only be taken as a guide.

Income support recipients in the Lewes parliamentary constituency by duration—May 1997 and May 2001

Duration of claim	May 1997	May 2001
Under 3 months	200	300
3 to under 6 months	200	100
6 months to under 1 year	300	300
1 year to under 2 years	400	500
2 years and over	2,400	2,300
All cases	3,500	3,500

Note:

1. Figures are based on a 5 per cent. sample and are subject to a degree of sampling variation. Figures of less than 500 are subject to a high degree of sampling variation and should only be used as a guide.

2. Figures have been rounded to the nearest 100.

3. Based on constituency boundaries as at May 1997.

Benefits (Disabled People)

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what discussions he has had on developing a system of benefits easily accessible to those with mental as well as physical disabilities; and if he will make a statement. [28134]

Maria Eagle: Disability living allowance and attendance allowance provide a contribution towards the extra costs faced by severely disabled people. Entitlement to these benefits is not based on specific mental or physical disabilities, but depends upon the need for help with personal care, supervision and (in the case of disability living allowance) mobility difficulties which arise from such disabilities. This means that the benefits are already accessible to people with mental or physical disabilities, or a combination of both.

We are exploring, with the help of representatives from disability organisations, whether extra-costs disability benefits could be based on a range of activities of daily living rather than just the care and mobility tests. We are currently in the process of testing a model based on daily living activities with the help of volunteers who a have recently claimed disability living allowance or attendance allowance.

CFS/ME

Mr. Russell Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans the Benefits Agency has to review procedures for assessing applicants for disability benefits for sufferers of CFS/ME. [29917]

Maria Eagle: The Department for Work and Pensions recognises the chronic fatigue syndromes (including ME) as potentially debilitating illnesses. The rules of disability benefits, and the guidance given to those who make decisions on entitlement, as well as those doctors who assist in gathering evidence and interpreting it, already take account of this.

We have no plans to review current procedures for handling claims for disability benefits specifically for applicants who suffer from chronic fatigue syndrome/ myalgic encephalitis.

Housing Benefit

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how current spending on housing benefit is divided between (a) local authority, (b) housing association, (c) privately rented and (d) other categories of accommodation. [29918]

Malcolm Wicks: The available information is in the table.

Forecast housing benefit expenditure, 2001–02

	£ million
Rent rebates (local authority tenants)	5,361
Rent allowance—registered social landlord tenants	3,385
Rent allowance—private tenants	2,932
Total	11,677

Notes:

1. Figures are rounded to the nearest £ million and are consistent with, and underlie, the forecasts published in the Chancellor's pre-Budget report, November 2001.

2. Figures may not sum due to rounding.

3. The figure for rent allowance paid to social landlord tenants includes housing association and non-housing association accommodation. Separate data on rent allowance paid to housing association tenants only are not collected.

Estimated out-turn expenditure calculated using actual caseload information

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many households are in receipt of housing benefit. [29932]

Malcolm Wicks: 3,854,000 households in Great Britain were in receipt of housing benefit at August 2001, the latest date for which information is available.

Notes:

1. The data refer to households claiming housing benefit which may be a single person, a couple or a family. More than one benefit household can live in one property, for example two or more adults in a flat or house share arrangement.

2. Figures for any non-responding authorities have been estimated.

3. The figures exclude any extended payment cases.

4. Figures are rounded to the nearest 1,000.

Job Seeker's Allowance

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people claimed job seeker's allowance in the Uxbridge constituency in each September since 1997. [28533]

Ruth Kelly: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. John Randall, dated 18 January 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question regarding the number of people claiming job seeker's allowance (JSA) in the Uxbridge constituency in each September since 1997. (28533).

The claimant count consists of all people claiming JSA or NI credits at Employment Service local offices. They must declare that they are out of work, capable of, available for and actively seeking work during the week in which their claim is made.

The information is given in the table below.

Claimant count level (not seasonally adjusted)—in the Uxbridge Parliamentary Constituency

Date	Number
September 1997	1,321
September 1998	1,021
September 1999	968
September 2000	749
September 2001	679

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Access to Children

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what amendments the Government are seeking to the September 2001 text of the draft Council regulations on the mutual enforcement of judgments on rights of access to children; and if it is the Government's policy that this Council regulation should take legal effect. [29532]

Mr. Wills: The proposal referred to was an initiative of the French presidency in July 2000, to which substantial amendments were made during the Belgian presidency, and it is expected that it will be subsumed into the recent Commission proposal on jurisdiction and the recognition and enforcement of judgments in matters of parental responsibility.

Parental Responsibility

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what amendments the Government are seeking to the September 2001 proposal for a Council regulation on jurisdiction and the recognition and enforcement of judgments in matters of parental responsibility; and if it is the Government's policy that this Council regulation should take legal effect. [29531]

Mr. Wills: The Government support the underlying aim of this proposal—namely, to extend the principle of mutual recognition to all decisions on parental responsibility by establishing a clear and coherent set of rules for attributing jurisdiction, and putting in place arrangements for co-operation between the courts and central authorities of the member states. The Government are concerned to ensure that negotiations take full account of the operation of the 1980 Hague Convention on Child Abduction. Negotiations are still at an early stage, and it is too early to assess whether the proposal should be adopted by Ministers and incorporated into national legislation.

Child Abduction (Hague Convention)

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will list the actions that the Government may take to further the implementation and financing of the conclusions and recommendations of the March 2001 Meeting of the Special Commission to Review the Operation of the Hague Convention of 25 October 1980 on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction. [29530]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We will continue to work with the Permanent Bureau of the Hague Conference and with other States Parties to the Convention in order to take forward the work resulting from the Special Commission. The Final Report on the Special Commission is expected shortly, and the Permanent Bureau is planning to complete its Final Report on Transfrontier Access/Contact in May 2002.

In addition to our standard contribution to the Hague Conference, which this year amounts to £70,514, we have made a grant of £14,452.85 to the Permanent Bureau in the current financial year, in order to assist them in carrying forward their work on children conventions. We have also subscribed a further £5,000 towards the costs of maintaining and developing the International Child Abduction Database (INCADAT).

The UK sent a delegation of senior judges and officials to a conference arranged by the Permanent Bureau at De Ruwenberg in October 2001 at which judicial co-operation and good practice in central authorities were discussed. France, Germany, the Netherlands, Sweden and the United States were also represented. The Permanent Bureau has begun work on producing a Good Practice Guide, and we will continue to support this.

The Permanent Bureau is currently considering whether to recommend the convening of a follow-up Special Commission later this year, in order to continue work on good practice, on transfrontier contact and on judicial co-operation. If the Special Commission takes place, the United Kingdom will send a delegation.

The Permanent Bureau also now issues questionnaires to newly acceding member states and we will take this into account in considering whether to accept their accessions in relation to the United Kingdom.

We are also providing encouragement and support to countries considering whether to join the convention. My officials have taken part in a conference of southern African countries considering child abduction and other child protection issues in London this week, and I attended and addressed the conference on 23 January.

Magistrates Courts

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the level of arrears of payments of fines imposed by magistrates courts in England and Wales. [28966]

Mr. Wills: Magistrates Courts Committees have responsibility for the collection of a range of debts imposed through the courts, including not only fines but also fees, compensation, confiscation orders, legal aid contributions and some maintenance orders. It is not possible to separate out just the fines from the total.

Arrears is described as the total of missed lump sums or missed instalments on impositions where deferred payment was allowed. The total amount of money owed to the courts at the end of September 2001 which was in arrears was £224,694,570.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Urban Regeneration

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what schemes targeting urban regeneration needs are managed by her Department; how much each scheme has available to invest; what issues each scheme aims to tackle; and how much has been spent annually since 1997 (a) in the United Kingdom, (b) in Teesside, (c) in Redcar and Cleveland and Middlesbrough councils and (d) in the Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East constituency. [25477]

Alun Michael: Regional development agencies, in partnership with the Countryside Agency, have been given the task of managing a programme aimed at the regeneration of small rural towns. Expenditure details are not yet available but £37 million was allocated to the programme for the period 2001–02 to 2003–04.

Correspondence

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will respond to the letter of 6 July 2001 from the hon. Member for Sunderland, South concerning the Environmental Protection Act 1990. [26121]

Mr. Morley: A response to my hon. Friend's letter of 6 July was sent on 3 January 2002. I apologise for the delay in replying.

Foot and Mouth

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what assessment she has made of the approximate total market value of animals killed because of foot and mouth disease; and what the total paid in compensation was; [24392]

(2) what was the total cost of valuations for animals culled in the foot and mouth epidemic that were in excess of perceived market value. [26023]

Mr. Morley: The levels of compensation paid to farmers whose animals were culled as a result of foot and mouth was determined in accordance with schedule 3 to the Animal Health Act 1981. Most valuations were made by independent valuers appointed by DEFRA who were instructed to determine the market value of culled livestock and the remainder were based on standard values published by the Department. The total paid in statutory compensation for slaughtered animals is £1,079,500,000.

The Department has not published an assessment of the total market value of animals killed because of FMD. The statistics which the Department will publish in "Agriculture in the UK" in March 2002 will show the impact of FMD on the value of the industry's assets.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many sheep have been slaughtered since the last case of foot and mouth was diagnosed in the United Kingdom; and if she will make a statement. [27621]

Mr. Morley: 5,780 sheep have been slaughtered since the last case of foot and mouth was diagnosed in the United Kingdom on 30 September 2001. These sheep came from 21 flocks (2,067 from one premises) and were culled as dangerous contacts as a result of returning sero-positive blood samples.

Note:

Figures subject to revision as more data become available.

DCS database as at 16 January 2002.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much meat from countries where foot and mouth disease is present was imported into the United Kingdom in 2001; and if she will list the countries involved. [27892]

Mr. Morley: The table details UK imports of meat from FMD susceptible species[1] between January and November 2001 from countries where FMD is present.

[1] Cattle, sheep, pigs, goats and reindeer

Product/country	Total (tonnes)
Meat of bovine animals and sheep[1]
Argentina	5,453
Botswana	10,258
Brazil	75,680
Namibia	7,538
South Africa	282
Swaziland	15
Zimbabwe	4,581
Total—meat and meat products (bovine and sheep)	103,807

[1] There were no imports of pigmeat, goatmeat or reindeer meat from the specified countries between January and November 2001

European Community legislation permits the importation of meat from certain countries where FMD is present but only where the disease is restricted to specific areas. Imports are permitted either from parts of the country that are free of disease or under strict conditions that ensure the meat does not come from any animal that may have come in contact with FMD before, during or after slaughter.

All meat imported from third countries must be accompanied by veterinary certification. This must confirm that the meat is derived from animals which have been subjected to a veterinary inspection during the 24 hours prior to slaughter and showed no signs of FMD.

All meat imported into the UK from third countries must enter at designated UK border inspection posts (BIPs) where it is subject to veterinary inspections.

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will ensure that extra costs associated with the showing of animals, and precautions against foot and mouth disease, will not be passed on to county shows. [28812]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 21 January 2002]: Responsibility for taking the necessary biosecurity measures, to ensure that shows can be conducted without increased risk of disease spread, will rest with the organisers and participants.

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if agricultural shows will remain exempt from the 20 day standstill period imposed as a result of foot and mouth disease unless the foot and mouth disease situation deteriorates. [28811]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 21 January 2002]: Detailed arrangements for agricultural shows are currently being drawn up. Essentially the 20 day standstill will not be triggered provided that the animals attending shows are individually identified and kept in isolation before and after each one.

Farmers Compensation

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what compensation is paid to farmers whose applications are wrongly assessed by her Department. [28365]

Mr. Morley: Compensation in the form of interest may be paid to applicants where three criteria are met. These are that the Department was entirely at fault, it was entirely due to an administrative error and it could have been avoided.

Tenant and Hill Farmers

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans the Government have to concentrate financial support to help tenant and hill farmers. [28360]

Alun Michael: Within the England Rural Development Programme (ERDP), the hill farm allowance provides specific support to hill farmers. The hill farm allowance will be reviewed this year in the context of the mid-term evaluation of the ERDP. Ministers are keeping the position of tenant farmers under review.

Illegal Meat Imports

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her estimate is of the cost of installing (a) detectors and (b) staff to eliminate the illegal import of meat into the United Kingdom. [28114]

Mr. Morley: [holding answer 17 January 2002]: We are considering a number of initiatives aimed at improving our ability to prevent and detect illegal imports of meat into the UK. No decisions have been taken to install new X-ray machines, although this is one of the options we are examining. We are also looking at improved intelligence to better target enforcement activity. Detailed costings will depend on what measures are decided, how they are to be targeted and what use can be made of existing resources.

Inland Waters

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the difficulties facing councils in getting access to inland waters in England and Wales. [27715]

Alun Michael: We have made no such assessment. Last month we published the findings of research establishing the facts about water-based sport and recreation. The report "Water-based Sport and Recreation" identified the powers available to local authorities to give people greater access to inland water for open-air recreation. We are looking at what action we may need to take in the light of the research report. Copies of the report are available in the Library.

Combinable Crops

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of combinable crops are grown from farm saved seed in the UK, broken down by crop. [28253]

Mr. Morley: The Department does not collect information on the use of farm saved seed.

GM Crops

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps the Government will take to ensure that conventional seeds grown in the UK will remain free of GM contamination if GM crops are added to the National Seed List. [28252]

Mr. Morley: The Government are participating in discussions in Brussels on Commission proposals to amend the EU seed marketing directives to control the adventitious presence of GM events in conventional seeds. When EU measures are adopted, these will be implemented in the UK. Meanwhile, the Central Science Laboratory continues to audit seed companies. The audits check that companies have taken appropriate precautions against the adventitious presence of GM events in conventional seeds that will be sold to farmers and growers.

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps the Government will take to ensure that non-GM and organic crops will remain below the proposed 1 per cent. threshold if GM crops are included on the National Seed List. [29504]

Mr. Morley: The Government are exploring with interested parties the terms on which GM and non-GM crops might co-exist, recognising that this needs to be resolved before there is any possibility of GM crops being grown here commercially. Commercialisation will not occur before the farm scale evaluations have been completed, even if GM varieties are included on the National Seed List.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what factors were taken into account in the siting of a GM trial at Lower Hordley, Shropshire. [27743]

Mr. Meacher: A site in Hordley, Shropshire was selected last year to take part in the farm scale evaluations of autumn-sown GM herbicide tolerant oil seed rape. The evaluations are being conducted under an agreement between the farming and biotechnology industry body (SCIMAC) and the Government. The progress of the evaluations is being overseen by the independent Scientific Steering Committee (SSC), which includes experts from academia and conservation organisations. SCIMAC finds locations for the evaluations programme. These are then checked, assessed and selected against scientific criteria, which includes crop history, agronomy and measures of biodiversity, by the independent researchers undertaking the field study. The distribution of locations is finally approved, on scientific grounds alone, by the SSC. They have recommended that a geographical spread of sites be obtained that is representative of regional differences in crop distribution and the range of current farming methods, biodiversity and production intensities throughout Britain. The Government are not involved in the process of selecting FSE sites.

GM Trials

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much the Government have spent on GM trials in the past five years. [27741]

Mr. Meacher: The Government are funding two research programmes which aim to provide information on the consequences, if any, for agriculture and the environment of growing certain genetically modified herbicide tolerant (GMHT) crops. The Farm Scale Evaluations (FSEs) programme is a three-year programme allowing independent researchers to study the effect that the management practices associated with GMHT crops might have on farmland wildlife, when compared with weed control used with non-GM crops. The Botanical and Rotational Implications of Genetically Modified Herbicide Tolerance (BRIGHT) project aims to determine the agricultural implications of GMHT crops and produce management information for their sustainable production.

The costs of the FSE programme and BRIGHT project met by Government are:

Project	£
FSEs[1]	5,123,265
BRIGHT[2]	235,521
Total	5,358,786

[1] To end March 2002

[2] To end March 2002

IACS Payments

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs for what reason the IACS payment due to be paid by 31 January is being withheld; and if she will make a statement. [27954]

Mr. Morley: The RPA expects to be able to pay the vast majority of Arable Area Payment Scheme (AAPS) claims within the regulatory time frame, which ends on 31 January. However, because of the processing time that has been lost due to industrial action, (which was suspended on 11 January), it is likely that more claims than usual will be carried over into February. Every effort will be made to keep this to the absolute minimum. As at 16 January 81 per cent. of AAPS claims have been passed for payment.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farmers in Wiltshire applied for assistance under the IACS scheme in (a) 2000 and (b) 2001; and of these how many have been paid. [28834]

Mr. Morley: 989 IACS (Arable Area Payment Scheme) applications were received from farmers in Wiltshire in 2000 and 983 have been paid.

The figures for 2001 are 979 IACS applications of which 562 have been paid. 2001 applications are still being processed.

Countryside and Rights of Way Act

Ross Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to bring into force section 57 and schedule 6 to the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000. [28581]

Alun Michael: Section 57 introduces schedule 6 to the Countryside and Rights of way 2000, which contains a wide range of provisions relating to the creation, stopping-up and diversion of highways. These provisions require the enactment of detailed secondary legislation to bring them into effect.

I intend to implement those new measures that relate to the closure or diversion of rights of way on the basis of crime prevention and pupil and teacher safety ahead of the other provisions in schedule 6. I will be issuing a consultation paper on these shortly. The crime prevention measures will be restricted to areas designated by the Secretary of State for this specific purpose.

Public consultation on the other schedule 6 provisions is planned for early next year.

Radioactive Waste

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what (a) levels and (b) amount of stock piled radioactive waste is held in the UK from (i) civilian and (ii) military establishments. [28755]

Mr. Meacher: Using data from the 1998 UK Radioactive Waste Inventory the amounts of waste (expressed in conditioned form) are as follows:

Units = m³

	Civil	Military
HLW	700	—
ILW	70,000	2,700
LLW	4,700	1,200

Organic Fruit Growers

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much the Government have spent in assistance to organic fruit growers in the past five years. [27742]

Mr. Morley: Aid is available for the conversion of land to organic farming and free advice is available to farmers through the Organic Conversion Information Service. Statistics are not available specifically on payments to organic fruit growers as the data are collected by reference to general land type.

Agriculture Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the outcome was of the Agriculture Council held in Brussels on 21 and 22 January; what the Government's position was on each issue discussed, including its voting record; and if she will make a statement. [30374]

Margaret Beckett: I represented the United Kingdom at the Agriculture Council meeting on 21 January in Brussels. The council held initial debates on commission proposals concerning potato starch quotas and animal health requirements governing the movement of pet animals. I welcomed both proposals and, on the latter, stressed the importance of having rules safeguarding against the risk of importing rabies that were fully based on scientific advice.

The council agreed unanimously to permit Portugal to pay a state aid to pig producers to offset the repayment of aids paid illegally in 1994 and 1998. In consenting to this I expressed grave concern at the council's increasing tendency to approve aids which, particularly in sensitive sectors such as pigmeat, could undermine the integrity of the Single Market.

The council also received a report from Commissioner Byrne on the commission's progress in negotiating veterinary and phytosanitary equivalence agreements with third countries, notably in relation to the Mercosur countries and Chile. I welcomed this but called upon the Commission to ensure all Mercosur countries complied with existing obligations to permit imports of milk products and bovine semen from all EU countries.

Community Vibrancy

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which organisation initiated the idea of an indicator of community vibrancy; whose decision it was to publish a list of communities' vibrancy; and if she will make a statement. [29681]

Alun Michael: The Countryside Agency worked with the Rural White Paper team during development of the set of headline indicators published in the Rural White Paper. Indicator 15 Community vibrancy, under the theme A Vibrant Countryside was to measure

> "% of parishes in four categories (vibrant, active, barely active, sleeping) assessed on numbers of meeting places, voluntary and cultural activities, contested parish elections."

The purpose of the indicator is to measure on a national basis the trend over time.

The list of communities' vibrancies was made available to Members of Parliament through the House of Commons Library after the information was requested in a parliamentary question by the hon. Member for South-East Cornwall (Mr. Breed) on 28 November 2001, Official Report, column 1018W. The list had not been previously published as it represents work in progress for the headline indicator as simply a broad measure at the national level.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which organisation devised the criteria for an indicator of community vibrancy; what consultation there was with individual communities in advance of the publication of this information; and what opportunity there is for communities to dispute their classification after publication. [29682]

Alun Michael: The Countryside Agency published interim results from its own interpretation of community vibrancy based on three 'classes' in its State of the Countryside Report 2001. The indicator was based on interim findings of the 2000 Rural Services Survey and the State of the Countryside report recognised some limitations with the indicator, stating that these findings largely reflect the 'critical' mass of population needed to enable the community activity opportunity to become viable or functional. The indicator does not reveal the extent to which smaller settlements and parishes are able to take up community activities in neighbouring parishes. Further, communities in all size of parish may exhibit community vibrancy in other ways than those assessed here.

Consultation was not done directly with individual communities. However the scoring system used for the sub-set of parishes analysed was contained in the State of the Countryside Report 2001. Following this publication, the Countryside Agency received no comments on the components of the scoring system. The indicator is still in development and the scoring was adapted to meet the four classes used in the RWP headline indicator.

Individual parish scores were not intended to be published, but used within an overall indicator based on returns submitted through the Rural Services Survey parish questionnaire to all rural parish clerks during autumn 2000. Some forms were interpreted differently or inadequately completed and, to date, the indicator has used these returns as the sole basis. The indicator is thus based on a standard national measure for 2000. For future work, the Countryside Agency is looking at ways of improving the collection and robustness of data to inform our indicator. This will include working with DEFRA, National Association of Local Councils and bodies such as rural community councils.

The Countryside Agency recognises some shortcomings in the data and it is not intended for any listing of parishes to be used for targeting funding or similar policy initiatives. The Countryside Agency intends to look at the whole issue again through consultation on the methodology, rather than amending individual classifications. Differing views over individual classifications are inevitable but the Countryside Agency would prefer to address these in a review of the indicator rather than on a case-by-case basis. In particular, the naming convention of the groups may be reconsidered to more accurately reflect the underlying information.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will publish the survey results of the questionnaire sent out to parish and town council clerks by the Countryside Agency in advance of its classification of communities according to the indicator of community vibrancy. [29683]

Alun Michael: The survey results of the questionnaire sent to parish and town council clerks has been published on the Countryside Agency's website at www.countryside.gov.uk/ruralservices/index.htm

Community Energy Programme

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when bids will be invited under the Government's new Community Energy programme. [30735]

Mr. Meacher: The opening 'Pathfinder' bidding round for the £50 million Community Energy programme is being launched today. We expect to allocate around

£5 million under this initial round for schemes that will provide carbon savings; help to alleviate fuel poverty among householders, and reduce fuel costs for hospitals, universities and other community buildings.

I am placing copies of the programme documentation in the House Library.

PIU Energy Review

Mr. Pound: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what format a further period of consultation following the publication of the PIU energy review will take. [28981]

Mr. Wilson: I have been asked to reply.

The PIU have yet to publish their report and may make recommendations for taking the report forward. As such, Ministers have not yet decided the format of any consultation follow up to the report.

TRANSPORT, LOCAL GOVERNMENT AND THE REGIONS

Advertising

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the advertising campaigns which he and his predecessors have commissioned since May 1997, showing for each (a) its objectives, (b) its beginning and end dates, (c) the media used, (d) criteria adopted to judge its effectiveness, (e) the extent to which effectiveness criteria were met, (f) agency involvement and (g) its cost. [26660]

Dr. Whitehead [holding answer 11 January 2002]: For details of the costs of my Department's advertising campaigns, the media used and effectiveness, I refer the hon. Member to the reply by the Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department, my hon. Friend the Member for Stretford and Urmston (Beverley Hughes), to the hon. Member for Hertsmere (Mr. Clappison) on 20 December 2000, Official Report, columns 168–69W.

Final outturn figures for 2000–01 and provisional outturn figures for major advertising campaigns in 2001–02 and advertising agencies involved are:

£ million

		Expenditure
Campaign	Agencies	2000–01	2001–02[1]
Road Safety	AMV/BDDO; D'Arcy	7.8	9.5
Fire Safety	Euro	[2]—	2.9
traveline	RKCR/Y&R	0	1.7
Foot and mouth public information	Ogilvy	0	1.2
Are you doing your bit?	AMV/BBDO	5.6	[3]—

[1] Provisional

[2] Home Office responsibility

[3] DEFRA responsibility

Activity on road and fire safety is ongoing and objectives are to reduce deaths and injuries. Advertising to support traveline commences in March 2002. Objectives are to increase awareness and promote use of the line. The foot and mouth public information campaign ran during March/April 2001 and provided guidance for visitors to the countryside. "Are you doing your bit?", launched in March 1998, was designed to motivate individuals to take simple actions to protect the environment.

Number Plates

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if the new Road Vehicles (Display of Registration Marks) regulations will allow European number plates with a national identifier in the UK. [27411]

Mr. Spellar: Motorists will be able to make a choice. They will be able to display either the European circle of stars with GB as the UK national identifier or they will be able to display one of the four flags, (Union Jack, Cross of St. George, Saltaire or Welsh Dragon) with any one of a number of identifiers, for example UK or GB, "Eng" for England, "Sco" for Scotland or "Cym" for Wales.

Starter Home Initiative (Probation Officers)

Martin Linton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if probation officers are counted as key workers for schemes set up under the Starter Home Initiative in London. [27859]

Ms Keeble: A wide range of workers, including probation officers, are eligible for help under the Starter Home Initiative, although priority is being given to teachers, police, nurses and other essential health workers. Among those benefiting from round one of the initiative in London are social workers, fire fighters and transport workers. None of the successful bids in London targeted probation officers. The second round of funding of £20 million is being allocated to housing hot spots outside London.

Regulatory Impact Assessments

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many regulatory impact assessments have been produced by his Department since August 2001; and if he will list those produced (a) following initial consultation with affected parties about the most appropriate methodology for assessing costs and other impacts and (b) which set out full commercial impacts, including profitability, employment, consumer prices and competitiveness, as recommended in "Good Policy Making". [28411]

Dr. Whitehead: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office my hon. Friend the Member for Shipley (Mr. Leslie) on 17 January 2002, Official Report, column 483W.

Slam-door Trains

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the circumstances in which he would delay the phasing out of slam-door trains. [28556]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to the provisions of the Railway Safety Regulations 1999. These require the removal of Mark I rolling stock unless the Health and Safety Executive make an exemption. Under section 6(2) of the regulations there is a requirement on the HSE to consult on any exemptions they propose.

Council Tenants

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what percentage real terms increase in each year he predicts for formula rents for council tenants in each individual local authority until 2011. [28368]

Ms Keeble: In 2002–03, we predict that the average rate of increase in real terms for formula rents for council tenants will be 1 per cent. Taking into account the policy that Registered Social Landlord rents increases should be limited to RPI plus 0.5 per cent. a year, it is likely that average council rents will have to rise by about an average of about 1.5 per cent. a year in real terms over the next 10 years to achieve Ministers' intention that similar rents should be charged for similar council and housing association properties by 2012. This is about half the average rate of council rent increases over the last 10 years.

However, the precise path of social rents over the next 10 years will depend, among other things, on the outcomes of future Spending Reviews and the decisions taken by individual landlords who retain responsibility for rent setting.

Clean Fuels

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what estimate he has made of the number and percentage of (a) cars, (b) buses and (c) lorries which (i) run on LPG or similar clean fuels and (ii) are adapted to run on conventional and clean fuels. [28579]

Mr. Jamieson: There are estimated to be around 50,000 LPG cars in the UK. Motorists are converting to LPG at an increasing rate, with the number expected to increase by about 25,000 over the next year, prompted by the Government grants available, and the fact that low-cost LPG fuel is now available in all areas of the country.

DVLA data provide more disaggregated information on alternative fuel use as follows:

Vehicle class	Dedicated gas	Percentage of total fleet	Bi-fuel	Percentage of total fleet
Cars/LGVs	1,3[illegible]	0.005	23,622	0.01
Buses	74	0.08	66	0.07
Trucks	202	0.05	25	0.006

But this understates the number of vehicles because not all conversions to alternative fuelling are notified to DVLA.

DVLA statistics do not distinguish between liquified petroleum gas (LPG) and natural gas vehicles. However, cars and light commercial vehicles tend to use LPG, while heavier vehicles use natural gas.

Although DVLA does not keep statistics on the number of battery electric cars, my Department estimates that there are approximately 400 of these in the UK. In addition, DVLA statistics show that there are 484 hybrid petrol/electric cars.

Train Overcrowding

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he last discussed with the SRA overcrowding on trains. [28662]

Mr. Spellar: Ministers and officials from my Department have regular meetings with the Strategic Rail Authority to discuss all aspects of service provision.

London Underground

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many and what percentage of (a) Metropolitan and (b) Piccadilly line trains departed at least five minutes late from Uxbridge in each month in (i) 2000 and (ii) 2001. [28478]

Mr. Spellar: This is an operational matter for London Underground, who inform me that they do not hold the information requested in a readily available form and that it could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Housing and Council Tax Benefits

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how each local authority performed against the local government performance indicators on housing benefit and council tax benefit in the most recent year for which figures are available. [28393]

Dr. Whitehead: Details of the estimated outturn performance on housing benefit and council tax benefit for individual English authorities at 31 March 2001 is available on the Department of Transport, Local Government and the Regions website at: www.local-regions.dtlr.gov.uk/bestvalue/indicators/indicatorsindex.htm.

The estimated overall performance of local authorities in England against each relevant best value indicator in 2000–01 was as follows:

Housing benefit and council tax benefit best value performance indicators

Indicator[1]	Average	Top quartile	Median	Bottom quartile
76 Security—whether authority has written and pro-active strategy for combating fraud and error (Yes/No)	89% Yes	n/a	n/a	n/a
77 Average cost of handling HB/CTB claim	£82.39	£102.00	£75.25	£51.00
78a Average time for processing new claims	50 days	35 days	45 days	60 days
78b Average time for processing notifications for changes of circumstance	23 days	10 days	18 days	31 days
78c Percentage of renewal claims processed on time	71	90	75	57
79a Percentage of case for which the benefit calculation was accurate	93	97	95	92
79b The percentage of recoverable overpayments (excluding council tax benefit) that were recovered in the year	95	70	61	48

[1] Numbers refer to the BVPIs published in Best Value and Audit Commission Performance Indicators for 2000–01 available on www.local-regions/dtlr.gov.uk//bestvalue/indicators/indicatorsindex/htm

Note:

Details of the final outturn performance data for 2000–01 will be available shortly on the same website.

Trans-European Rail Networks

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what recent discussions he has had with his European colleagues regarding retention of the identified trans-European rail networks within the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [28747]

Mr. Jamieson: There have been no discussions about the TEN rail network in the UK. The Commission has published proposals to amend the guidelines governing the development of the TEN (Decision No. 1692/96), and we are about to publish a consultation document to consider the draft revisions. However, no substantial changes to the network in the UK are proposed.

Regional Assemblies

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many written representations he has received in the last 12 months expressing support for an elected regional assembly in the (a) South East, (b) Eastern region, (c) South West, (d) West Midlands, (e) East Midlands, (f) Yorkshire and Humberside, (g) North West and (h) North East, broken down by constituency. [29109]

Mr. Byers: The information is in the table:

Region	Number of written representations	Number attributable to constituencies
South East	2
Winchester		1
Fareham		1
East of England	1
Hitchin and Harpenden		1
West Midlands	1	0
East Midlands	0	0
Yorkshire and Humber	1	0
North West	5
Salford		1
Burnley		1
North East	13
Wansbeck		1

It is not possible to give a definitive breakdown of constituencies as a number of these representations were from organisations as opposed to individuals.

We have also received five written representations in favour of directly elected assemblies generally.

Special Advisers

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the average time is that the Head of his Department has recommended since May 1997 between a special adviser leaving his Department and taking up outside employment; and if he will make a statement. [28911]

Dr. Whitehead: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 21 January 2002, Official Report, column 594W.

Speed Cameras

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many speed cameras the Government have part-funded in the last two years; and how many lives are estimated to have been saved as a consequence. [29392]

Mr. Jamieson: The Government do not fund speed cameras. The cost of purchasing and operating cameras falls to the local authorities and police. Eight police force areas have been trailing a new funding system that allows some fixed penalty fine revenue to be netted-off and re-invested in speed camera operation. It is estimated that 109 fewer people were killed or seriously injured as a result of the increased enforcement in the trial areas. The new funding system is now available nationally and I fully expect, as more areas join, the numbers of those killed or seriously injured to decrease still further.

Bus and Rail Journeys

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many (a) bus and (b) rail journeys there were in each year since 1995; and if he will express the figures as an index using 1997 as the base. [29697]

Mr. Jamieson: Figures for bus journeys are collected by financial year. The table provides statistics from 1995–96 to 2000–01 and index numbers based on 1997–98 = 100.

Bus and rail journeys in Great Britain

Million

Financial year	Local bus	Index	National rail	Index
1995–96	4,383	101.2	761	90.0
1996–97	4,350	100.5	801	94.7
1997–98	4,330	100.0	846	100.0
1998–99	4,248	98.1	892	105.4
1999–2000	4,281	98.9	931	110.0
2000–01	4,309	99.5	957	113.1

Road/Rail Interface Risks

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what progress has been made on the report from the Health and Safety Commission's working group on risks associated with road/rail interface since December 2001; if he will give a date for its publication; and if he will make a statement. [29580]

Mr. Jamieson: The report is progressing to schedule and I understand from the Health and Safety Commission (HSC) that it will be discussed by them on 12 February. It remains the hope of the HSC that its report will be available in the first quarter of 2002. I look forward to receiving the report when Ministers will consider any recommendations contained therein.

Shenfield-Colchester Transport Links

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of the costs and viability of (a) constructing an additional railway track between Shenfield and Colchester and (b) upgrading the equivalent stretch of the A12 to dual 3. [29624]

Mr. Jamieson: The London to Ipswich Multi-Modal study will recommend a plan for transport in the London to Ipswich corridor over the next generation.

Traffic Signs

Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 15 January 2002, Official Report, column 204W, on traffic signs, (1) whether the conditions under which the 1989 Guildford Direction Signs Demonstration Project were conducted met the standards that are required for similar research undertaken by his Department today; [29719]

(2) what lessons were learned from the Guildford Direction Signs Demonstration Project of 1989; [29718]

(3) whether the Guildford Direction Signs Demonstration Project was conducted in a car park; [29720]

(4) what assessment he has made of the academic rigour with which the 1989 Guildford Direction Signs Demonstration Project was conducted; and if he will publish it. [29721]

Ms Keeble: The Guildford Direction Signs Demonstration Project was used to trial a number of recommendations made in the report on the Direction Signs Review, published by the Stationery Office in 1987. The project was jointly administered by Surrey county council, Guildford borough council and the Department. It entailed the replacement of 420 directional signs across the town and its approaches with new versions. None of the work was carried out in car parks.

A number of ideas were tested, including improvements to the system of colour-coding routes to emphasise their status. This and other features illustrating good practice were incorporated in the revised Traffic Signs Regulations that followed in 1994 and in departmental guidance to highway authorities.

The project was carried out to standards similar to those which would apply to a comparable project today, with close involvement of the Department's own specialists. I have no reason to question the rigour with which the work was conducted. Descriptions of the project written by some of the individuals who took part were published in the technical press (Highways and Transportation Journal July 1989 and February 1990).

Housing Associations (Right to Buy)

Mr. Wood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to extend the right to buy scheme to housing associations. [29651]

Ms Keeble: We have no plans to extend the right to buy scheme further to housing association tenants.

Pre-1988 secure tenants of non-charitable housing associations already have a right to buy and tenants of former local authority stock which has transferred to registered social landlords have a preserved right to buy. In addition, under the Housing Act 1996, eligible tenants of registered social landlords have a right to acquire their rented home.

Deep Vein Thrombosis

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Vale of Glamorgan (Mr. Smith) of 16 January 2002, Official Report, columns 336–37W, if he will require UK airline companies to supply copies of the Government's pamphlet, "Advice on Travel Related Deep Vein Thrombosis", to passengers on long distance flights. [29805]

Mr. Jamieson: UK airlines are aware of the health advice recently published by the Government and I understand they are using a variety of means to communicate that information to their passengers. At present the Government have no plans to require the airlines to provide health information in a specific format, but we are in contact with them to ensure that they provide their passengers with relevant advice in the most appropriate form, particularly that relating to deep vein thrombosis.

Railway Signals

Mr. Cameron: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many signals on railways in (a) Britain and (b) Oxfordshire are illuminated by oil lamps; and if he will make a statement. [29738]

Mr. Jamieson: This information is not held centrally.

Exchange Rates

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what sterling to euro exchange rate applies on tolls at the (a) Severn bridges, (b) Dartford crossing, (c) Humber crossing, (d) Mersey tunnels, (e) Tamar bridge and (f) Tyne tunnels. [29910]

Mr. Jamieson: There are currently no legal requirements for any of the mentioned undertakings to accept any currency other than sterling. Therefore, exchange rates are not fixed and are subject to change at the operators' discretion.

Where they do accept payment in euros, each of the undertakings has a different method for working out the toll charged. Our calculation of the equivalent charges is:

	Euro to £1
(a) Severn bridges	1.67
(b) Dartford crossings	1.85
(c) Humber bridge	1.88
(d) Mersey tunnels	[1]—
(e) Tamar bridge	1.6
(f) Tyne tunnel	1.67

[1] Euros currently not accepted.

Rail Incident (Abergavenny)

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what investigations are to be undertaken into the incident on the railway line between Abergavenny and Cwmbran on 17 January; and if he will make a statement. [30160]

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

Mr. Jamieson: A Railway Inspector from the Health and Safety Executive's Railway Inspectorate (HMRI) is investigating the circumstances of the rail incident at Abergavenny on 18 January.

Transport Provision

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what effort he has made to ensure that service providers, employers and public transport users are involved in determining what constitutes adequate transport provision (a) in the UK and (b) in Teesside. [29972]

Mr. Jamieson: The Department issues many draft policy documents, consultation papers, revisions to regulations and guidance on transport, inviting comments and suggestions from all interested parties. For example, the Department is currently consulting on "Powering Future Vehicles: Draft Government Strategy" with responses due by 1 March 2002.

In addition, local authorities have produced five-year local transport plans in accordance with guidance issued by the Secretary of State. This guidance provides for full consultation at the local level. This applies equally to Teesside as it does to all English local authorities.

In accordance with Planning Policy Guidance No. 11, regional planning bodies are required to produce regional transport strategies, again with full participation and consultation with all interested parties.

The Department complies with the Cabinet Office code of practice on written consultation, which came into effect in January 2001. The code aims to increase the involvement of people and groups in public consultations, minimising the burden it imposes on them, and giving them a proper time—a standard minimum period of 12 weeks—to respond.

Housing (Solihull)

Mr. John Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions whether the anticipated density of the Cala Homes development in Solihull (appeal reference: APP/Q4625/AOI/1065304) exceeds the density recommended in PPG 3. [29902]

Ms Keeble: The appeal by Cala Homes (Reference APP/Q4625/A/01/1065304) related to an application for 78 apartments on a site of about one hectare at Church Hill road and Whitefields road, close to the town centre of Solihull. Paragraph 57 of PPG3 stresses that local planning authorities should avoid the inefficient use of land. The second bullet point of paragraph 58 states that local planning authorities should encourage development which makes more efficient use of land (between 30 and 50 dwellings per hectare net) and the third bullet point advises authorities to seek greater intensity of development at places with good public transport accessibility such as city, town, district and local centres or around major nodes along good quality public transport corridors.

The inspector allowing the appeal by a decision dated 31 December 2001 judged the site to be one to which the third bullet point applies. Consequently, the density would not exceed that recommended in PPG3.

Driving Standards Agency

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many appeals have been received by the DSA over the past two years against the refusal to grant second trainee licences; how many of these have been (a) successful, (b) unsuccessful and (c) are still pending; and of those appeals which have been unsuccessful, if he will place in the Library a list of grounds on which appeals have been rejected. [30187]

Mr. Jamieson: In the two years ending 31 December 2001, there were 387 appeals made against the registrar's decision to refuse a second trainee licence; 282 cases were withdrawn by the appellant before the appeal was determined, generally because the appellant had completed the qualifying process before the appeal was considered; and 24 cases are still pending.

In the remaining 81 cases, independent Appeals Boards recommended to the Secretary of State refusing the applications, citing one of two grounds for dismissing appeals. These were accepted by the Secretary of State.

The first ground was that the purpose of a trainee licence was to afford a reasonable opportunity—normally six months—to prepare for the third part of the qualifying examination via experience working as an instructor. A trainee licence was not an alternative to registration, and must not be allowed to become so.

The second ground was that the appellant had failed a third attempt at the third part of the qualifying examination, therefore the person would need to start the qualifying process from the beginning, and was not eligible to hold a trainee licence.

Agriculture Industry

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what steps his Department is taking to improve health and safety within the agricultural industry; and if he will make a statement. [29998]

Dr. Whitehead: The Government and the Health and Safety Commission have set national targets for reducing work-related deaths, injury and ill health in Great Britain. The Commission has selected the agricultural industry as a priority programme where improvements are needed if the national targets are to be met.

Details of the agriculture priority programme and the Health and Safety Commission and Executive's Programme of Work for improving health and safety in the agricultural sector are set out in the Commission's Strategic Plan 2001–04. Copies can be found in the Library of the House.

Widford Bridge (Chelmsford)

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the space to allow cars access that are under the weight restriction on the Widford Bridge in Chelmsford with respect to avoiding (a) undue hazard to motorists and (b) possible damage to vehicles; [29666]

(2) for what reason advance warning signs of (a) weight restrictions and (b) roadworks at the Widford Viaduct in Chelmsford on the (i) A12, (ii) A414 (formerly the A1016) and (iii) A414 from Harlow were not erected prior to the work commencing; [29670]

(3) who has responsibility for posting advance warning signs about the (a) weight restrictions and (b) traffic works on the Widford Viaduct in Chelmsford; [29668]

(4) what the earliest date is that work can commence on replacing the Widford Bridge; and if he will bring that date forward; [29672]

(5) for what reason early advance warning signs at (a) weight restrictions and (b) roadworks at the Widford Viaduct in Chelmsford have not been erected on roads carrying traffic from (i) Ingatestone, (ii) Ongar, (iii) Witham and (iv) Boreham; [29671]

(6) when advance warning signs of (a) weight restrictions and (b) road works at the Widford Viaduct in Chelmsford will be posted on the (i) A12, (ii) A414 (formerly the A1016) and (iii) A414 from Harlow; [29669]

(7) what the total cost is of replacing the Widford Bridge in Chelmsford; and who will bear responsibility for the cost of the replacement work. [29673]

Mr. Jamieson: The Widford Bridge is situated on the old A12 (now A1114) through Chelmsford. Chelmsford borough council manage the road on behalf of the Highway Authority, Essex county council, although pending its replacement, the bridge remains the responsibility of the Highways Agency.

Because the bridge's condition has deteriorated, the agency has had to restrict to three tonnes the weight of vehicles using it. To achieve this, vehicle widths are restricted to 6 ft 6 in. The signing arrangements were designed for the borough council by the agency's design agents. The programming of the work to implement the width restriction and the installation of advance and permanent signing on the local road network are being organised by the borough council. All work is being carried out by the borough council's contractors although the Highways Agency is paying for it.

A scheme to replace the bridge is currently expected to start in autumn 2003. The cost, which will be borne by the agency, is expected to be about £4.5 million. Given the large amount of detailed design and preparation work that needs to take place, and also taking into account the long lead in time necessary to carry out work over a busy railway line, this is the earliest date work can start.

Housing (Chelmsford)

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he expects to make a decision on the transfer of Chelmsford borough council's housing stock to Chelmer Housing Partnership; and if he will make a statement. [29667]

Ms Keeble: The transfer of Chelmsford borough council's housing stock to Chelmer Housing Partnership is scheduled for Monday 11 March. The Secretary of State expects to decide whether to give consent to the transfer during the preceding week.

Departmental Press Office

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what plans he has to reorganise the Press Office at the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions; and if he will make a statement; [29983]

(2) what civil service procedures were followed in the interviewing and appointment of a new Head of Media at the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions; [29984]

(3) when he expects to announce the appointment of a new Head of Media at the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions; [29985]

(4) if he will list each meeting he has had since 1 December 2001 with the Director of Communications of the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions; and what was the subject of each meeting. [29982]

Dr. Whitehead: The appointment was announced on 21 January. It was made following an open competition for the post under the procedures in the Civil Service Commissioners' Recruitment Code.

My right hon. Friend meets his Director of Communication on a regular basis to discuss relevant issues. Organisational matters within the Department are a matter for the permanent secretary, who consults my right hon. Friend in accordance with the practice of successive Administrations.

Transport Expenditure

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what the (a) public investment expenditure, (b) public resource expenditure and (c) private investment is for each year 2001–02 to 2010–11 broken down by (i) strategic roads, (ii) rail, (iii) local transport, (iv) London, (v) other transport areas and (vi) unallocated at (A) outturn prices and (B) 2000–01 prices; [29936]

(2) if he will provide a breakdown of the (a) public investment expenditure, (b) public resource expenditure, (c) private investment, (d) public expenditure supporting private investment and (e) public spending from local charging revenue planned for each year 2001–02 to 2010–11 as allocated in the 10 year transport plan of July 2000, subdivided between (i) strategic roads, (ii) rail, (iii) local transport, (iv) London, (v) other transport areas and (vi) unallocated at (A) outturn prices and (B) 2000–01 prices; [30345]

(3) if he will list the total public expenditure supporting private investment spent and planned for each year from 1997–78 to 2010–11 broken down by (a) strategic roads, (b) rail, (c) local transport, (d) London and (e) other transport areas at (i) outturn prices and (ii) 2000–01 prices. [29937]

Mr. Jamieson: The information expressed in outturn prices requested in questions (b) and (c) is contained in Table A3 (page 99) of "Transport 2010: the 10-Year Plan". A copy of this was placed in the House Library when the plan was published in July 2000.

All the other requested information is provided in tables A to E as follows.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the public spending from local charging revenue planned for each year 2001–02 to 2010–11 is at (a) outturn prices and (b) 2000–01 prices. [29938]

Dr. Whitehead: English local authorities have reported receiving £6.5 billion in income from sales, fees and charges in 1999–2000 excluding the amounts paid into the housing revenue account and the capital account. More recent information is not yet available, and projections have not been made for future years.

Planning Consents

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many planning consents have been granted on green belt land in each of the past 10 years. [30243]

Ms Keeble: The information requested is not held centrally by the Department and could not be obtained without disproportionate cost.

School Buses

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement about pilot studies being carried out into requiring traffic to stop for school buses. [29914]

Ms Keeble: As far as we are aware, there are no pilot studies being carried out into requiring traffic to stop for school buses. FirstGroup plc will shortly be starting pilots of American-style yellow school buses, but the pilots will not involve traffic being required to stop for the buses as it is required to do in the United States.

Council Tax

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the liability of people in hospital to pay council tax. [29933]

Dr. Whitehead: During temporary stays in hospital, people remain liable for council tax at their normal addresses. However, when someone's main residence is a hospital, their previous home will be exempt from council tax if it is unoccupied.

Railways (South-West)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement about the provision of extra resources for the improvement of railway facilities in the south-west. [29913]

Mr. Jamieson: Each individual rail project and improvements negotiated through franchise agreements will usually benefit more than one part of Britain. The SRA has therefore not attempted to break down its planned expenditure on a regional basis.

Civil Aviation Authority

Mr. Savidge: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he plans to issue guidance on the environmental objectives which the Civil Aviation Authority must follow in exercising its air navigation functions. [30736]

Mr. Jamieson: I am today giving guidance to the CAA under section 70(2) of the Transport Act 2000 on environmental objectives for the authority in exercising its air navigation functions. While safety must always remain the paramount consideration, for the first time guidance is being given to the CAA on the Government's sustainable development strategy and environmental policies and how these relate to the authority's air navigation functions. It includes guidance on environmental problems commonly associated with aviation, including advice on best practice, noise mitigation procedures, and steps the authority should ensure are followed, including consultation, when changes to air navigation procedures become necessary that might have a significant effect on the environment. Links are made to the substantial body of guidance to regional and local planning authorities where there is a read across with air navigation procedures and the design of controlled airspace around larger airports. I have placed copies of the guidance in the Library.

Planning Green Paper

Geraint Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he will publish his consultation document on the Use Classes Order that was promised in the Planning Green Paper. [30819]

Ms Keeble: We are today publishing a consultation document entitled "Consultation on possible changes to the Use Classes Order and temporary uses provisions".

This completes the series of consultation papers that together are designed to deliver a radical reform of the planning system.

Planning permission is required for a material change of use. However, certain uses are so similar, for example in terms of noise, traffic, appearance and parking, that there is no obvious reason why planning permission for change of use from one to the other should be required. The Use Classes Order (UCO) excludes from planning control any change of use where both the existing and proposed use fall within the same class. The General Permitted Development Order (GPDO) provides further flexibility by classifying certain moves between the Use Classes as permitted development, so that a developer does not need to apply for planning permission.

It is important that the Use Classes Order should be up to date and relevant and reflect current policy priorities. In our view, the order and related GPDO provisions should be constructed in a way which allows the maximum possible freedom from planning control consistent with delivering planning policy and wider objectives, including protecting amenity.

The consultation document sets out a range of options for changes to the use class provisions and temporary use provisions. We will consider responses carefully before deciding on the most appropriate way forward.

Copies of the consultation document will be placed in the Library of the House.

Regional Planning Guidance

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when Regional Planning Guidance for the east midlands will be published. [30820]

Dr. Whitehead: The Regional Planning Guidance for the east midlands (RPG8) is being published today.

The RPG sets out the spatial development strategy that encompasses proposals for the development of the region's economy, infrastructure, housing and other land uses. The guiding principle is that the main urban areas and previously developed land should be the preferred locations for most development. RPG also sets out proposals for the conservation, management and enhancement of the region's natural and cultural environment.

I am pleased that much of the format and content of RPG8, including the vision, objectives and core strategy, carries forward much of what was proposed in the original draft RPG prepared by the East Midlands Regional Local Government Association (EMRLGA). RPG8 reflects very effective working between EMRLGA, local authorities and other stakeholders, all of whom have made valuable contributions to refine and enhance the original draft strategy. It builds on the new inclusive process for preparing RPG that the Government have put in place. The RPG was prepared before our planning Green Paper proposals were announced in December. I look to the Regional Planning Body to take strategy forward and to monitor and review it in line with the regional planning principles set out in the Green Paper.

Lord Birt

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) how many times he has met Lord Birt to discuss transport; [29314]

(2) if Lord Birt will be considering the role of the taxi as part of his transport analysis; [29312]

(3) what access to civil servants in his Department has been afforded to Lord Birt; [29316]

(4) if he will arrange for Lord Birt, as part of his transport work, to make an extended study of the operation of the Circle Line. [29311]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to the answers given today by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister.

Unitary Local Authorities

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what percentage of the population is covered by unitary local authorities. [29299]

Ruth Kelly: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. John Mann, dated 24 January 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your question concerning the percentage of the population who live within unitary authorities.

The percentage of the population of England at mid-2000 who lived within unitary local authorities created under the Local Government Act of 1992 is 16.6%. All local authorities in Wales are unitary authorities.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Nuclear Industry

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people live within the recommended safe distance from nuclear power plants in the UK. [25251]

Mr. Wilson: There is no official recommendation relating to safe distances at which to live from nuclear power plants. All operators of civil nuclear installations in the UK are required to have emergency plans, as a condition of their site licences. These plans include a Detailed Emergency Planning Zone (DEPZ) around each site, defined in relation to the potential release of radiation from a reasonably foreseeable accident. The operators of UK civil nuclear power station sites have estimated that a total of 4,030 people are permanently resident within these DEPZs.

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the potential future liabilities that the Government will incur owing to decommissioning in the nuclear industry; and if she will make a statement. [28920]

Mr. Wilson: At 31 March 2001 public sector civil nuclear liabilities—i.e. those liabilities for which UKAEA and BNFL are responsible—were estimated to be over £42 billion. Liabilities estimates are reviewed annually by UKAEA and BNFL. Information is published in their annual reports and accounts.

In her statement to the House on 28 November, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry outlined the nature of these liabilities and the Government's plans for improving management arrangements and ensuring that the nuclear legacy is dealt with safely, efficiently and cost effectively. A White Paper will be published in the spring

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total level of Government financial support to the nuclear industry was in each year between 1980 and 1990, broken down by (a) research grants, (b) non-fossil fuel levy, (c) investment in BNFL facilities, (d) running costs of UKAEA and Ninex and (e) other sources. [27455]

Mr. Wilson: Funding to the UK nuclear industry in this period was provided primarily in the form of grant and grant in aid to the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority (UKAEA). The funding enabled UKAEA to undertake civil nuclear research programmes and to discharge liabilities arising from past programmes.

The sums provided were as follows:

	£ million
	Grant, and grant in aid
1980–81	158
1981–82	164
1982–83	215
1983–84	204
1984–85	196
1985–86	169
1986–87	163
1987–88	148
1988–89	247
1989–90	196

Notes:

Figures are taken from Government Expenditure Plans Reports, which until 1991 did not list separate funding for fusion.

The non fossil fuel obligation and fossil fuel levy were first put in place in 1990 and therefore did not exist in the period in question.BNFL, like other companies, made various applications for and received funding under the first of the Government's Regional Development Grants schemes (RDG I) established under the Industry Act 1972 and the Industrial Development Act 1982. This scheme ended in 1984 and was replaced by a successor scheme (RDG II). BNFL did not receive any payments under the RDG II scheme. The Government's and BNFL's records relating to grants paid to BNFL under the RDG I scheme are no longer available.

Government grants were reported in the source and application of funds statement (which, in accordance with the accounting conventions of the time, did not necessarily disclose actual cash flows) in BNFL's annual report and accounts as follows:

	£ million
1980–81	24.5
1981–82	30.6
1982–83	36.4
1983–84	40.7
1984–85	32.1
1985–86	18.5
1986–87	1
1987–88	Nil
1988–89	Nil
1989–90	Nil

The costs of UK NIREX were met by subscriptions from its members (UKAEA, the Central Electricity Generating Board, South of Scotland Electricity Board and BNFL.

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the status of the dismantling and decommissioning programme for the Windscale Number One Pile at Sellafield. [28522]

Mr. Wilson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 20 November 2001, Official Report, column 168W.

Nuclear Decommissioning

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will estimate the costs of (a) managing civil nuclear waste and (b) decommissioning civil nuclear facilities in each year since 1995; and if she will estimate the costs this year and in the remaining years of the current expenditure plan. [29699]

Mr. Wilson: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Ilford, North (Linda Perham) on 17 December 2001, Official Report, columns 25–26W.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has been the cost to BNFL of decommissioning nuclear plants for which it has responsibility. [28740]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 22 January 2002]: BNFL's annual report and accounts state that decommissioning expenditure charged against provisions since financial year 1993–94 was as follows:

	£ million
2001	82
2000	76
1999	80
1998	10
1997	1
1996	1
1995	1
1994	7

Prior to this date no decommissioning expenditure charged against provisions was disclosed in BNFL's annual report and accounts. Information on any such expenditure is not readily available and would require disproportionate time and cost to bring together.

Fuel Poverty

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the source of the figures for the number of fuel poor households which are not connected to the gas network given in paragraph 9.12 of the UK Fuel Poverty Strategy; what the definition is of fuel poverty used in this paragraph; what verification of the figure has been carried out by (a) her Department and (b) independent bodies; and if she will make a statement. [25280]

Mr. Wilson: Paragraph 9.12 of the UK Fuel Poverty Strategy states that around 1.3 million people without a gas supply in Great Britain are thought to be in fuel poverty. This figure is a broad estimate derived from estimates for England (0.9 million), Scotland (0.3 million) and Wales (0.05 million) based on official data sources. The production of these figures, and the overall estimate, have been overseen by members of the Government Statistical Service.

England

It is estimated that in 1998 there were approximately 0.9 million households in England which were fuel poor and did not have mains gas in the home (the householder stated that there was no gas supply in the home). The source of this information was the 1998 Energy Follow Up Survey which was carried out by the Building Research Establishment on behalf of the Department of Environment, Food and Rural Affairs. This figure has been derived under both main definitions of fuel poverty used in the Government's UK Fuel Poverty Strategy, set out as follows. There is a small difference (0.08 million) between the figures under these two definitions; however, both figures round to 0.9 million.

(1) Fuel poverty defined as when a household needs to spend more than 10 per cent. of its income (including housing benefit and income support for mortgage interest) on fuel in order to maintain a satisfactory heating regime;

(2) Fuel poverty defined as when a household needs to spend more than 10 per cent. of its income (excluding housing benefit and income support for mortgage interest) on fuel in order to maintain a satisfactory heating regime.

A summary of the fuel poverty results from this survey is available at www.dti.gov.uk/energy/fuelpoverty/index.htm

Scotland

It is estimated that in 1996 there were approximately 320,000 households in Scotland which were fuel poor and did not have a mains gas supply in the home (i.e. there was neither a gas meter, nor a mains gas pipe in the home). This is the latest information available for Scotland. The source of this information is the 1996 Scottish House Condition Survey which is carried out on behalf of the Scottish Executive.

The definition of fuel poverty which was used is that a household needs to spend 10 per cent. or more of income (including housing benefit and income support for mortgage interest) on all fuel use.

Wales

It is estimated that in 1997–98 there were approximately 50,000 households in Wales which were fuel poor and did not have a mains gas supply in the home. This is derived from information from the 1998 Welsh House Condition Survey which was carried out on behalf of the National Assembly for Wales. The estimate of fuel poverty in Wales is based on the number of households eligible for assistance through the Home Energy Efficiency Scheme (222,000 in 1997–98). Figures are not currently available under definitions of fuel poverty, and this "eligibility measure" is used as a proxy.

Electricity

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action she is taking to ensure that Ofgem has adequate financial services expertise to monitor and prevent any collapse in the new electricity trading arrangements. [26600]

Mr. Wilson: I have asked Callum McCarthy, the chairman of Ofgem, to respond directly to the hon. Member on the issue. I will ensure that copies of the letter are placed in the Libraries of the House.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the Energy Regulator's statement in favour of small generators and transmission losses from large remote power stations. [29491]

Mr. Wilson: The treatment of losses through transmission has been a long running issue in the electricity industry, the general consensus within the industry is that the current arrangements are not ideal. It will be important that any proposed change to the system carefully considers the effect on both small and large-scale generation, including remote sites.

Icelandic Water Trawlermen's Compensation Scheme

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many claimants under the Icelandic water trawlermen's compensation scheme have had payments reduced to take account of previously paid exgratia payments. [27629]

Ms Hewitt: Up to 11 January 2002 there were 2,606.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total amount is which has been deducted from the compensation paid under the Icelandic water trawlermen's compensation scheme as a result of previously paid exgratia payments. [27628]

Ms Hewitt: Up to 11 January 2002 the total amount was £5,887,609.

Launch Aid

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for what reason the conditions attached to the grant of launch aid are deemed commercially confidential. [28046]

Mr. Wilson: The conditions of Launch Investment are commercially confidential under exemption 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. The disclosure of the terms and conditions of Launch Investment would harm the commercial interests of the companies concerned.

Arms Sales

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the level of debt owing to the United Kingdom by overseas Governments as a result of arms sales for the years 1997 to 2002. [27216]

Ms Hewitt: The table shows future amounts due on guarantees, and unrecovered claims in respect of ECGD guarantees issued in support of defence business during the financial years shown. The year of ECGD guarantee issue does not necessarily reflect the year that the equipment was sold.

		£ million
Year	Future amounts due on guarantees	Unrecovered claims

Refurbishment

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what her estimate is of the cost of buildings refurbishment carried out by her Department in each of the last four years. [27955]

Ms Hewitt: The Department has not carried out a full refurbishment of any buildings during the last four years. The capital costs of minor works, redecorations, maintenance and partial refurbishments in these years has been as follows:

Financial year	£ million
1997–98	2.28
1998–99	2.17
1999–2000	2.85
2000–01	2.70

Wind Power

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what landscape criteria she applies in determining applications for wind power stations with an output greater than 50 MW. [28388]

Mr. Wilson: All relevant criteria set out in planning guidance and environmental assessment guidance are taken into account. The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry also has a duty under Schedule 9 of the Electricity Act 1989 to have regard to the extent to which a person who formulates a proposal has complied with his duty of having regard to the desirability of preserving natural beauty and do what he reasonably can to mitigate any effect the proposal would have on the natural beauty of the countryside. In addition the views of the relevant local planning authority which will be familiar with the local terrain are also taken into account.

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what approvals she has given to wind power stations with an output greater than 50 MW in the last 12 months; and what public consultation was undertaken in each case. [28389]

Mr. Wilson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has approved in principle the application for a windfarm at Cefn Croes. Formal approval will be issued once the necessary planning conditions and planning obligations have been agreed. The public were consulted on the application and their views were taken into account. There have been no other windfarm approvals.

Mr. Lyons: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the criteria used when deciding whether to erect wind farms apply to the whole of the United Kingdom. [29273]

Mr. Wilson: Decisions on wind farms or any other type of power station over 50 megawatts in England and Wales are handled by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry. In reaching her decision my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for will consider all relevant criteria set out in planning guidance and environmental assessment guidance. Other competent authorities responsible for authorising smaller power stations can be expected to apply similar criteria.

Applications for power stations in Scotland and Northern Ireland are devolved matters. As a consequence the criteria are a matter for them.

Miners' Compensation

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of the money paid out in industrial injuries compensation to former coal miners in the Easington constituency relating to chronic bronchitis and emphysema has been taken back by the compensation recovery scheme. [28351]

Mr. Wilson: There are 4,763 claims registered for compensation for respiratory disease in the constituency of Easington, to date. 1,227 interim payments have been made and 288 claims have been settled in full. £6.0 million has been paid in damages in this area.

Compensation recovery legislation ensures that personal injury victims are not compensated twice for the same loss—once by the state and once by the compensator. So far, £82,635.82 has been paid to the Compensation Recovery Unit by the Department of Trade and Industry in respect of claims from Easington. None of this has been reclaimed from claimants' awards.

Mr. Bryant: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much the Government have paid in lawyers' fees in respect of miners' compensation in (a) England, (b) Wales and (c) Scotland since 1997. [28492]

Mr. Wilson: Since the Department assumed responsibility for British Coal's liabilities in January 1998, payments to solicitors, excluding trial costs, and disbursements total £64.2 million in England, £16.8 million in Wales and £6.3 million in Scotland.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many former miners in (a) St. Helens, South, (b) Merseyside and (c) England who have submitted compensation claims for (a) vibration white finger and (b) respiratory diseases have attended a medical assessment. [28701]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 21 January 2002]: In the time given, the Department is unable to provide a breakdown of claimants in St. Helens, South and Merseyside who have attended medical assessment. However, former miners with respiratory disease in these areas will be advised to go to centres at Wigan, Wrexham and Manchester. Former miners with vibration white finger, VWF, will be advised to go to the centre at Manchester.

The number of former miners who have undergone medical assessments at the centres mentioned is as follows:

Number of former miners who have been medically assessed

Centre location	Number
Respiratory disease
Wigan	923
Wrexham	237
Manchester	403
England total	16,841
Vibration white finger, VWF
Manchester	2,318
England total	59,628

Note:

In addition, 23,508 claims by the estates of former miners have also been assessed. It is not possible to break down these figures by region.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the average waiting time for former miners for a medical assessment appointment is in (a) St. Helens, South, (b) Merseyside and (c) England in connection with a claim for (i) vibration white finger and (ii) respiratory diseases. [28702]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 21 January 2002]: In relation to vibration white finger, VWF, the occupation group must first be identified before medical assessment can be made. The time from confirmation of occupation group to MAP appointment is as follows:

Region	Time to MAP as defined (days)
(a) St. Helens, South	38
(b) Merseyside	40
(c) England	67

Before a claimant can attend an appointment to undergo the Medical Assessment Process, MAP, for compensation for respiratory disease, the recovery of the claimant's medical records must first be completed. Appointments are then made, with the most elderly and ill claimants receiving priority. Low priority claimants will not have an appointment booked if a higher priority claimant is available. In the time given, the Department is unable to provide an average timescale for the time from completion of records recovery to MAP appointment for England, but, given the comparatively small numbers of claims in these areas, a breakdown for St. Helens, South and Merseyside has been possible and is given in the table. The claims have been split into two categories for purpose of analysis:

	Merseyside	St. Helens, South
Category 1 claimants[1]
Number of claimants	430	186
Average waiting time (days)	63	66
Category 2 claimants[2]
Number of claimants	16	5
Average waiting time (days)	38	39

[1] Claims which have been assessed

[2] Claims which are un-assessed but with a future booked appointment

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which solicitors are charging both the client and the Government for their services in dealing with the claims from miners suffering from respiratory diseases and vibration white finger. [29381]

Mr. Wilson: Solicitors are under strict professional and legal duties to inform their clients of the basis on which work is carried out, including the fee structure (Solicitors' Practice Rules 1990 and Solicitors' Costs Information and Client Care Code 1999). The Department has no sight of, or influence over, terms and conditions that claimants enter into with solicitors. It is the Department's view that, because it is covering solicitors' costs, the claimants should not be asked to make any payment towards costs.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what advice is being given to ex-miners about Government's payments to solicitors for each miner's compensation claim. [29391]

Mr. Wilson: Solicitors are under strict professional and legal duties to inform their clients of the basis on which work is carried out, including the fee structure (Solicitors' Practice Rules 1990 and Solicitors' Costs Information and Client Care Code 1999). The mining unions are also well aware that the Department covers solicitors' costs and will no doubt advise their members accordingly. The Department has made public on many occasions that claimants should not have to make a payment towards solicitors costs.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which 12 solicitors handle the largest number of compensation claims for miners suffering from respiratory disorders and vibration white finger. [29382]

Mr. Wilson: The 12 firms dealing with the largest numbers of respiratory disease and vibration white finger claims listed alphabetically are:

1. Browell Smith and Co.
2. Furley Page Fielding
3. Graysons
4. Hugh James
5. Irwin Mitchells
6. Mark Gilbert Morse
7. O. H. Parsons
8. Raleys
9. Thompsons
10. Towells
11. Watson Burton
12. Randell Saunders.

These solicitors and their contact details are listed on the Department's website at www.dti.gov.uk/coalhealth.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what statutory requirement there is for (a) claims handling companies and (b) solicitors to advise clients that the Government have an agreed handling fee for miners' compensation claims. [29359]

Mr. Wilson: Claims handling companies are unregulated and are not subject to the same duties as solicitors. Solicitors are under strict professional and legal duties to inform their clients of the basis on which work is carried out, including the fee structure (Solicitors; practice Rules 1990 and Solicitors; Costs Information and Client Care Code 1999). This would include the liability of any other party, in this case the Department, to meet the claimants' costs.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many solicitors are dealing with miners' compensation claims for respiratory diseases and vibration white finger. [29383]

Mr. Wilson: In relation to respiratory disease, there are approximately 270 firms dealing with compensation claims and about 210 firms processing vibration white finger claims. These are listed with contact details on the Department's website at www.dti.gov.uk/coalhealth.

Miners' Pension Fund

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of former miners who were working in Staffordshire in the 1980s lost their jobs but were not entitled payments from the pension fund. [29401]

Mr. Wilson: None. All former British Coal miners when reaching pensionable age, whether dismissed or not, are entitled to the pension benefits they have accrued whilst in employment.

I announced on 11 December that certain miners dismissed during the 1984–85 strike, would receive an enhancement to their pension in recognition of the years of further service they lost as a result of British Coal's decision not to re-employ them.

Hawk Jets

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions she has had with the Indian Government concerning the BAE Systems bid to supply Hawk jets; and if she will make a statement. [28302]

Mr. Wilson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has had no discussions with the Indian Government concerning the BAE Systems bid to supply Hawk jets.

Landscape Industry

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she supports the aims of the British Association of Landscape Industries to get their registration of landscape operatives affiliated to the Construction Industry Certification Scheme. [28012]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 18 January 2002]: The question of possible affiliation between the two schemes is one for the Board of the Construction Skills Certification Scheme Ltd. to consider, together with managers of the British Association of Landscape Industries' scheme.

However, given my ministerial responsibility for construction, I do welcome all efforts aimed at achieving greater collaboration in the industry with a view to improving standards of health and safety, and training standards generally. I am also keen that, wherever possible, the industry improves its working practices to allow greater flexibility for those that move between different sectors in the industry.

I understand that discussions are taking place between the Chairman of CSCS Ltd., Anthony W. Merricks CBE, and the Vice Chair of BALI, David Spencer. If a satisfactory solution can be reached, and I understand that discussions are proceeding in a positive way, this would be welcomed.

Sub-post Offices

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the progress made on the roll-out of "Your Guide" to sub-post offices. [28679]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 18 January 2002]: My Department has provided £25 million funding for the pilot of "Your Guide" currently operating in Leicestershire and Rutland. The pilot was fully up and running by the end of August last year and will finish on 1 March this year. The results of the pilot will be fully evaluated and decisions on national roll-out will be based on the findings of the evaluation and on further work on funding and service design. Among other things the evaluation and associated work will establish the costs of implementing a "Your Guide" scheme nationally and will compare these with the benefits. Work on evaluating the pilot has already begun and a full evaluation should be completed by the end of June. Work on funding and the design of a national service will be progressed as far as possible in parallel with evaluation of the pilot so that firm decisions on a national scheme can be taken next autumn.

Oil and Gas Directorate Posts

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many of her Department's Oil and Gas Directorate posts were in (a) Aberdeen, (b) Glasgow, (c) London and (d) elsewhere, in 2001. [29478]

Mr. Wilson: The number of Oil and Gas Directorate posts located in (a) Aberdeen, (b) Glasgow, (c) London and (d) elsewhere, in 2001 is as follows:

2001

Aberdeen—84.5
Glasgow—0
London—96.6
Elsewhere—0.

This represents an increase of 12.2 posts in Aberdeen, and a decrease of 7.2 posts in London compared with the previous year.

Overhead Transmission Lines

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent changes she has made to her policy on overhead transmission lines. [29576]

Mr. Wilson: None.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures she has taken to ensure that contractors working on the Lackenby to Shipton overhead transmission line will comply with legal and safety requirements. [29492]

Mr. Wilson: The relevant local planning authority is responsible for seeing that planning conditions are complied with. The enforcement of other statutory requirements falls to the relevant agencies.

Electromagnetic Fields

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the World Health Organisation's policy of prudent avoidance to exposure to electromagnetic fields; and if she will make a statement. [29256]

Mr. Wilson: The World Health Organisation, in its publication "Electromagnetic Fields and Public Health—Extremely low frequency fields and cancer", Fact Sheet No. 263, October 2001, refers to certain precautionary measures that can be taken by Government, industry and individuals. Several of these measures are already in place in the UK.

Regional Development Agencies (Partnership)

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many sub-regional partnerships of regional development agencies are being established; and how many are business led. [29300]

Alan Johnson: Sixty-one sub-regional economic partnerships are either already in existence or are currently being established with the help of the regional development agencies. The RDAs will be working closely with the partnerships to deliver the regions' economic strategies. The majority are chaired by business people or have substantial business involvement in their boards, but all are expected to be fully representative of the public and private sectors.

Energy Sources

Jim Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what her Department's targets are for (a) the proportion of the national energy portfolio that will be met by renewable sources by 2010 and (b) the proportion of nationally generated renewable energy sources that will be derived from onshore wind power generation by the same date. [29287]

Mr. Wilson: Our target is that, by 2010, 10 per cent. of UK electricity sales by licensed suppliers will come from sources eligible for the Renewables Obligation. This is subject to the cost to consumers being acceptable.

While wind energy at both onshore and offshore installation can be expected to contribute significantly to the achievement of this overall target, the Government do not set targets for growth in each type of renewable energy generation. How each type will contribute to overall targets for renewable energy will be a matter for the market.

Your Guide Scheme

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the expected time scale is for implementing the "Your Guide" scheme throughout the post office and sub-post office network; what the cost will be of implementing the scheme throughout the network; and what the average cost to each sub-post office business of introducing terminals to the "Your Guide" system will be. [28430]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 21 January 2002]: My Department has provided £25 million funding for the pilot of "Your Guide" currently operating in Leicestershire and Rutland. The pilot was fully up and running by the end of August last year and is not due to finish until 1 March this year. The results of the pilot will be fully evaluated and decisions on national roll-out will be based on the findings of the evaluation and on further work on funding and service design. Among other things the evaluation and associated work will establish the costs of implementing a "Your Guide" scheme nationally and will compare these with the benefits. Until work on the design of a national service is further advanced it will not be possible to estimate the cost of providing the necessary equipment to individual sub-post offices.

A full evaluation of the pilot should be completed by the end of June. Work on funding and the design of a national service will be progressed alongside evaluation of the pilot so that firm decisions on a national scheme can be taken next autumn.

Environmental Appraisals

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many officials from her Department have attended the Environmental Appraisal and Integration into Policy training course run by the Civil Service College. [28998]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 21 January 2002]: None.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many environmental appraisals have been published by her Department since 1 January 2001; and if she will list the last four. [28994]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 21 January 2002]: None. The last four self-standing environmental appraisals published by DTI are as follows:

Enterprise, Skills and Innovation White Paper (February 2001)

UK Coal Operating Aid Scheme (December 2000)

Modernising the Framework of Utility Regulation (January and April 2000)

The New Electricity Trading Arrangements (October 1999).

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what procedures her Department has to ensure environmental appraisals are undertaken prior to (a) administrative and (b) policy decisions being made. [28996]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 21 January 2002]: DTI's aim is to mainstream the environment—within the wider context of promoting sustainable development—into the Department's operational management and policy-making.

To this end, DTI's Estates and Management Facilities Directorate run an Environmental Managements System accredited to ISO 14001 covering DTI's HQ buildings.

This incorporates monitoring, control and regular audits to ensure the continued effectiveness of the system and to track progress towards targets.

The effectiveness of DTI's procedures for environmental screening and appraisal of policies were reviewed last year by a member of the Foresight Environmental Appraisal Task Force and the Department's Internal Audit. Revised guidelines are being finalised which will be published on DTI's website.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the last occasion was on which she requested an environmental appraisal before making a policy decision. [28995]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 21 January 2002]: Where environmental considerations are relevant they form an integral part of policy advice to Ministers.

Departmental Spending Review

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans her Department has to appraise the environmental implications of its spending review submission to the Treasury. [28997]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 21 January 2002]: In line with HM Treasury's guidelines, DTI will submit a Sustainable Development report (SDR) in which the Department will explain the sustainable development implications of the Department's proposals. As part of the spending review, the Department will also consider how its PSA targets relate to sustainable development and summarise how sustainable development has influenced the Department's priorities.

Export Credits

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to her answer of 17 December 2001, Official Report, column 103W, on the Export Credits Guarantees Department, what estimate she has made of the savings produced by refinancing; over what period of time she expects these to be realised and under which Vote; and if she will make a statement. [29692]

Nigel Griffiths: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 18 January 2002, Official Report, column 508W.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the objections made by the Export Credits Guarantee Department to US proposals on greater transparency at the recently concluded OECD negotiations on common approaches to officially supported export credits and the environment. [29408]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 22 January 2002]: At the June 2001 meeting of the OECD Export Credit Group, the USA rejected latest proposals of the common approaches recommendation as they did not "require" Export Credit Agencies (ECAs) to make public environmental impact information relating to projects being reviewed by ECAs before the ECA reaches its decision on supporting a project.

ECGD would have been content to discuss this issue further and was successful with its proposal that the following wording should be included:

> "Members are expected to encourage project sponsors to make environmental impact information publicly available".

Several of the country representatives stated that their domestic legislation prevented their ECA from making publicly available any information concerning applications for support. Several more made it clear that, at this stage, they could not consider publishing any information "prior" to making their decision on support. It was therefore apparent that a consensus could not have been achieved.

Given the significance of the issues that could be agreed and the commitment to review the agreement by the end of 2003

> "to enhance it in the light of experience".

ECGD concluded that this agreement was a good first step in order to cement the progress made.

ECGD will be consulting about the timing of the publication of EIAs in early 2002 as part of its review of its "Impact Questionnaire" and associated case impact analysis process.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will place in the Library a list of the (a) projects and (b) companies supported by the Export Credits Guarantee Department since 1 January 2001. [29410]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 22 January 2002]: A list of guarantees issued in the financial year 2000–01 was provided in ECGD's annual report and resource Accounts 2000–01 and is shown in the table. Details of overseas investment insurance and other insurances are treated as commercial-in-confidence by ECGD and are thus not given here. ECGD requires exporters' consent to publish guarantee details and will be writing after the end of this financial year to seek this consent for guarantees issued in 2001–02.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make environmental and social impact assessments of the Yusefeli Dam available for public discussion before a final decision is taken on extending export credit support to Amec. [29407]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 22 January 2002]: An Environmental Impact Assessment Report (EIAR) has been conducted and we expect that a Resettlement Action Plan (RAP) will also be produced. Prior to making any final decision for ECGD support, the Government would need to be satisfied that such reports have taken into account best international practice.

The EIAR is not the property of the UK Government, and its release by ECGD would require the consent of the party who has supplied it to ECGD. Such considerations would also apply to the RAP when that document is produced in due course.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps the Export Credits Guarantee Department will take to implement the recommendation for public discussion contained in the OECD agreement on common approaches to officially supported export credits and the environment. [29427]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 22 January 2002]: The recommendations for public discussion in the Common Approaches on Environment and Officially Supported Export Credits are:

> "Members are expected to:
> Publish national ECA environmental statements/principles and procedural guidance. ECGD published its "Statement of Business Principles" in December 2000. A "Case Handling Process—Information Note" and the "Impact Questionnaire" were placed on ECGD's website in January 2001.
> When appropriate, exchange views with stakeholders. ECGD consulted stakeholders during the development of the "Statement of Business Principles" and is about to launch a formal review of the "Impact Questionnaire" and the case impact analysis process.
> Encourage project sponsors to make environmental impact information publicly available. For greenfield projects in sensitive sectors or locations ECGD normally expects an Environmental Impact Assessment (EIA) to be carried out. Best practice for EIAs includes consultation with the affected communities and in many counties the EIA legislation requires this. ECGD expects project developers to take account of best practice in the preparation of EIAs.
> Make available to the public at least annually, subject to legal provisions on public disclosure in members' countries, information on projects classified in Categories A and B. ECGD's latest annual report contains details of all the guarantees issued, irrespective of environmental category, during the financial year 2000–01. It is intended to provide this information, on a quarterly basis, on the ECGD website during 2002".

Stolen Equipment

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what equipment has been stolen from her Department since 1 May 1997; and what the approximate value of each item was. [26826]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 22 January 2002]: The Department of Trade and Industry holds this information in respect of IT equipment only. Other stolen items are recorded on its log of missing items and to extract and list only those items which have been stolen would incur disproportionate costs. The list of stolen IT equipment is as follows:

Computer Usage

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what controls exist in respect of (a) the placement of cookies on websites and (b) the use of such cookies to monitor the computer usage of individuals. [28329]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 22 January 2002]: Where the use of cookies by website operators involves the processing of personal data, they are subject to control under the Data Protection Act 1998. Website operators are required to ensure that users are aware who is processing such data and why, and give them an opportunity to refuse.

There are proposals for further regulation of the placement and use of cookies in the proposed communications data protection and privacy directive, which is currently under negotiation. A draft provision agreed by member states at the Telecoms Council on 6 December would extend the requirement to provide information and an opportunity to refuse to cookies which do not involve the processing of personal data.

Manufacturing

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what her estimate is of net changes in manufacturing employment in the UK over the last 12 months; and what projection her Department has made of expected changes in manufacturing employment between January and December 2002. [30147]

Mr. Wilson: The number of manufacturing employee jobs stood at 3,760,000 in November 2001, a fall of 153,000 jobs on a year earlier. The Government do not forecast levels of employment.

Cashpoints

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many ATMs were installed in sub-post offices in each month from July 2001 to date; what the take up rate by sub-post offices is of offers to install ATMs; what percentage of the total number of ATMs installed at sub-post offices are accessible outside trading hours; and what the scale of charges levied on customers using ATMs is at (a) sub-post offices and (b) Crown post offices. [29377]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 23 January 2002]: Decisions relating to ATMs are a commercial matter for Post Office Ltd. who tell me that the number of ATMs installed were:

	Number of ATMs
July 2001	9
August 2001	17
September 2001	11
October 2001	59
November 2001	121
December 2001	212

There are 858 ATMs operating in the network and machine providers have indicated an interest in installation at some 7,500 further outlets, subject to survey.

The majority of ATMs are being installed at sub-post offices which are convenience stores or newsagents with extended trading hours from early morning to 10 pm.

Wherever possible Post Office Ltd. prefer to install a machine without transaction charges but, particularly in small and remote locations, installation is not viable for the machine provider unless a convenience fee is levied. In these cases the customer is advised of the charge and has the ability not to proceed with the transaction should they so decide.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what arrangements have been made for maintaining, servicing and stocking ATMs installed at sub-post offices and at whose cost; what payment is made to sub-post masters per ATM transaction; and what assessment has been made of the additional net income generated by ATMs to sub-post masters as a proportion of average income. [29376]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 23 January 2002]: Decisions relating to ATMs are a commercial matter for Post Office Ltd. who tell me that maintenance arrangements vary according to the type of ATM machine and the provider of the machine. However, all technical servicing is undertaken by the machine's provider. In the more remote locations some maintenance and stocking of cash is carried out by the sub-postmaster. Payment for sub-postmasters is based on transaction volumes and in some cases a fixed sum up to a transaction volume threshold. No assessment has been made of additional income generated for sub-postmasters by ATM machines; Post Office Ltd. is not party to the retail trading performance of individual sub-postmasters.

Coal Health Claims Schemes

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the procedure is for establishing a compensation claimant under the coal health claims schemes as being a priority case. [29378]

Ms Hewitt: The Department and claimants' solicitors have agreed a priority points system which is set out in the Handling Agreement. Claimants with higher points will have greater priority.

There are predominantly two stages of prioritisation in respect of living former miners claiming compensation for respiratory disease:

A. Claimants undergoing screening spirometry;

B. Claimants proceeding through the medical assessment process, MAP, after lung function testing.

A. Screening Spirometry

Three factors are taken into account as follows:

(1) age of claimant;

(2) date of receipt of claim;

(3) short life expectancy (as recorded by the GP).

Points are allocated for short life expectancy if IRISC, the Department's claims handlers, receive written confirmation from the claimant's GP that the claimant has a life expectancy of less than two years. The age of the claimant and any short life expectancy are considered to be more important factors than the date of claim and, accordingly, are weighted more heavily in the points system.

B. Claimants proceeding through the medical assessment process, MAP, after lung function testing

Further points are awarded on the basis of a claimant's spirometry test result to a maximum of 150. Claimants who are unable, for medical reasons, to produce a spirometry result, will receive points in lieu of those that would otherwise have been awarded after spirometry testing.

Deceased mineworkers

With regard to deceased mineworkers, these claims will be processed by a paper-based assessment with priority being given to widows. Points are awarded according to the age of claim and any short life expectancy of the widow.

Presently, the Department is processing claims as set out in the Handling Agreement with the most elderly and ill being dealt with first. Widows are also being dealt with as a priority.

It should be noted that prioritisation does not override geographical variations in the availability of resources for live claims. All available resources will be used to the maximum even though claimants based in one area may be tested or examined ahead of someone with a higher priority score in another.

Miners Pension Surpluses

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made on her Department's review of the distribution of miners' pension surpluses. [27574]

Ms Hewitt: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Barnsley, Central (Mr. Illsley) on 17 January 2002, Official Report, column 403W.

Land Rover

Mr. John Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement about the employment situation in the west midlands, with special reference to Land Rover. [29447]

Alan Johnson: The latest labour force survey data shows that there were 2,505,000 people resident in the west midlands who were in employment in the period September to November 2001. This represented an increase of 30,000 or 1.2 per cent. on the previous three-month period and an increase of 42,000 or 1.6 per cent. on the equivalent period a year earlier.

Land Rover employ a total of around 12,000 people in the west midlands. With regard to the current situation between Land Rover and KPMG (administrative receivers to UPF Group) both parties are in urgent negotiations to resolve their differences. We hope that a satisfactory solution is found that safeguards security of supply to Land Rover and also enables the UPF business to be sold as a going concern. DTI continues to remain in contact with all the key players but essentially this is a commercial matter for Land Rover and KPMG.

Sellafield

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the security of nuclear materials stored at the Sellafield reprocessing plant. [29831]

Ms Hewitt: All aspects of required security arrangements for nuclear materials stored at the Sellafield reprocessing plant are kept under continuing review by the Director of Civil Nuclear Security, the security regulator. Stringent security measures apply at all civil nuclear sites including Sellafield. It is not Government policy to disclose details of security measures taken at civil nuclear sites.

Post Offices

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what discussions she has held with Consignia concerning the possible closure of post offices; and if she will make a statement; [30006]

(2) what recent guidance she has given Consignia concerning the closure of urban post offices. [30008]

Ms Hewitt: The Government have agreed in principle to support the compensation package negotiated between Post Office Ltd. and the National Federation of Sub-Postmasters for a restructuring of the urban post office network. Where appropriate, compensation will be made available to sub-postmasters affected. Detailed discussions continue on the programme.

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will ensure that Consignia's proposals for possible post office closures are made public. [30007]

Ms Hewitt: The programme to restructure the urban post office network will be taken forward in consultation with individual sub-postmasters, the local community and Postwatch. To ensure that post offices meet the high expectations of customers and are in the right locations for their communities, the programme will be carefully tailored to the circumstances of each locality.

Gas Transportation Tariffs

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether she raised the effect of gas transportation tariffs on Northern Ireland when she met representatives of Centrica on 6 December 2001; and if she will make a statement. [29474]

Mr. Wilson: I met representatives of Centrica on 6 December 2001 when we discussed a number of issues in confidence and, under Exemption 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information, it would be inappropriate to go into detail.

Gas is transported to Northern Ireland under the terms of a commercial contract. This contract is a matter for the parties involved.

HEALTH

Digital Hearing Aids

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans the Government have to increase the availability of digital hearing aids. [10002]

Jacqui Smith: We announced the modernising hearing aids services project in October 2000. Since then, to the end of December 2001, 19,368 digital aids had been fitted, 19,353 adult patients had been assessed and 14,856 adult patients fitted. By the end of March, we expect to have fitted over 18,000 patients.

I announced on 24 December 2001 that a further £20 million would be made available in 2002–03 so that a further 30 national health service sites can join the modernising hearing aids project during that year. Decisions on which sites will become involved in the project next year will be made shortly.

The Institute of Hearing Research is evaluating the project, and its findings will help planning of the wider availability of changes in hearing aid services, which include the provision of digital hearing aids, to all NHS audiology departments.

In the meantime, all NHS trusts with the ability, in terms of staff, training, equipment and experience, to provide digital hearing aids, are able to apply for access to a favourable contract for supply of digital hearing aids.

Hospital Admissions

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients were waiting for admission to hospitals, including suspended patients but not including self-deferred cases, in (a) England and (b) each NHS trust in England in the year ending 31 March. [13621]

Mr. Hutton: The number of in-patients waiting for treatment and the number of patients suspended from the waiting list at end March 2001 is given in the table, which has been placed in the Library.

Patient Choice

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans he has to impose (a) geographical and (b) financial limits on the ability of patients to have greater choice over the location of their hospital treatment; [15412]

(2) what elements of provision he envisaged constituting plurality of provision; and what proportion of each of those elements he envisaged in the final state of plurality he is aiming for as referred to in his speech to the Fabian Society; [15413]

(3) what expansion of capacity is required to enable patients to have a choice of hospital for treatment; [15324]

(4) how he intends to enable patients to have the choice of access to a local hospital as referred to in his speech to the Fabian Society; and what definition of local he uses in this context. [15414]

Mr. Hutton: On 6 December 2001, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced proposals to give patients choice over where they are treated in the national health service.

From July 2002, all patients who have been waiting more than six months for heart surgery will be offered a choice of treatment at another NHS hospital; a hospital in the private sector; or possibly a hospital abroad. Patients opting to stay with their current hospital will do so on the basis that they will wait no more than 12 months in total there.

By 2005, all patients and their general practitioners will be able to book hospital appointments at both a time and place that is convenient to the patient.

Proposals to increase the capacity of the NHS are set out in the NHS Plan. The proposals to increase choice are set out in the discussion paper "Extending Choice for Patients", copies of which are available in the Library.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what IT changes will be required to enable patients to have information about the choices open to them described in the Secretary of State's speech to the Fabian Society; [15415]

(2) what IT changes will be required to enable general practitioners to act as the navigators referred to in the Secretary of State's speech to the Fabian Society; [15416]

(3) what IT investment will be required to allow general practitioners to offer patients hospital treatment at a time and place convenient to them. [24604]

Mr. Hutton: An outline business case (OBC) has been developed, proposing a framework for implementing electronic booking systems. The OBC can be found at: www.doh.gov.uk/nhsplanbookingsystems/.

The framework was developed in consultation with stakeholders. It is based around local health communities and will allow them to implement locally based solutions within a consistent common national framework. It builds on the national information and information technology infrastructure.

Information on the estimated IT investment to implement electronic booking systems is in the OBC.

East Cheshire Hospice

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money was provided by the NHS to the East Cheshire Hospice in each of the last 10 years. [18449]

Yvette Cooper: South Cheshire health authority funding for East Cheshire Hospice for the past six years (since the creation of the health authority) is as follows:

	£000
1995–96	279
1996–97	248
1997–98	253
1998–99	262
1999–2000	272
2000–01	282

The figures exclude the cost of drugs, which is also funded by South Cheshire health authority. Last year this was approximately £50,000 but the amount can vary year to year depending on requirements.

NHS Magazine Website

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost is of maintaining the NHS Magazine website per annum. [24578]

Ms Blears: The NHS Magazine online was started in February 2001. It had set-up costs of £5,875 and has running costs of £51,000 a year. NHS Magazine online carries all the content of NHS Magazine plus two extra features and twice-weekly news updates for NHS staff.

Redwood Unit

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the ratio of public to private staff is for work carried out at the Redwood unit on behalf of the NHS; [24587]

(2) if NHS patients treated at the Redwood hospital in Redhill will be given the same level of facilities as private patients treated there. [24605]

Mr. Hutton: The detailed arrangements for operation of the BUPA Redwood facility as a diagnostic and treatment centre for national health service patients are currently in development between BUPA and the Surrey and Sussex Healthcare NHS Trust. It is not possible to say at this stage what the ratio of public to private staff will be or how the facilities will be used for NHS patients. This information will be made available prior to commencement of the new arrangements. Human Resource issues are of paramount importance in the development of this concept, and the trust will be working closely with the Department to ensure that the most appropriate arrangements are agreed.

We are also committed to ensuring that NHS patients treated at BUPA Redwood receive a high standard of treatment.

GPs

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on expenditure on reviewing of out-patient appointments by general practitioners in the last 12 months. [24602]

Mr. Hutton: Out-patient appointments are routinely reviewed to ensure that all patients on the waiting list still require appointments. Some general practitioners, in partnership with national health service trusts, assist in validating out-patient lists in this way. Arrangements for doing this are made at local level.

Data are not collected on the cost to GPs of carrying out this validation.

Departmental Sickness Absence

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will commission and publish an independent report on the reasons for the level of sickness absence in his Department. [26970]

Ms Blears: The Cabinet Office already commissions and publishes an independent annual report "Analysis of Sickness Absence in the Civil Service". The report includes details of the causes of absenteeism. The report for the year 2000 will be published shortly.

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many days were lost through sickness absence in his Department in each of the last four years. [26945]

Ms Blears: The information requested is shown in the table.

Average[1] days lost per employee through sickness

(per staff year)

	Number
1997	7.8
1998	[2]9.2
1999	6.6
2000	not yet published

[1] Working days absences exclude weekends and bank holidays for staff working a 'Monday to Friday' week.

[2] Based on pre-audit data and methodology. In 1998 Civil Service departments and agencies undertook an audit of their monitoring systems following the "Working Well Together" report. The re-worked figures were not submitted in time for publication of the 1998 report and unadjusted figures were published in this year.

Family Pharmacies

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his Department is doing to safeguard local family pharmacies; and if he will make a statement. [26931]

Ms Blears: Our programme for pharmacy in the national health service is set out in "Pharmacy in the Future—Implementing the NHS Plan", a copy of which is available in the Library. We are committed to continuing to ensure ready access to community pharmacies throughout the country. Special arrangements are in place to support pharmacies which dispense relatively few prescriptions, but which are more than one kilometre from the next pharmacy. These may qualify for subsidy payments under the Essential Small Pharmacies Scheme to bring their income from NHS services up to a target level.

Patient Telephone System

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of privately provided patient telephone systems charge premium rates for incoming calls; and what guidance has been given on the provision of these services to trusts. [27229]

Ms Blears: Of the 59 schemes currently installed and operating in the national health service, 56 are with the two firms that charge full premium rate.

The model concession agreement includes an agreed pricing structure covering all the services provided. All the licensees have declared their policy structure over the period of the contract and the patient power steering group, led by NHS Estates, has agreed the proposals. These represent the maximum the licensee can charge. There are provisions within the agreement for local negotiation.

We are working with suppliers to continually improve the service, including incoming call charges.

Infertility Treatment

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the review of infertility treatment available across the NHS will be published by NICE; and how long the review has taken to date. [27616]

Yvette Cooper: Following an announcement of a new clinical guideline work programme, the National Institute for Clinical Excellence draws up a timetable for each guideline. The commencement of work on individual guidelines is staged according to available capacity in the institute's collaborating centres. The collaborating centre on women's and children's health is about to begin the development of the infertility guideline. I understand that the development of a clinical guideline usually takes up to two years.

Blood Donors

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) for what reason identity cards given to blood donors are not recognised in areas other than where they are issued; [27281]

(2) what measures his Department will implement to introduce a national blood donor register that enables blood donor identity cards to be recognised throughout the UK. [27280]

Yvette Cooper: Three National Blood Service (NBS) databases of blood donor details covering London and the south east, the midlands and the south west and the north and north Wales were established reflecting the original NBS zonal structure. Donors are currently unable to use their identity card outside the region served by their database. However, they can still give blood in another region if they register as a new donor.

The NBS plan to introduce a national donor register from April 2004. This will enable donors to use their identity card in any NBS session in England and north Wales. There are no plans to integrate the registers for the four United Kingdom blood services.

Air Pollution

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of (a) deaths of vulnerable people, (b) hospital admissions and (c) readmissions in the Buckinghamshire health authority area in the last 12 months, which may be associated with (i) short and (ii) long term air pollution. [27783]

Ms Blears: The Buckinghamshire health authority have no patients classified on admission or death under the International Classification of Diseases code z58.1 (exposure to air pollution).

Two Shires Ambulance NHS Trust

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether Two Shires Ambulance NHS trust met its performance targets for responding to (a) Category A and (b) Category B/C emergency calls in each year since 1997; [27786]

(2) how many emergency calls were received (a) in the UK and (b) in Two Shires Ambulance NHS trust area in each year since 1997. [27787]

Ms Blears: Information about the number of emergency calls and the proportion of emergency calls resulting in an ambulance arriving at the scene of a reported incident within the Government's target response time, for both the Two Shires Ambulance national health service trust and all other ambulance trusts in England, is contained in the Department of Health Statistical Bulletin "Ambulance Services, England 2000–01". A copy is in the Library and available on the Department's website at www.doh.gov.uk/public/sb0115.htm.

Following a review of standards in 1996 ambulance services were required to introduce systems to prioritise emergency calls. Two Shires Ambulance NHS trust moved to the new system from 1 April 1998. In 1998–99 and each year since then Two Shires has met and exceeded the target for Category B calls—95 per cent. within 19 minutes (rural service target).

On Category A calls the trust has been making steady progress towards the target of 75 per cent. within eight minutes. Details of performance are in the statistical bulletin.

The Two Shires Ambulance NHS trust is expected to achieve the 75 per cent. target for Category A this year.

Macular Degeneration

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has commissioned in each of the last five years into the causes and treatments of age-related macular degeneration; what further research he intends to commission; and how much his Department has spent on this research in each of the last five years. [26812]

Ms Blears [holding answer 15 January 2002]: The main Government agency for research into the causes and treatment of disease is the Medical Research Council (MRC), which is funded through the Department of Trade and Industry. MRC expenditure on research since 1997 that is directly relevant to macular degeneration is estimated as follows:

1997–98	300,000
1998–99	82,000
1999–2000	78,000
2000–01	140,000

The MRC has funded a number of projects looking at macular degeneration. Projects include:

Radiotherapy in the treatment of subfoveal neovascular membranes (CNVM) in age related macular degeneration of the eye: a randomised controlled trial.

Dr. G. Silvestri Queen's University of Belfast: Refining phenotypic variation in age related macular degeneration.

Professor R. D. Lund: Schwann and schwann cell line transplantation to prevent photoreceptor loss.

Professor U. Chakravarthy: Optical coherence tomography scanning of diseases of the macular of the eye.

Dr. R. W. Yates: Genetic Susceptibility to Age Related Macular Degeneration

The MRC always welcomes high quality applications for support into any aspect of human health and these are judged in open competition with other demands on funding. Awards are made according to their scientific quality and importance to human health. The Department has supported, through national and regional programmes, research on macular degeneration. Projects include an on-going project due to complete in July 2002 on "A clinical technique for measuring macular pigment optical density in patients with macular degeneration".

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate his Department has made of the number of people treated in the last year with photodynamic therapy in the private sector following a diagnosis of wet age-related macular degeneration in an NHS hospital. [27033]

Ms Blears [holding answer 15 January 2002]: As the Department does not routinely collect information on operations carried out privately, we are unable to make an estimate.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the therapies licensed in the UK for the treatment of age-related macular degeneration; when they were licensed; how much the NHS has spent on them; and how many people have benefited from them in each of the last three years. [26814]

Ms Blears [holding answer 15 January 2002]: Currently the only product licensed for the indication age-related macular degeneration is Visudyne. A European-wide licence was granted by the European Commission on 27 July 2000. We do not hold information on the number of patients treated with Visudyne or the amount of the product that the national health service has purchased.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether photodynamic therapy of age-related macular degeneration is generally available within the NHS. [26813]

Ms Blears [holding answer 15 January 2002]: The treatment is not generally available under the national health service. The National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) is carrying out an appraisal of the use of photodynamic therapy in the treatment of macular disease which they expect to complete in July. The Department has asked NHS bodies to continue with local arrangements for the managed introduction of new technologies where guidance from NICE is not available at the time the technology first became available. These arrangements should involve an assessment of all relevant factors including the available evidence on effect.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate his Department has made of the number of people diagnosed each year with age-related macular degeneration. [26815]

Ms Blears [holding answer 15 January 2002]: A recent study sponsored by the Macular Disease Society estimated that there are currently 182,000 people suffering from age-related macular degeneration with a best eye visual acuity below that judged appropriate for certification as blind or partially sighted. The study forecast that this number would increase to 194,000 by 2008.

NHS Appointments

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to ensure that hon. Members are notified of appointments to new health authorities and trusts covering their constituencies; and if he will make a statement. [26819]

Ms Blears [holding answer 15 January 2002]: This is a matter for the National Health Service Appointments Commission. At present, all appointments to NHS boards are publicised locally by press release. I have also asked the commission to ensure that hon. Members are informed of all of appointments made to trusts, health authorities and primary care trusts which serve their constituencies.

NHS Prescriptions

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from community pharmacists based in Teesside concerning the cut in the fee paid for dispensing NHS prescriptions. [27867]

Ms Blears: We have received a letter from my hon. Friend the Member for Middlesbrough (Mr. Bell) enclosing representations on this matter from a community pharmacist based in his constituency.

Westmorland General Hospital

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans he has to extend services at the Westmorland General Hospital's emergency and minor accident department; [28276]

(2) what change in service levels has taken place at the Westmorland General Hospital's emergency and minor accident department in each of the last five years; [28275]

(3) if he will make a statement on the merits of operating a 24-hour minor accident department at the Westmorland General Hospital; [28273]

(4) how many ambulance emergency cases were taken to the Westmorland General Hospital's emergency and minor accident department in each of the last five years; and how many of these were then taken to Lancaster Royal Infirmary; [28277]

(5) what his plans are for the future of Westmorland General Hospital; and if he will make a statement; [28271]

(6) what assistance he provides to recruit extra staff to work at the Westmorland General Hospital's emergency and minor accident department; [28274]

(7) how many people have been treated at the Westmorland General Hospital's emergency and minor accident department in each of the last five years; and how many of these were treated between the hours of 11.00 pm and 6.00 am; [28270]

(8) if he will ensure that the Westmorland General Hospital's emergency and minor accident department continues to operate on a 24-hour basis; [28278]

(9) what the recommended manpower level is for doctors in an emergency and minor accident department. [28272]

Ms Blears [holding answer 17 January 2001]: Morecambe Bay Hospitals National Health Service Trust and Morecambe Bay Primary Care Trust intend to review the delivery of emergency and out-of-hours services for residents of South Lakeland. This work will take place with full public involvement and in the context of existing and developing national guidelines, the local modernisation review process and relevant staffing considerations. It is anticipated that detailed information of the nature requested will emerge as part of that exercise. A report, with recommendations, will be produced by 31 May 2002, to be considered by the boards of the trust, primary care trust and Cumbria ambulance service. Any proposals for significant variations in existing service provision would, of course, be subject to full public consultation at a later stage.

Health Authorities

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent guidance he has issued on the balance of representation from different parliamentary constituencies in cases where several constituencies are covered by the same health authority or NHS trust. [28047]

Ms Blears [holding answer 17 January 2001]: No such guidance has been issued. Appointments to the boards of national health service trusts, health authorities and primary care trusts are now a matter for the NHS Appointments Commission. The commission always aims to ensure that board membership properly reflects the geographical area served by the NHS body.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent guidance he has issued on increasing the representation of (a) women, (b) members of ethnic minority communities and (c) other under-represented groups on NHS trusts and health authorities. [28049]

Ms Blears [holding answer 17 January 2002]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State issues equal opportunities goals and objectives on an annual basis for all public appointments to national health service boards, special health authorities and non-departmental public bodies. The goals and objectives set in July 2001 for achievement by December 2004 are available in the Library.

We have made huge strides over recent years in increasing the proportion of women and black and ethnic minority candidates appointed NHS boards. 49 per cent. of all NHS board members and 41 per cent. of chairs are now women, and 12 per cent. of members are black or from ethnic minorities. This compares with figures of only 39 per cent. and 5 per cent. at the time of the 1997 general election. The proportion of disabled candidates appointed over the last five years has also more than doubled. As a result, the boards of these bodies are now much more representative of the communities they serve.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action is being taken to seek applications from those living in communities with the greatest health needs for non-executive appointments on health authorities and NHS trusts. [28048]

Ms Blears [holding answer 17 January 2002]: All vacancies for national health service boards are now widely advertised within the communities they serve. Candidates who apply are all assessed on their merits against criteria laid down by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State. The criteria require among other things that, to be appointed, candidates must be able to demonstrate a commitment to the needs of the local community and have a strong personal commitment to the NHS.

West Midlands South Strategic Health Authority

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many candidates (a) applied and (b) were interviewed for (i) the chairmanship and (ii) the post of chief executive of the new west midlands, south strategic health authority. [28593]

Yvette Cooper: I understand from the National Health Service Appointments Commission that there were six applications for the chair post, and three candidates were interviewed.

91 individuals applied in response to the advertisement to recruit chief executives designate to all strategic health authorities. 52 candidates were interviewed for all posts. Appointments were made to each authority from a shortlist of successful candidates.

Candidates were asked to indicate their preference in their applications in terms of the geographical location they wish to work based on the current NHS regional boundaries. 26 applicants expressed an interest in being a chief executive of a strategic health authority in the west midlands, either exclusively or as a multiple choice. 11 were interviewed.

NHS Trusts (Worcestershire)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many candidates (a) applied and (b) were interviewed for the chairmanship of the Worcestershire Acute Hospitals NHS Trust after the resignation of Mr. Harold Musgrove. [28592]

Yvette Cooper: I understand from the National Health Service Appointments Commission that there were 17 applications for the post, and four candidates were interviewed.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria were used to select the Chairman of the South Worcestershire Primary Care Trust. [28591]

Yvette Cooper: The criteria are set out in the National Health Service Appointments Commission guidance on the appointments process for NHS chairs and non-executives, a copy of which is in the Library. The Appointments Commission will shortly be sending copies of the guidance to all hon. Members.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many candidates (a) applied and (b) were interviewed for the chairmanship of the South Worcestershire Primary Care Trust. [28594]

Yvette Cooper: I understand from the National Health Service Appointments Commission that there were 11 applications for the post, and three candidates were interviewed.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were treated for food poisoning arising from food prepared and consumed (a) at home and (b) by others outside the home, in each year since 1990. [28043]

Ms Blears: The information requested is not available centrally. The source of illness can generally be determined only when two or more cases are linked (an outbreak). The great majority of cases of food poisoning cannot be linked in this way.

Health Care Assistants

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many health care assistants were employed in (a) acute hospital trusts and (b) primary care trusts in England in each of the last five years; [28224]

(2) what measures he is taking to increase the recruitment of health care assistants in the (a) acute and (b) primary care sectors; and if he will make a statement. [28225]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested for the number of health care assistants is in the table.

We aim to increase recruitment of health care assistants by developing career paths to encourage unqualified staff to work in the national health service across general practice and acute care. Dedicated investment in NVQ training will allow NHS staff to gain transferable skills to recognised national standards and enable more staff to gain qualifications to enter professional training and progress their careers further. In 2001–02 we expect over 2,000 health care assistants to start nurse training courses.

Investing in staff who do not have a professional qualification supports the goal of increasing career opportunities and qualifications for the support work force, while improving the quality of direct care for patients and freeing up professionals to make better use of their skills.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the maximum number of casualties the Isle of Wight ambulance service could cope with in one incident; and what additional resources are required to meet a major incident. [28234]

Ms Blears: It is not possible to define the number of casualties that the Isle of Wight could cope with in one incident. That would depend on the nature of the incident.

Each incident is assessed by a duty officer, and if there were insufficient resources available locally to deal with the incident, we would instigate the escalation procedure in our major incident plan. This would involve calling upon the neighbouring ambulance services (Hampshire ambulance national health service) for assistance.

Accident and Emergency Departments

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average number of attendances is per year in district general hospital accident and emergency departments in (a) England, (b) south-west England and (c) south-east England. [28226]

Ms Blears: The Department does not collect this information in the form requested.

Accident and emergency attendance is collected by national health service trusts.

Primary Care Trusts

Mrs. Dean: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what basis primary care trusts will be funded from 2003–04. [29221]

Mr. Hutton: We currently allocate funding to health authorities, and they allocate funding to primary care trusts, on the basis of the relative needs of their populations. A weighted capitation formula is used to determine each health authority and primary care trust's fair share of available resources, to enable them to commission similar levels of services for populations in equal need.

In future the intention is that allocations will be made direct to primary care trusts. This is subject to the passage of legislation through Parliament. Allocations will continue to be based on the principle of weighted capitation.

MMR

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the role of Dr. Elizabeth Miller (a) in the designing of safety studies into MMR, (b) in clearing the original UK trial cohort of 10,000 children and (c) in advising his Department on the safety of MMR. [28788]

Yvette Cooper: Dr. Elizabeth Miller is currently head of the Immunisation Division of the Communicable Diseases Surveillance Centre of the Public Health Laboratory Services (PHLS). With PHLS colleagues Dr. Miller has conducted a number of studies designed to investigate possible adverse effects of measles, mumps and rubella vaccines. The results of these studies have been subjected to independent peer review and published as follows:

1. Miller C., Miller E., Rowe K., Bowie C., Judd M., Walker D. Surveillance of Symptoms following MMR Vaccine in Children. The Practitioner, 1989; 233: 69–75.
2. Miller E., Goldacre M., Pugh S., Colville A., Farrington P., Flower A., Nash J., Macfarlane L., Tettmar R. Risk of aseptic meningitis after Measles, Mumps and Rubella vaccine in UK children. Lancet 1993;341:979–982.
3. Farrington P., Pugh S., Colville A., Flower A., Nash J., Morgan-Capner P., Rush M., Miller E. A new method for active surveillance of adverse events from Diphtheria/tetanus/pertussis and Measles/mumps/rubella vaccines. Lancet 1995; 345:567–569.
4. Nash J.Q., Chandrakumar M., Farrington C.P., Williamson S., Miller E. Feasibility study for identifying adverse events attributable to vaccination by record linkage. Epidemiology and Infection 1995; 114: 475–480.
5. Farrington C.P., Nash J., Miller E. Case Series Analysis of adverse reactions to vaccines: A comparative evaluation. American Journal of Epidemiology 1996;143:1165–73.
6. Taylor B., Miller E., Farrington P., Petropoulos M.C., Favot-Mayaud I., Li J., Waight P.A. Autism and measles, mumps, and rubella vaccine: no epidemiological evidence for a causal association. Lancet 1999; 353:2026–2029.
7. Miller E., Waight P., Farrington P., Andrews N., Stowe J., Taylor B. Idiopathic thrombocytopenic purpura and MMR vaccine (short report). Archives of Disease in Childhood 2001;84:227–229.
8. Farrington C.P., Miller E., Taylor B. MMR and autism: further evidence against a causal association. Vaccine 2001; 19:3632–3635.

Dr. Elizabeth Miller, under the direction of the then head of the immunisation division, Dr. Christine Miller, assisted in the design and analysis of the study in 10,000 children that was carried out in 1987–88. The results of that study were not used for licensure of MMR vaccine in the United Kingdom. The responsibility for licensure resides with the Medicines Control Agency and is based on the evidence of vaccine safety, efficacy and quality provided by the manufacturer.

The Department would expect the head of the immunisation division to provide advice to the Department on all aspects of immunisation. Dr. Miller would also provide advice to the Department's independent advisory committee, the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation, and, as required to the Committee on Safety of Medicines.

Coronary Surgery (West Midlands)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on waiting times for coronary surgery in the west midlands. [28898]

Yvette Cooper: We are committed to improving waiting times for cardiac surgery, and in the west midlands initiatives include a new £13 million purpose built cardiac surgery critical care unit which recently opened at the University Hospitals Birmingham national health service trust.

A new purpose built cardiac surgery centre is being developed at the Royal Wolverhampton Hospitals NHS trust, which is due to open in 2004, and is the first new specialist cardiac centre to be built in the west midlands for 30 years. The cardiac surgery unit at Stoke-on-Trent is also being expanded in 2002.

In the interim, private capacity is also being purchased at Leicester BUPA Hospital and the Priory Hospital, Birmingham to ensure no patient waits longer than 15 months.

In order to facilitate the treatment of urgent patients within the region, a cardiac services capacity manager has been appointed to ensure that urgent patients in the west midlands are treated quickly.

Renal Transplants

Richard Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the reasons are for his proposed transfer of renal transplant operations from St. Helier to St. George's; and if he will make a statement. [28746]

Mr. Hutton: Any decision to transfer renal transplant operations from St. Helier to St. George's hospitals will be decided locally. St. George's, Epsom and St. Helier national health service trusts, Merton, Sutton and Wandsworth health authority, Merton and Sutton community health council and patient groups are all working to ensure that any proposals put forward are in the best interests of the patients and staff of the renal service. A final decision will not be made until the health authority has conducted a formal public consultation which will commence in March 2002.

Haywood Hospital

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what remedial action is planned following the clean hospitals programme report into Haywood hospital, Stoke-on-Trent. [28917]

Yvette Cooper: I am advised that the action plan agreed by the North Staffordshire Hospital National Health Service Trust following the clean hospitals programme report into Haywood hospital following the inspection in March is progressing well and includes:

- a large redecoration programme including the entrance, main reception areas, wards and common areas;
- improvements to internal and external signage;
- improvements to visitors' toilet facilities;
- investment in new furniture—improving the overall quality of the furniture stock;
- improvements to catering services;
- implementation of in-house support services staff performance monitoring scheme;
- improvements to hospital grounds and gardens.

We believe that infection control and basic hygiene should be at the heart of good management and clinical practice in the NHS which is why we have a £60 million clean hospitals programme.

The clean hospitals programme is intended to introduce and restore standards in cleanliness and the patient environment. Delivery progress under the clean hospitals programme is showing tangible improvements in every hospital.

Spending Review

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to appraise the environmental implications of its Spending Review submission to the Treasury. [29026]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 21 January 2002]: Environmental implications are considered as part of the normal policy making process, which includes spending review proposals.

Contact Lenses

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received on, and what assessments he has made of, the health implications of the sale of cosmetic patterned contact lenses. [27143]

Ms Blears [holding answer 21 January 2002]: The General Optical Council (GOC) has proposed to the Department that the sale of cosmetic contact lenses, which do not have a corrective refractory power, be subject to tighter regulation because of the risk to eye health from the misuse of contact lenses. Views differed when we consulted on this proposal and, to inform our policy considerations, we are collaborating with the GOC on an assessment of the extent of the risks.

Human Fertilisation and Embryology Act

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to bring forward changes to the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Act 1990 to allow a child of a deceased father to include his or her father's name on their birth certificate. [29296]

Yvette Cooper: We supported a private Members Bill on this last year, which unfortunately had not completed all its stages when the general election was called. We are committed to bring forward this legislation as soon as parliamentary time is found.

NHS

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in the discussions taking place on the new pay structure for the NHS involving a nation-wide job evaluation exercise. [29331]

Mr. Hutton: Considerable progress is being made in the "Agenda for Change" pay modernisation talks. In particular the job evaluation scheme has been developed further so that it is now generating credible and consistent results over the range of jobs covered by the United Kingdom-wide national health service. It has now been used to carry out evaluations on around 400 examples of the most common NHS jobs, which provides the basic data needed for negotiating the new pay structure. The central negotiating group has prepared negotiating documents covering all areas of the new pay system, with remaining differences between the Health Department's proposals and the views of staff representative organisations highlighted.

We have decided to leave final decisions on the new system until after the 2002 Spending Review is announced. Until then all parties have agreed that the job evaluation scheme and models of a new pay structure should continue to be developed. The aim will be to complete this work as early as possible this year to enable swift agreement with a view to starting implementation at the earliest possible opportunity.

PFI Contracts

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the order of costs incurred by private sector PFI partners in securing contracts for community hospital building projects; and if he will make a statement. [27343]

Mr. Hutton: Information is not held centrally of costs incurred by private sector firms in bidding for community hospital projects. Such costs are incorporated into a bidder's best and final offer which national health service bodies compare to their public sector comparator to determine which option offers better value for money.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many private sector PFI partners are available for community hospital building projects of the order of £25 to £35 million; which are acceptable to his Department; and if he will make a statement. [27344]

Mr. Hutton: Listed are private finance initiative projects with a capital value of between £10 million and £35 million which have been signed with private sector partners. This captures the private sector constructors which are involved in delivering medium size hospital schemes, including community hospitals.

Children's Commissioner

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the benchmark criteria his Department uses to evaluate the performance of the children's commissioner for Wales for the purpose of considering and evaluating the need for the creation of a children's commissioner for England. [29330]

Jacqui Smith: All parts of the United Kingdom are united in a common aim to improve safeguards for children. However, devolution means that we can each take different paths to achieve that common goal.

We are committed to learning the lessons from the Welsh experience of appointing a children's commissioner that prove relevant to England. To this end, departmental officials will continue to liaise with officials in the National Assembly for Wales, in order specifically to learn more about how the commissioner in Wales may be adding value to children's lives in Wales and improving outcomes for Welsh children.

Here in England, we have made major advances through the creation of the children and young people's unit, the children's rights director and the national clinical director for children.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Intrusive Surveillance

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many intrusive surveillance operations were authorised by (a) chief officers of police and (b) customs officials in the United Kingdom in each year from 1995. [28326]

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

Mr. Denham [holding answer 22 January 2002]: No records are centrally held of the number of intrusive surveillance operations authorised by chief officers of police or customs officials from 1 January 1995 to 22 February 1999. The number of intrusive surveillance operations authorised by the chief officers of police and customs officials since 22 February 1999 are as follows:

	Chief officers of police	Customs officials
22 February to 31 December 1999	1,432	346
1 January to 31 December 2000	1,609	523
1 January to 31 December 2001	458	38
1 January to 17 January 2002	20	7

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what controls govern the monitoring of conversations by equipment which picks up vibrations in window panes. [28625]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 22 January 2002]: The Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act (RIPA) 2000 provides a statutory basis for the authorisation of intrusive surveillance. RIPA also provides for independent oversight of such authorisations by the Office of the Surveillance Commissioner and the Intelligence Services Commissioner.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if use by the law enforcement agencies of technology which remotely takes a phone off the hook and thereby allows the monitoring of conversations close to that phone requires authorisation as if it were a telephone intercept; and whether the use by others of such technology constitutes a criminal offence. [28328]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 22 January 2002]: The monitoring of conversations by law enforcement agencies which are not conducted on a public or private telecommunication system fall within the surveillance provisions of the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act (RIPA) 2000. RIPA provides a statutory basis for the authorisation of intrusive surveillance. RIPA also provides for independent oversight of such authorisations by the Office of the Surveillance Commissioner.

Schengen Information System

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer of 17 December 2001, Official Report, column 84–85W, if she will list (a) the areas in which the Justice and Home Affairs Council is examining the scope for SIS II to have an increased range of functions and (b) the authorities being considered eligible for access to SIS data. [28321]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 22 January 2002]: This work is at a very early stage. Officials in the relevant council working group are examining the possible future requirements for SIS II and proposals will be submitted to the Justice and Home Affairs (JHA) Council at key stages in the process. A first discussion of this work was held by the Mixed Committee with Norway and Iceland, meeting at ministerial level in the margins of the JHA Council on 6–7 December 2001 and reported to the House in my reply to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Clydesdale (Mr. Hood) on 14 January 2002, Official Report, column 89W. The authorities which would be considered eligible for access to SIS data will be determined according to the purpose for which it is agreed that data will be stored. This work will require amendment to the Schengen acquis and will thus be the subject of formal decisions at European Union level; these will be subject to United Kingdom parliamentary scrutiny in the normal way.

Asylum Seekers

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average time taken from receipt of an asylum appeal by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate and to (a) the ending of the appeal to the Immigration Appellate Authority, (b) determination of the appeal by an adjudicator and (c) where leave to appeal is granted final determination of the appeal by the Immigration Appeal Tribunal. [28778]

Angela Eagle: For the 12 months ending 30 September 2001, data from the Immigration Appellate Authority (IAA) for those cases where data are available indicate that the cumulative average times taken from the receipt of an asylum appeal by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate to:

(a) the receipt of an appeal by the IAA is nine weeks;

(b) the determination by an adjudicator is 25 weeks;

(c) the final determination by the Immigration Appeal Tribunal is 45 weeks.

Crime Reduction Violence Against Women Initiative

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the projects financed under the Crime Reduction Violence Against Women Initiative until March. [28905]

Mr. Denham: The information is as follows:

Standing Together—Civil (Hammersmith and Fulham, London)
West Somerset Polaroid Cameras (Taunton)

Child Curfew Orders

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many child curfew orders have been issued in Essex in each of the last five years for which records exist. [28418]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 18 January 2002]: No applications have been received to impose child curfew schemes under section 14 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998. Sections 48 and 49 of the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001, which took effect on 1 August 2001, extended the upper age limit to 15 and allowed the police, as well as local authorities, to initiate schemes. Local areas are assessing the implications of these changes and we know that local consultation is taking place.

Community Sentence Orders

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether it is the practice of the Probation Service not to exercise arrest warrants for those breaking the terms of community sentence orders if they have been outstanding for more than a year; and if he will make a statement. [30117]

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if it is the practice of the Probation Service not to exercise arrest warrants for those breaking the terms of community sentence orders if they have been outstanding for more than a year; and if he will make a statement. [29824]

Beverley Hughes: Each case is dealt with on it merits. There is no general policy that a warrant outstanding for a year, or indeed any particular period of time, should be returned to the court to consider withdrawal.

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many outstanding arrest warrants issued for those breaking the terms of community sentences there are; and if he will make a statement. [29829]

Mr. Wills: I have been asked to reply.

Lead responsibility for execution of community penalty breach warrants was transferred from the police to magistrates courts committees on 1 April 2001. Prior to the transfer, statistics on community penalty breach warrants were not routinely kept. The Lord Chancellor's Department is now collecting data but complete figures are not yet available. Of the community penalty breach warrants issued since the transfer 8,014 were outstanding as at 28 December 2001.

Prison Sales

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to sell Holloway Prison; and if he will make a statement; [29828]

(2) what plans he has to sell Wormwood Scrubs Prison. [29827]

Beverley Hughes: There are no current plans to sell Holloway or Wormwood Scrubs prisons.

Trial by Jury

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on the future of trial by jury; [29825]

(2) what plans he has to introduce legislation to allow the overturning of perverse verdicts returned by juries as recommended by the Auld report; and if he will make a statement. [29826]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Sir Robin Auld's review of the criminal courts, the report of which was published last October, made a number of recommendations with major implications for trial by jury. The report is currently the subject of public consultation, and the Government will consider their response in the light of the views received.

New Deal (Young People)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people are employed by the Department under the new deal for young people; and at what cost to public funds. [21319]

Mr. Denham: The Home Office currently employs a total of 11 people under the new deal for young people.

New deal recruits take up existing vacancies so extra costs are limited to the subsidy, where appropriate, and any additional training and development which may be needed. The costs of the latter cannot be readily identified.

Crime (Coventry)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures have been taken in Coventry to improve the protection of pensioners in their homes from burglary. [28882]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 21 January 2002]: Coventry is covered by our home security scheme for low-income pensioners living in areas with burglary rates above the national average. This provides security checks and additional security measures where needed for eligible pensioners, including better door locks, window locks, door chains and viewers.

In addition, a total of over £320,000 funding has been provided for five projects in Coventry under the reducing burglary initiative. These projects, while not specifically aimed at the elderly, target local burglary problems and are of benefit to the community as a whole.

Locally, the Coventry Crime and Disorder Partnership is undertaking work on crime against older people (particularly distraction burglary) as part of its wider community safety plans and strategies.

Mobile Phone Theft

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will introduce guidelines for the mobile telephony companies to share the international mobile equipment identity code when mobiles are stolen. [28949]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 21 January 2002]: As part of the on-going work of the Home Secretary's Mobile Phone Steering Group, we are currently in discussion with the mobile phone industry and the police about the feasibility of setting up and implementing a shared database of stolen handset IMEI numbers.

Mr. Robert Clark

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what representations he has received on the handling by the Police Complaints Authority of a complaint by Mr. Leslie Clark into the case of Mr. Robert Clark; [28872]

(2) what representations he has received regarding the handling by the Metropolitan police service of a complaint by Mr. Leslie Clark into the case of Mr. Robert Clark. [28871]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 21 January 2002]: My right hon. Friend the Member for Norwich, South (Mr. Clarke), in his former capacity as a Minister of State, Home Department received representations on this subject from the hon. Member and replied to his correspondence in February and April of last year.

Police (Complaints)

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints received by the Metropolitan police service from members of the public during 2000 were (a) forwarded to the Police Complaints Authority and (b) recorded initially as complaints and then reclassified and cancelled. [28875]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 21 January 2002]: From 1 January to 31 December 2000 there were 6,211 public allegations against the Metropolitan police service, making up 3,887 cases. Of these, 3,050 allegations (49 per cent.) have so far been referred to the Police Complaints Authority. There are 60 allegations (1 per cent.) that are shown as 'Not Resolved' or 'De-Recorded'.

Commercial Sexual Exploitation

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to implement recommendation 49 of Setting the Boundaries to introduce into UK domestic law a specific offence of people trafficking for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation. [29676]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Home Office Ministers are currently considering this and all of the other recommendations made to Government by the Sex Offences Review, in the light of responses to a public consultation process. The Government have indicated their intention to introduce new legislation to target the evils of trafficking in human beings. They are considering how that legislation should be framed and are examining suitable legislative vehicles.

The new legislation will also implement our international obligation in respect of trafficking, contained in the United Nations (UN) Protocol on Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children for Sexual Purposes, the UN Convention on Transnational Organised Crime, and a European Union (EU) Framework Decision on Trafficking currently under negotiation.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received to amend section 22 of the Sex Offences Act 1956 to make it an offence for a person to procure under 18s for the purposes detailed in sections 22(1), (a)(b) and (c) of the legislation. [29675]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Sex Offences Review recommended to Government that section 22 of the Sex Offences Act 1956 should be replaced with a range of gender neutral offences relating to the commercial sexual exploitation of a child under 18 and the trafficking of a person for the purposes of sexual exploitation.

Home Office Ministers are considering this recommendation and the responses received during the consultation period in light of the Government's intention to introduce new legislation to target the evils of trafficking in human beings and the United Kingdom's international obligations in this regard.

Police Custody (Deaths)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many deaths in police custody there were in the last year for which figures are available, broken down by force; what is being done to reduce the number of recorded deaths in police custody; what action he will take as a result of responses received to the recent consultation document concerning deaths in police custody; and if he will publish, following the conclusion of the consultation, a list of those who responded to it. [27854]

Mr. Denham: Statistics for deaths in police custody for 2000–01 were published on 29 November 2001. Copies can be found in the Library. The total number of deaths in custody fell from 70 in 1999–2000 to 52 in 2000–01. Police forces are taking a range of actions to reduce the number of deaths. These include safer custody facilities, close circuit television (CCTV) monitoring and an emphasis on better care, assessment and monitoring of detainees. Work is also in hand to develop a national protocol to cover health care professionals working within the custody environment.

The responses received to our recent consultation document concerning the definition of deaths in police custody will be fully considered before changes are introduced. I will publish a list of those who responded.

Tetra Communications System

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Tetra communications system is to be introduced in police forces nationwide; what recent discussions he has had with the Police Federation and others concerning its safety; and if he will make a statement. [28576]

Mr. Denham: Airwave, the new national communications service for the police forces, is being introduced throughout England, Wales and Scotland. It is already operational in Leicestershire, Lancashire and Greater Manchester and will be ready for service in North Yorkshire, Suffolk and West Mercia by the end of February 2002. It is planned to complete the roll-out in England and Wales by 2004, and in Scotland during 2005.

In November 2001 the Home Secretary and I met with representatives of the Police Federation to discuss their concerns on health and safety aspects of the Tetra technology used by Airwave. The Home Office has provided answers to the questions raised by the Police Federation. These can be found on the website of the Police Information Technology Organisation (www.pito.org.uk).

Crime Statistics (Midlothian)

David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the figures are for crime against the person in the Midlothian constituency in the most recent 12 months for which figures are available; what percentage of this figure was related to mobile phone crime; and what the Government are doing to (a) help reduce crime and (b) improve community safety in the Midlothian constituency. [27181]

Mr. Denham: This detailed information on Midlothian is a matter for the Scottish Executive. But Scotland should benefit from work undertaken in England and Wales in researching the problem of mobile phone theft, and in working with the industry. Although other measures are important, more needs to be done by the industry to enhance the security of their product, and we are pressing them to do more to prevent their customers from becoming the victims of crime.

We have succeeded in gaining the commitment of United Kingdom phone operators to some early measures to test ways of putting stolen phones out of action. In particular, we are exploring with the police and the operators a Dutch initiative which disables stolen phones by "bombing" them with teletext messages every few minutes. The operators have also agreed to improve security as investment takes place in new systems, and we are seeking similar commitments from manufacturers.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the use of animal experimentation and animal welfare in universities. [28846]

Angela Eagle: Some 40 per cent. of regulated scientific procedures using live animals in Great Britain are conducted in universities and medical schools. They form part of a wide range of programmes of fundamental and applied medical research.

All such procedures in the United Kingdom are regulated under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986. The Act provides for a three-tier licensing system covering the establishments concerned, the research programmes undertaken, and the individuals carrying out the work.

Under the Act the procedures can be licensed for only a limited number of permitted purposes, and then only if there is no alternative to the use of animals. Moreover, use of animals will not be permitted unless the benefits of the proposed research are deemed to outweigh the welfare costs to the animals. The number of animals then used, and the suffering they are caused, must be minimised. This reflects the application of the "three Rs" in relation to animal experimentation; replacing the use of animals with alternative methods, reducing the number of animals needed for a particular purpose and refining the procedures to minimise suffering.

The Animals (Scientific Procedures) Inspectorate assesses all licence applications and monitors compliance with licence authorities to ensure appropriate standards of animal welfare. Required minimum standards for the housing and care of the animals are set out in detail in published codes of practice.

Hertfordshire Police Force

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers were serving in the Hertsmere Division of the Hertfordshire Police Force on (a) 1 July 2001, (b) 1 October 2001 and (c) 1 January 2002. [25990]

Mr. Denham: The information in the table has been provided by the chief constable of Hertfordshire constabulary. On 1 October 2001 Hertsmere division joined with two other divisions to become part of the 'Central Area'. To provide a proper comparison, the table shows the total officers on 1 July 2001 deployed on the three divisions which now make up the Central Area; and totals for the Central Area on 1 October 2001 and 1 January 2002.

Date	Police officers
1 July 2001	420
1 October 2001	419
1 January 2002	417

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how (1) many officers were recruited by the Hertfordshire constabulary in each year since 1983; [25246]

(2) how many officers left the Hertfordshire constabulary in each year since 1983. [25245]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is set out in the table.

Driving Offences

Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many drivers were successfully prosecuted in 2001 for a driving offence; and how many of these offences involved the use of a hand-held mobile phone. [28352]

Mr. Denham: Statistics on prosecutions for motoring offences in 2001 will be published in the autumn.

There is no separate offence of driving a vehicle using a hand-held mobile telephone, and any prosecution is likely to be for driving without due care and attention or for not being in proper control of a vehicle.

Foreign Armed Forces

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department further to his answer of 2 November 2001, Official Report, column 862W, on foreign armed forces, what protections under international instruments are available for individuals (a) serving under the command of and (b) associated with the armed forces of the former Government of Afghanistan. [29251]

Peter Hain: I have been asked to reply.

Categories of persons who are prisoners of war (POWs), or who are to be treated as POWs, are set out in Geneva Convention III and, where applicable, Additional Protocol I to the Geneva Conventions. The legal status of a detainee has to be determined by reference to these provisions in each individual case. Those detainees who do not enjoy prisoner of war status must in any event be treated humanely.

Protection of Children

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average prison term is for a person convicted of child abuse. [26608]

Beverley Hughes: 'Child Abuse' is not a specific offence but actions of this nature can be prosecuted under a number of offences. Recorded crime statistics show the categories of offence with the largest numbers of offences specifically against children are: cruelty or neglect to a child (2,558 offences in 2000–01) and gross indecency with a child (1,336 offences in 2000–01).

In the year 2000, 616 prisoners were received for the offence of gross indecency with a child. They had been given, on average, a sentence of 27.5 months. In the same year, 124 prisoners were received for the offence of cruelty to a child. They had been given, on average, a sentence of 16.4 months.

Other offenders imprisoned for actions against children would have been included in offence categories that do not separately identify children, eg rape, incest, homicide, etc. It is not possible to identify the sentence lengths given for these cases from central records, although all those convicted of murder would have received a mandatory life sentence.

Under the broad review of sentencing that began in July, the Government are looking at tougher determinate sentences for sex offenders that will ensure they stay in prison, up to the full term if necessary, so long as they continue to present a risk of harm to our communities and that they are subject to strict and extended supervision on release. The Government are also looking at a requirement that where a life sentence is an option judges should not shy away from using it if the professional evidence shows that there is a clear risk that the offender will commit further sex offences.

Child Asylum Seekers

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on (i) the numbers of and (ii) factors leading to unaccompanied children seeking asylum in the UK. [28513]

Angela Eagle: We have not commissioned any research or evaluation into the factors which lead unaccompanied minors to seek asylum in the United Kingdom. However, the Research Development Statistics (RDS) Directorate is currently in discussion with the Immigration and Nationality Directorate to identify any possible research needs in this area.

Information on the numbers of unaccompanied minors seeking asylum in the United Kingdom is already available (up to August 2001).

Information on unaccompanied minors is published annually in the statistical bulletin "Asylum Statistics United Kingdom", a copy of which is available in the Library, and from the RDS website: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

TRANSPORT, LOCAL GOVERNMENT AND THE REGIONS

Road Traffic Legislation

Mr. Joyce: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to amend the Road Traffic Act 1984. [27461]

Mr. Spellar: None. There is no such Act of Parliament.

Departmental Consultants

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 8 January 2002, Official Report, column 584W, on departmental consultants, if he will set out the criteria for determining that contracts let to (a) Arthur Andersen, (b) Ernst and Young, (c) Mercers Management Consulting and (d) Schroder Salamon Smith Barney, on matters relating to Railtrack should not be subject to open competition. [27206]

Mr. Byers: The issues involved were highly sensitive, involving discussions being conducted with Railtrack and their advisers on the basis of strict confidentiality.

Piracy

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 15 January 2002, Official Report, column 208W, on piracy, what assessment he has made of the adequacy of (a) shipping and (b) port security measures in the United Kingdom. [29279]

Mr. Jamieson: The United Kingdom has a comprehensive security regime in place for maritime passenger operations.

The basis of this security regime is the Aviation and Maritime Security Act (AMSA) 1990, which enabled mandatory measures to be introduced for the maritime industry. These measures are formally required by Directions served on the industry covering a range of security issues, including searching of passengers and vehicles, the establishment of Restricted Zones (in which only passengers and other authorised persons are allowed) and pass wearing.

These Directions establish the security standards that the Government expect the industry to comply with, by ensuring that appropriate procedures are in place.

Inspectors from my Department undertake a continuous and comprehensive system of compliance visits to passenger ports and also undertake ship inspections, to ensure that effective security regimes, in accordance with the Directions, are maintained. They are empowered to take enforcement action against harbour/ship operators if the required standards are not being met.

Following the events of 11 September 2001, the UK's maritime passenger industry was required to operate in accordance with increased levels of security requirements. These increased measures are kept under constant review.

Consideration has also been given to additional initiatives. This work has been undertaken within Whitehall and has included, for the first time, offering general security advice to non-passenger ships and non-AMSA ports.

Nuclear Materials (Transportation)

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the condition of railway lines leading to nuclear power stations. [29497]

Mr. Jamieson: Maintenance of railway track leading to nuclear power stations which forms part of the Railtrack controlled infrastructure is the responsibility of Railtrack. The Health and Safety Executive (HSE), through its HM Railways Inspectorate (HMRI), regulates health and safety on the railways. HMRI currently has a focus on track maintenance issues as one of its mandatory inspection programmes. HSE has advised me that HMRI is not aware of any specific problems at present with the condition of track leading to nuclear power stations.

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the requirements are for local authorities to prepare emergency plans for incidents involving trains carrying nuclear materials. [29498]

Mr. Jamieson: The responsibility to prepare emergency plans for transport of nuclear material by rail rests principally with the train operator, facility owner and infrastructure controller. They have a duty under The Packaging, Labelling and Carriage of Radioactive Material by Rail Regulations 1996 (RAMRail) to have emergency arrangements and to co-operate with each other so as to ensure effective co-ordination of their respective safety systems and procedures. Also under the Radiation (Emergency Preparedness and Public Information) Regulations 2001 (REPPIR), carriers are required to prepare emergency plans and to consult with appropriate local authorities. Some types of consignment are exempt from these regulations, however, including material in packages which are designed and tested to meet severe accident conditions, and small quantities of material which present a very limited risk.

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many incidents there have been where flasks carrying radioactive material on trains have been found to be over the permitted radiation level, broken down by location and level of radiation. [29488]

Mr. Jamieson: Such incidents are included in the annual reports to which I referred the hon. Member in my reply of 21 January 2002, Official Report, column 576W.

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the incidents in which trains carrying (a) radioactive material and (b) other nuclear materials have been involved which resulted in release of their materials in the north-west of England in the last six months. [30635]

Mr. Jamieson: There have been no such incidents.

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the Department's definition is of 'no significant radiological safety implication', as used in the report, Radiological Consequences Resulting from Accidents and Incidents involving the Transport of Radioactive Materials in the UK-200 Review, published in October 2001. [30555]

Mr. Jamieson: There is no formal definition of "significant" in the context of this report. A significant radiological consequence would be if radiation exposures approach or exceed the statutory limits. The radiological consequences listed in the report are much lower than this and are therefore not considered significant.

Train Protection Systems

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what percentage of trains using Paddington station have (a) ATP and (b) TPWS in place. [30309]

Mr. Jamieson: Train protection systems are operational on all train services using Paddington station. First Great Western and Heathrow Express services are fitted with Automatic Train Protection (ATP) and Virgin Cross Country and Thames Trains services are fitted with the Train Protection and Warning Systems (TPWS).

Council Tax Enforcement

Andy King: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many officials responsible for the policy for council tax enforcement in his Department have, as part of their training and information gathering, (a) visited a money advice centre, a magistrates court and the High Court when they are hearing cases for committal for council tax arrears and (b) discussed the difficulties with council tax application forms with the applicants. [29533]

Dr. Whitehead: No such visits have been made. However, officials are in regular contact with the Lord Chancellor's Department, the Local Government Association and local authorities about enforcement matters. Last November, officials also met with representatives of the Zacchaeus 2000 Trust to discuss committal for local tax debts and are happy to meet other organisations and advice centres to discuss such matters.

Local Tax Arrears

Andy King: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many warrants for committal to prison owing to local tax arrears were issued in 1999. [29535]

Dr. Whitehead: Statistics on committal orders are published in The Institute of Public Finance Accountancy (CIPFA) Revenue Collection Statistics.

For 1999–2000, their estimated total number of orders obtained but postponed on payment terms was 22,119, based on grossed up actual figures provided by 253 of 376 local authorities.

For the 253 responding authorities, the actual number of people committed to prison was 117.

Local Authority Statutory Notices

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what recent guidance his Department has issued on the publication of statutory notices by local authorities in the local press. [30217]

Mr. Byers: None. We issued general guidance about planning notices in Circular 15/92, "Publicity for Planning Applications". This includes advice on the categories of planning application that must be advertised in local newspapers. Separate requirements to advertise planning appeals and called-in planning applications are set out in secondary legislation. The Government's recently published planning Green Paper "Planning: Delivering a Fundamental Change" indicates our intention to retain the requirement on planning authorities to advertise certain applications in the local press. However, we will review the requirement to publicise planning appeals and called-in planning applications with the aim of encouraging greater community participation.

Allotments

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what recent guidance his Department has issued on consultation on (a) supplementary planning guidance and (b) the change of use of allotments; [30218]

(2) what recent guidance his Department has issued to local authorities on the change of use of allotments. [30219]

Mr. Byers: In March 1998, my Department issued guidance to local authorities to ensure that the availability of statutory allotments are actively promoted before applications for consent to their disposal are submitted. We have since consulted on draft Planning Policy Guidance note: (PPG) 17, which sets out revised criteria against which applications for consent to dispose of statutory allotments are to be determined. We will shortly be issuing the revised guidance to the Government offices and local authorities.

My Department, in conjunction with the Local Government Association, published: "Growing in the community: A good practice guide for the management of allotments" in June 2001. This guide provides comprehensive advice and good practice for local authorities on all aspects of allotment management. My Department has also recently published "Allotments: a plot holders guide", which provides advice to current and potential allotment plot holders.

Bus Ticketing

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to improve the inter-changeability of bus tickets on routes served by different bus companies. [30220]

Mr. Byers: We wish to encourage joint ticketing schemes between bus operators, aimed at making life easier for bus users.

Last year my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, on the advice of the Director General of Fair Trading, made an Order to exempt multi-operator ticketing schemes from having to be notified individually to the Office of Fair Trading. Any such scheme that meets the terms of the Order is therefore automatically exempted.

I am, however, aware of the concern expressed both by bus operators and local authorities about the terms of the ticketing schemes block exemption. It would be highly undesirable if operators felt compelled to abandon existing worthwhile initiatives, or were deterred from developing new ones. My right hon. Friend the Minister for Transport has written to the Director General of Fair Trading, emphasising the importance that we place upon the continuation of sensible, multi-operator ticketing schemes that have proved popular with the travelling public.

Rural Bus Challenge

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he will announce the results of the 2001 Rural Bus Challenge Competition. [31138]

Ms Keeble: I am pleased to announce today approval of the 58 projects listed which were submitted as bids by local authorities in this competition. This follows careful consideration of the 107 bids totalling more than three times the funding available submitted by authorities. Funding for the successful bids will total £20.5 million.

Refrigerator Disposal Costs

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what arrangements he has made with regard to the allocation of the adjustment to the Environmental, Protective and Cultural Services block, announced in the provisional local government finance settlement, to cover the cost of implementing refrigerator disposal regulations. [29117]

Mr. Byers: Pursuant to my answer of 22 January 2002, Official Report, column 718W, £6 million has been added to the upper tier sub-block of the Environmental, Protective and Cultural Services Standard Spending Assessment for 2002–03 for the costs of implementing refrigerator disposal regulations for the period 1 January 2002 to 31 March 2002.

Ozone Depleting Substances

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions whether he intends to match the costs in the next financial year to Hertfordshire county council in complying with EC Regulation 2037/2000 on ozone depleting substances. [29360]

Mr. Meacher: I have been asked to reply.

In December we announced a payment of £6 million funding for local authorities to cover their costs until March 2002. We are continuing to assess the impacts of the regulation and will determine what further action is required beyond that.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Foreign Language Programmes

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what plans she has to encourage the provision of foreign language programmes on independently owned (a) television channels and (b) radio stations; [29094]

(2) what responsibility her Department has for the provision of foreign language (a) television and (b) radio within the United Kingdom; [29093]

(3) what recent representations her Department has received from (a) right hon. and hon. Members and (b) others on the provision of foreign language television and radio in the United Kingdom. [29092]

Dr. Howells: My Department has no responsibility for the provision of foreign language television or radio and the Government have no plans to intervene in the UK market for such services. The Independent Television Commission and the Radio Authority are responsible for regulating television and radio programme services, including foreign language services, provided from places in the UK.

I have received one recent representation on this subject from the right hon. Member for Kensington and Chelsea (Mr. Portillo) about the withdrawal of Spanish, Italian and German channels by a cable operator. I understand that members of the public have very occasionally raised the issue with my Department.

Departmental Expenditure (Publications)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what her estimate is of the expenditure of her Department on newspapers, magazines and periodicals in each of the last four years. [30086]

Dr. Howells: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport spend was as follows:

Type of publication	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02
Newspapers	9,135	8,747	10,800	12,221	13,432
Magazines	8,440	7,015	7,371	6,917	8,068
Periodicals	8,167	7,447	10,185	6,498	6,734
Total	25,742	23,209	28,356	25,636	28,234

Football

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) when she last met representatives of the Football Association to discuss matters relating to violence associated with the game on and off the pitch, and if she will make a statement; [29749]

(2) what recent representations she has received about violence associated with football, and if she will make a statement; [29750]

(3) when she last met representatives of the Football Association to discuss the monitoring of legislation concerning travel by supporters to overseas games, and if she will make a statement. [29751]

Mr. Caborn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received 14 representations concerning football-related violence over the last five months.

The Secretary of State maintains a close relationship with the Football Association. She has not met the FA recently to discuss football-related violence or the monitoring of legislation concerning travel by supporters to overseas games as this is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary.

The Government have placed extensive legislation for tackling football hooliganism at the disposal of the police and the courts. The scenes witnessed in Cardiff and other grounds should be placed in a proper context. Our stadia remain among the safest and most secure in the world and there is no evidence of a return to the mass hooliganism that marred our national game in previous decades. The Government are not complacent. My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary liaises closely with the police and football authorities in monitoring supporter behaviour and in assessing the impact and effectiveness of current legislation.

The measures introduced by the Football (Disorder) Act 2000 empower the courts to impose banning orders on individuals who have previously caused or contributed to violence or disorder at football matches, where there are reasonable grounds to believe that making an order would help to prevent violence or disorder at future matches.

The imposition of sporting sanctions for misbehaviour by players on the field of play is the responsibility of the football authorities. However, the Football (Disorder) Act 2000 applies to all individuals, irrespective of their profession.

Analogue Switch-off

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Uxbridge, of 16 January 2002, Official Report, column 340W, on analogue switch-off, how access to digital equipment is determined. [30009]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 24 January 2002]: As a target indicator of affordability, 95 per cent. of consumers should have access to equipment capable of receiving digital television services. The Digital Television Action Plan includes a specific action to conduct a comprehensive review of progress towards digital switchover, with particular reference to the accessibility, availability and affordability tests announced in September 1999. The review will refine the tests and report on how progress towards meeting them is to be measured. A first report is due by the end of March 2002.

Olympic Games

Gillian Merron: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans the Government have to make a UK bid for the 2012 Olympic Games; and if she will make a statement. [31315]

Mr. Caborn: The decision on whether or not to launch a UK bid to host the Olympic Games is a matter principally for the British Olympic Association which has yet to decide whether to bid for the 2012 Olympic Games. It is current BOA policy that any UK bid should be based on London. The BOA's eventual decision will inevitably be influenced by public opinion both in London and across the UK, together with the views of London and central Governments.

The BOA has formed a key stakeholders group involving my Department, the Greater London Authority, UK Sport and Sport England to discuss the prospects for a London bid. The key stakeholders group have appointed Arup consultants to undertake a cost-benefit analysis of bidding for and, if successful, staging an Olympic Games in London. The consultancy will form part of the on-going work that is assessing the viability and merits of a potential London Olympic bid for 2012.

Arup consultants were appointed following a competitive tendering process. I have placed copies of the Invitation to Tender in the House Libraries. The consultancy will be jointly funded by DCMS, UK Sport, the London Development Agency and the British Olympic Association.

This consultancy will include an assessment of the costs to public and private funds of bidding and—if successful—of staging a London Games. It will also contain a breakdown of the potential benefits that would accrue from the bid process and through subsequently hosting the event.

The consultants are due to present their completed report to the funding bodies in early May. A decision on whether or not to publish the report will be taken once the extent of commercially confidential information it contains is known.

DEFENCE

Armed Forces Pay Review Body

Mr. Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the appointment to the Armed Forces Pay Review Body of a replacement for Vice Admiral Sir Toby Frere KCB. [31313]

Mr. Hoon: I am pleased to announce that I have appointed Vice Admiral Sir (Anthony) Peter Woodhead KCB to a three-year term. This appointment has been conducted in accordance with the Office of the Commissioner for Public Appointment's guidance on appointments to public bodies.

Atomic Weapons Establishment

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many United States personnel have visited the Atomic Weapons Establishment in each of the last three years; and from which United States departments and establishments these visitors have come. [28257]

Mr. Hoon: The number of United States personnel who visited the Atomic Weapons Establishment in each of the last three years is shown as follows:

1999—there were 100 visits involving 365 different people

2000—there were 98 visits involving 384 different people

2001—there were 87 visits involving 296 different people

(in each year a number of personnel visited more than once).

These visitors were from the following State departments or establishments:

Alme Associates—Government Contractor

Regulatory Impact Assessments

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many regulatory impact assessments have been produced by his Department since August 2001; and if he will list those produced (a) following initial consultation with affected parties about the most appropriate methodology for assessing costs and other impacts and (b) which set out full commercial impacts, including profitability, employment, consumer prices and competitiveness, as recommended in Good Policy Making. [28399]

Dr. Moonie: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office gave him on 17 January 2002, Official Report, column 483W.

Joint Working Groups

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the Joint Working Groups operating under the auspices of the 1958 Mutual Defence Agreement; and how many Joint Working Group meetings have been hosted in the (a) UK and (b) USA under the auspices of the 1958 Mutual Defence Agreement since May 1997. [29957]

Dr. Moonie: The Joint Working Groups currently in existence under the terms of the 1958 Mutual Defence Agreement are:

Joint Working Group	Title
6	Radiation Simulation and Kinetic Effects
9	Energetic Materials
22	Nuclear Materials
23	Warhead Electrical Components and Technologies
28	Non-Nuclear Materials
29	Nuclear Counter-Terrorism Technology
30	Facilities
31	Nuclear Weapons Engineering
32	Nuclear Warhead Physics
34	Computational Technology
36	Aircraft, Missile and Space System Hardening
37	Laboratory Plasma Physics
39	Manufacturing Practices
41	Nuclear Warhead Accident Response
42	Nuclear Weapon Code Development
43	Nuclear Weapon Environment and Damage Effects

Since May 1997 the number of meetings connected with Joint Working Groups which have taken place in the UK and the US is:

	Meetings in the UK	Meetings in the US
1997 (May onwards)	64	79
1998	78	148
1999	78	123
2000	66	116
2001	61	120

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which United States departments and establishments were represented at the October 2000 meeting of JOWOG 32. [29958]

Dr. Moonie: The JOWOG 32 meeting at AWE in October 2000 was attended by representatives from the Los Alamos National Laboratory, the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory and the Sandia National Laboratory, Albuquerque.

Gulf Veterans Medical Assessment Programme

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what level of medical examination and assessment is required from those former and existing service personnel who are on the Gulf Veterans Medical Assessment Programme. [30433]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence's Gulf Veterans' Medical Assessment Programme (GVMAP) was established in 1993. As at 17 January 2002, 3,276 patients had been seen by GVMAP physicians. The GVMAP is located at St. Thomas's Hospital, London, and is open to all present and former service men and women or MOD civilians who believe that their health has suffered as a direct result of the 1990–91 Gulf conflict. Its two main purposes are:

to investigate patients' medical complaints, make a diagnosis as far as is possible, and recommend appropriate management, or provide reassurance if no illness is found; to collate statistical information in an anonymised form as a resource for researchers.

Patients are referred to the GVMAP by their doctors. There is no pre-determined medical criterion they need to satisfy before being seen. Patients are given a full medical examination by GVMAP physicians and a range of physical tests; investigations routinely conducted for all patients include urinalysis, haematological, biochemical, biological and serological tests, ultrasound scan of the abdomen and electrocardiography. These tests are carried out on the day of the appointment and take approximately four hours. Additional investigations and/or referrals to other consultants/specialists may be required. This is decided either during the initial appointment or in follow-up consultations if deemed necessary. Since May 2001, a small number of patients have been seen at a clinic held every two months and run by the head of the GVMAP in Northallerton, North Yorkshire. Patients are given the same assessment as they would have received had they come to London.

The clinical findings from the first 1,000 service and ex-service patients seen by GVMAP physicians were published in the British Medical Journal on 30 January 1999. A paper on the clinical findings from the second 1,000 service and ex-service patients seen was published in the Journal of the Royal Army Medical Corps on 29 June 2001. Copies of both papers—as too is a great deal more information of interest to Gulf veterans—are readily available from the Ministry of Defence's Gulf Veterans' Illnesses Unit (Freephone 0800 169 4495) and on my Department's website at: www.mod.uk/issues/gulfwar/index.html. A clinical analysis of the first 3,000 service and ex-service veterans who have attended the GVMAP is being prepared for peer-review and publication in a scientific journal.

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to put the Gulf Veterans Medical Assessment Programme into independent administration. [30434]

Dr. Moonie: None. Medical Assessment Programme physicians already have complete clinical independence from the Ministry of Defence.

Accommodation

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much money has been allocated (a) to improve armed forces single living accommodation and (b) to upgrade married quarters in the last three years. [25704]

Dr. Moonie: Over the last three financial years we have spent £283 million on upgrading single living accommodation, and £167 million on service family accommodation (SFA). A new modernisation programme for single living accommodation was announced in March 2001 by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence. Worth some £1 billion, its aim is the upgrading of over 30,000 bed spaces within five years of the appointment of a prime contractor. The Defence Housing Executive has a continuing programme to upgrade the core of stock of service families accommodation by the end of 2005.

Medically Downgraded Personnel

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) Army and (b) RAF personnel were medically downgraded on 1 April 2001; how many of these have postings which would require them to be operational or on rapid reaction duties if fit; and how many of these in each category are (i) awaiting an initial medical consultation, (ii) awaiting treatment following an initial medical consultation and (iii) receiving treatment. [28729]

Dr. Moonie: As at 1 April 2001, there were 9,635 medically downgraded personnel in the Army, many of whom would be deployable on military operations although not at the front line. At the same date, there were 3,888 medically downgraded personnel in the RAF, who were considered unfit for any type of deployment. Information is not held centrally on the numbers of medically downgraded personnel who have postings which would require them to deploy overseas on operations or rapid reaction duties, or on the numbers receiving treatment, awaiting an initial medical consultation or awaiting treatment following an initial medical consultation. Such information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Washington Treaty

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the practical consequences resulting from bringing terrorism countermeasures within the remit of Article 5 of the Washington treaty and how this may affect NATO's commitment to guarantee the security of WEU member countries; and if he will make a statement. [29630]

Mr. Hoon: The decision to invoke Article 5 following the terrorist attacks of 11 September was consistent with NATO's process of adaptation since the end of the cold war, and the alliance will continue adapting its capabilities to reflect changes in the security environment.

All WEU member states and associate members are also members of NATO; the security of these states is guaranteed by NATO under Article 5 of the Washington treaty.

Nancekuke

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 16 January 2002, Official Report, column 317W, on Nancekuke, whether there are records of equipment and materials being brought from overseas for use, storage and disposal at CDE Nancekuke. [29965]

Dr. Moonie: There are no surviving records which detail the origin of equipment and materials used at the Chemical Defence Establishment, Nancekuke.

However, records summarising the technical programme undertaken at Nancekuke indicate that in 1959, CN (chloroacetophenone) of both Belgian and Italian origin was transferred to Nancekuke. Some of the CN of Belgian origin was returned to Belgium during 1962 to 1967.

Additional anecdotal evidence also implies that some of the nerve agent production plant built at Nancekuke contained equipment originating from Germany.

MOD Vehicles

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 21 January 2002, Official Report, column 555W, what criteria are laid down whereby operational requirements for the purchase of vehicles by the MOD police mean that the choice is not subject to competition. [30558]

Dr. Moonie: Purchases of vehicles for the Ministry of Defence Police are made on the basis of obtaining best value for money. The MOD police can make a request for a particular make and model of vehicle for specific operational requirements. Each request is scrutinised and considered on its individual merits. Where no competition takes place, we would still expect to secure discounted prices based on wider purchasing arrangements secured in a competitive environment. Typically requests for specific vehicles do not exceed 6 per year.

HEALTH

Hospital Developments

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects each of the 12 hospital developments, announced on 15 February, to be completed. [10790]

Mr. Hutton: The table shows the current indicative timetables for the 12 new hospital developments which will be taken forward this year as announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 15 February 2001.

Trust	Capital value (£ million)	Anticipated date of contract signing	Anticipated operational date
University Hospital Birmingham	291	Autumn 2003	Spring 2008

Wakefield and Pontefract	164	Summer 2004	Summer 2007
Whipps Cross—Forest Healthcare	184	Spring 2004	Summer 2008

Private Beds

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many private beds have been used by the NHS in the last five years. [13603]

Mr. Hutton: According to data collected from independent healthcare providers by the Independent Healthcare Association, since November 2000 at least 75,000 patients have been treated in the independent sector, paid for by the national health service. This figure includes out-patient appointments, day cases and in-patient treatment. A breakdown by type of operation will shortly be placed in the Library.

Operation Cancellations

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many operations have been cancelled in each quarter since 1997. [15062]

Mr. Hutton: Data are collected on the number of operations cancelled at the last minute. The latest published figures are for Quarter 1 2001–02. Copies of quarterly statistics on cancelled operations by health authority for the years requested are available in the Library.

MMR Vaccinations (Buckinghamshire)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of eligible children were vaccinated with the MMR vaccine in South Buckinghamshire in (a) 1998–99, (b) 1999–2000 and (c) 2000–01. [27118]

Ms Blears: The information available about children immunised against measles, mumps and rubella is contained in the Statistical Bulletin "NHS Immunisation Statistics, England: 2000–01". A copy of the bulletin is in the Library and can also be found on the Department of Health website www.doh.gov.uk/public/sb0121.htm.

Hospital Waiting Lists (Buckinghamshire)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the percentage was of patients waiting for in-patient treatment in the South Buckinghamshire health authority on 1 January in each of the years 1997 to 2002. [27117]

Ms Blears: Information is not available relating to the 1 January each year, nor for South Buckinghamshire health authority. Information is available on the total number of patients waiting at the end of each quarter in Buckinghamshire health authority as shown in the table. Information for the third quarter of this year is not yet available.

Number of patients waiting in Buckinghamshire health authority

Quarter 3	Number
1997–98	16,154
1998–99	14,679
1999–2000	13,854
2000–01	13,535

Hospital Treatment Costs

Ian Lucas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average cost is to the national health service of treating an in-patient in a national health service hospital for one week. [26744]

Mr. Hutton: No information is kept centrally on the average costs of an in-patient week in hospital; the data are collected by condition. The cost of any stay will vary due to the nature of the condition being treated, the age of the patient and any pre-existing conditions that the patient may have.

Cost information on in-patient, day case and out-patient treatments can be found on the Department's website www.doh.gov.uk. Copies of the publication reference costs 2000 are available in the Library.

NHS Dentistry

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many vacancies for new NHS dental patients are available in the Gosport constituency. [27152]

Ms Blears: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Waiting Lists

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which trusts have more than 10 per cent. of patients waiting on in-patient lists placed on suspended lists and more than 2 per cent. of patients waiting more than 12 months on in-patient lists; and which of these trusts have been investigated by the Department of Health for waiting list irregularities in the light of recommendations from the National Audit Office. [27366]

Mr. Hutton: The 13 trusts referred to in the National Audit Office report "Inappropriate adjustments to NHS waiting lists", which had more than 10 per cent. of patients waiting on in-patient waiting lists placed on suspended lists and more than 2 per cent. of patients waiting more than 12 months on in-patient waiting lists, are as listed.

The Royal United Hospital Bath NHS trust
Epsom and St. Helier NHS trust
Isle of Wight Healthcare NHS trust
Nuffield Orthopaedic Centre NHS trust
Countess of Chester Hospital NHS trust
Dartford and Gravesham NHS trust
The Royal Liverpool and Broadgreen University Hospitals NHS trust
Wrightington Wigan and Leigh NHS trust
Good Hope Hospital NHS trust
Wirral Hospital NHS trust
West Suffolk Hospitals NHS trust
The Royal Devon and Exeter Healthcare NHS trust
Winchester and Eastleigh Healthcare NHS trust.

Regional offices regularly monitor suspension rates of all trusts as part of the performance management function. Since the NAO report on 19 December, regional offices have been reviewing the position of the 13 noted trusts.

Emergency Contraception

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in which areas the morning-after pill is available to (a) girls aged 14 and 15, (b) girls aged 12 and 13 and (c) girls under-12 without a doctor's prescription; and what measures are in place in each such area to address issues of child abuse. [28208]

Yvette Cooper: All emergency contraception supplied to under-16s is a prescription only medicine (POM). This is provided under medical supervision which includes other health professionals supplying the POM product under patient group directions. Information collected centrally of the number or prescriptions for emergency hormonal contraception dispensed in family planning clinics and prescriptions dispensed in the community by community pharmacists and dispensing doctors in England is included in my reply to the hon. Member on 23 January 2002, Official Report, column 965W.

Health professionals providing contraception to under-16s do so within a legal framework established in 1986. This involves assessing the young person's competence to understand the choices they are making and whether the treatment is in their best interests. Health professionals, like any other professional whose work brings them into contact with children and families, should follow the Government's "Working Together to Safeguard Children" child protection guidance. This guidance sets out how all agencies and professionals should work together to promote children's welfare and protect them from abuse and neglect. It is intended to provide a national framework within which agencies and professionals at a local level—individually and jointly—draw up and agree upon their own more detailed ways of working together.

Bristol Royal Infirmary

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money has been set aside to compensate the children who survived the Bristol heart case affair. [27881]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 17 January 2002]: All claims for compensation are assessed individually, on their merits. Any compensation payments made in relation to cardiac surgery at the Bristol Royal Infirmary will be handled in accordance with the arrangements in place for all other clinical negligence claims against national health service trusts and health authorities.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases where children were left mentally disabled resulting from the Bristol heart cases (a) have been settled and (b) are outstanding. [27880]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 17 January 2002]: There have been a total of 61 claims made in relation to children who are alleged to have suffered injury following cardiac surgery at Bristol Royal Infirmary. In two of these cases legal proceedings have been issued. Admissions of liability have been made in two other cases, but neither of these were subject to court proceedings. 24 cases have either been withdrawn or are unlikely to proceed. In the remaining 33 cases solicitors have been asked to provide further details.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money has been paid out to date by way of compensation to families resulting from the Bristol heart cases. [27882]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 17 January 2002]: A total of £1,900,000 has so far been paid out to date as compensation for claims relating to cardiac surgery at the Bristol Royal Infirmary.

Fou[illegible]n Hospitals

Ms Walley: To ask [illegible] Secretary of State for Health what process will be used to select managers for the proposed foundation hospitals. [29399]

Mr. Hutton: Where appointments are necessary the normal national health service practices, based on fair and open competition, will be used.

Health Spending

Derek Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate health spending per head of population by health authority in (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02. [29318]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 22 January 2002]: The expenditure by weighted head of population for each English health authority area for 2000–01 is shown in the table. Expenditure estimates for 2001–02 are not yet available.

Notes:

1. In many health authorities there are factors which distort the expenditure per head. These include:

(i) the health authority acting in a lead capacity to commission health care or fund training on behalf of other health bodies;

(ii) asset revaluations in NHS trusts being funded through health authorities; and

(iii) some double counting of expenditure between health authorities and primary care trusts within the health authority area.

2. Expenditure per head cannot therefore be reliably compared between health authorities.

3. Allocations per weighted head of population provide a much more reliable measure to identify differences between funding of health authorities.

4. Expenditure is taken from health authority and primary care trust summarisation forms which are prepared on a resource basis and therefore differ from cash allocations in the year. The expenditure is the total spent by the health authority and by the primary care trusts within each health authority area. The majority of General

Dental Services expenditure is not included in the health authority or primary care trust accounts and is separately accounted for by the Dental Practice Board.

5. Health authorities and primary care trusts should account for their expenditure on a gross basis. This results in an element of double counting where one body acts as the main commissioner and is then reimbursed by other bodies. The effect of this double counting within the answer cannot be identified.

Napp Pharmaceuticals

Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health following the Competition Commission Appeal Tribunal's upholding of the Office of Fair Trading's findings against Napp Pharmaceuticals, what assessment he has made of the extent of similar abuses and their cost to the NHS; and if he will make a statement. [28705]

Ms Blears [holding answer 21 January 2002]: I will write to my hon. Friend with the information requested.

SCOTLAND

Departmental Staffing

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will make a statement on the change in the number of civil servants working within the Scotland Office in the last 12 months. [30311]

Mr. Foulkes: At 31 March 2001 the Department had 107 staff in post. It currently has 114. Both of these figures are within the staffing levels planned for the Scotland Office in July 1999.

ADVOCATE-GENERAL

Devolution

David Cairns: To ask the Advocate-General what criteria she takes into account in deciding to intervene in devolution issues; and what consideration she gives to the cost to public funds. [30556]

The Advocate-General: The vast majority of cases to date have involved human rights issues. The reasons for intervention will vary according to the circumstances and the criteria are not rigid. In considering intervention I always have very much in mind the need to avoid unnecessary delay in criminal proceedings and the cost of intervention to the public purse. I have taken the view that intervention should not be a routine matter. I might for instance intervene where the case raises human rights issues of serious concern to the Government and I am satisfied that these are more likely to be resolved satisfactorily with my intervention. Experience has shown that the vast majority of devolution issues are disposed of satisfactorily by the courts, without any need for my intervention and consequent public expense. Where cases reach the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, intervention is particularly apt because that is the final authority. But even in these cases my intervention may not be necessary. My role as Advocate-General is not to intervene in cases at any level, at significant public expense, merely because there is an interesting legal point being debated.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Advocate-General on how many occasions she has raised proceedings in the Scottish courts on a devolution issue since the creation of her office. [29335]

The Advocate-General: I have not been responsible for the raising of any devolution issue proceedings in the Scottish courts. All issues concerning the competence of the actings of the Scottish Parliament, or the Scottish Ministers, have been resolved without any need for me to instigate court actions.

Ministerial Duties

David Cairns: To ask the Advocate-General what proposals she has to review the role and function of the Advocate-General. [30554]

The Advocate-General: My role and functions include a legal advisory role as Law Officer and statutory functions under the Scotland Act 1998. I cannot alter these responsibilities but regularly review how I carry them out, and have no current proposals for change. My office was created by Parliament less than three years ago and I have had to establish and develop it, determining what is required to be done and how to do it. In my advisory role, I have worked closely with the other UK Law Officers to ensure the Government get high quality legal advice, essential to their work. I have developed my role under the Scotland Act, in close co-operation with UK Departments, to seek to ensure that the Government have early warning of issues of competence of Bills of the Scottish Parliament or actings of the Scottish Executive, and can engage in constructive dialogue with the Scottish Executive to address them. Establishing and developing a new office of State is an exciting challenge. The creation of my office has also resulted in a Law Officer with Scottish responsibilities being available in the House of Commons for the first time since 1987.

Scots Law

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Advocate-General if she will list occasions she has been requested by the Government to give advice on Scots Law since the general election. [29336]

The Advocate-General: I give Law officers' advice frequently and it is a major part of my work. I am precluded from providing further information because it is a long standing convention, adhered to by successive Governments and enshrined in the Ministerial Code, that neither the fact that the Law Officers have advised on a matter, nor the content of any advice which they may have given, is disclosed outside Government other than in exceptional circumstances. This is to protect the confidentiality of the legal advice given to the Government. I have explained this convention to Parliament on a number of occasions. In addition, my officials in the Office of the Solicitor to the Advocate-General frequently advise Government Departments on Scots Law.

Legislation

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Advocate-General how many Bills of the Scottish Parliament she has referred to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council since the creation of her Office. [29337]

The Advocate-General: Since devolution in July 1999 my officials and I have examined 30 Bills in conjunction with relevant Government Departments at various stages during their progress through the Scottish Parliament in order to ensure that any problem of legislative competence is identified and resolved if possible, in order to try to avoid the need to refer a Bill to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. The Bill may be outwith legal competence in a variety of ways, for example, if it relates to reserved matters, or relates to enactments protected from modification by the Scottish Parliament, or is incompatible with any of the rights of the European Convention on Human Rights or with European Community law. Thus far I am pleased to advise that any problems have been resolved, following legal advice when necessary, and after co-operation and dialogue. As a result I have not referred any Bill so far to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. The existence of the power of referral and the work which is done in connection with that power is an essential part of the devolution settlement.

Departmental Costs

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Advocate-General what the total cost of her Office has been in each year since its creation. [29338]

The Advocate-General: The office of the Advocate-General for Scotland was established on 20 May 1999 and since 1 July 1999 forms part of the Scotland Office with the office of the Secretary of State for Scotland. Not all the costs of the Scotland Office can be separately allocated to each of these two Offices.

Between 20 May and 1 July 1999, the costs of the office of the Advocate-General were paid by the former Scottish Office. From 1 July 1999 to 31 March 2000 the identifiable costs of staff and related administration was £883,326; and in 2000–01 it was £1,265,215. Approximately half of the costs of the office relates to work on litigation and advisory work including the preparation of Bills carried out by lawyers from the Office of the Solicitor to the Advocate-General on behalf of Government Departments other than the Advocate-General.

Court Proceedings

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Advocate-General on how many occasions she has (a) defended and (b) intervened in court proceedings raised by other parties. [29339]

The Advocate-General: I have not defended any actions under the Scotland Act 1998 as none have been raised against me under that Act. I have intervened in 21 court proceedings raised by other parties under the Scotland Act. Over 1,300 devolution issue cases have been intimated to me since May 1999 and my officials and I consider these in conjunction with interested Government Departments. As I have explained to Parliament on a number of occasions I intervene, as a UK Law Officer, only in special circumstances. Most cases are disposed of in the lower courts with no need for my intervention.

Scotland Office Website

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Advocate-General how many hits there were on the Advocate-General's page of the Scotland Office website between the general election and 1 January 2002. [29347]

The Advocate-General: From June 2001 to 31 December 2001, there were 2,493 hits on the Advocate-General's pages of the Scotland Office website.

Law Officers' Advice

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Advocate-General on how many occasions she has been requested by the (a) Attorney-General and (b) Solicitor-General to give advice on a matter of law since the creation of her Office; and if she will list them. [29340]

The Advocate-General: Requests for the Law Officers' advice come from Government Departments and not from the Attorney-General and Solicitor-General for England and Wales. The usual practice is that for requests for advice concerning matters of common interest to the whole United Kingdom, such as the application of European law or human rights issues, I advise jointly with the other United Kingdom Law Officers. Such advice is given frequently. The convention concerning the confidentiality of the Law Officers' advice applies and precludes me from providing details.

Legal Secretariat

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Advocate-General if she will list the Government Departments for whom the Legal Secretariat has provided legal services. [29341]

The Advocate-General: The Legal Secretariat does not provide legal services to Government Departments but assists me in my ministerial duties, such as preparing Law Officers' advice and Cabinet Committee work. The Office of the Solicitor to the Advocate-General provides legal services to most Government Departments. Clients include the Cabinet Office and Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the Home Office, the Department for International Development, the Lord Chancellor's Department, the Department of Trade and Industry, the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, HM Treasury, the Department for Work and Pensions, the Office of Fair Trading, and the Scotland Office itself.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Advocate-General how many (a) advocates and (b) solicitors have been employed in the Legal Secretariat in each year since the creation of her office. [29344]

The Advocate-General: The complement of the Legal Secretariat in each of the years 1999, 2000 and 2001 has been three lawyers, all of whom have been solicitors.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Advocate-General if she will list the matters in which the Legal Secretariat participated in discussions between the UK Government and the Scottish Executive since the general election. [29346]

The Advocate-General: Members of the Legal Secretariat frequently participate in co-ordination meetings of officials involving representatives of the devolved Administrations as well as Government Departments. Such meetings most commonly concern the application of European Law, human rights and the devolution settlement to various subjects.

Court Appearances

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Advocate-General on how many occasions she has appeared in court as Advocate-General since the general election. [29342]

The Advocate-General: Since June 2001 I have personally appeared in court in two cases. The first was Karl Anderson, Alexander Reid and Brian Doherty v. The Scottish Ministers and the Advocate-General for Scotland, which was a human rights challenge to the first Act passed by the Scottish Parliament, the Mental Health (Public Safety and Appeals) (Scotland) Act 1999. This case was heard over four days in the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in July 2001 and followed my appearance personally in the case in the Inner House, heard over several days in May 2000.

The second case was Kenneth Anthony Paton Mills and John Cochrane v. Her Majesty's Advocate and the Advocate-General for Scotland which was heard in the Appeal Court, High Court of Justiciary in August 2001. My interest in this case was to determine questions concerning the interrelationship of the Scotland Act 1998 and the Human Rights Act 1998.

Correspondence

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Advocate-General how many pieces of correspondence her office has answered from non-government sources since the general election. [29343]

The Advocate-General: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Office of the Solicitor to the Advocate-General

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Advocate-General how many (a) advocates and (b) solicitors have been employed in the Office of the Solicitor to the Advocate-General in each year since the creation of her office. [29345]

The Advocate-General: In the years 1999–2000 the complement of the Office of the Solicitor to the Advocate-General was 14 lawyers. In 2001 this increased to 16 lawyers. In each year one lawyer was an advocate and the rest solicitors.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

External Consultants

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was spent by (a) her Department and (b) bodies for which it is responsible on external public relations consultants in each of the last four years. [27388]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Expenditure by the Department on campaign extension activities through external public relations consultancies in the past four years is as follows. Information on expenditure by the Department's agencies is not held centrally.

Year	Campaign	Consultancy	Spend (£000)
1999	Reading and Literacy	Hill and Knowlton	[1]620
2000	Maths Year	COI	16

Market Research

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what expenditure has been incurred by her (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies in each of the last four years on (i) opinion polling, (ii) focus groups and (iii) other forms of market research; and if she will list the surveys commissioned and the purpose of each. [27953]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department commissions tightly focused market research to help develop and evaluate publicity campaigns. The spend in recent years was:

1998–99	1,408,908
1999–2000	1,687,050
2000–01	2,340,222
2001–02[1]	1,256,121

[1] To January 2002

It would be possible to list every one of these research projects only at disproportionate cost. However, some recent campaigns where strategic communications research or creative development research have been commissioned include the drive to widen participation in higher education, by encouraging under-represented groups to take up this option, the promotion of the relevance of science to teenagers, as part of Science Year, the child care recruitment campaign, the campaign to help those adults with basic skills gaps, and the promotion of foundation degrees and modern apprenticeships. This research is subject to the usual strict rules that spending must represent good value for the tax payer and must not be used for party political purposes.

The Department also conducts research to help us understand the education, skills and communication needs of our customers. It has sampled and consulted on the views of teachers, parents and other groups affected by the Department's policies on specific issues. For example, the project "Causes of truancy by pupils of compulsory school age" gathers the views of pupils, parents, school and LEA staff on the causes of truancy and what measures could be taken to address the issue. One of the aims is to examine the issue of absence that is condoned by parents. "A longitudinal study of factors contributing to variations in teacher effectiveness" will investigate the factors which contribute to the effectiveness of teachers at different stages of their career, working in a range of schools in different contexts, and how this changes over time. Part of this study is to track 300 teachers over three years measuring their effectiveness by pupil outcome measures and other qualitative techniques. Again it would not be possible to give details of every project without disproportionate cost.

Information about opinion polls, focus groups and other forms of research commissioned by the Department's agencies and non-departmental public bodies is not held centrally.

Refurbishment

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what her estimate is of the cost of buildings refurbishment carried out by her Department in each of the last four years. [27957]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The estimated cost of buildings refurbishment carried out in my Department in each of the last four years is as follows:

	Estimated cost
2000–01	4,604,749
1999–2000	3,928,406
1998–99	2,970,093
1997–98	[1]—

[1] Unfortunately this information can be provided only at disproportionate cost

Regulatory Impact Assessments

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many regulatory impact assessments have been produced by her Department since August 2001; and if she will list those produced (a) following initial consultation with affected parties about the most appropriate methodology for assessing costs and other impacts and (b) which set out full commercial impacts, including profitability, employment, consumer prices and competitiveness, as recommended in Good Policy Making. [28400]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office, on 17 January 2002, Official Report, column 483W.

Specialist Designation

Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether there is a barrier to a school's PFI partner sponsoring a bid for technology status by that school. [28353]

John Healey: As stated in the criteria set out in the published guidance documents for each specialism, a PFI partner may provide all or part of the £50,000 sponsorship required to support a school's application for designation as a specialist school.

Pupil Mobility

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent research she has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the effect of pupil mobility on educational attainment. [29234]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department and the Nuffield Foundation supported a research project into pupil mobility, its effect on schools and educational attainment, conducted by the Migration Research Unit at University College London. The project was concluded in June 2000 and the final report published in September 2000. The first part of the research 'Pupil Mobility in Schools' is available from DfES Publications. The second part is available in full on the internet at www.geog.ucl.ac.uk/mru.

Teachers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, pursuant to her answer of 5 December 2001, Official Report, column 426W, if she will break down the figures by vacancies in (a) nursery, (b) primary, (c) secondary and (d) special schools; and what the equivalent figures are for England. [30127]

Mr. Timms: Full-time teacher vacancies in maintained nursery, primary, secondary and special schools reported by the Buckinghamshire local authority were as follows:

	January 1998	January 2001
Primary	10	21
Secondary	14	33
Special	11	5
Total	35	59

Full-time teacher vacancies in maintained nursery, primary, secondary and special schools in England were as follows:

	January 1998	January 2001
Nursery	69	103
Primary	1,322	2,007
Secondary	968	2,586
Special	233	280
Total	2,592	4,976

Specialist Schools

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will publish her latest estimates of the percentage of secondary school pupils who are in specialist schools in each local education authority area in England; and if she will make a statement. [29218]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 23 January 2002]: The available information is shown in the table.

Annual Schools' Census

The provisional 2002 data will be available in late spring.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many specialist schools have received assistance from public funds in order to raise the money needed to submit a development plan; how many have received assistance of (a) £1 to £5,000, (b) £5,001 to £15,000, (c) £15,001 to £25,000, and (d) over £25,000; and if she will make a statement. [29219]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 23 January 2002]: No public sector funds may be counted towards the sponsorship supporting a specialist school application. No data are held centrally on the extent of public support—such as from LEAs—for the preparation of applications for specialist school status.

Independent Schools

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the independent schools removed from the register of independent schools in each year from 1996. [30409]

Mr. Timms: Since 1996 the following schools have been deleted from the register of independent schools as a result of failure to comply with a Notice of Complaint:

1998

Jameah Islameyah, East Sussex

1999

Grange House, Herefordshire

Kensington International, London

2000

Bright Sparks Theatre School, London

Al Jamea Al Islamia, Manchester

2001

Thomas Francis, London.

Correspondence

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she will reply to the hon. Member for Harrogate and Knaresborough's question of 18 December 2001 concerning asset management plans. [30301]

John Healey: A reply was issued to the hon. Member on 17 January 2002, Official Report, column 446W.

Revenue Funding

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the total amount of revenue funding available for children in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools has been in the last five years in (i) Durham, (ii) South Tyneside and (iii) Hampshire. [30442]

Mr. Timms: The following tables contain the information requested:

Notes:

1. The figures reflect Education SSA (primary and secondary sub-blocks respectively) plus all school related revenue grants in the DfES's DEL relevant aged 5–10 (primary) and 11–15 (secondary).

2. The primary and secondary grant figures include notional allocations for those grants in support of more than one sector.

3. Pupil numbers underlying the £ per pupil figures are those underlying the SSA settlement calculations (primary and secondary sub-blocks respectively.

4. Real terms figures are calculated using GDP deflators published by the Treasury 20 December 2001.

5. 2001–02 figures are provisional as decisions on some funding allocations have yet to be finalised. The figures are thus liable to be revised later in the year.

6. Figures rounded to nearest £10. Difference figures may not sum due to rounding.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Translation Services

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what translation services he ensures are available to (a) Benefits Agency and (b) Employment Service staff in (i) England and (ii) Staffordshire. [13498]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: In both the Benefits Agency and the Employment Service, throughout Great Britain, we will provide an interpreter for customers who do not speak English and who either cannot or do not wish to provide their own interpreter. This service is provided through either a multilingual member of staff; local services, for example, community interpreters, local authority services or colleges; or the telephone interpreting service provided by Language Line.

We also have an internal translation service for translating documents both into English and into foreign languages. This is supplemented by a rapid translation service on a text-to-speech basis when a quick translation of a document in a foreign language is needed. Local offices also have the freedom to use community based translation services if they are available and convenient.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will quantify the public service agreement target for employment over the economic cycle. [19049]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 11 December 2001, Official Report, columns 777–79W.

Jobcentre Plus

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the national staffing requirements for Jobcentre Plus, and the average wage per employee will be; what the combined national staffing requirements were for the Benefits Agency and Employment Service, and the average wage per employee; and what will happen to employees that are surplus to the Jobcentre Plus staffing requirements. [24222]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Currently some 112,000 employees work in the Benefits Agency and the Employment Service. The average salary per employee is approximately £15,080.

We will begin rolling out Jobcentre Plus nationally from 2002. Local staffing requirements for Jobcentre Plus will be determined as part of this process. The chief executives of the Benefits Agency and the Employment Service wrote to all staff on 23 April 2001. They reassured staff that a key aim in developing plans for Jobcentre Plus and the Pension Service would be to enable all current staff to have a job in the new organisations or one of the other agencies in the Department.

David Cairns: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what is the value of the extra investment in help to the unemployed represented by the new Jobcentre Plus pilot offices in Inverclyde. [25418]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: £122 million has been invested in the current financial year to establish the Jobcentre Plus Pathfinder offices. Because much of this investment, for example on IT and communications, has been spent on the Pathfinder offices collectively it is not possible to identify the total investment separately in respect of the offices in Inverclyde. However, a total of around £3.6 million has been spent on improving the physical environment of the Greenock and Port Glasgow Pathfinder offices.

Industrial Action

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the number of letters that (a) his Department and its agencies, (b) Employment Service offices, (c) Benefits Agency offices and (d) Jobcentre Plus offices have written to individuals citing delays in (i) interviews, (ii) processing claims and (iii) claim reviews, which have resulted from the current industrial action. [25222]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Information is not available in the format requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The contingency plans put in place during the dispute, allied to the fact that the great majority of staff are working normally, have enabled us to maintain a near normal service with minimal delays.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the number of complaints that (a) his Department and its agencies, (b) Employment Service offices, (c) Benefits Agency offices and (d) Jobcentre Plus offices have received which relate to the current industrial action. [25225]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: It is not possible to estimate the number of complaints received at area or regional level as a result of the industrial action, as these data have not been collected separately during the course of the dispute.

Centrally, where data are available, we have no record of any such complaints being received from customers.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) if he will estimate the number of incapacity benefit claimants who have been required to attend repeat Benefits Agency medical assessment in each of the last 12 months; [25223]

(2) if he will estimate the number of incapacity benefit claimants who have lost their entitlement as a result of a repeat Benefits Agency medical assessment in each of the last 12 months; [25224]

(3) if he will (a) estimate the number of incapacity benefit claimants transferred to a different benefit as a result of a repeat Benefits Agency medical assessment in each of the last 12 months and (b) provide a breakdown by each individual benefit to which they have been transferred. [25221]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Information is not available in the format requested.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the arrangements for transfer to incapacity benefit of unemployed persons of working age who are involved in one or more sickness incidents during a year. [29069]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 23 January 2002]: A person who has been awarded jobseeker's allowance and is unable to work because of sickness may choose to remain on jobseeker's allowance for up to two weeks. This easement means that people who are incapable of work for short periods of time do not have to change the benefit they are claiming. It can normally be used on two occasions in each year of a job-seeking period. Where the easement does not apply an unemployed person who becomes incapable of work can claim incapacity benefit supported by medical evidence.

We are now delivering a new business, Jobcentre Plus, to help all people of working age make the most of their opportunities. In the past, many people were moved on to incapacity benefit with little or no help to make sure they got the right level of support to enable them to get back into work, where they are ready and able to do so.

All people making new and repeat claims to incapacity benefit in Jobcentre Plus pathfinder offices are offered a work-focused meeting as a condition of receiving benefit. These meetings provide the opportunity for people to discuss their work options, as well as their benefit claim, and to investigate with their personal adviser the practical and financial support that is available to help them return to work.

Lone Mothers

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what action the Government will take to facilitate the provision of (a) housing and (b) council tax benefit to lone mothers raising children on their own and not forming part of a married couple. [25258]

Malcolm Wicks: On 12 December we responded positively and in detail to the Better Regulation Task Force report "Housing Benefit: A Case Study of Lone Parents". Our response set out the measures already under way and those planned to ease lone parents' path back into work and provide security for those for whom work is not an immediate option.

A copy of our response has been placed in the Library and is also available on the Department's website at www.dwp.gov.uk/publications/20001/index/htm.

Mental Health

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to PQ 01/20232 and PQ 01/20233, 8 January 2002, Official Report, column 687W, if he will publish the syllabi of the training programmes mentioned and the advice to medical service doctors. [26452]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: A copy of the contents of the relevant training modules has been placed in the Library.

Newspaper Advertising

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what has been the expenditure of his (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies on newspaper advertising by title in each year since 1997. [26974]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The Department and its agencies use advertising for various reasons ranging from public information and recruitment to advertising opening hours of local offices. For each occasion national and/or regional media may be used as well as hundreds of local papers.

A breakdown of expenditure on newspaper advertising by title could therefore be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

Pension Funds

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what representations he has received concerning the value of pension funds since 1 January 2001. [28198]

Mr. McCartney: The Department has frequent discussions with representatives of the pensions industry which cover a range of issues. We also receive a large number of pieces of correspondence concerning a range of pensions issues.

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average delay was in making payment to state earnings related pension schemes for contributions due in the year to April 2001; what the figure was in each year since the scheme was introduced; and if he will make a statement. [30310]

Mr. McCartney: The information requested is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

ME

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what guidance he has issued to the Benefits Agency concerning the acceptance of a clinical diagnosis of ME as grounds for an entitlement to benefit. [28220]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: We recognise the chronic fatigue syndromes (including ME) as potentially debilitating illnesses. Where a clinical diagnosis of CFS has been made, full account is taken of the resultant care and mobility needs in disability living allowance or its effect on the prescribed activities in the personal capability assessment for incapacity benefits.

New Deal

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what representations he has received on the funding arrangements due to come into voluntary operation on 1 April about the sector option of New Deal. [28060]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 17 January 2002]: New arrangements for funding providers on a formula basis will be introduced throughout the new deal for young people, including the voluntary sector option on 1 April 2002. This approach fulfils the commitments made following the 1999 "Learning to Succeed" White Paper to ensure a common approach to the funding of all post-16 learning.

I have received representations from two organisations on these new arrangements. The Employment Service is continuing discussions on the new funding arrangements with its existing contractors.

Winter Fuel Allowance

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Newbury (Mr. Rendel) of 10 December 2001, Official Report, column 589, how people can apply for backdated winter fuel payments; and whether the procedure differs according to the year to which the claim relates. [28380]

Mr. McCartney: Backdated winter fuel payments are only available for the first three winters of the scheme, 1997–1998, 1998–1999 and 1999–2000. Claim forms are available by either ringing the winter fuel payment helpline on 08459 151515 and requesting one, or from the Department for Work and Pensions' website at www.dwp.gov.uk/winterfuel. The procedure for claiming for each of the three years is the same.

Benefit Systems

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his answer of 12 December 2001, Official Report, columns 896–97W, when the Statutory Instrument referred to was revoked; and for what reason his answer does not refer to the Statutory Instrument currently in force. [28672]

Malcolm Wicks: The Local Government (Best Value) Performance Indicators Order 2000, SI 2000 No. 896 referred to in my answer of 12 December 2001, Official Report, columns 896–97W contains Best Value Performance Indicators for 2000–01. The order was not revoked but was superseded by the Local Government (Best Value) Performance Indicators and Performance Standards Order 2001, SI 2001 No. 724 which contains Best Value Performance Indicators for 2001–02 and is currently in force. My answer did not refer to this statutory instrument because the hon. Member did not ask for details of the Best Value Performance Indicators for the current year.

Stakeholder Pensions

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how often, on average, people with stakeholder pensions make contributions towards their pension. [28969]

Mr. McCartney: The information is not available.

Medical Assessment Services

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on recent changes in the standards for delivery of medical assessment services contracted by his Department. [29072]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 23 January 2002]: Over the last quarter, October to December 2001, service delivery in all key areas of the Medical Services Contract has improved. The volume of examinations which have been completed is significantly higher than in the same period last year and examinations are being arranged more promptly. The proportion of customers seen within 10 minutes of their appointment time has risen, and the number being sent home unseen has reduced. Special needs indicated by customers, such as interpreter services, are being met. The training, medical quality, and customer service targets set by the Government in their response to the Social Security Select Committee inquiry into Medical Services all are being met.

TREASURY

Insider Trading

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people have been prosecuted for insider dealing in each of the last 10 years. [27445]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I have been asked to reply.

The Department of Trade and Industry has prosecuted 30 people for insider dealing offences since 1 January 1992. The breakdown is as follows:

Year	Number of people
1992	6
1993	3
1994	2
1995	1
1996	4

National Insurance Contributions

Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in how many cases in the last year direct debits of national insurance contributions by self-employed persons suspended during payment of incapacity benefit have not been resumed following the termination of payment of incapacity benefit by reason of technical problems with the National Insurance Contributions Office replacement computer system; and if he will make a statement. [22365]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 11 December 2001]: There is no evidence to show that resumption of collection of national insurance contributions by direct debit in these circumstances failed because of technical problems with the National Insurance Contributions Office's replacement computer system.

Duty-Free Shopping

Jeff Ennis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the effect on job numbers of the ending of duty-free shopping within the EU. [24280]

Mr. Boateng: No estimate has been made.

Temporary Contracts

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many employees in (a) his Department and (b) executive agencies supervised by his Department have been employed on temporary contracts of (i) 51 weeks or (ii) less than 51 weeks' duration in this year and each of the past five years, in each case specifying what percentage of the respective total workforce these employees constitute. [25167]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested is given in the table:

Warehoused Goods Regulations

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions in (a) 1999–2000 and (b) 2000–01 an owner of warehoused goods failed to comply with the Warehouses and Owners of Warehouse Goods Regulations 1999. [26429]

Mr. Boateng: The central record holds details of rejections at application and revocation action only. The numbers are as follows:

1999–2000

Revocations—1

Rejections at registration—0

2000–01

Revocations—14

Rejections at registration—38.

None were revoked solely due to breaches of conditions. Minor compliance breaches that do not result in revocation are not recorded centrally, as it would be time consuming and costly to gather that information.

Digitised Products (Taxation)

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals the Government are making within the European Community for alternatives to the Commission's paper COM (2000) 349. [26448]

Mr. Boateng: As part of on-going EU discussions on the taxation of digitised products supplied to consumers, the Government have consistently argued that, in the medium term, an electronic solution should be introduced for charging, collecting and distributing the tax due on these supplies in the place where they are consumed, and that any short-term solution should be both temporary and simple to administer. We are confident that final agreement will soon be reached on this basis.

Alcohol and Tobacco Fraud Review

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which Ministers received the draft Alcohol and Tobacco Fraud Review report containing the paragraph on resources cited in paragraph 9.3 of the Rogues report. [26415]

Mr. Boateng: The draft report was submitted to the then Financial Secretary to the Treasury, and discussed by Treasury Ministers. Consideration of the resourcing implications was subsequently taken forward as part of the 1998 spending round in the normal way.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the recommendations of HM Customs and Excise on the level of additional resources needed to combat fraud and evasion that were contained in the draft Alcohol and Tobacco Fraud Review and quoted in paragraph 9.3 of the Rogues report. [26414]

Mr. Boateng: Consideration of the resourcing implications of the Review was taken forward as part of the 1998 Comprehensive Spending Review (CSR). The CSR settlement included an additional £35 million to fund more than 100 extra officers at the ports to tackle the problem of alcohol and tobacco fraud and smuggling.

Comprehensive Spending Review

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to consult service users on options and priorities for the Comprehensive Spending Review. [26137]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Government consult a wide range of interests in setting their priorities, including, importantly, service users.

Market Research

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what expenditure has been incurred by his (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies in each of the last four years on (i) opinion polling, (ii) focus groups and (iii) other forms of market research; and if he will list the surveys commissioned and the purpose of each. [27950]

Ruth Kelly: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Hertsmere (Mr. Clappison) on 29 January 2001, Official Report, column 42W.

Detailed information in the form requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Young People (Income Tax and National Insurance)

Matthew Green: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what percentage of persons aged (a) 16 and (b) 17 years paid (i) income tax and (ii) national insurance in each of the last five years; [29463]

(2) how much (a) income tax and (b) national insurance was received from persons aged (i) 16 and (ii) 17 years in each of the last five years. [29467]

Dawn Primarolo: Amounts of income tax liabilities from persons aged 16 and 17 are in the table.

Income tax liabilities

£ million

	Aged 16	Aged 17
1998–99	20	50
1999–2000	10	40
2000–01	10	40

Estimates (rounded to the nearest £10 million) are based on the Survey of Personal Incomes and are consistent with the November 2001 pre-Budget report. I regret that it is not possible to provide reliable estimates for earlier years.

Estimates for amounts of class 1 primary national insurance contribution (NIC) liabilities from persons aged 16 and 17 are in the table.

UK class 1 primary NiC

£ million

	Aged 16	Aged 17
1996–97	10	30
1997–98	10	30
1998–99	10	30
1999–2000	10	30
2000–01	10	20

Estimates provided by the Government Actuary's Department and rounded to the nearest £10 million.

Available estimates for the number of income taxpayers aged 16 and 17 as a percentage of the total population of 16 and 17-year-olds are in the table.

Percentage

	Number of 16-year-old taxpayers as a percentage of all 16-year-olds	Number of 17-year-old taxpayers as a percentage of all 17-year-olds
1998–99	4	11
1999–2000	3	10
2000–01	3	10

Taxpayer estimates are based on the Survey of Personal Incomes. Population estimates are from the Office for National Statistics.

Estimates for the number of NIC payers aged 16 and 17 as a percentage of the total population of 16 and 17-year-olds are in the table.

Percentage

	Number of 16-year-old NIC payers as a percentage of all 16-year-olds	Number of 17-year-old NIC payers as a percentage of all 17-year-olds
1996–97	5	13
1997–98	5	13
1998–99	5	13
1999–2000	5	14
2000–01	4	11

Estimates were provided by the Government Actuary's Department. Population estimates are from the Office for National Statistics.

All of the estimates are based on survey data and therefore subject to a margin of error particularly because of the relatively small sample sizes involved.

Green Technology Challenge

Ms Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) on what basis (a) air pollution from industry, (b) cleaning up polluted land, (c) oil spills, (d) waste treatment and (e) recycling are excluded from the Green Technology Challenge funding; [29702]

(2) for what reasons the decision was taken to limit the Green Technology Challenge to (a) clean fuels, (b) clean vehicle reduction in water use, (c) the improvement of water quality and (d) energy efficient technologies. [29701]

Mr. Boateng: The Government provide support for environmental objectives through a wide range of policies. Proposals put forward in response to the consultation on setting up a Green Technology Challenge were assessed against the following criteria:

the extent to which there is a market failure or a specific environmental problem that needs to be addressed through Government policy;

the extent to which this problem is best dealt with through a fiscal instrument such as capital allowances and the objective cannot be better achieved through other Government policies; the effectiveness of offering enhanced capital allowances for investment in technologies in the environmental area in question.

The Government's initial view is that other proposals put forward in response to the consultation do not meet the above criteria as well as the objectives announced. However, the Government will consider extending the scope of the scheme over time.

World Bank Loans

Tony Baldry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with US Treasury spokesmen on replacing World bank loans to the world's poorest countries with grants. [29629]

Mr. Boateng: The potential role of World bank grant finance is one of the issues being discussed in the context of the replenishment of the funds of the International Development Association (IDA, the concessional lending arm of the World bank), on which the Secretary of State for International Development leads. The Chancellor and Treasury officials have held discussions with the US Treasury and other countries to seek support for the UK position in these negotiations, which is that we should maintain and enhance the role of IDA as the largest source of concessional finance for low-income countries, and to encourage a substantial contribution by donors to the IDA replenishment.

VAT (Care Services)

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the cost in the current financial year of altering the VAT treatment of fees paid by individuals to nursing homes and registered residential homes for the elderly to that of a zero rated VAT product; and if he will make a statement. [29625]

Mr. Boateng: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 20 July 2001, Official Report, column 559W.

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects Customs and Excise to issue details of the proposed extra statutory concession in respect of VAT on supply of services agency workers for domiciliary care. [30161]

Mr. Boateng: Details of the proposed extra statutory concession on the VAT liability of home care will be available when the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry lays before Parliament revised regulations governing the conduct of the private recruitment industry.

Sport

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received concerning the Promoting Sport in the Community consultation; to whom the consultation document was circulated and in what quantities; and what measures he is taking to ensure that the views of unpaid voluntary workers who work for Community Amateur Sports Clubs are taken into account. [30159]

Mr. Boateng: A number of representations have been received concerning the "Promoting Sport in the Community" consultation document and consultation continues. Over 5,000 copies of the consultation document have been circulated to CASCs and their governing bodies, Sport England and the Central Council of Physical Recreation. The consultation document is also available on the Treasury public internet site. Given the diversity of the sector, the Government are keen that as many interested parties as possible will take the opportunity to respond, so that all views can be taken into account.

Census Data

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what estimate has been made of the impact that the raising of the minimum threshold for publication of census data from 50 persons/20 households to 100 persons/40 parishes will have on the planning of services in rural areas; [30193]

(2) what measures the Office for National Statistics will take to assist authorities responsible for local planning where separate census data for individual parishes has been lost by the amalgamation of figures as a result of the increased minimum threshold; [30194]

(3) what representation he has received concerning the availability of 2001 census data at parish level; [30156]

(4) what representations he has received on the impact of the raised thresholds in the 2001 census on the planning of services in rural areas; [30155]

(5) if he will revert to the 1991 census threshold figure of 50 persons per household. [30157]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Miss Anne McIntosh, dated 25 January 2002:

As National Statistician and Registrar General for England and Wales I have been asked to reply to your recent questions to the Chancellor of the Exchequer asking:

(i) what estimate has been made of the impact that raising of the minimum threshold for the publication of census data from 50 persons/20 households to 100 persons/40 parishes (sic) will have on the planning of services in rural areas (30193);

(ii) what representation he has received concerning the availability of 2001 Census data at parish level (30156);

(iii) what representations he has received on the impact of the raised threshold in the 2001 Census on planning services in rural areas (30155);

(iv) if he will consider reverting to the 1991 Census threshold of '50 persons per household' (sic) (30157); and

(v) what measures the Office for National Statistics will take to assist authorities responsible for local planning where separate census data for individual parishes has been lost by the amalgamation of figures as a result of the increased minimum threshold (30194).

I will respond generally while covering the issues raised in each of the questions.

Following a recent ONS Review of the measures to protect the confidentiality of personal information provided in the 2001 Census, I have announced some additional measures. These include a decision that standard statistical output (amounting to some 10,000 counts) will not be released for small areas below a certain population threshold, this being 100 resident persons and 40 resident households.

The design of output areas from the 2001 Census will, however, recognise the need to identify parishes separately in the 2001 Census, but the number of parishes that fall below this threshold will not be known until the processing of data is completed later this year. From information from the 1991 Census, however, it is estimated that some 1,230 parishes in England would have fallen below the 2001 Census threshold.

Nevertheless, the average size of output areas in the 2001 Census will be significantly smaller than in the 1991 Census, facilitating greater geographical flexibility overall in using Census output. The resulting increased amount of detail to be made available from the 2001 Census will assist in the better planning of local services.

I have listened carefully to the views expressed throughout extensive consultation on output requirements from the Census. The Review was fully aware of, and considered carefully, all the requirements for output, including those for parishes, that users had articulated during the course of wide and extensive consultation with all local authorities and other users.

Following the initial announcement last November of my decision to introduce these additional disclosure control measures, I received a number of representations including six from local government bodies expressing particular concerns about the impact of the raised threshold on the availability of 2001 Census data for parishes. In addition, I have recently answered two Parliamentary Questions from the right hon. David Curry MP (nos. 28863 and 28862) on the subject.

I am, of course, keen to ensure that users will obtain the maximum benefit from the use of 2001 Census data. To this end, I invited representatives from the census-user community to a meeting on 13 December 2001 at which we were able to discuss further the specific issues that users had raised including the particular issue about sub-threshold parishes. At that meeting I explained that as Registrar General and National Statistician, I have an obligation not to reveal information collected in confidence in the Census about individual people and households. Indeed, I have given public assurances that I will not do so. In presenting increasingly detailed results from the Census, protecting personal information is of paramount importance.

Maintaining the confidentiality of individual data underpins the trust that exists between data suppliers and any agency that acts as custodian of information about them. At ONS we are fortunate that businesses and the public have confidence that their information is securely held and that we do not release any data that could identify an individual. It is essential that this trust be maintained. The 2001 Census Discussion Paper on Standard Area Statistics (September 2001) noted that the confidentiality threshold being proposed at that time was 50 persons and 20 resident households, but that disclosure control measures were under review as part of an ONS-wide programme of methods and quality. The recent Review was conducted to explore whether or not the measures that were in place would maintain this trust.

The Review considered whether or not the measures initially proposed protected against both real and perceived disclosure. In particular it considered:

(a) the level of statistical detail in the proposed tables;

(b) the level of geography for which the tables would be produced;

(c) the increased availability of the data; and

(d) the proliferation of other datasets against which Census data could be matched.

On the basis of this Review I decided that an additional measure of rounding all cells to either zero or a multiple of 3, should be introduced for all tables to be produced for England and Wales, and that the population threshold for Output Areas be raised to 100 resident persons and 40 resident households for the release of Census Area Statistics.

These measures, together with a data modification measure ('record swapping') already announced, will protect against not only the real risk of disclosure but also, and equally as important, the risk perceived, by the very public about whom the information refers, of disclosure that may arise in output table cells containing counts of '1'. Without these additional measures the risk of perceived disclosure would have been substantially higher. Once formed, any such public perceptions would be difficult to dislodge and would, I believe, damage the integrity of all census output.

In the circumstances I do not propose reverting to the threshold adopted for the release of small area statistics in the 1991 Census of 50 persons and 16 resident households.

We agreed at the meeting on 13 December, however, that the ONS and those present representing the user community would work closely together to minimise the impact that the rounding and increased threshold will have on the data and its uses. In particular, the ONS will consider further what summary output for 'sub-threshold parishes'—in the form of simple statistical profiles, for example—may be safely produced from the 2001 Census, in addition to some basic headcounts that have already been agreed.

A note on that meeting has been posted on the ONS website, and a paper giving further background into the decision and the method, and addressing the consequences and issues raised at the meeting and elsewhere, will be produced shortly.

Taper Relief

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the increase in business investment due to taper relief in each year since its introduction; and if he will make a statement. [30272]

Dawn Primarolo: No such estimate is available. We intend to evaluate taper relief once the system has had more time for its effects to become measurable.

Working Families Tax Credit

Jeff Ennis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many families in Barnsley, East and Mexborough are benefiting from the implementation of the working families tax credit. [30524]

Mr. Roy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many families in Motherwell and Wishaw are benefiting from the implementation of the working families tax credit. [30858]

Mr. Ivan Henderson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many families within the Harwich constituency have taken advantage of the working families tax credit to date. [30984]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer my hon. Friends to my answer to the hon. Member for Jarrow (Mr. Hepburn) on 16 January 2002, Official Report, column 293W.

Public-private Partnerships

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library the technical guidance given to civil servants in his Department on how to define PPPs as finance or operating leases; and if he will make a statement. [30204]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Copies of the Treasury document "Technical Note No.1 (revised)—How to Account for Private Finance Initiative (PFI) transactions" have been placed in the Library. The document sets out additional practical guidance on how to apply the Accounting Standards Board's Application Note "Amendment to Financial Reporting Standard (FRS) 5—Private Finance Initiative and Similar Contracts" and the requirement in the Treasury's "Resource Accounting Manual" that all complex transactions should be accounted for under the overriding principles of FRS5.

Construction Industry

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer by what criteria the Inland Revenue determines which firms in the construction industry are subject to an investigation of the employment status of their work force. [30643]

Dawn Primarolo: The criteria are the same as they are for firms who do not operate in the construction industry. The Inland Revenue select firms in three different ways: a proportion is selected randomly, a proportion is selected using pre-selected criteria, and a proportion is selected using risk analysis. The Inland Revenue do not publish the pre-selected and risk criteria they use, as publication may undermine their compliance strategy.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many visits have been made by the Inland Revenue compliance staff to firms in the construction industry to investigate the employment status of their workforce; and how many investigations have been deemed successful, in each year since 1997, broken down by region. [30642]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested is not available. Employment status examinations will often form part of a general review of employer compliance issues. Details of the employment status examinations may not be recorded separately.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Correspondence

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will ask the Parliamentary Secretary for her Department in the House of Lords, to answer the letters of 13 August and 13 September, Reference H/DEFRA/FM/Snell/130901 from the hon. Member for Hereford; and if she will make a statement. [13524]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 9 November 2001]: A response to the hon. Member's letters of 13 August and 13 September was sent on 16 January 2002.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will reply to the correspondence from the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed to the Minister for the Environment dated 19 July and 14 September relating to representations from Mr. A. Hodgson of Berwick-upon-Tweed. [19982]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 3 December 2001]: A response to Mr. Hodgson's letter of 11 July was sent on 21 January. A copy of this response was sent to the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed on 23 January. I apologise for the long delay in replying.

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when her Department will clear outstanding correspondence with hon. Members. [28361]

Mr. Morley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State wrote to all Members of Parliament on 14 November 2001 setting out her assessment of the current problems on correspondence. The Department suffered severe disruption last year due to allocating top priority to defeating the food and mouth epidemic. On top of this the sheer volume of correspondence received since the creation of DEFRA has had a major impact on the Department's performance. I accept this is not an adequate excuse for not giving hon. Members timely responses, and now that normality is returning to the Department one of our key priorities is to rectify weaknesses in our service delivery. The size of our correspondence section has increased threefold and the line management strengthened; our IT systems have been updated and are in the process of being further improved and new guidance has been circulated throughout the Department. These actions are already beginning to bear fruit and it is hoped that the last of the backlog cases will be dispatched over the next few weeks.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many letters from hon. Members to her Department did not receive substantive replies within (a) one month, (b) three months and (c) six months in 2001; and if she will make a statement on her Department's performance against targets in relation to response times to letters from hon. Members. [28816]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 23 January 2002]: Unfortunately our system is currently not sophisticated enough to produce these figures, although we are in the process of having it upgraded. However staff have conducted an extensive manual trawl which put the total for (a) at approximately 4,000 letters and the total for (b) at approximately 1,800 letters. For (c) 110 letters had not received a response after six months.

The Secretary of State wrote to all Members of Parliament on 14 November setting out her assessment of the Department's current problems on correspondence. The Department suffered severe disruption last year due to allocating top priority to defeating the foot and mouth epidemic. On top of this the sheer volume of correspondence received since the creation of DEFRA had a major impact on the Department's performance, resulting in a large backlog of letters. I accept this is not an adequate excuse for not giving hon. Members timely responses, and now that normality is returning to the Department one of our key priorities is to rectify weaknesses in our service delivery and to meet our response time targets. The size of our correspondence section has increased threefold and the line management strengthened; our IT systems have been upgraded and are in the process of being further improved; and new guidance has been circulated throughout the Department.

These actions are already beginning to bear fruit and it is hoped that over the next few weeks the system will be back at an even keel.

Fly Tipping

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 21 November 2001, Official Report, column 315W, if she will adopt a policy on fly tipping similar to that adopted by the National Assembly for Wales. [18022]

Mr. Meacher: Fly tipping is a blight on our countryside and towns and is an antisocial activity wherever it takes place and whoever is responsible for it. The stringent controls in place to ensure that waste is dealt with properly apply both in England and Wales.

The National Assembly for Wales (NAW) initiated a special drive against fly tipping. As part of this, the NAW voted £400,000 for a two year project, (running in the financial years 2000–01 and 2001–02) to support targeted waste enforcement. Three targeted enforcement teams were established. These teams work closely with other agency staff and other enforcement agencies such as the police, local authorities and the benefits agency. This has involved an intelligence led approach to enforcement, selectively targeting those activities that are of greatest impact to the environment.

This campaign was in part a response to concerns that fly tipping was becoming a particular problem in Wales and as a result, the number of successful prosecutions has increased from 24 in 1999 at the start of the project to 48 in 2000. Similar improvements are expected for the year 2001 to 2002.

The Environment Agency continues also to give the need to combat fly tipping a high priority in England. The agency is currently working to establish a central unit to co-ordinate the agency's approach to environmental crime.

This unit will work with other key enforcement bodies such as the local authorities, police and HM Customs and Excise and will particularly bear down on fly tipping.

Furthermore, the Fly Tipping Stakeholders' Forum, which comprises local authorities, business and landowners representatives, and is chaired by the Environment Agency, has produced a fly tipping guidance document, which provides information and guidance for all those who are affected and/or concerned by fly tipping. The document is available on the web at: http://www.environment-agency.gov.uk/business/wasteman/flytip/

A conference is planned for spring 2002 to help emphasise the role and activity of the forum.

Waste Disposal

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the likely charge per unit waste disposal authorities will make to householders for the disposal of (a) refrigerators, (b) deep-freezers, (c) fridge-freezers and (d) air conditioning units after 1 January 2002. [24168]

Mr. Meacher: Waste disposal authorities have a statutory duty, under section 51(1) of the Environmental Protection Act 1990, to provide reasonably accessible sites where householders can dispose of their waste free of charge.

Waste collection authorities have a statutory duty to arrange for the collection of household waste. However, they are entitled to impose a charge for collection for certain items, set out in Schedule 2 to the Controlled Waste Regulations 1992. Charges vary considerably (with many local authorities not imposing a charge) and may include the collection of more than one bulky item. Charges are in the range of £0 to £35, with higher charges for those living in rural areas.

Foot and Mouth

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with the chairmen of the independent inquiries into the consequences and lessons of the foot and mouth disease for their proposals for communications with hon. Members; and if she will make a statement. [25402]

Mr. Morley: I have met with the inquiries on a number of occasions to discuss a range of issues. I am aware that both the Royal Society inquiry and the Iain Anderson Lessons Learned inquiry provide regular updates on their dedicated websites. The Lessons Learned inquiry will shortly be writing to hon. Members to update them on progress.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what communications she has had with hon. Members drawing their attention to the commencement of the independent inquiry into the lessons to be learned from the foot and mouth epidemic; and if she will make a statement. [25403]

Mr. Morley: In my statement to the House on 17 December I announced the start of the Lessons Learned inquiry to hon. Members. I welcome the start of this inquiry and confirm that the Department will co-operate fully with the independent inquiry process.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the uncompensated losses suffered by farmers through foot and mouth are; and how those losses are calculated. [29997]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 24 January 2002]: There are no statistics gathered on uncompensated losses and reliable estimates of these losses are not available at this stage. However DEFRA is working with a number of other Government Departments to prepare such an estimate and the results of this work will be made publicly available. We have carried out a survey of over 1,000 farms in FMD affected areas to collect information on the direct impact and their future intentions. The results of this survey will be published early in February.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the current situation regarding (a) foot and mouth disease and (b) other livestock-related diseases in Settle. [29991]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 24 January 2002]: Livestock related disease surveillance is carried out in the Settle area for DEFRA by the Veterinary Laboratories

Agency regional laboratories at Thirsk and Preston. I understand that currently the reported incidence of livestock related disease in that area is normal for this time of year. North Yorkshire, like the whole of Great Britain, is now classified as free from FMD. However, it is important that farms and veterinarians remain vigilant.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has made (a) to the European Commission and (b) to the OIE regarding the reinstatement of foot and mouth disease free status to the United Kingdom. [28683]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 18 January 2002]: The European Commission have been kept fully informed of the position in the United Kingdom through monthly meetings of its Standing Veterinary Committee. Having received a report from the State Veterinary Service earlier this month that all counties in Great Britain are foot and mouth disease (FMD) free, the European Commission lifted all export controls except those on live sheep.

My Department also submitted a report to the OIE which set out the work carried out to control the outbreak and invited the OIE to consider whether it was now in a position to restore the UK's FMD free status. This report was considered by the OIE's FMD commission on 22 January. The OIE commission agreed to restore the UK's "FMD free status without vaccination" for the purposes of international trade.

The EU Standing Veterinary Committee is expected to return to the issue of live sheep exports at its 5–6 February meeting, in the light of the OIE decision.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of her Department's staff remain employed directly in dealing with the 2001 outbreak of foot and mouth disease and consequential activity; how many of these staff members will be re-designated to activities associated with combating incidences of bovine tuberculosis; and if she will make a statement. [29089]

Mr. Morley: About 12 per cent. of the permanent staff in my Department, in offices across the country, are still employed in dealing with the foot and mouth epidemic and consequential activity. It is not possible to say how many of these staff would become available for work on bovine tuberculosis, but veterinary officer effort on bovine tuberculosis has already doubled between June and December last year.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the firms of contractors employed by her Department and its agencies to assist with clean-up work during the foot and mouth outbreak; and what payments were made from public funds in each case. [28183]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 17 January 2002]: Over 1,200 contractors have been employed by the Department to undertake work, including that on secondary cleansing and disinfection. A complete list of all contractors was placed in the Library of the House on 15 October 2001.

The final cost of all cleansing and disinfection is now estimated to be about £280 million, but the total amount being paid to all of the individual contractors has not yet been finalised.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the number of hill farmers who have recently left the industry as a result of foot and mouth disease; and if she will make a statement. [28042]

Mr. Morley: At present it is too early to assess the impact of foot and mouth disease on hill farmers.

Farm Subsidies

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the contribution farm subsidies make in reducing the cost of food in the UK. [26021]

Mr. Morley: The only farm subsidies directly aimed at reducing the cost of food are consumer subsidies. However these constitute a very small element of the support mechanism and they do not significantly offset the higher prices consumers face from the CAP. The recent reforms to the Common Agricultural Policy, which have reduced the level of support to the market and increased direct payments to producers, have had the effect of substantially reducing the cost of agricultural support to consumers. However I estimate that in 2000 the overall cost of the CAP to food consumers and taxpayers was equivalent to £8 to £9 per week for a family of four.

Beam Trawlers

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what action the Government are taking to monitor the damage caused to sea beds by beam trawlers; and if she will make a statement. [27162]

Mr. Morley: The Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science (CEFAS) has studied the impacts of beam trawling on different sea bed habitats in the North and Irish seas since 1993 and compared these impacts with other sources of disturbance in the marine environment.

Beam trawling effort is patchily distributed. Most beam trawling takes place in relatively shallow areas with relatively high levels of natural disturbance, and where the sea bed is, to a certain extent, resilient to the effects of the gear. For example, the sandy sea beds of the southern North sea are continually disturbed by tides and wave action, and most of the animals living there are already adapted to cope with disturbance. In these areas the effects of beam trawling on the sea bed are hard to detect, and recovery of areas that are trawled will usually occur in less than one year.

In deeper water, where there is usually less wave and tidal action, beam trawling could have a proportionally greater effect, and recovery of the sea bed will take much longer. However, beam trawls are not widely used in these areas.

Hill Farmers

Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of the average income of hill farmers was provided by (a) Government and (b) European funding in each year since 1997. [27256]

Mr. Morley: Information on public expenditure under the CAP and on national grants and subsidies is given in the table.

£ billion

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01(f)

Agriculture in the United Kingdom 2000

These figures exclude the additional support farmers receive from the consumer, through the maintenance of EU agricultural prices above world levels by the CAP.

It is not possible to give this breakdown specifically for hill farms, but typically, a high percentage of subsidy paid to hill farmers will be from EU funding.

In the years since 1997, average total direct subsidies to LFA cattle and sheep farms have exceeded net farm income. Data for England for the year 1999–2000, given in the table, illustrate the point.

Average output, input and income for full-time hill farms

England 1999–2000 (£/farm)

	LFA cattle and sheep farms
Average farm output	61,700
Of which:
Direct livestock subsidies	25,400
Other direct subsidies	4,000
Average input costs	56,400
Average net farm income	5,300

Water Framework Directive

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimates she has made of the potential cost (a) to businesses and (b) to public funds of implementing the EU water framework directive 2000/60/EC. [27139]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 14 January 2002]: The implications of the directive are set out in the regulatory impact assessment (RIA) "First Consultation Paper on the Implementation of the EC Water Framework Directive (2000/60/EC)" which was published jointly by the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions and the National Assembly for Wales in March 2001. A copy of the consultation paper is in the House of Commons Library.

Costs to businesses and public funds

The estimated overall costs[1] in the regulatory impact assessment were dominated by the cost of making improvements to water status (£1.9 billion to £9.0 billion), which were broken down into: improvements to point source discharges by sewerage undertakers (£0.9 billion to £4.2 billion); improvements to point source discharges by industry (£0.3 billion to £1.2 billion); reductions in pollution from diffuse sources, particularly agriculture (£0.6 billion to £2.9 billion); improvements to river habitats (£90 million to £440 million); and, alleviation of low flows (up to £240 million).

It is not yet possible to make an estimate of the effect on water charges to domestic and commercial customers of water and sewerage companies. This will be dealt with as part of the periodic reviews of water prices carried out by Ofwat. These reviews will also provide the opportunity to ensure that the most cost-effective combination of capital investment and other measures is built into water companies' programmes alongside regulatory measures delivered by the Environment Agency.

The costs of habitat restoration and low flow alleviation projects, and urban run-off, may fall on the regulatory bodies, water companies, local authorities and landowners. However, it is not currently possible to estimate the extent and distribution of such work.

The administrative, planning and monitoring costs were assumed to fall principally on central Government and Government agencies, with small administration costs falling on local authorities and the water companies. The estimated cost of administrative arrangements was £3 million, for the planning process £13 million to £20 million, and for additional monitoring and assessment approximately £94 million.

A revised regulatory impact assessment will be needed, once an overall package of implementing regulations has been prepared for consultation, later this year or early 2003.

[1] The figures quoted were the net present value of costs incurred between 1998 and 2040. The choice of the year 2040 did not relate to the actual expenditure period but because it was 30 years after the deadline in the Commission's original proposal for achieving the directive's objectives. Thirty years is a widely used asset life for pollution control equipment.

Fraud

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate her Department has made of the cost to its budget since 1 May 1997 of fraud; and if she will make a statement. [27293]

Mr. Morley: The Department has only been in existence since June 2001. Information covering earlier periods is therefore not available, and could be constructed retrospectively only at disproportionate cost. Annual reports which the Treasury prepares on fraud, covering returns from both the former MAFF and DETR, are deposited in the Library of the House.

Food Imports

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what additional impact control measures have been introduced since the resolution of the blockade of foreign food imports at (a) Cairnryan and (b) elsewhere in 1998. [27026]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 15 January 2002]: The blockade of food imports at Cairnryan and elsewhere in 1998 related to farmers' concerns over rural incomes in the UK due to the effects of BSE on the market price of British beef, along with concerns over the strength of the British pound reducing the price of foreign meat imports from the Republic of Ireland. EU legislation does not allow the blockade of meat imported without justifiable reason and no additional import measures were taken following these events.

Refurbishment

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her estimate is of the cost of buildings refurbishment carried out by her Department in each of the last four years. [27956]

Mr. Morley: The figures, which exclude any refurbishment carried out as part of landlord lease obligations, are as follows:

Refurbishments are included in the planned programme of building maintenance.

Flood Protection (Hillingdon)

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to improve flood protection in the London borough of Hillingdon. [28486]

Mr. Morley: This Department provides grants for flood and coastal defence capital works, and associated studies, which meet essential technical, economic and environmental criteria and achieve an appropriate priority score. Further to increases in spending plans in the last two spending reviews, additional funding of £51 million over the four years from 2000–01 was announced in November 2000 following the severe flooding that year. An increased priority was given to urban flood defences and the grant rates for all river flood defences were increased by 20 per cent.

Operational responsibility for flood management measures rests with the local operation authorities, normally the Environment Agency (EA) and local councils, who decide which projects to promote and their timing. The operational authorities are invited to submit applications for DEFRA funding.

The EA has implemented a number of flood alleviation schemes in the London borough of Hillingdon as part of the £20 million Lower Colne Improvement Scheme with the benefit of grant aid. The schemes provide flood alleviation properties within West Drayton, Uxbridge and Cowley.

The EA is now reviewing the feasibility of sustainable flood alleviation measures for the River Pinn catchment.

Nitrate Pollution

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proposals she has to provide financial assistance to farmers having to expend on increased slurry storage facilities as a result of being included in extensions to nitrate vulnerable zones; and if she will make a statement on her Department's consultation on the implementation of the European Nitrates Directive. [29090]

Mr. Meacher: The Farm Waste Grant Scheme is available now to assist farmers in existing nitrate vulnerable zones with the cost of improving or constructing farm waste storage facilities. Grant is available at a rate of 40 per cent. on eligible expenditure up to an investment ceiling of £85,000. The Government intend to extend this scheme to the new NVZ areas, from the date of their designation. We are currently considering whether additional funds will be needed from 2003 onwards, and we are considering also the option to raise the grant rate to 50 per cent. in less favoured areas, as is permitted under the EU rules on state aids.

DEFRA's current consultation seeks views on how England should complete full implementation of the Nitrates Directive. Following this, a decision on which of the two options for designation will be taken in England will be announced later this year.

Sea Fisheries Committees

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the (a) operation and (b) cost of funding of sea fisheries committees; and what proposals she has to alter the source of funding of sea fisheries committees from local authorities to central Government. [29081]

Mr. Morley: Sea Fisheries Committees as managers of inshore fisheries are subject to local government rules and are rightly funded by their constituent local authorities. There are no proposals for this arrangement to change.

Hunting

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has received from the Chief Veterinary Officer concerning changes in the threat to livestock from predatory foxes during the ban on fox hunting. [29178]

Mr. Morley: The Chief Veterinary Officer has made no such assessment. Foxes are not regarded as a major national threat to livestock by the Department.

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the use of combined heat and power systems in the horticultural sector; and what assessment she has made of the obstacles that exist to the use of such systems in the sector. [28897]

Mr. Meacher: There is around 150 megawatts of good quality CHP capacity installed in the horticulture sector. I understand the main obstacles to the use of CHP are the availability of capital, a lack of understanding of the opportunities for CHP and concerns over energy prices. Support and advice, including site specific, will be channelled to the sector via the Carbon Trust under a voluntary energy saving agreement my Department has with the NFU.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will support the European proposal to maintain a Community register of genetically modified food and feed; and if this will result in a change in the information that is available to the public via the Food Standards Agency and her Department. [29501]

Mr. Meacher: The Government support the establishment of the proposed Community register. However, the proposal implies that the information included on the register will be limited to a summary of applications for authorisation and authorisations granted. The current register maintained by my Department in relation to the release and marketing of genetically modified organisms contains more information, including all details of non-confidential information included in applications for authorisation. The Food Standards Agency operate procedures that give a similar level of information in relation to GM foods. The Government will press in negotiations on the proposal for more information to be placed on the Community register.

Animal Slaughter (Jedburgh)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 8 January 2002 to the hon. Member for East Surrey (Mr. Ainsworth), Official Report, column 756W, on animal slaughter (Jedburgh), how many premises outwith the 3km zone were slaughtered out; how many sheep were slaughtered at each of these individual farm premises outwith the 3km zone; how many of these premises were tested for evidence of foot and mouth disease; and what was the result of the tests. [29505]

Mr. Morley: In the Scottish Borders local authority area there were 11 premises outwith the 3km area on which animals were slaughtered as part of the foot and mouth disease eradication strategy. Animals on six farms were slaughtered as the disease was suspected but not clinically proven and animals on a further five farms were slaughtered due to their contacts with Longtown market. This involved a total of 11,917 sheep as detailed in the following table.

Name of farm	Number of sheep	Tested for FMD	Test result
Sunnyside Farm, Haddington	230	Yes	Negative
West Broomhouse, Dunbar	74	Yes	Negative
Broadmeadows, Paxton	800	Yes	Negative
Broadlea, Hawick	1,200	Yes	Negative
Rawburn, Longformacus	3,000	Yes	Negative
Castlwood Farm, Jedburgh	43	Yes	Negative
Threepwood Cottage, Blainslie	1,155	Yes	Negative
Howford Farm, Ettrickbridge	2,115	Yes	Negative
Muirfield, Hawick	1,150	Yes	Negative
Foulshiels, Yarrow	1,000	Yes	Negative
Hopestead, Coldingham	1,150	Yes	Negative

Suckler Cow Premiums

Matthew Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when farmers will receive their suckler cow premiums; for what reason farmers have not received payment of the premiums; and if farmers will receive interest on late payments. [29455]

Mr. Morley: Payments for suckler cow premium scheme are made between 16 October 2001 to 30 June annually. Claims are received up to 6 December. Payments are made in two parts, an advance payment to be paid by the 6 March 2002, and a balance payment due by 30 June 2002.

This year, scheme payments have not been made as early in the window as we would have liked because computer systems have had to be upgraded to reflect regulation changes to the bovine schemes. Processing has also been affected by the diversion of staff to FMD and by industrial action. Advance payments started in January and are expected to be completed by 31 March. As the end of the advance payment window has still not been reached, the matter of the payment of interest to farmers does not arise.

IACS Payments

Matthew Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs for what reason farmers did not receive IACS payments due in October 2001 until December 2001. [29464]

Mr. Morley: The payment window for IACS arable area payments scheme (AAPS) 2001 runs from 16 November 2001 until 31 January 2002.

The diversion of staff to FMD and industrial action within the Rural Payments Agency has delayed the processing of AAPS claims and meant that fewer claims than normal were paid during the early part of the payment window. The industrial action was suspended on 11 January and good progress is now being made in dealing with unpaid claims. RPA expects to pay over 90 per cent. of AAPS claims by 31 January and to complete the payment process by around mid-Febru[illegible]

Scrapie Research Project

Matthew Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the progress of the Scrapie Research Project; and what steps are being taken to speed up the project. [29471]

Mr. Morley: The hon. Member has confirmed that he is specifically interested in the National Scrapie Plan for Great Britain. The plan was launched on 19 July 2001 with the opening of a genotyping scheme for breeding rams in pedigree pure-bred flocks registered with a breed society. From an estimated 15,000 flocks in this sector we have thus far received expressions of interest from over one third. Of those expressing an interest over 2,800 have so far joined the plan. On 16 January I announced an extension of the plan to all pure-bred breeding flocks, irrespective of whether they are registered with a breed society. It is estimated that this will open eligibility to an extra 25,000 flocks. Eligibility has also been extended to all scrapie-affected flocks, irrespective of whether such flocks are pure-bred. We will be considering possible future extensions to the plan in consultation with stakeholders. Measures to eradicate scrapie are also included in the Animal Health Bill.

Air Pollution

Derek Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list by each local authority area in England and Wales the concentration of the pollutants (a) benzene, (b) 1,3 butadiene, (c) carbon monoxide, (d) lead, (e) nitrogen dioxide, (f) particles (PMI), and (g) sulphur dioxide for 1997 to 2001. [29322]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 22 January 2002]: This information is not held centrally. Local authorities are not required to monitor levels of each of these pollutants unless it appears from their modelling results that they are unlikely to achieve the nationally prescribed air quality objectives by the relevant deadlines. Our national monitoring network indicates that between 1997 and 2001 levels of most of these pollutants have fallen across England and Wales, and most local authorities are on course to meet the prescribed objectives for each of the pollutants. However, a number of authorities have identified possible difficulties with the objectives for nitrogen dioxide, particles and, to a lesser extent, sulphur dioxide. The table lists each of the authorities which has to date designated an air quality management area (AQMA), and highlights the pollutants in respect of which the AQMA has been designated.

Derek Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent investigations have been undertaken by her Department on the impact of air pollution on health. [29320]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 22 January 2002]: The Department of Health's Committee on the Medical Effects of Air Pollutants (COMEAP) advises the Government, through the Chief Medical Officer, on the effects of air pollution on health.

COMEAP publish the statements and reports that they prepare on their website at www.doh.gov.uk/comeap. Recent studies include a "Statement and Report on Long-Term Effects of Particles on Mortality" and "The Health effects of Air Pollution: Advice from COMEAP".

Also published on the website are details of a recent call for research proposals on air pollution and health. This new research is aiming to cover projects to be carried out over a three-year period as well as some smaller projects lasting for about one year.

Derek Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she last reviewed the air quality strategy; and what the main findings of the review were. [29319]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 22 January 2002]: The Air Quality Strategy for England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland was published in January 2000. The strategy is not expected to need a comprehensive review for a few years. Instead, the Government and devolved Administrations have decided to review the strategy on a pollutant by pollutant basis to allow reviews of individual pollutants to be carried out relatively quickly, and to allow the outcomes of these reviews to be published was addenda to the strategy. The first of these reviews as published for consultation on 17 September 2001. It considered the possibility of tightening the existing policy objectives for three pollutants (carbon monoxide, benzene and particles) and of introducing for the first time a policy objective for polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons. A large number of responses to the consultation document were received, and we will take account of these in finalising our proposals.

Reed Beds

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what evaluation she has made of the potential use of reed beds as a way of alleviating foul sewerage problems exacerbated by flooding. [29327]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 23 January 2002]: Reed beds form part of the portfolio for sustainable drainage systems. DEFRA, the Environment Agency and other stakeholders are looking at how future drainage systems ensure that water quality can be better protected, although no specific evaluation has yet been made of this potential role for reed beds.

Farming Subsidies

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will (a) devote a minimum percentage of farming subsidies to sustainable rural development and (b) negotiate on this principle as a start during the mid-term review negotiations on the CAP. [29989]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 24 January 2002]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has stated that our policy for the mid-term review is to see a switch from production support under the first pillar of the CAP to support for agri-environment and sustainable rural development schemes under the second pillar, and we will be pressing for this in the negotiations.

Biosecurity

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on what grounds under the clauses in the Animal Health Bill the Government will withhold part of the compulsory purchase payment for animals slaughtered for posing a risk of spreading disease, where the Government considers that the farmer's biosecurity measures are substandard. [27740]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 24 January 2002]: The Department launched a public consultation on the implementation of key provisions of the Animal Health Bill on 11 January 2002.

Included in this package are proposals for the matters to be covered by the disease risk assessment that will help to determine the amount of adjusted compensation paid for animals slaughtered on infected premises. We are seeking key stakeholders' views by 15 March.

The consultation document and list of stakeholders can be found on the DEFRA website at http://www.defra.gov.uk/corporate/consult/ahbill/index.htm.

Agrimonetary Compensation

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to apply for agrimonetary compensation for the livestock sector in April; and if she will make a statement. [29994]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 24 January 2002]: The European Commission have yet to confirm whether there is any agrimonetary compensation available for the livestock sector. Although this aid relates to the second and third stages of compensation paid last year, the EU rules provide for these later payments to be reduced or cancelled if the market prices and exchange rates have since moved in a direction which ameliorates the situation which leads to the compensation. We will not know for some months what the Commission assessment will be. When we do the Government will have carefully to consider the case for payment.

Agricultural Co-operatives

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to improve the competitiveness of agricultural co-operatives in the UK; and if she will make a statement. [29996]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 24 January 2002]: We are supporting a number of initiatives to improve the competitiveness of both agricultural co-operatives and collaborative marketing groups.

With the NFU, we have been running a collaborative marketing initiative since 1998. This is aimed at helping farmers to recognise the many advantages of working together, particularly in relation to economies of scale and access to professional expertise. We have used joint representation at agricultural shows across a range of sectors to generate interest in this initiative.

Under the Agriculture Development Scheme, aimed at helping farmers and growers improve their competitiveness through better marketing, collaborative activities were given priority under bidding rounds held in 1999, 2000 and 2001. Successful bids in 1999 and 2000 included a project to benchmark best practice in farmer controlled businesses (Plunkett Foundation) and several projects from collaborative producer groups or co-operatives.

Opportunities for improving the competitiveness of co-operatives and collaborative marketing groups are also provided under the England Rural Development Programme through awards under the Processing and Marketing Grant and the measure on the marketing of quality agricultural products under the Rural Enterprise Scheme.

Bovine TB

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list research projects associated with bovine TB, indicating for each (a) the cost in 2001–02 and (b) the total cost of the project. [29833]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 24 January 2002]: The Krebs badger field trial, TB99 epidemiological survey of risk factors which may dispose some farms to TB breakdowns and road traffic accident survey of badger carcases are projects associated with bovine TB. These were suspended for most of 2001–02, because of the foot and mouth disease emergency and little expenditure in respect of them has, therefore, been incurred in the present financial year. With the present resumption of work on these projects, revised costings are being drawn up but the total cost of the trial is expected to remain at £35 million over five years.

A list of individual research projects and their 2001–02 and total costs are given in the table. The list is subject to change as new projects come on stream and others end and costs are revised. The table represents the position at 23 January 2002.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment her Department has made of the merits of reintroducing the bovine TB programme; and if she will make a statement. [29999]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 24 January 2002]: The need to control bovine TB in herds remains a top priority for the Department. Before the restart of routine testing, and restart of the badger culling trial, veterinary risk assessments were made. The restart of the programme has been dependent on when counties were declared free of foot and mouth disease.

Tenant Farmers

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will seek a revision of the definition of agriculture within tenancy legislation to include rural development and agri-environment activities. [29986]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 24 January 2002]: Many tenant farmers are already successfully taking part in rural development and agri-environment scheme. Further, over the last few years roughly the same proportion of tenant farmers and owner occupier farmers have joined the agri-environment schemes. However we are aware that some tenant farmers are concerned about their ability to take part in these schemes. This is something we will consider in the light of the ongoing review of the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 and the recommendations made by the Policy Commission on Food and Farming.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will move funds from agricultural price support towards environmentally sustainable agricultural and non-agricultural activities; and if she will make a statement. [29988]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 24 January 2002]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has stated that our policy for the CAP mid-term review is to see a switch from production support under the first pillar to support for agri-environment and sustainable rural development schemes under the second pillar, and we will be pressing for this in the negotiations.

Zoos

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what assessment her Department has made of (a) public awareness relating to potential disease risks between humans and animals in locations defined under the Zoo Licensing Act 1981 and (b) the effective enforcement of relevant health and safety standards; and if she will make a statement; [30004]

(2) what steps her Department has undertaken to ensure that establishments defined as a zoo under the Zoo Licensing Act 1981 are (a) licensed and (b) meeting required standards in animal welfare and public safety; and if she will make a statement. [30005]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 21 January 2002]: The enforcement of zoo licensing, and of health and safety standards in zoos, are matters for the relevant local authorities, taking account of advice issued by the Department and the Health and Safety Executive.

In terms of zoo licensing, local authorities must ensure that the zoos in their area have a licence to operate or are exempt from the provisions of the Zoo Licensing Act 1981. All licensed zoos are also subject to regular inspection to ensure that the Secretary of State's Standards on Modern Zoo Practice, which include provisions relating to animal welfare and public safety are being met. The Department has issued guidance to local authorities on the implementation of the 1981 Act and a new circular will be issued shortly to take account of the changes introduced by Council Directive 1999/22/EC on the keeping of wild animals in zoos, which is due to come into force in April.

Guidance on the management of public interaction with zoo animals is also set out in the Secretary of State's Standards of Modern Zoo Practice. This requires that risk assessments be carried out on a case-by-case basis, taking advice from the Health and Safety Executive, where necessary. For example, hand-washing facilities must be provided, together with signage reminding the public of hygiene requirements.

The prevention of transmission of zoonotic disease between zoo animals and employees is addressed by inspections carried out under health and safety legislation. In addition, inspections carried out under the Zoo Licensing Act 1981 will check whether zoos have measures in place to alert employees to the potential risk of zoonotic disease transmission.

Hens

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to improve the welfare of egg laying hens before battery cages are prohibited in 2012; and if she will make a statement. [30002]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 24 January 2002]: We have a number of initiatives to improve laying hen welfare. These include: a draft new Welfare Code; an extensive DEFRA on farm poultry welfare R&D programme; and ADAS run advisory programmes for farmers to encourage good welfare. In addition, the State Veterinary Service visit poultry units to assess all aspects of welfare.

Broiler Chickens

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessment she has made of broiler chickens' welfare; and if she will make a statement. [30003]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 24 January 2002]: As part of its inspection programme the State Veterinary Service visits broiler units to assess all aspects of welfare. The normal programme of visits is now resuming following the FMD outbreak.

BSE

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many cases of BSE have been confirmed in (a) Scotland and (b) the UK in each of the last three years. [30406]

Mr. Morley: The table shows the number of cases of BSE confirmed in (a) Scotland and (b) the UK in each of the last three years (as at 18 January 2002).

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent progress has been made in reforming the CAP. [28358]

Mr. Morley: The reform of the sheepmeat regime agreed by the Agriculture Council in December will simplify the regime and make it more flexible. The ewe premium will in future be paid on a flat rate basis, and the introduction of national envelopes provides a valuable mechanism for targeting extra support for the sheep sector and for encouraging environmentally beneficial farming practices.

More generally we expect the Commission to come forward with the mid-term review for the Common Agricultural Policy in the early summer and for negotiations to take place thereafter. We are working hard through informal discussions with the Commission and other member states to prepare the ground for these important negotiations.

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans the Government have to means-test CAP subsidy payments to farmers. [28359]

Mr. Morley: None. The Government have asked the Policy Commission for Food and Farming to look at its overall objectives in this area and we will review future policy in the light of the report which is expected on 29 January.

Producer Support Estimate

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what is the most recent estimate of the value of agricultural producer support for (a) the EU and (b) each country thereof. [26647]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 11 January 2001]: The OECD produces annual estimates of agricultural producer support in OECD countries, called producer support estimate (PSE). This includes estimates of the value of support to producers through market support mechanisms as well as through national and EU budgets. Their most recent provisional estimate of PSE for the EU is 98 billion euro for 2000. The OECD does not provide estimates of agricultural producer support for individual countries within the EU, however the following table shows the payments from the EU budget under the Common Agricultural Policy to each member state. These payments include costs that are not directly received by farmers (eg costs of intervention storage), but they do not include payments by national Governments or the value of market price support.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Refurbishment

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his estimate is of the cost of buildings refurbishment carried out by his Department in each of the last four years. [27963]

Mr. MacShane: Separately identifiable building refurbishment costs over the last four years on Foreign and Commonwealth Office properties have amounted to:

1997–98: £3.2 million

1998–99: £4.7 million

1999–2000: £22.5 million

2000–01: £31.2 million.

In addition to the figures listed, refurbishment is often a component in the adaptation of buildings, but it is not possible to identify that element without disproportionate cost. We also have a programme of routine building maintenance across the estate.

Ministerial Transport

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last used the railway service in connection with his official duties; what station he left from and what was the destination; and whether it is his intention to make greater use of the railways in future. [28091]

Mr. Straw: I generally travel to my Blackburn constituency by rail, most recently on 18 January 2002. I made extensive use of the railways on official business as Home Secretary: as Foreign Secretary the opportunities to do so are more limited.

South Africa

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to visit South Africa; and if he will raise the issue of arms sales with his South African counterpart. [28291]

Mr. Bradshaw: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has no immediate plans to visit South Africa. The Under-Secretary, my noble Friend Baroness Amos, will be visiting South Africa in February. There are no plans to discuss arms sales during that visit.

Gibraltar

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will visit Gibraltar before he next meets his Spanish counterpart under the auspices of the Brussels Process. [28791]

Mr. Straw: I refer the right hon. Member to my statement in the House on 14 January 2002, Official Report, columns 21–29. I will be discussing this further when I see the Chief Minister of Gibraltar in London today.

Jim Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance he plans to give to the Royal visit to Gibraltar in 2002. [30681]

Mr. Straw: There are no Royal visits to Gibraltar planned for 2002.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions have taken place with Spain on roaming rights of Gibraltar mobile telephones; and under what statutory powers he can take action against Spain over restriction of telephone numbers for Gibraltar. [30644]

Peter Hain: We raise the problems facing the Gibraltar telephones sector with the Spanish Government, at ministerial and official level, at every appropriate opportunity. Most recently, I raised the issue with Spanish Europe Minister Ramon de Miguel on 24 January. Her Majesty's Ambassador to Madrid has also discussed the problem with Spanish Foreign Minister Josep Pique in recent days.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has no statutory powers to take action against Spain on the restriction of telephone numbers for Gibraltar.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures he is taking against Spain in respect of freedom of movement of UK citizens on the Gibraltar border. [30552]

Peter Hain: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Wolverhampton, South-East (Mr. Turner) on 11 December 2001, Official Report, column 826W.

Jeff Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if independence for Gibraltar has been discussed during talks under the Brussels Process. [30646]

Peter Hain: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Clydesdale (Mr. Hood) on 17 January 2002, Official Report, column 399W.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the integration of Gibraltar with the UK has been discussed during talks under the Brussels Process. [30640]

Peter Hain: No.

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he will next meet representatives of the Government of Spain to discuss the future status of Gibraltar. [30696]

Peter Hain: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Barnsley, East and Mexborough (Jeff Ennis) today, Official Report, column 1177W.

Trafficking

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what representations he has made to the Government of Bangladesh concerning measures to combat people trafficking, with particular reference to (a) the number of prosecutions for trafficking offences, (b) the sentences imposed on those found guilty of trafficking and (c) compensation granted to victims of trafficking; [29453]

(2) what assessment he has made of the scale of trafficking of women and children from Bangladesh. [29454]

Mr. Bradshaw: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave her on people trafficking on 16 January 2002, Official Report, column 304W.

The most recent figures we have available are from the Bangladesh National Women's Lawyers Association (BNWLA) who conducted a survey in 10 districts of Bangladesh in 1999. It found that approximately 7,000 people were trafficked during that time (70 per cent. under 18) with the majority going to India (80 per cent.). I understand that there were 63 repatriations last year (50 children), mainly from India.

Latest figures from the BNWLA show that there are 60 cases under trial at present. Last year there were three cases, each of which resulted in the accused being found guilty and given a life sentence. There is no specific compensation scheme for victims, although we understand that the BNWLA provides some support services. The Ministry of Women and Children's Affairs is also receiving development funding for a related project.

Convention on the Future of Europe

Mrs. Fitzsimons: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whom the Government will appoint as the National Government representative to the Convention on the Future of Europe. [31137]

Mr. Straw: My right hon. Friend the Minister for Europe has been appointed the Government representative to the Convention on the Future of Europe.

Camp X-Ray

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when Foreign Office officials first arrived at Camp X-Ray. [30412]

Mr. Straw: 17 January 2002.

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) when he was first informed of the conditions of the prisoners held in Camp X-Ray; [30410]

(2) when he first had communications with UK officials concerning the conditions of prisoners in Camp X-Ray. [30361]

Mr. Straw: The report of the officials' visit was sent and received on 21 January; I received it on my arrival in Kinshasa that afternoon. My hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State, the Member for Exeter (Mr. Bradshaw), made a statement the same day, Official Report, columns 623–31.

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he first had communications with US officials concerning the conditions of prisoners in Camp X-Ray. [30411]

Mr. Straw: I discussed the conditions in which British nationals were being held with the US Secretary of State Colin Powell on 12 January and asked for access by British officials in order to verify their identity, nationality and welfare.

Geraint Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what charges Mr. Abbasi is being held at Camp X-Ray in Cuba and under what jurisdiction; if he has received legal representation during interrogation; who has made direct contact with him and in whose presence; if he has provided testimony of his treatment and condition in private without the presence of American officials; if written confirmation of his medical condition and treatment has been provided; if he is subject to a possible death penalty; and what prospects there are for his extradition to the UK. [30414]

Mr. Bradshaw: We are not yet aware of any charges but are in regular contact with the US regarding next steps. We have made it clear that the detainees must be treated humanely and, if tried, are entitled to a fair trial and to legal representation. At this stage we do not know whether detainees would be subject to the death penalty if convicted but HMG regularly makes their views plain to the US on this issue. The question of whether the detainees will be prosecuted by the US or returned to the UK is as yet undecided.

The UK team which met Mr. Abbasi during their visit from 17–20 January were accompanied by representatives of the US as the detaining power. The report of the visit indicates that the British detainees spoke without inhibitions and appeared to be in good physical health.

Ministerial Meetings

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what items will be discussed at his next meeting with his Spanish counterpart. [30633]

Peter Hain: The Foreign Ministers will meet at the EU General Affairs Council on 28 January, where they will discuss a range of bilateral and foreign policy issues.

Christians (China)

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Chinese Government regarding the persecution of Christians in south east China, with specific reference to the imprisonment of several Christians in Huadu Detention Centre in Guangdong Province. [30418]

Mr. MacShane: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary raised concerns about religious freedom in China with the Chinese Foreign Minister during his visit to the UK on 16–19 January. During my visit to China in September 2001, I raised concerns about human rights, including the treatment of Christians, with the Chinese authorities. These concerns were discussed in detail at successive rounds of the UK-China Human Rights Dialogue, most recently on 19–21 November 2001.

We raised the case of Pastor Li Dexian at the February 2001 round of the UK/China Human Rights Dialogue. The Chinese told us that he was not under arrest at that stage. Media reports indicate that he was arrested on 26 July 2001, and held at the Hua Du Centre, but released the following day.

Brussels Process

Jeff Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what date has been set for the next round of talks under the Brussels Process; and what the time scale is for the end of talks. [30641]

Peter Hain: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for West Suffolk (Mr. Spring) on 5 December 2001, Official Report, column 311W. We propose to hold a further ministerial meeting of the Brussels Process shortly. It remains our intention to conclude a comprehensive agreement by the summer.

Jeff Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement to Parliament following the next round of talks under the Brussels Process. [30645]

Peter Hain: We will continue to ensure that the House is kept fully informed of progress under the Brussels Process.

Commonwealth Games

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what support from his Department is being given to overseas territories to compete in the Commonwealth games; and which overseas territories are benefiting from this support. [30435]

Mr. Bradshaw: The overseas territories are themselves responsible for determining and funding their teams' participation in the games. We are in contact with the organisers of the games to ensure the overseas territories are fully involved. We are also liaising with the organisers to facilitate the attendance of VIP visitors from the participating territories.

Spanish Residents

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Spanish people live and work in the UK. [30702]

Peter Hain: According to the Office for National Statistics, as of mid-2000 there were approximately 47,000 Spanish nationals resident in the UK. The Spring 2000 Labour Force Survey, also produced by the Office for National Statistics, records approximately 30,000 Spanish nationals working in the UK.

PRIME MINISTER

Honours

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Prime Minister how many non-citizens of the United Kingdom have been knighted in each year since 1990. [30024]

Mr. Straw: I have been asked to reply.

The numbers of non-UK citizens who have received honorary knighthoods (or who were invested as honorary Dames) are as follows:

Year	Number
1990	8
1991	9
1992	23
1993	7
1994	12
1995	18
1996	22
1997	21
1998	18
1999	6
2000	29
2001	13

These figures do not include Knight (or Dame) Commanders of the Victorian Order which is the Queen's personal prerogative.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Parliamentary Questions

Norman Baker: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many answers to parliamentary questions have not been answered by the Lord Chancellor's Department under exemption 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information in each year since 1994. [29425]

Mr. Wills: It has not been possible to identify the answers to the parliamentary questions that the hon. Member refers to without incurring disproportionate cost. The Department does not keep records of parliamentary questions and answers in such a form as to enable the information sought to be readily produced. The only way to identify the relevant parliamentary questions and answers, with any degree of reliability, would be to search manually through Hansards. This would be an extremely time-consuming task which would produce the information sought by the hon. Member only at disproportionate cost.

Crown Court Proceedings

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what proportion of defendants who appealed against conviction in a magistrates court and whose case was reheard in the Crown court in 2000 were found (a) not guilty and (b) guilty. [29694]

Mr. Wills: Information held centrally relating to the results of appeals to the Crown court is limited and is not collected in a form to provide an answer to the hon. Member's question without incurring disproportionate cost. For information purposes, however, the table provides figures for receipts, by type of appeal, and outcome, by type of result, of appeals to the Crown court during 2000.

Appeals to the Crown court, 2000

	Number
Net receipts
Conviction/sentence	5,341

Other[2]	3,512
Total	14,355

[1] Eg liquor licence refusals and non-renewal of shotgun certificates

[2] Abandoned appeals, remitted to magistrates, other results

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, what procedures are in place to inform local authorities about the withdrawal of PFI credits from projects under his Department's remit; and what evaluation has been undertaken on the effectiveness of those procedures. [30637]

Mr. Wills: There have been no instances of the Department withdrawing PFI credits from projects that have received Project Review Group (PRG) endorsement. In the unlikely event that it could become necessary to withdraw PFI credits, the Department would consult with the appropriate local authorities and magistrates courts committee prior to any decision being made.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, on how many occasions since 1997 PFI credits have been withdrawn from projects under his Department's remit; and what were the (a) costs and (b) reasons for withdrawal. [30636]

Mr. Wills: There have been no instances where PFI credits have been withdrawn from projects following the Project Review Group's endorsement.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, what procedures his Department has for local authorities to make representations to the Project Review Group on a decision to withdraw PFI credits from projects under his Department's remit; and what is the length of time for response. [30638]

Mr. Wills: No formal procedures are in place for local authorities to make representations to the Project Review Group on a decision to withdraw PFI credits. That is not the Project Review Group's role. In the unlikely event it was necessary to review the credit allocation it would be a matter for the Department, in consultation with the appropriate local authorities and magistrates courts committee or committees.

ELECTORAL COMMISSION COMMITTEE

Transfer of Functions (Costs)

Mr. Rendel: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission if the additional costs relating to the transfer of the functions of the Local Government Commission for England to the Electoral Commission will be met in advance of the transfer date of 1 April 2002 provided for in the Local Government Commission for England (Transfer of Functions) Order 2001 (S.I., 2001, No. 3962). [31316]

Mr. Beith: In order to ensure the efficiency and effectiveness of the transfer and to enable the transferring local government boundary review functions, together with the related functions transferring from the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, to be carried out without interruption, urgent expenditure estimated at £127,000 will be met by repayable advances from the Contingencies Fund.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Ministerial Transport

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she last used the railway service in connection with her official duties; what station she left from and what was the destination; and whether it is her intention to make greater use of the railways in future. [28099]

Ms Hewitt: I last used the railway service on official business on Monday 10 December 2001, departing from Euston travelling to Luton Parkway.

All the arrangements for my official travel are made in line with the guidance set out in Chapter 7 of the Ministerial Code, and accompanying guidance document "Travel by Ministers", using the most efficient and cost effective mode of transport, and bearing in mind security considerations.

Information and Consultation Directive

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations she has received regarding the information and consultation directive. [30165]

Alan Johnson: There is considerable interest in the information and consultation directive and the Department frequently receives inquiries and representations about it. The directive is expected to be adopted shortly and we will be consulting fully and widely on how best to implement it in this country.

Electronic Signatures

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on progress on implementing the European electronic signatures directive. [31314]

Ms Hewitt: Further to the answer to my hon. Friend the Member for South Derbyshire (Mr. Todd) on 20 July 2001, Official Report, column 610W, I can now announce that the discussion document referred to in that answer is now being issued and copies will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

This clearly has not happened as quickly as I had hoped when my hon. Friend the Minister for E-Commerce and Competitiveness replied to my hon. Friend. This delay has been occasioned by developments in the Government's approach to updating the law to facilitate electronic communications referred to in my hon. Friend the Minister for E-Commerce and Competitiveness' reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Chorley (Mr. Hoyle) on 10 January 2002, Official Report, column 971W.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Justice and Home Affairs Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 14 January 2002, Official Report, columns 89–92W, concerning the Justice and Home Affairs Council on 6 and 7 December 2001, which were the member states with parliamentary scrutiny reserves on (a) the Framework Decision on combating terrorism and (b) the council decision establishing Eurojust. [28792]

Angela Eagle: Ireland, Denmark and Sweden had, and continue to have, parliamentary scrutiny reservations on the Framework Decision on combating terrorism which was provisionally agreed at the council, and on which the European Parliament is being reconsulted. My previous reply, based on information supplied by the Council Secretariat and included the council's own press statement reporting the outcome of the Justice and Home Affairs Council of 6–7 December 2001, stated that four member states had parliamentary scrutiny reservations on the Council Decision establishing Eurojust, on which the council reached political agreement. The Council Secretariat have subsequently stated that only Denmark and Sweden maintained parliamentary reservations on this measure at the council.

In both cases, the United Kingdom lifted its parliamentary scrutiny reservation at the Council following clearance by both Houses.

Departmental Spending Review

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans his Department has to appraise the environmental implications of its Spending Review submission to the Treasury. [29011]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 21 January 2002]: The Department is currently collating its bid for the 2002 Spending Review. The environmental implications of the bid will be outlined in a report on sustainable development, which will be submitted to the Treasury with the final version of the bid.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what way sustainable development objectives are reflected in his Department's bids for the 2002 Spending Review. [27508]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 16 January 2002]: The Department is currently collating its bid for the 2002 Spending Review. The impact of each bid upon sustainable development indicators is being assessed, and alternatives are being considered to eliminate or reduce any negative impact. A report on the sustainable development aspect of the bid will be produced, in accordance with Treasury requirements, which will detail the social, economic and environmental implications of the final version of the Department's SR2002 bid.

Environmental Appraisals

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many environmental appraisals have been published by his Department since 1 January 2001; and if he will list the last four. [29008]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 21 January 2002]: No environmental appraisals have been published by my Department since 1 January 2001.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedures his Department has to ensure environmental appraisals are undertaken prior to (a) administrative and (b) policy decisions being made. [29010]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 21 January 2002]: In taking important administrative and policy decisions environmental considerations are taken into account. For example:

> Where relevant goods and services are procured, prospective suppliers are asked to include an assessment of the major environmental impacts of the contract, as part of the tendering and evaluation process; and
> Building Research Establishment Environmental Assessment Methods (BREEAM) assessments are undertaken for new buildings and for the major refurbishment of existing buildings within the Department's estate;
> A section on environmental appraisals is included within the Department's Policy Checklist;
> The Ministerial website states that policy submissions should include a section on environmental considerations.

The Prison Service Management Board has agreed that all new policies and programmes should be subject to environmental screening and appraisal. This will apply to submissions to Ministers, papers to the Prison Service Management Board and Operational Policy Group and to business cases in respect of prison maintenance and construction work.

Fear of Crime

John Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to reduce the fear of crime in (a) London and (b) the London borough of Havering; and if he will make a statement. [29472]

Mr. Denham: It is a key priority of the Government to reduce crime and the fear of crime through effective law enforcement and partnership working. The British Crime Survey shows that fear of crime generally has been declining since 1998. There are a large number of different programmes operating throughout London and in specific boroughs of London aimed at reducing crime, and it is the Government's policy wherever possible to ensure that they also effectively reduce the fear of crime to include programmes aimed at reducing street robbery, violence at licensed premises and on public transport, and racist attacks and harassment; it would not be practicable to list all relevant programmes currently operating in London.

There are a number of relevant initiatives being carried out in Havering under the Home Office's Crime Reduction Programme. Among them is the targeted Policing Initiative Project aimed at understanding and responding to hate crime; this initiative is still at an early stage of development and has an allocated funding of £287,000 for a 22-month period. Funds have also been allocated for Neighbourhood Wardens; one of the objectives of this scheme is to reduce fear of crime by five per cent. by March 2003. £466,583 has been provided to facilitate new and replacement Closed Circuit Television (CCTV) cameras in the borough, as a result of which over 1,000 crimes are expected to be prevented in the first three years of operation. Funds have also been allocated to tackle drugs problems in the borough, including allowing for higher visibility policing. In addition to these schemes and initiatives 3,000 local people are to be surveyed for their views on fear of crime and their personal priorities for crime reduction. This information will be used to inform decisions on priorities for the Crime Reduction Strategy for Havering.

Either-way Cases

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what percentage of either-way cases defendants elected for jury trial in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [29647]

The Solicitor-General: I have been asked to respond to this question, and would refer the hon. Member to the figures and the statement given in reply to his related question.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in (a) how many and (b) what percentage of either-way cases (i) magistrates declined jurisdiction, (ii) defendants consented to magistrates jurisdiction and (iii) defendants elected for jury trial in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [29648]

The Solicitor-General: I have been asked to respond to this question.

The following table, drawn from Crown Prosecution Service records, shows the number and proportion of defendants in either-way cases who were committed to the Crown court at their own election or on magistrates direction. No separate record is maintained of cases in which defendants consented to magistrates jurisdiction.

These figures show a steady decline in the proportion of either-way cases reaching the Crown court by way of defendant election up to 1997–98, followed by a period of relative stability over the last four years, when these proceedings remained in the region of 29–32 per cent. of all either-way cases.

The Government are committed to achieving improvements in the efficiency and effectiveness of the Criminal Justice System and is considering Sir Robin Auld's recommendations contained in his "Review of the Criminal Courts" which include removal of the right to elect jury trial and the introduction of an intermediate tribunal. The Government have been actively seeking the views of stakeholders on these and other recommendations contained in the "Review" and will take decisions following the conclusion of the consultation process at the end of January.

[1] April to September

Police Budget (Nottinghamshire)

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the anticipated police budget is for Nottinghamshire for (a) 2002, (b) 2003 and (c) 2004. [29406]

Mr. Denham: Police authorities set their annual budgets before 1 March each year. I understand that the Nottinghamshire police authority budget for 2002–03 is still under consideration. Information for 2003–04 and 2004–05 is not available.

Community Group Funding

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) whether the Government keep a record of the overall number of state funded competitive grant schemes available to voluntary and community organisations in the United Kingdom in (a) the current and (b) previous years, and by what categories this is broken down; [29928]

(2) whether the Government keep a central list of the statutory bodies that make competitive grant schemes available to voluntary and community organisations in the United Kingdom in (a) the current year and (b) previous years; [29927]

(3) whether the Government keep a record of the total sum distributed through all state funded competitive grant schemes available to voluntary and community organisations in the United Kingdom in (a) the current year and (b) previous years; and by what categories this is broken down. [29929]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 24 January 2002]: Information about grants for earlier years is available in two recent publications:

Central Government Funding of Voluntary and Community Organisations 1982–83 to 1999–2000: ISBN 1 84082 636–3; and

A Guide to Funding from Government Departments and Agencies—Second Edition: ISBN 1 900360 79.

Information on grants allocated by Government Departments during 2000–01, the last completed financial year, is currently being compiled and will be placed in the Library before the summer recess.

Missing Children

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he will take to ensure that police forces place details of missing children on the uk.missingkids.com website as soon as possible after being informed of a child's disappearance, and if he will make a statement. [29529]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 24 January 2002]: The uk.missingkids.com website aims at reuniting missing children with their families. This site is maintained by Computer Associates plc and is supported by the charity, International Centre for Missing and Exploited Children.

The website facility is open to be used by all police forces in England and Wales and Scottish forces will have the system made available to them in the very near future. Not all missing children cases are however suitable for the site: children are only featured if it is believed that the child has left their home area, if there is a photograph of reasonably good quality available, and with the agreement of the senior investigating officer and the family. Ultimately any decision as to whether to use the site is the responsibility of the Chief Officer of the relevant force.

However, the Police National Missing Persons Bureau regularly audits the children currently notified as missing and if the child is not on the site, the investigating force is offered the use of the facility.

Sustainable Development

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what weight he gives to sustainable development objectives in his Department's (a) public services agreements and (b) service delivery agreements. [27507]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 16 January 2002]: Revisions to Public Service Agreements (PSA) and Service Delivery Agreements (SDA) are being considered as part of 2002 spending review process. In accordance with Treasury guidance, sustainable development issues will be considered when PSAs are redrafted. My Department will also consider if it will be appropriate to set out the impact of sustainable development on the delivery mechanisms in the SDA.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the recorded crimes per head of population for each police authority in England and Wales and the average figure for these authorities. [28665]

Mr. Denham: The latest available information on the number of recorded crimes per 100,000 population for police force areas and nationally, for the year ended March 2001, has been published in table 2.6 of the Stationery Office publication "Criminal Statistics England and Wales 2000".

Police Numbers

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what statistics he collates on the average number of police officers (a) at headquarters establishments and (b) per 1,000 population. [28669]

Mr. Denham: Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary collects data once a year about the allocation of officers. The Inspectorate's data record officers attached to Basic Command Units and to central functions. Central functions include specialist police squads as well as headquarters support functions and the officers performing central functions may be located at a number of sites.

At the end of March 2001 (latest date for which data are available), 30,928 police officers (25 per cent. of total force strength) were deployed to central functions.

Information on the number of police officers to population is published in the Home Office Statistical Bulletins "Police Service Strength: England and Wales". The latest bulletin (No. 23–01), was published on 18 December 2001 and shows that in England and Wales the number of officers per 100,000 population at 30 September 2001 was 240.3. A copy of the bulletin is in the Library.

Police Corruption (Cleveland)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers have been charged with corruption in the last five years in the Cleveland police force. [26735]

Mr. Denham: There is no offence of 'corruption' as such.

However, I am told that in the Cleveland police force over the last five years there have been the following criminal cases:

one officer was convicted of attempting to pervert the course of justice one officer was found not guilty of attempting to pervert the course of justice; one officer was found not guilty of misconduct in a public office; and two officers are awaiting trial for misconduct in a public office.

There have also been the following disciplinary cases:

one officer was reprimanded for fraudulent use of an excise license;

three officers were reprimanded or fined for failing to comply with the terms of an arrest warrant and false entry in a pocket notebook; and one other officer was found not guilty regarding taking appropriate action when the above case was first reported.

The ongoing Operation Lancet investigation has also to date led to 12 police officers being charged with disciplinary offences.

Naturalisation Applications

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for naturalisation are (a) outstanding and (b) awaiting input to the INS database. [25998]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 11 January 2002]: I regret that statistics on individual types of citizenship applications undecided cannot be determined from current Immigration and Nationality Directorate data sources.

Visa Renewal Applications

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for visa renewal are (a) outstanding and (b) awaiting input onto the INS database. [25996]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 11 January 2002]: We do not routinely publish statistics on the number of general and settlement applications for further leave to remain undecided.

Policing

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his estimate is of the planned expenditure on policing as a percentage of gross domestic product in (a) 2001–02, (b) 2002–03 and (c) 2003–04. [27917]

Mr. Denham: The information is set out in the table.

Year	Police provision (£ billion)	Money GDP (£ billion)	Police provision as a proportion of money GDP (percentage)
2001–02	8.5	998	0.85
2002–03	9.0	1,046	0.86
2003–04	9.3	1,099	0.85

Notes:

1. Police provision is total Government provision (police grant, special grant, capital grant, credit approvals and central Home Office spend and police Standard Spending Assessment).

2. Money GDP figures are estimates.

Information on the number of police officers to population is published in the Home Office Statistical Bulletins "Police Service Strength: England and Wales". The latest bulletin (No. 23/01), was published on 18 December 2001 and shows that in England and Wales the number of officers per 100,000 population at 30 September 2001 was 240.3. A copy of the bulletin is in the Library.

Police White Paper

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received on the White Paper on the Police. [30212]

Mr. Denham: We have received approximately 1,100 representations on the White Paper. We are still considering these and will place a summary in the Library in due course.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 378

SESSION 2001–2002

14th January—25th January 2002

Printed indexes to Hansard

The volume index is one of three printed indexes to Commons Hansard produced from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Indexing Service (POLIS). It contains references to material in the bound volumes of Hansard. The other indexes produced are:

- The fortnightly index to Hansard. This covers the same date range as the volume index but references are to the column numbering in the daily parts and weekly edition of Hansard.
- The sessional index to Hansard. This contains references to material in the bound volumes for a whole session.

Indexes on the Parliamentary website

Fortnightly, volume and sessional indexes covering material from the beginning of the 1999/2000 session will also appear on the Parliamentary website at http://www.parliament.uk with links to the full text of Hansard.

SCOPE

The indexes include entries covering:

- The content of all material recorded in Hansard, including debates, procedural motions and questions.
- The names of all Members contributing to the Parliamentary business recorded in Hansard.
- The names of some types of Parliamentary business whenever they occur in Hansard. These are 'Ministerial statements', 'Business statements', 'Opposition days' and 'Estimates days'.

ARRANGEMENT

- All headings are in one word-by-word alphabetical sequence, with Members' contribution entries distinguished from other entries by italics.
- Where a Member contributes to Parliamentary business and is the subject of Parliamentary business there are separate contribution and subject entries, the subject entry coming first.
- Entries beginning 'Mac' and 'Mc' are sorted in one sequence as 'Mac'.
- 'St', when abbreviated for Saint, is filed as 'Saint'.
- Numbers are filed as if spelt out, e.g. '10 Downing Street' as if 'Ten Downing Street'.

HEADINGS

Choice of headings

- Specificity—Entries summarise the overall content of a debate or question as specifically as the various POLIS thesauruses allow. For example, Education, Higher education, Universities or the name of a particular university is used depending on the breadth of the item.
- Name headings—Specific entries are included for the names of people, places, institutions, organisations, committees, programmes, initiatives, publications and legislation when these constitute the overall subject of an item.
- Organisations and subjects—Organisation entries are preferred for material about the general performance, administration and staffing of an organisation (for example, United Kingdom Passports Agency, Standards). Subject entries are preferred for what organisations do as part of their duties (for example, Passports, Fees and charges).

Geographical coverage

- Subject headings—Subject headings are assumed to refer to the whole of England, Great Britain or the United Kingdom unless otherwise stated.
- Scotland, Northern Ireland and Wales—Material relating to the whole of Scotland, Northern Ireland and Wales is indexed under these headings.
- Places within the UK—Material about specific towns, areas and institutions is entered under the name of the specific town, area or institution.
- Foreign countries—Most material relating to foreign countries is collected under the name of that country. Some additional material may be found under the names of—groups of countries, areas within countries, geographical features, place names associated with particular issues, politicians and heads of state, international bodies, and institutions and companies operating in those countries.
- EC/EU material—General material about the European Communities and European institutions as bodies is entered under 'European Communities' and 'EC institutions'. Organisational material about specific communities and institutions is entered under the name of the body, for example 'European Coal and Steel Community' or 'European Parliament'. Material about what the Communities and institutions are doing or propose to do is entered under various subject headings beginning 'EC' such as 'EC environmental policy'.

Parliamentary material and business

- Material about Parliament—This is indexed under 'Parliament', the names of the two Houses, the 'Palace of Westminster' and parts of the Parliamentary estate (such as 'Portcullis House').
- Committees—Material about committees is indexed under 'Committees', types of committee (such as 'Select committees') and the names of individual committees (such as 'Home Affairs Select Committee').
- Parliamentary proceedings/procedures—Material discussing these is indexed under the specific type of proceeding (such as 'Parliamentary questions' or 'Oral questions'), procedure (such as 'Calling of Members') or issue (such as 'Unparliamentary expressions').
- Legislation—Entries for Parliamentary proceedings on bills and statutory instruments are entered under their titles. Where the lead word of the bill or statutory instrument does not provide a full or clear indication of the subject there are additional subject entries when the bill or instrument is debated. For example, debates on the 'Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill' have entries under 'Pensions' and 'Social security benefits' as well as under the title of the Bill.
- Members' names—These are given in the form by which the Member prefers to be known.
- Speaker and Chair—Contributions by the Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker and deputies'. Contributions from the chair during Committees of the Whole House are brought together under 'Chairman of Committee of the Whole House'. Significant rulings and statements (as opposed to routine comments) are indicated by the sub-heading 'Rulings and statements' in both cases.

Guidance on headings

- Cross references—'See' references indicate all the material has been entered under another heading. 'See also' references indicate that additional information may be found under another heading.
- Concept thesaurus—A copy of the subject thesaurus to POLIS, listing the concept entries used in the index, is available on the Parliamentary website. A hard copy is available from the Head of the POLIS Unit, House of Commons Library, 1 Derby Gate, London, SW1A 2DG (020 7219 6456).

REFERENCES

- References in the indexes are to columns rather than pages.
- References to debates, but not questions, are accompanied by the date of the item.
- There are separate sequences in Hansard for the material taken on the floor of the House, Westminster Hall sittings and written questions:
  - References consisting of a number by itself indicate material taken on the floor of the House.
  - References ending in 'wh' indicate Westminster Hall sittings.
  - References ending in 'w' indicate written questions.
- References under all headings except the names of Members contributing to Parliamentary business and the titles of legislation are listed in one numerical sequence irrespective of whether the material is taken on the floor of the House, is discussed at a Westminster Hall sitting or is a written question.
- References under the names of Members contributing to Parliamentary business and the titles of legislation are listed in numerical sequence under the following headings:
  - Debates etc. (which includes interventions and points of order as well as significant contributions to debates);
  - Sittings in Westminster Hall (covering all debates held as part of the Westminster Hall sittings); and
  - Questions (which includes written, oral and private notice questions).

ABBREVIATIONS

The following abbreviations are used in connection with the progress of bills:

- 1R=First reading
- 2R=Second reading
- Com=Committee stage
- Rep=Report stage
- 3R=Third reading
- res=resolution
- amendt(s)=amendment(s)
- *=matter taken formally without debate or division.

Parliamentary background

- The Parliamentary website at http://www.parliament.uk contains a range of information about Parliament and the full text of some Parliamentary papers and proceedings including Hansard.
- Information on current Parliamentary business is provided in the House of Commons Information Office Weekly Information Bulletin, available on the website and from The Stationery Office (020 7873 8499).
- Further information on Parliamentary proceedings and procedures is available from the House of Commons Information Office (020 7219 4272).
